ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

ROGERS ANNOUNCE NEW RADIO PLANS

Office and Factory Staff Increased as Rogers Swing Into Fall Production.

With the approach of Fall, the Rogers-Majestic Corporation announce a new and complete line-up of radios for the 1933-34 season. Just now the Rogers plant on Boulevard Drive is a hive humming with activity. Men are being added in increasing numbers to both office and factory personnel as part of the ambitious production plan scheduled for the coming season. With prospects bright for an increased demand for radios due to new users coming into the market and others who will be ready for replacement of old radios by the new Rogers, the executives of the Rogers Company are evincing a healthy optimism.

The new range of Rogers models will consist of 5-tube personal midget models; 3 consoles (5- 6- and 7-tube models); 9-tube all-wave models and a special 5-tube end table model. In addition, plans are under way for a new line of deluxe receivers. Outstanding among the new developments are the Multiple Tubes. These are expected to create a sensation this year. Each multiple tube does the work of two former type tubes, so that a 5-tube Rogers this year will equal the 7-tube model of previous years.

Extensive newspaper advertising is contemplated by the Rogers Company on its Fall line of receivers. Rogers-Majestic sold more radios last year than any other manufacturer due mostly to aggressive advertising in the newspaper columns and it is felt that the same volume of publicity will have equal results this year.

The first public showing of the new Rogers Radios will be held at the Canadian Exhibition. A complete line-up of models will be on display, special manufacturing processes will be exhibited and the Rogers-owned radio station, CFRB, will conduct broadcasts from the Exhibition Booth for public entertainment.

OPPOSE OTTAWA PARLEY PACTS

AT PORT HOPE RALLY

PORT HOPE, Ont., Sept. 8 (C.P.). —Sir Herbert Samuel, chairman of the British Liberal Party, last night told the Liberal summer conference here Liberals of the United Kingdom were opposed to pacts concluded at last year's Ottawa Economic Conference on the ground they restricted rather than widened avenues of trade.

"While we want to develop trade within the Empire," Sir Herbert said, "we do not want to sacrifice trade that is three times as great." He recalled he had told a Calgary audience trade between members of the British Commonwealth and other countries was three times greater in 1929 than trade among themselves.

In its report of the Port Hope speech the Canadian Press erroneously made it appear Sir Herbert said trade between Empire countries was three times greater than between Empire nations and other countries.

Eggs for market should never be exposed to direct sunlight, rain, or to extreme heat. It is a good plan always to keep the eggs covered with a cloth or other means to prevent fading or evaporation. In marketing, or at any other time, eggs should not be placed near kerosene, onions, fish or other strong smelling substances, because the eggs readily absorb odours.—Dominion Dairy and Cold Storage Branch.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1933

HE STARTS WELL.

The promptness with which Premier Angus MacDonald of Nova Scotia is attempting to implement his pre-election promises has aroused admiring attention throughout the Dominion.

Too often election pledges are disregarded once the campaign is over, but Nova Scotia's new Premier evidently believes that promises made to the people should be treated as a solemn contract and he intends to do his utmost to carry them out.

Within a few hours of his inauguration Premier Macdonald was able to announce that the Nova Scotia Old Age Pensions Act passed in 1931 was already in force; more than that, he announced that steps to fulfill his promises of a reduction in the cost of government had been taken by means of which the offices of two deputy-ministers were abolished and the Liquor Control Board reduced from two members to one, thus effecting an annual saving of $25,000.

In addition, the Premier and two of his colleagues had been named as a committee to study the whole field of government costs and to recommend economies in accordance with the promises made during the election that governmental overhead would be slashed.

Premier Macdonald has made an excellent start; in times like these the people appreciate action, and the Nova Scota electors in particular will be impressed by the speed and thoroughness with which the new broom is sweeping.

A FUND OF INFORMATION.

The 1933 edition of the Canada Year Book issued by the General Statistics Branch of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics as usual is a treasure trove of accurate and interesting information.

The Canada Year Book is the official statistical annual of the country, and contains a thoroughly up-to-date account of the natural resources of the Dominion and their development, the history of the country, its institutions, the different branches of production, trade, transportation, finance, education, etc.—in brief, a comprehensive study within the limit of a single volume of the social and economic condition of Canada.

The new edition has been thoroughly revised throughout, and includes in all its chapters the latest information available up to the date of going to press.

It extends to over 1,100 pages, dealing with every phase of the national life, and more especially with those susceptible of statistical measurement.

Particularly interesting is the statistical summary of the progress of the Dominion included in the introductory matter and giving a picture in figures of the remarkable progress which the country has made since the first census of the Dominion was taken sixty-two years ago in 1871.

The volume is illustrated by many maps and diagrams and the latest available data is everywhere included.

BUSINESS METHODS SUCCEED.

While the depression has crowded many American towns to the brink of bankruptcy, Atchison, Kansas, (population 13,000) has kept on a cash basis throughout, and in the past twelve years has cut its bonded debt seventy per cent. and its tax rate thirty-five per cent.

The reason, according to Ed. W. Howe, founder of the "Atchison Daily Globe," who writes in the current Rotarian magazine, is simply a determination by Atchison business men that their city be run like a business. This has led to the commission-manager form of government with three business men as commissioners. They appoint a city manager as they would hire a general manager for their own businesses.

"Although it has been said business men will not consent to accept office, and that citizens will not support them," says the veteran newspaperman, "this did not turn out to be true in Atchison. During the twelve years since the commission-manager form was adopted, one commissioner has been elected four times, another died after serving five years, and one resigned after serving ten years. The two appointed to fill the vacancies are still serving. All have continuously been really excellent men.

"The new plan was successful from the start: the commissioners inherited an old bonded indebtedness of $1,260,000, and paid it all off except $280,000."

MUNICIPAL FINANCING.

That Ontario municipalities have been making a fairly successful effort to meet the unusual economic conditions of the past few years by reduced expenditures is evident from figures obtained in a survey conducted by the Ontario Committee on Economy in Public Economy, covering the situation in thirty Ontario cities and towns.

From these statistics it is learned that nineteen of these municipalities had surpluses amounting to $362,806, while eleven had deficits of $1,982,076 in 1931, a net deficit of $1,078,167 in 1931, while in 1932 only fourteen had surpluses and fifteen reported deficits, the total net deficit of the twenty-nine reporting being $1,931,076.

Comparing the two years as regards the twenty-nine municipalities which reported for 1932 and 1932, it is seen that eight weree able to increase their surpluses and eight others succeeded in lowering their deficits.

As to the present year the survey shows that in sixteen municipalities there has been a reduction in the tax rate, in six others the rate remains the same, while only a half dozen cities and towns have had to report an increase.

The total tax levy for 1933 for the twenty-nine reporting municipalities amounts to $68,357,360.

In twenty-three places the aggregate decrease from 1932 is $3,866,093, while in the six with increased tax rate the total increase is given as $513,933.

In other words, this representative group of Ontario municipalities has been successful in effecting a net decrease of $3,352,156 in their tax levy this year as compared with 1932, which under existing conditions must be regarded as a good showing.

WHEAT AND WORLD UNITY.

Wisely or unwisely, the powers attending the Wheat Conference in London have agreed to postpone the operation of all dumping clauses and similar protective machinery until the price of wheat attains the level of 95 cents per bushel in Canadian funds.

But whatever its effect may be, it represents the first time in peace that a number of nations have been able to get together, however vaguely, on the price of any single commodity.

In place of a number of national tariffs, there has been established a world tariff.

Now if the nations of the world can get together, even clumsily, on the price of wheat, they can get together, more effectively and intelligently, on the price of a score of other commodities.

This agreement, then, no matter what its individual effect may be, is the inauguration of a new world co-operation in food prices.

The situation calls to mind the pregnant and ringing words of a recent editorial in that Whaley-Eaton publication, the "National Sphere":

"The stage is being set," says the editor of the "Sphere," "for an almost inconceivable integration of civilization. The immediate phase seems to be centralization of power and authority within each individual country. Thereafter, progress will be towards a central world control.

"There appears to be but one road to go, and it leads to the millenium or to chaos.'

The world has arrived at the point, in short, where the nations must be real neighbors or active enemies.

And being active enemies is both stupid and costly.—Vancouver Sun.

AS TWO MEN VIEW LIFE.

A young man of 22 entered state prison at Jackson, Mich., for the third time this week. The third sentence is longer than the second, and the second was longer than the first. He was given a chance to explain why he was in trouble. In part he said:

"I find living dull. Before I got into trouble the first time when I was 18 I found it hard to get a kick out of anything. Everybody seemed to have a better time and a better chance than I did. That's why three or four of us got together and started out at nights to see what we could find to do. The first little job we pulled put new life into us. We had to be on the job to keep away from the dicks (police) and it made us feel that we were doing something with a kick in it. . . ."

We are certain we have heard that phrase before about getting a kick or a thrill out of this or that. We do not object to the phrase in its entirety because we know some very excellent and useful people who admit they get a real kick and a thrill out of their work, particularly when they feel it is well done. Not ong ago we came across a professional man who had done an operation which was entirely successful; it was even better than he had dared hope for. If one had asked him if he got a "kick" out of a piece of work like that, we are certain he would have answered enthusiastically in the affirmative. Many men are the same. The difference between them and the young men who at 22 starts his third term in prison is that the sound man gets his kick out of doing something worth while. He finds more satisfaction in it than he does in the fee he receives. Smile at the idea if you wish, but a day's work well done is its own greatest reward.

In the news the same day as the young man's statement was made about him having found life a dull thing, there was another story from Baton Rouge, La., and it told about Herbert Brown, age 27. He had seen five years more of life than the young man who went to prison. Herbert Brown was formerly in the army, but he had to quit because he had tuberculosis, and his case is so far advanced that he knows he cannot hope for recovery. What is his attitude and desire? Simply this: He has followed the news of the epidemic of sleeping sickness which has taken heavy toll of life in several places in United States. Then he wrote to the Medical Association asking if he could be accepted for experimental purposes. He had read that such experiments would have to be made in order to seek a cure for sleeping sickness. His own way of stating his desire is this: "Above all else I would like to think that I might be able to do something useful before I die." So, in his weakened condition, Herbert Brown is ready to subject himself to any experiments which doctors care to make upon him in an effort to bring about a cure for sleeping sickness. His ambition is to make what contribution he can before he passes on.

As we see it there is this difference between the outlook of these two men, one 22 and strong, the other 27 and weak from sickness:

The youth in prison is bent on getting a kick out of life; that is, he is bent on extracting something from it; he is self-centred and everything must be bent to suit his purpose.

Herbert Brown at 27, with not much longer to go, is gripped with the idea of making a worthy contribution to life; he would, from his suffering, grasp something of value which he could hand to others in the hope of bringing cure to them. Herbert Brown has indeed said a worthy thing: "I should like to do something useful before I die."—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

It looks as if Uncle Sam will have to put politics in Cuba under the N.R.A. code.

Premier Bennett set a good example for Canadians generally by visiting the Canadian National Exhibition yesterday.

School days will soon be over for the pupils at the Liberal and Conservative political schools. Let us hope the effect of the lessons will have a much longer life.

Eccles Gott, M.P., declares that there will be a federal election before there is a provincial campaign in Ontario. This, however, may prove to be one time when Mr. Gott did not know his onions.

We often wonder how J. F. Pouliot, M.P., keeps in training between parliamentary sessions. Surely he must be making speeches somewhere.

Changing governments in Cuba is a rapid-fire process that moves almost too fast for the news reels.

VACATION ESCAPADE

By ARTHUR SHUMWAY

CHAPTER 18.

Ted answered the telephone call from Hall. As he took the receiver he thought quickly of a plan to keep any secret from leaking into the household.

"Hello," he said. "Chandler. Yes. Listen, I'll be able to make it all right. What? Sure, I'll be able to make it." (Hall had asked: "Be able to make what?")

"The way things are," Ted continued, "that's the best I can tell you. I don't know the exact time I can be there, but early in the evening. And I can bring some Scotch myself. We'll have a real old get-together."

(Hall said: "Oh," as if he understood.)

"I may be able to drop by when I run over to the mainland after work," Ted said.

("That's fine. I'll see you then," Hall replied.)

Aloud, Ted said: "I guess I'd better speak to the secretary, seeing Mr. Proctor isn't here." This was for the benefit of Cleo and whoever else might be listening.

He hurried into the library and found Sally reading. He winked.

"Pardon me, Miss Gwynne," Ted said. "Mr. Proctor didn't say when he was coming back, did he?"

"No, he didn't, Mr. Chandler. Anything I can do?"

Ted almost smiled despite his effort at control, for he noticed that Jasper was in the dining room and Vitelli was coming down the stairs.

"Why, I don't know, Miss Gwynne," Ted said. "A friend of mine—that is, a fellow I met over in town—wants me to go to a little party with him tonight." ("Hall called," he whispered quickly without moving his lips.) "I thought I'd be able to make it all right unless Mr. Proctor wanted me to do something."

"Well," Sally said, judicially, "I wouldn't exactly know, Mr. Chandler, except that I haven't heard Mr. Proctor say he had anything special planned that would require your services tonight. I'll ask him, though, when he returns."

"Thank you, ma'm," Ted replied, with a little bow.

Fred Proctor returned in an hour. He came in smiling.

"Well, little girl," he said.

"Oh, good afternoon, Mr. Proctor," Sally said.

"Do you know, I have to kick myself every time I run off without leaving you anything to keep you busy or to amuse yourself with. I know you must find it dull here."

"Dull? Oh, not at all, Mr. Proctor, I assure you," Sally said with genuine sincerity. If he only knew. . . .

"But you must. I've been so eternally busy lately, but I think now I'm going to have a little breathing spell and can get caught up."

He sat down intimately on the arm of her chair. "Yes," he continued, "I'm going to have a little breathing spell now that things are somewhat more cheerful about the old house. I don't know, it may not be just the thing to do under the circumstances, but it's what I believe Uncle Jack would have done—I'm going to give a little party, just a quiet little affair, down on the boat tomorrow night. And I want you to come. There'll just be a few of my friends, some nice married couples of about our own age." ("Our own age," Sally thought to herself, "and he's at least 15 years older than I am.")

"Good. Then just amuse yourself as you like today. I've nothing for you to do." He started to go up to his room. Sally remembered Ted's request and called him back.

"Pardon me, Mr. Proctor," she said. "Mr. Chandler, the chauffeur, wanted to know if you were going to need him for anything special tonight. He has an invitation to some sort of a little party with some man he's met on the mainland."

"Chandler? Why, no, I'm not going to need him tonight. Party, eh? That lad's getting acquainted in a hurry." He paused.

"Party, eh? Of course he can go," Proctor said. He started for the stairs, then turned and added, "He can take my roadster if it will help his social standing." Proctor smiled and went on upstairs.

She went out to the garage and found Ted and told him of Proctor's offer.

Ted smiled, then scowled. "What the dickens do you make of that?" he asked. "Hm, killing me with kindness, I guess. He wasn't tight?"

So when Ted left that evening he drove away in the long yellow roadster. It was a pleasure to have the car to himself for the evening. He only wished that he could have smuggled Sally away. He turned east at the corner, coasted down onto the beach and drove, slowly at first, then faster and faster, north on the hard-packed sand.

He turned up off the beach at the next approach and soon was speeding across the river on the long bridge, watching the lights ahead on Beach street move up and down like animated pearls.

Ted pulled up in front of the newspaper office and went in. He found the city editor waiting. "I'm sorry to have called at the house," he said, "but your telegram from Chicago came and I didn't know but what you needed it at once."

Then Ted remembered. The report on Vitelli from the Chicago police was to have been addressed in care of the newspaper. "That's all right," he said eagerly. "Let's see it."

He took the telegram and read:

PLENTY ON VITELLI STOP OLD WEST SIDE HOODLUM STOP BEEN IN RACKETS POLITICAL MUSCLE WORK LIQUOR BUSINESS ANYTHING YOU CAN NAME STOP SERVED TEN YEARS OF MANSLAUGHTER STRETCH BUT WAS SPRUNG ON INFLUENCE JOHN KEMBLE PROCTOR STOP WAS TIED UP WITH PROCTOR OFF AND ON STOP KNOWN TO HAVE BUMPED THREE HOODS BUT NEVER GOT THE RAPS STOP MY GUESS HE HAD SOMETHING ON PROCTOR STOP WHAT'S HE UP TO NOW STOP HUNCH HE WAS IN ON PROCTOR KILLING IF YOUR STORY OKAY STOP KEEP ME POSTED—KELLY.

Ted jumped up and handed the telegram to Hall. Hall read it. "Great!" he said.

Quickly Ted told him what he had learned from Cleo.

"Mighty soon anyway," Ted said. "Well, that's that. The boss let me take his car. Drop you at home?"

"Thanks, I'm meeting my wife at the movie. Come along?"

"No, thanks. It isn't every night I've got a kiddie car like this to play with. I'm going to drive down the beach till I get tired of the new toy."

Back in the roadster, Ted drove north to Ormond on the Dixie highway, then across the toll bridge to Ormond beach where he drove slowly past John D. Rockefeller's home on the river opposite the Flagler hotel. It was a simple old frame house that any retired farmer might have built in the Florida of the nineties as his idea of a comfortable and roomy place to grow old in. Ted went onto the beach where he and Sally had parked two nights before and drove south toward Daytona. He was driving slowly when he heard another car behind. He looked casually over his shoulder. A long pale green touring car with the top up and curtains on. Familiar, but why? As he looked back Ted saw something that chilled his blood. A gun barrel, no two gun barrels, were protruding from the curtains. Ted crushed the accelerator to the floor, felt the great motor take hold, the back of the seat bump his spine. He ducked his head and swung the car sharply toward the ocean. The guns roared and the air seemed to whine. Ted lifted his head again in time to keep from driving headlong into the surf. The other car was right behind. He swung to the left, to the right, as his car plunged forward like a rocket, the other one on its tail. Ted caught a look at the speedometer. The needle swung jerkily upward, upward, 40, 45, 50, 55, upward. The guns roared again. Ted ducked. He saw the needle, still climbing. It pointed to 70, 75, 80, upward. He gave an agonized glance over his shoulder. The other car was still coming. And still the speedometer needle was climbing—87, 91, 94. He looked behind again. The distance was the same. And again at the speedometer — 98, 100, quivering, mounting the dial with desperate effort. At 112, the car seemed to be swaying in the air above the beach. A patch of soft, red sand, the kind that often gathered on this part of the beach would catch at his wheels, slough the car about, perhaps pitch him forward like a pebble from a slingshot. But if he slowed down there were the guns.

ALL OF US

THE BROWSER

The Browser's made up his mind that the very best kind of reading for vacation is heavy reading.... Other times he went on vacations loaded down with light reading, which became heavier and heavier the longer he carried it, and which never did get around to reading. But this year he took four books into the high, high, high mountains and read every page of them. He took the Storm Jameson's trilogy—"The Lovely Ship," "The Voyage Home" and "Richer Dust"—and also her autobiographical book, "No Time Like the Present," and after the sun went down and the big stars came out—so close to a fellow that they almost caught in his hair—he'd light his little lamps in his little mountain cabin and sink deep into those books, while the moon shone on the granite shoulders of the hill and the wind blew through the pines and the steam rushed down the mountainside behind the cabin ....And way into the night he'd be reading about Mary Hansyke, the shipbuilder, and her loves and her sternness and her recurrent disappointments over the recurrent of trying to make people do as she wished....There were no sermons in stones or books in running brooks up there. Mary Hansyke and Storm Jameson were enough..And then he read "No Time Like the Present" to see for himself what is in Storm Jameson's mind..There's plenty there. She writes hardily, herself, fiercely about war. No woman hates it more. She hasn't a girlhood friend left; every boy or youth who was her friend in 1914 died in the war and she hates the thing most bitterly....Read that book and you'll feel the integrity of the woman.

But one page in it bothered the Browser...Storm Jameson intimates that she's weary of writing novels, and she wishes she'd never learned to read....Two sentences show the deep influence of D. S. Lawrence upon her: "I think there is something perverse in this savouring of the present, the living, through the past. Something that ought to be despised, fought, got rid of from my mind. I am not sturdy enough to do it."..A strong woman, wise and honest..Good summer reading.

Phil Strong's "Stranger's Return" is also worth reading. About Iowa again, but this time it's centered about a magnificent old farmer and his dying....Once he said: "Bad habits are the best things I've had all my life. I used to have more cursed annoyance out of good ones before I broke myself of them." Plenty of irony and emotion in "Stranger's Return." It will be popular.

The Browser went to see the talkie they made out of William Faulkner's "Sanctuary," with the title "The Story of Temple Drake." The atmosphere in the movie is like the atmosphere in the book, but the story's different. Trigger, the villain, is stronger than Popeye in the book, not so ghastly. The girl is a good girl trying to be bad; in the movie she breaks down and tells the truth, no matter how much it hurts, while in the book she lied and she lied and was rewarded with a trip to Paris. Rather different, you'll admit..Alexander Woolcott says that Dorothy Parker's favorite authors are D. H. Lawrence and Ernest Hemingway, but when she tries to praise them she forgets the words because she has specialized for so long on mean wisecracks....Emily Hahn is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin, she has a degree in Mining Engineering, she wrote "Seduction and Absurdum," her nickname is "Micky" Hahn, she is pretty, and she is J. P. McEvoy's secretary....Cyril Clemens, Mark Twain's nephew, is writing a biography of Petroleum Vesuvius Nasby, who was funny back in the days when Mark Twain was funnier....And Max Miller is writing another book for Dutton, "The Beginning of a Mortal." Maybe the Browser will like this book. As he grows older he becomes a more mellow BROWSER.

ON THIS DATE

A DAY IN CANADIAN HISTORY

By Fred Williams

VILLA MARIA, MONTREAL

On this date, in 1854, Monklands (which had been the residence of the Governor-General until the rioters of 1849 forever deprived Montreal of the capital), became Villa Maria, the manor house of the Congregation of the Ladies of Notre Dame. Red-coated sentries and aides de camp gave way to the dark-robed sisters; the singing and laughter of happy children replaced the whispered nothings of the beaux and belles at gubernatorial conversaziones; the gentle chiding of the teachers succeeded the gossip of the elect in society. The old building had been somewhat changed to meet its new duty, but, on the whole, it remained, and has since remained, the same as when it was the residence of Sir Charles Bagot, Lord Metcalfe, Earl Cathcart and the Earl of Elgin.

Situated on the western slope of Mount Royal, commanding a magnificent view of the St. Lawrence, of Lake St. Louis and of the mountains in Vermont, the site is one of the most beautiful in America and would bring many millions were it to be placed on the market, a possibility which is never likely to happen, for Villa Maria had added new wings to the old structure. It was not so long ago visited by the present Governor-General, who was shown the rooms which had been the home and offices of his distinguished predecessor, the great Elgin.

Villa Maria is to the girls of French Canada in somewhat the same position that Eton and Harrow and other public schools are to boys in England. It may not be the case that girl babies are entered at Villa Maria almost as soon as they have been baptized, as boys are in the ancient schools of the Motherland, but admission to its classes is almost as difficult. Only girls of the best families are accepted; it is a school for the old families, French and Irish, of French Canada, of those states in which there is a large French-Canadian population, and of some few Protestants, whose parents have recognized the value of the training which has created so many notable women and hundreds of well-educated wives and mothers. To have been a pupil at Villa Maria gives a girl a cachet which distinguishes her from the rest of the world.

Villa Maria is French, but it is also British. Its pupils are trained in loyalty to Canada and to the Empire, never forgetting the history of their own country, always inspired by its past, given faith in its future. Each Governor-General is a welcome guest; the heirs to the British throne who have visited Canada have been received within its walls; and chief among the happy memories is that of the day when 32 years ago the present King and Queen were welcomed, when the then Duke of Cornwall made his first speech in French in Canada, and when he told the sisters and the pupils that, although the flowers presented to the duchess might fade, nothing could ever efface the souvenir of that "venerable house to which are attached so many memories of the past."

Character From Handwriting

By BLANCHE A. DRAPER

A Feature Conducted by Peterborough's Leading Handwriting Analyst for the Readers of The Examiner.

Marion Elizabeth Brown,
14 Murray street, Peterborough.

The heavy formation of your letters distinguishes you as an individual with decided characteristics. You are ardent in love and happy in well doing. You possess certain little idiosyncrasies which endear you to your friends. You dearly cherish an opportunity to assist friends less fortunate than yourself but you do not want anyone to know about your good deeds. You are steady going and do not vary much from day to day. Your well formed 'M' with its slightly exaggerated downstroke, portrays a noteworthy characteristic which represents you as careful, thoughtful and energetic. You believe that when anything is done, be it good, bad or indifferent, there is no use in talking about it and thereby making mountains out of molehills. The crossing of your 't' bar suggests excellent will power. The softness of the formations of some of your other letterings depict you to be essentially homeloving and not afraid to offer praise where praise is due.

Anna Marie Sherwen,
Maitland avenue, Peterborough.

The study of your handwriting shows that you are easily led by others. You rarely offer and opinion of your own. You are quiet and unaggressive and go about with a feeling of fear of what the rest of the world thinks about you. You are neat and very carefully attired but you should ascertain your correct colors and endeavour to wear them, because the right color would affect you so greatly that your whole outlook on life would change, for the better. You are best suited to a sheltered life. Love and happiness belong to you. You need a great deal of kindness in order to keep you cheerful and your health up to par. You dot your letter 'i' and cross your 't' with a definte precision which tells me that you can and will do whatever you believe to be right, even in the face of opposition. You can carry out orders to the most minute detail.

Mary Barrie,
R.R. No. 5, Peterborough.

You have a very versatile nature, subject to change at a moment's notice. It is difficult for you to make up your mind to any one thing. You commence a task with great enthusiasm but toward the end your zest wanes. You tire very easily; this creates a tendency to dissatisfaction on your part. Could you not endeavour to undertake a hobby which would bring you a monetary recompense? There are various ways in which young ladies nowadays may indulge their fancy in pleasant occupation, and yet earn enough with which to buy the pretty feminine things that their nature craves. I gather that you love pretty little silke nbelongings. It is your natural birthright to have these things, and you will acquire them by your own efforts. You are not one to be commanded to perform tasks. Yet you will go to any limit for a kind word or deed.

Martha G. Thompson,
Belleville, Ont.

Your writing indicates you as a dictative type, born to give orders and to see that they are carried out in detail as you would carry them out were you the recipient. You are very stern, and often though you would like to laugh heartily at a joke you will not permit yourself this pleasure lest you lose your dignity. Deep down in your heart you have one of the most lovable natures in the world. It seems to me that sometime or other you have had to take some hard knocks which have made you hide your real self behind a 'mask of steel.' You belong to the leader type and should do well in any business, or social welfare work. Your word is your bond, once it is given it is sacred. You are ambitious up to a certain point, but there you stop as though you had reached the end of everything. Your will power is your predominating characteristic. It is yours to command, but so far, you have not drained it of all the wonderful resourcefulness it holds for you.

Miss Alma L. Dafoe,
Havelock, Ont.

Your writing shows that you enjoy anything along romantic lines. Your extremely tall upper loops indicate that you belong to the idealistic class and that you have a very vivid imagination. The crossing of your 't' bar does not quite agree with the rest of your disposition inasmuch as they show insufficient will power and determination to carry through the ideas created in your imagination. There is a tendency to sway between artistic and literary ability. You would succeed in either line if you could overcome a natural born sensitiveness. Your feelings are so very easily hurt that you hide all your natural instincts. You have a gracious personality and you are very affectionate though undemonstrative. You are really at your best when in quiet, refined surroundings. Noises disturb you. Your mental balance is as fine as that of a compass.

A Thought

SLEEP

Consider what an excellent thing sleep is; it is so inestimable a jewel that if a tyrant would give his crown for an hour's slumbr, it cannot be bought; yes, so greatly indebted are we to this kinsman of death, that we owe the better tributary, half of our life, to him; and there is good cause why we do so, for sleep is that golden chain that ties health and our bodies together.

Market Closing On All Exchanges

TORONTO EXCHANGE

TORONTO, Sept. 8 (CP)—Toronto Stock Exchange listings moved along to a slightly lower close today on light turnover. New York inability to make definite headway with the early afternoon rally induced traders to remain on the side lines.

Nickel fluctuated between 20.40 and 20.80, and the close at 20.65 was off 10 cents. Smelters dropped 2 to 130, Brazilian gained ⅛ to 13¾; C.P.R. was unchanged at 14½, and Ford "A" unchanged at 14½.

Distillery shares continued their slow action, but with the price level firm. Walkers Common picked up ¾; Distillers Seagram ⅛, Industrial Alcohol weakened a half, and Brewers and Distillers 5 cents to 2.45.

As New York struggled along through a morning sell-off and a scarcely convincing recovery, Toronto stock listings moved slowly in the general direction of lower levels. Trading was light and losses were held down to fractions. In the early afternoon prices were inclined to firm but there was no pick up in volume.

The board produced one new high for the year, Blue Ribbon preferred coming out at 22½, up a point. National Trust sold at 200, up 20 points from the last transaction.

WALL STREET

NEW YORK, Sept. 8. (AP)—A mild buying movement in the last hour stirred the stock market slightly from its slumberous state to-day. Some forenoon losses of fractions to around a point were cancelled and a number of shares pushed forward for net equivalent gains.

American Telephone advanced nearly 2 while Westinghouse, National Distillers, Western Union and American Commercial Alcohol improved around a point each. Union Pacific recovered a couple of points after sagging more than 6. U.S. Steel was a shade better than steady. Transfers approximated 1,300,000 shares.

TORONTO MINING.

TORONTO, Sept. 8 (C.P.).—Interest in the mining shares was lethargic to-day and the Standard Exchange closed with prices showing only narrow changes, if any, from Thursday's finals. Nickel slipped about as little as New York fluctuated, but recovered, and the base metal stocks held about steady. High-priced gold shares had a majority of small recessions at the close.

Dome, Hollinger, Teck Hughes, Pioneer, Wright Hargreaves and Bralorne took losses of 5 to 30 cents, while McIntyre closed 25 cents higher at 39.25.

In the oil group Ajax firmed a few cents, and Acme a fraction to 25, but Olga, Nordan, Royallite and oil selections were shaded fractionally.

The tone was better for some of the penny shares, notably Bobjo, Lee Gold and Central Patricia. The latter moved up to 55 in heavy trading, but succumbed partly to profit-selling.

Official announcement from Washington that the central banking system would be permitted to handle newly mined gold for U.S. producers, paying the equivalent of the British market price in American funds, caused only a temporary stir in the gold shares. McIntyre recovered an early loss of 50 cents and added a net gain of 75, and Dome and Lake Shore also improved a little.

THORNCLIFFE SELECTIONS

The following look the best in their respective races at Thorncliffe on opening day:

First Race—	Second Race—
Divert	Sophron
Hidden Lore	Andiron
Crout Au Pot	Candy Feast
Third Race—	Fourth Race—
Ladfield	Mrs. Foster
Boscobel	Phil R.
Tractable	Top Hattie
Fifth Race—	Sixth Race—
Khorasan	Pat Gaiety
Mama's Choice	Mr. Gaiety
Fiyat	Gay Parisian

Seventh Race—
Major General
Yellow Metal
Partisan.

STAMFORD PARK at Niagara Falls closed on Wednesday last after one of the most successful meetings since the inauguration of the track. Favorites came down in front like well trained pigs and the form players had a great week. Dark War who won the last race on the closing day and paid off at over seven to one was a legitimate even money choice. He appeared to us as a standout and we cannot understand how he ever paid such a large dividend. Watch him at Thorncliffe and don't be afraid if he is in with much better than he has been competing with and if it is muddy so much the better.

• • •

NOW THAT Powder Monkey has crashed the winners' circle we look for him to do an encore. He is in the best of shape and it will take a good one to beat him. The clockers tell us that Johnny Thorpe who trains the Seagram stable has Mama's Choice all ready. The hide possesses a lot of class and before coming to Canada from Saratoga beat as good a one as Knee High by eight lengths.

• • •

BUSHMAN IS another that we are looking forward to clean up a few purses. He has been running away below his real form but his last race shows he is recovering his great running ability. Don't be surprised if you see Fair Bill resemble the awakening of Mr. Pipp. The smart clockers have passed out the information that this one is in the proverbial pink and they are just waiting to drop him in the proper spot. Sir Byron should account for a few more wins before the Canadian racing season ends. He is in excellent condition and is a consistent plater in training.

• • •

AND THEN again we want to take this opportunity of telling you to ride along with Bold Bendigo in any distance event you may see him entered in. He always comes into his own every fall and when he is right there are very few that will take his measure. Yellow Metal will be a winner before Thorncliffe closes its gates and we don't mean maybe. The horsemen all say that the racing strip at Thorncliffe is in the best shape it has been in many years and we will likely see some long standing track records broken. Shady Well has been resting there for awhile and will be fit and ready when the bugle blows.

Cheap Grade Gasoline Price Up Two Cents

TORONTO, September 8 (C.P.).—Major oil companies increased the price of their cheapest grade gasoline two cents to-day, the new price being 19¼ cents a gallon in most cases. No increase has been made in the price of other grades sold by the large companies, although dealers said they expect a general advance in the next few days of from 1 to 1½ cents a gallon.

It was explained by oil company officials that the advance in the United States crude oil prices, attributed large'y to the United States National Recovery Act, made an increase here inevitabtl.

was committed on or about August 20th.

"You must not get it into your heads that you can cure theft by making restitution," the Magistrate told the two accused before they were taken away in custody. "But," he added, "if you make restitution before you appear for sentence, it might result in more lenitent treatment for you both.

Arrest of the pair yesterday afternoon, was the culmination of a great deal of work in connection with the case on the part of Provincial Constables D. Silvester and W. Warren.

Norman Wood, 26-year-old parole man, was employed by Mr. Steinkrauss it is learned, while his accomplice, 29-year-old Clarence Brooks, resided on property adjoining.

In collaboration with Wood, it is alleged that Brooks stole the clover seed on Sunday, August 20, and sold it the day following at Port Hope. He is stated to have given Wood fifteen dollars as his share of the proceeds.

UNION FAVORED BY COSGRAVE

Party Votes Unanimously To Merge With Centrists And National Guard.

LINKS OPPOSITION.

DUBLIN, Irish Fee State, Sept. 8 (A.P.)—The party of former President William T. Cosgrave voted unanimously to-day to merge with the Centre Party and the National Guard forming the United Ireland Party. This fusion would bring together the opposition to President Eamon de Valera.

The National Guard, led by General Eoin O'Duffy, has been the centre of considerable conflict in the Free State recently, as it has been accused by the De Valera Government of seeking to establish a dictatorship, and on this ground has been outlawed.

Other Groups Meeting

Meetings of the two other groups were scheduled to-day, and a favorable vote was expected from both.

Mr. Cosgrave; Frank McDermot, leader of the Centre Party, and General Eoin O'Duffy, head of the National Guard, were to meet with others prominent in the move for union late to-day. They planned to prepare a joint manifesto.

At the Cosgrave Party meeting, the former President explained the objects of the proposed union. Dr. Thomas F. O'Higgins, founder of the Army Comrades' Association, which grew into the National Guard, made an impassioned plea to the youth of Ireland. General O'Duffy also addressed the gathering.

greater effort than ever by the people, exhibitors and patrons generally, farmers and townspeople, to maintain the standing that has been achieved, possibly to surpass the record that has been built up by the large community of which Peterborough is the centre.

No Slump in Exhibits.

F. J. A. Hall, secretary of the Exhibition Board, informed The Examiner to-day that entries of exhibits are apparently going to be more numerous than last year.

"It may sound like the same old story," Mr. Hall said, "but what else can I say. From the inquiries and entries we have already received, I can safely say that our exhibits are going to be just as large as last year. I really think we are going to do better in that respect than the 1932 Exhibition. Some of the inquiries have been from breeders of cattle and horses who have never shown here before. We have also learned that breeders in our own district are going to be well represented. Some who did not show last year, for one cause or other, have intimated that they will place their stock in good time next week; so I feel confident in saying that the exhibits department will more than hold its own."

A Great Program.

The directors have arranged a great program for next week. Outstanding for the first two days is the visit of the famous regimental band of the Scots Guards coming direct from the Toronto Exhibition. Every music lover in the city and the neighboring counties should attend on one or both the first two nights. High-class grandstand attractions, horse races, the Conklin all-Canadian Midway and other features round out novelties of all kinds that should make next week an outstanding success in the Peterborough Exhibition's long history.

SPOTTED CRASHING IN HEAVY STORM

sistance in endeavoring to locate the two missing balloons in the International Gordon Bennet balloon races at Chicago has been sent to the Dominion authorities by Hon. Warren Delano Robbins, United States Minister to Canada.

The message for assistance originated from private interests and was sent to Mr. Robbins through the Secretary of State Department at Washington.

All branches of the Government are now on the alert for any news on the missing balloons. Stations in Northern Canada of the Radio branch of the Departmetn of Marine have been notified to keep a sharp look-out for any trace of the balloons, missing since Saturday last.

Farmer Finds 'Chute

TORONTO, Sept. 8 (CP)—Possibility of one of the Bennett Air race balloons have soared over Western Ontario early last Monday morning developed to-day when Orval J. Spiers, farmer of Caledonia East, near Orangeville, reported to the Provincial police he found a parachute in a tree on his farm shortly before daybreak Monday.

The parachute had the following markings: "Cont. No. 31227; serial No QAB 8692; Manufacturer's No. 2643; date of manufacture, June, 1933."

Settle's Parachute

LAKEHURST, N.J., Sept. 8 (AP)—A parachute found near Orangeville, Ont., to-day was identified by naval authorities as one carried by Lieut. Commander T. G. W. Settle. Settle was one of four contestants to land safely in the James Gordon Bennett balloon races.

PERRY ENTERS SEMI-FINALS

McGRATH DEFEATED.

FOREST HILLS, N.Y., Sept. 8 (A.P.)—Frederick J. Perry, British Davis Cup ace, led the way into the semi-finals of the United States men's singles championship to-day by trouncing Adrian Quist of Australia, 6-4, 6-4, 6-0, under a broiling sun before a crowd of 8,000 spectators in the West Side Tennis Club Stadium.

J. Perry opened the quarter-finals by taking the first set from Quist, 6-4.

Each looked unbeatable when winning points but Perry furnished the decisive streak. The British star won the first two games, dropped the next four and then reeled off four more in a row, three of them at love.

Both turned on the power and there were some beautiful exchanges. Service was broken five times.

Clifford B. Sutter, of New Orleans, third ranking American tennis star, staged a brilliant rally this morning to overcome the sensational Vivian McGrath, Australian youngster famous for his two-fisted backhand, and gain the last quarter-final bracket.

Starting where they left off when darkness interrupted the match last night, with McGrath leading 3-1 on games in the final set, Sutter put on the pressure and captured the set, 8-6. This made the complete scores stand at 3-6, 6-4, 6-3, 3-6, 8-6 in the Southernern's favor.

If you buy out of town, and I buy out of town and all our neighbors buy out of town, what in thunder will become of our town? Ever think about it?

SIDELIGHTS ON OIL; SOMETHING DRIVERS CARS SHOULD KNOW

A Column Written by W. G. Ritchie for The Examiner, Giving an Outline on Oils and How They Should be Used in Cars.

COLD TEST OR POUR TEST.

For automobile lubrication in this country the cold test is of supreme importance. Easy starting on cold mornings and the assurance that every part of the engine is receiving its full supply of oil immediately the engine is started, is one of the exacting demands of the motorist.

In order to supply him with an oil suitable for his requirements, it is necessary that a motor oil should flow freely at low temperatures. In order to find out how temperatures affect an oil's fluidity a 4 ounce bottle is chilled to a very low degree, sometimes 40 degrees below zero, and then allowed to warm in an ordinary room temperature and the temperature of the oil at the moment it begins to flow is recorded as its pour point.

Oils which have not a low cold test are not suitable for motors for they become like a jelly in the crank case, and when the engine is started the pump cannot function. Some oils become so congealed in very cold weather that the connection rods passing through the oil actually cut a passage for themselves through the mass; this is called "channeling."

The ease with which the engine turns over once a channel has been cut through the oil, gives the motorist the false impression that his oil must be flowing quite freely, whereas the contrary is the case.

For this reason Napthenic Base Oils are superior for winter work in motor cars in some cases good results are obtained with Napthenic oils built up with a small proportion of cylinder stock, but to assure satisfaction the cylinder stock must be de-waxed. This compound will have a fairly low cold test and at the same time will withstand the severe conditions met with in the high speed engine. A good motor oil for winter should show a cold test of zero or lower.

Special R.R. Rates To "Ex" On Saturday

Those in Peterborough who have friends or relatives living in Toronto might draw their attention to the fact that an especially cheap trip is being run from Toronto on Saturday, Sept 16th, and one of the attractions here might be that they visit the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition. The full program will be given on that day, together with the parade of the prize-winning stock, and there is no doubt but that any of those who might come to the city on a visit would enjoy the local exhibition.

If you have friends in Toronto, suggest to them that they come to Peterborough on this cheap excursion, and visit the Fair.

Made To Canadian Record Shipment Is Firm

An impressive indication of increasing business activity is seen in this glimpse of the largest single order of woollens ever shipped to Canada. These trucks are part of a $300,000 shipment from British mills just received by Tip Top Tailors of Canada.

Institute For Blind Is Planning Drive

A local committee was formed a few days ago with the object of raising some funds in aid of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind. This committee was first organized on May 18th last, when a number of local citizens met in the Chamber of Commerce, forming themselves into a local committee, with Mr. G. A. Gillespie as chairman.

The first phase of the campaign will be an exhibit and sale of work manufactured by the blind of Ontario, which will be shown at the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition during the week of September 11-16. H. C. Treneer, formerly organist of St. Andrew's United Church, is in charge of arrangements for this district, and they are hoping that local citizens will make purchases of goods on exhibit. They are usually such articles as cannot be obtained in the stores and shops of local communities.

TWO SLEEPING VICTIMS

BUFFALO, N.Y.—Sleeping sickness has caused "one or two" deaths in Buffalo in recent days.

This announcement was made last night by Dr. Walter C. Goodale, Superintendent of Buffalo City Hospital. A physician will go by plane to St. Louis to-morrow to confer with physicians and scientists fighting to check the disease there.

GERARDO MACHADO

Jobless Schools

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 8.—(C.P.).—School days may start all over again for upwards of 10,000 unemployed persons.

Tentative plans for the State Emergency Relief Board, announced yesterday, call for the establishment of vocational schools at 20 to 25 centres, with the Government putting up the $250,000 expense money and the State furnishing the equipment.

The money will go to pay about 500 teachers and others needed to conduct the classes.

Vacancy Not Filled On Lindsay Bench

With the re-opening of Division Court here to-day, before His Honor Judge L. V O'Connor, following the "long vacation," members of the Bar commented on the fact that as yet no Judge has been appointed for Victoria County to succeed the late Judge R. D. Ponton. The vacancy on the Victoria bench was to-day being occupied by His Honor Judge E. C. S. Huycke, who was officiating at Division Court at Fenelon Falls.

J. F. Strickland, K.C., M.P.P., whose name has been mentioned in connection with the appointment and who is expecting an announcement with the return home of the Hon R. B. Bennett, told The Examiner this morning: "I have not yet received any official word concerning the appointment, but I think it is safe to say that it will not go to any member of the Legislature."

Members of the Bar present in court this morning included the Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C.; V. J. McElderry, K.C.; J. A. O'Brien, Alexander L. Elliott, W. F. Huycke, and Jacob Low.

This year the program has been enlarged with the addition of a "Flower-Arrangement" competition for young women.

"Ann is going to get MARRIED!"

"YES!" She's engaged to a nice boy. He's not making a big salary yet, but he's a hard worker. They'll have to be careful of their money, at first!"

Careful of their money! With a home to find, furniture to buy, marketing to learn ..... with the thousand and one little emergencies to meet that newlyweds never dream of!

Ann will bless advertising. In the pages of this newspaper she will find the very experience she lacks—the advice she needs!

It is when every penny counts that advertising gives its best service. The advertisements you read are valuable lessons in every-day economy. They help, as nothing else can, to make your dollar go the longest distance. For advertisements show you which article, at the price you are willing to pay, is going to suit you best. And the very fact that it is advertised is its guarantee that it will give you satisfaction after you have bought it.

The advertisements in this newspaper are a most valuable guide to wise buying. It pays to read them regularly.

C.C.F. PROGRAM FOUNDATION PLANNING

To The Editor of The Examiner,

Dear Sir,—The letter in Friday's issue represented the world's distress to be the birth pangs of a new social order. After nineteen hundred years of preaching, Christianity in the hearts of the people is surging forward and clamoring to be put into community or socialized practice; goaded onward through suffering in the breakdown of this "profit" system.

Since the Versailles treaty, the repeated world conferences would never have been convened, were not world affairs very sick indeed. To re-convene the conference of the sixty-six will be equally fruitless until our own house is set in order on the basis of not self, but SERVICE—love of the Brotherhood—Socialization.

To remedy these ills in our corner of the world, the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation is more than a new party, it is a new economic industrial order, to give stability to industry, security to the worker, more leisure (not enforced) and a richer individual life to every citizen.

We do not believe in change by violence. This transformation can be brought about only by political action, through election of a government inspired by the ideals of a Co-operative Commonwealth and supported by a majority of the people.

Be not blind for this is the day of great decision. The first policy is Planning. "The establishment of a planned, socialized, economic order, to make possible the most efficient development of the national resources and the most equitable distribution of the national income. The first step will be the setting up of a National Planning Commission, consisting of a small body of economists, engineers, statisticians, and technical staff.

"The Commission will plan for the production, distribution and exchange of all goods and services necessary to the efficient functioning of the economy; to co-ordinate the activities of the socialized industries; to provide for a satisfactory balance between the producing and consuming power; and to carry on continuous research in order to acquire detailed information necessary to efficient planning.

"This commission will be responsible to the Cabinet, and will work in co-operation with the Managing Boards of the Socialized Industries" (experts).

I quote from world authorities on the vital need of co-operative planning. In "World's Economic Crisis and Way of Escape" are six lectures by Sir Arthur Salter, Sir Josiah Stamp, J. M. Keynes, Sir Basil Blackett, Henry Clay and Sir William Beveridge. Sir Basil Blackett, director of the Bank of England says: "A fair summary of what has been expressed in previous lectures would be that modern civilization finds itself on the brink of chaos, owing to the inability of human beings to manage the machine they have brought into being. It is not merely that we are failing to make full use of the marvellous opportunities science opens to the twentieth century. We are in immediate danger of finding ourselves the victims of a Frankenstein of our creation; the genius of man has outstripped his code of morals both in the national and international sphere. The structure of the twentieth century cannot be built on outworn foundations. If we are to survive we must think Adventurously and challenge existing values and the customs based on them." I wish to put before you the view that consistent co-operative planning is not only a desirable means of progress, but an unavoidable necessity if we are to save the economic structure of modern civilization from disaster and the immediate task to which we should bend all our energies, is to prove to ourselves and the world that planning is consistent with freedom and freedom with planning. Here we come to the heart of our present day problem of financial and economic crisis, brought on, not by scarcity, but by plenty, which has shocked mankind, and accounts for the intense interest in economic questions."

Under such a planned system, Sir Basil continues, "There is no reason why it, a short time any human being should feel anxiety about the provision of food, clothing and houseroom for himself and those he is responsible for. Science offers to us a standard of living and of material comfort immensely higher than any known to the most fortunate of those which have gone before."

Sir Arthur Salter says: We need to reform and largely to transform this system that the otherwise free activities and competitive enterprises of man, instead of destroying each other, will inure to the general good. In the organization of industry, credit and money, we need to supplement the automatic processes of adjustment, by deliberate planning. If we fail, the alternative is an intervening period of collapse and anarchy, chaos and a different system, inconsistent with liberty."

Lord Marley in the House of Lords said: The Capitalist System. "The difficulty is to consume the goods the system produces. The greatest danger from the system is that the only means of consuming these goods is by another world war."

Hjalmar Schact, late Reichbank President says in his book: "Never was the incapacity of the economic leaders of the capitalist world so glaringly demonstrated as to-day. A capitalism which cannot feed the workers has no right to exist. The guilt of the system lies in its alliance with the violent policies of militarism. The ruling classes of the world have as completely failed in political leadership as in economic."

Mr. Roosevelt's outstanding appeal is to the idealistic in human nature, nevertheless the Recovery Act contains the adjunct of heavy coercive penalties as inducement to co-operation. With the wonderful new machinery how can good times come without cutting down the hours of labor and how can this be done without a co-operative system which the C.C.F. stands for?

GRAIN AND PRODUCE REVIEWS

CHICAGO GRAIN

Uncertainties attached to expected Government crop reports made their disturbing influence felt ahead of time yesterday, and wheat prices tumbled almost 2 cents a bushel.

Although the September crop summary from Washington is not due until Monday, buyers backed away from the grain pits nearly from the outset, and values reached their lowest level just before business ended. Pressure of rural hedging sales of wheat at Winnipeg, with quotations there upheld only by an artificial minimum limit, had more or less bearish effect here.

Right after the opening, the Chicago wheat market received a jolt from an authoritative estimate that feeding of domestic wheat to live stock this season would amount to only 65,000,000 bushels compared with 138,000,000 in 1932. Another disconcerting factor was enlarged shipments of wheat from Russia, 944,000 bushels this week, against 296,000 the week previous. Selling of May wheat by Eastern houses, presumably in the nature of liquidations, was a feature of the late dealings, when the market touched its figures for the day.

ONTARIO GRAIN

Approximate prices track shipping point—Wheat, 64c to 65c; oats, 32c to 34c; barley, 40c to 43c; rye, 45c to 46c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, September 8. — A revival of export business in Canadian wheat was signalized by importers purchases in excess of 500,000 bushels on the Grain Exchange yesterday, but increased hedging pressure, counteracted the support and sent future prices down fractionally to close unchanged to ⅝c lower.

After opening unchanged to ¼c higher, the October future dropped to the pegged level and December and May options sank to the minimum price shortly before the close. Bottom levels were quoted at the close with October at 70¼c, December at 71⅝c, and May at 76⅜c.

Greatly influenced by the conditions in the Argentine, Liverpool market was firm and closed ¼d higher. With drought still unbroken serious crop losses have occurred in the Argentine.

Russian wheat shipments showed an increase this week, with almost 1,000,000 bushls cleared from Black Sea ports. Argentina movement is expected to be 2,750,000 bushels.

It is pointed out in a New York message that compared with last year he United States wheat crop is down 246,000,000 bushels, Canadian crop 148,000,000, and there is a possibility of Argentina and Australia raising 108,000,000 between them.

Demand for better grades of cash wheat was improved and spreads were ¼c to ½c better. Coarse grains trading was slow and featureless.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

A gain of ¼c to ½c a pound was registered by No. 1 grade butter in carlots or less on the Montreal dairy and produce market yesterday, with prices generally becoming 18¼c to 18½c a pound, compared with 18c Wednesday. The advance is attributed to increased export business. Sales have been made to England, and this week's shipments are expected to total 2,500 boxes. The British butter market has continued to improve of late, and sales of Canadian butter can be made at the full market price. Receipts totalled only 11 boxes.

All other lines held unchanged. Cheese held steady at the week's advance, with Ontario bringing 10¼c to 10⅜c a pound and Quebecs 10c to 10¼c. Good cheese export business has been done this week, and heavy shipments are being made. Receipts yesterday were 1,228 boxes.

The egg market was firm at 22c to 23c a dozen for extras, 17c to 18c for firsts, and 13½c to 14c for seconds, for graded shipments, in carlots or less, of Ontario eggs. Arrivals amount to 499 cases.

The potato market was the same at 75c to 80c per 80-pound bag of new Quebecs.

Kungu cake is a cake eaten by the natives of the Lake Nyassa region in Africa, and made from the pressed bodies of a dipterous aquatic insect.

The bride wore a pretty gown of white silk net with blue sash, and carried a bouquet of blue and white gladioli.
The bridesmaid, Miss Kathleen Walsh, was gowned in pink crepe de chine, with pink hat and accessories, and bouquet of pink gladoli.
Mr. Ferdnand Collet acted as best man.

Obituary

EDGAR JONES
OMEMEE, Sept. 8 (Examiner Correspondence) — The funeral of the late Edgar Jones, whose death occurred suddenly last week, was held from his father's home on King street on Monday afternoon, and was perhaps the largest ever seen in this community. Rev. Dr. Reddick of Trinity United Church of which the deceased was a member, conducted the service, assisted by Rev. A. T. Weir, of Christ Church. Both ministers spoke in glowing terms of the deceased and that his life was a pattern for other young men to follow. Interment was made in Emily cemetery.
Hundreds of sympathizing friends and relatives gathered to pay their last respects to one whom they all loved and respected. The late Edgar oJnes was born a short distance south of Omemee twenty-two years and eight months ago and about twelve years ago moved with his parents to the village, where he attended the public and high schools.
His cheerful disposition endeared him to both old and young and his exemplary life brought him the respect of the whole community.
He leaves to mourn his loss, his sorrowing parents, two sisters, Ruth and Doris at home and one younger brother Bert.
Pall bearers were six friends, R. Widdis, N. Henderson, of oOlborne; R. Rutherford, V. Lang, H. Lang and J. Sanderson.

PRAGUE, Sept. 8 (AP)—Soviet Russia has gone and bought a circus, say reports in the papers here. It is the Kludsky Show, which once lived off the fat of the land in capitalistic Europe, but in recent years fell into financial straits. It was struggling precariously through Rumania, the reports said when Soviet representatives offered the elephants and tigers a home in Moscow.

The Salvation Army was founded by William Booth in London, England, in 1865 under the name of East London Mission, later changed to the Christian Mission.

Your Health

By DR LOGAN CLENDENING

Do rapidly-growing children need to have their diet especially supervised?

Yes. A physician reporting on nutritional anemia in infancy at the University of Michigan Society for Children's Diseases says:

Dr. Clendening

"I believe that special consideration should be given to rapidly-growing infants. Iron - containing foods should be added to the diet at an earlier period in such cases."

Such iron-containing foods are spinach, carrots, the green vegetables generally, and according to another eminent authority, beef juice.

"In cases of nutritional anemia, large doses of beef juice should be given in addition to large doses of iron. The juice of a pound of round steak a day, I am sure, causes the blood to become enriched more quickly than if it is omitted and iron alone is used. The beef juice probably acts by stimulating nutrition."

These nutritional anemias have been studied with particular care of late. They occur at all ages, but are particularly likely to do so during infancy and childhood.

The impoverishment of the blood is definitely related to deficiencies of the diet. Normal premature infants, twins and rapidly growing infants or children, seem especially liable to them.

An extremely severe form of anemia in infants, resembling in the appearance of the blood cells under the microscope pernicious anemia, has been reported by Cooley and Lee. Under treatment by blood transfusion, however, improvement was rapid, and no relapses occurred if the children were put upon a suitable diet.

Indeed, all the nutrimental anemias respond to dietary management; just as they probably orginate from dietary deficiencies, so they are cured by replacement or increase of the iron-containing foods in the diet.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS

H. L.: "One of my eyes has an almost almond shaped slit just outside the pupil. My eyes are brown, but this spot is a grayish color. I also notice a smaller one on the other eye. Is there any cause for alarm?"

Answer: No, if the eyes are functionally sound. Such lack of development is not uncommon.

• • •

G. H. A.: "How poisonous is rhubarb and how much nutritious effect has it? Our family has been eating a good deal of it and recently I have heard people disparage it."

Answer: Rhubarb is not poisonous and has considerable nutritive value. There is no cause for alarm in eating it.

You'll like this Powder, too...

Everyone knows what a good cleanser Bon Ami Cake is—how well it cleans windows, mirrors, metals, etc. And Bon Ami Powder is equally good. It contains the same scratchless ingredients as the Cake and comes in a sifter-top can.

Most women like to use the Powder form of Bon Ami for cleaning their bathtubs, kitchen sinks, pots and pans, linoleums, painted woodwork, etc.

Bon Ami doesn't scratch the many things it cleans so well, doesn't roughen your hands—and is odorless. In either Powder or Cake form, it cleans quickly and easily . . . and polishes as it cleans.

BON AMI

. . . cleans thoroughly but doesn't scratch.

"Hasn't Scratched Yet"

SHE LOST 32 LBS.

NEW FROCKS NO LONGER WORRIED HER

"How did she lose that 32 lbs. of fat?" is what you will be asking. Let her tell you herself:—

"About 18 months ago I weighed 178 lbs.—which I can assure you annoyed me very much. Everything seemed a worry to me, especially new clothes. Nothing would fit me comfortably, and walking was unbearable. I was advised by a friend to try Kruschen Salts, and I am very glad I did, too. During the first ten months I lost 26 lbs. of fat. Now, for the last 6 months my weight has been 146 lbs., and I feel much better in health. I have all my weight tickets to substantiate my statements."—(Mrs.) M. P.

Kruschen contains those six mineral salts, proportionately balanced, found in the waters of those famous European Spas used by generations of fat people to reduce weight.

Kruschen helps blood, nerves, glands and body organs to function properly—you gain new strength and energy—feel years younger—look better, work better.

BE BEAUTIFUL

By GLADYS GLAD

When the famous siren, Cleopatra, was but a lass, women had a great yen for curly hair. Ringlets were considered the most potent embellishments of feminine loveliness. And the gals of that age went to great lengths in order to acquire those much-desired ringlets. They used heavy iron tongs for the purpose. Their slaves heated these tongues to a high temperature, and then used them on the locks of their mistresses. And, as you can easily judge, the curling treatments were anything but conducive to hair health.

Gladys Glad

Women today have the same "Curlilocks" complex as the ancient Egyptian lasses had. But of course, there can be no comparison between the curling method employed in that era, and the permanent waving system of today. Even our present perfected waving system, however, is not without its bad points. But it is not in the permanent waving process itself that the danger to hair health lies.

A permanent wave will not harm the hair at all if it is administered by a competent operator, and if the hair is given proper care before and after the waving. Where the danger lies is in the fact that so many girls have taken to dousing their hair with water daily, in order to set their permanents.

Many a mere youngster soaks her hair and scalp with water every night and puts in the waves for the next day's display. And if this practice is continued long enough, and is not counteracted by plenty of scalp massaging, brushing and airing, and occasional hot oil treatments such as the ones outlined in my "Beauty Culture" booklet, thinning of the hair is very likely to result within a few months' time. And what's more, the constant wetting of the hair may remove too much of the natural oil, and make the hair dry and brittle.

It should not be necessary to set a permanent wave every night, or even every two or three nights. If the waves are set properly after a shampoo, they should retain their smooth, even outlines until the next shampooing becomes necessary. A hair net or wave cap and a few hairpins will preclude the possibility of the waves becoming disordered during the night. If you insert a few hairpins in the waves and then don a hair net or wave cap, the waves should remain properly in place no matter how much you toss about in your sleep.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

Mouth Wash.

Betty: An effective mouth wash can be made by dissolving one-fourth teaspoon of borax, one-fourth teaspoon of peroxide and one-fourth teaspoon of salt in a glass of warm water.

Superfluous Hair.

Mrs. T.: The superfluous hair bleach to which you refer is made of two teaspoons of peroxide, and half a teaspoon of ordinary household ammonia.

Nose.

Elinor: It is indeed possible to have the nose successfully reshaped by plastic surgery. This work, however, should be done by a skilled and experienced surgeon only.

HOLLYWOOD

Sense and Nonsense

Only a few of Lilyan Tashman's friends realize how seriously ill she has been. Yesterday she received her second blood transfusion. Fearing to excite her, the doctors didn't even tell her about the first. They gave it to her while she was under an anaesthetic.

Lilyan Tashman

The transfusions don't mean that the star is in a critical condition, but she is very weak. As one of Hollywood's busiest socialities, Lilyan has led a strenuous life. Her deep sun-tan has given her the appearance of health and her slenderness has been attributed to fashion's dictate.

The star's room at the Good Samaritan Hospital is banked with flowers. A bowl of lillies of the valley and pink rose-buds, just the size to fit the bedside table, is from Ed Lowe. He calls every afternoon long distance and sends a wire every morning. He'll probably be back in Hollywood in a few days.

• • •

She met one in Santa Barbara recently and he said:

"For years I've been wanting to meet someone who can make people cry and laugh too. I've only been able to make them cry."

• • •

The transatlantic migration of Hollywood stars to England has been a summer phenomenon. Approximately twenty well-established picture players have crossed the briny. To name just a few, the Hollywood expeditionary force has included Bebe Daniels, Thelma Todd, Gloria Swanson, Jeanette MacDonald, Constance Cummings and Sally Eilers. The male contingent has Boris Karloff, Herbert Marshall, Victor McLaglen, Ronald Colman and Charles Laughton. All the men named are Englishmen who rose to cinematic fame in Hollywood; all the feminine stars named had never appeared in a British film before.

• • •

Now that the technical equipment for British picture production is on a par with that of Hollywood, many of the expatriated English players are leaving for home because that is where their hearts have always been. Several of the ladies of the screen have taken the eastward passage because they feel that there are greater opportunities for so-called artistry in England. The present financial condition of many Hollywood producers and the disturbing reports of salary slashes also strengthen that ancient urge for self-preservation. As one British producer says: "Employment of such eminent American players does not mean that we have assumed an all-American complex; the players happened to be on the market and our bids were sufficient to command their services."

• • •

To cap the situation, the report has been confirmed that Douglas Fairbanks and his son, Douglas Jr., have decided to remain in England where a new $5,000,000 producing concern is now being organized. According to the British press, this sees the end of Hollywood's supremacy and the beginning of England's leadership in the film industry. Among the British stars who have been invited to throw in their lot with Fairbanks are Charles Chaplin, Olive Brook, Ronald Colman, Herbert Marshall, Leslie Howard and Charles Laughton. Colman and Brook have already expressed a desire to settle down in their native England. If this sextette decides to line up with Fairbanks, it will undoubtedly leave a tremendous gap in the Hollywood roster of heroes who have been noted for their masculinity.

• • •

Would you call this an English sense of humor? Someone told Mimi Jordan the other day that her slip was showing. Just as a test, she left it that way all day. Thirty-three people called her attention to it.

The Marquis Henry de la Falaise will not lose a foot of the film that he had to keep on ice during his stay in Bali. . . . Wallace Smith's gay novel, "The Captain Hates the Sea," is in its seventh edition.

As soon as he finishes the Mae West picture, Cary is scheduled to take the leading role in "Come on Marines," a brand new story by Phillip Wylie to fit the title that Paramount once announced for a Buddy Rogers-Richard Arlen vehicle.

Dark green, wine red and midnight blue—these are among the colors Paris has on schedule for autumn. For early autumn there are also many prints with a good deal of white in them, and likewise plain colors worn with white accessories, the white hat, gloves and shoes continuing over till the weather gets nippy.

PARLIAMENT HILL HEARS

By WILFRID EGGLESTON

"What is a mugwump?" the teacher wanted to know.

A little hand shot up: "Please teacher, a bird".

Wondering how the child got that idea, the teacher pursued:

"Why it is called a mugwump?"

"Because it sits with its 'mug' on one side of the fence and its 'mump' on the other," asserted the child.

I would have been inclined to doubt the veracity of this anecdote of scholastic wisdom had it not been passed along to me from a former minister in the King government.

For the next few weeks Hon. E. N. Rhodes will be in the public eye on account of the large conversion loan which will be launched, the size of it to be "all the market will stand," according to gossip on the Hill.

Years ago "Ned" Rhodes was in the pubic eye for very different reasons. He used to play rugby for a Halifax team, and was described as a "splendid full back" by one of the Halifax papers. That was 37 or 38 years ago.

• • •

Rhodes is not the only ex-star of the gridiron in public life here. Senator H. H. Horsey was for four years a member of the famous Queen's Rugby team in the period associated with Captain Guy Curtis and the victory over Yale. Senator Horsey enjoyed the distinction of being picked for the team a few weeks after arriving as a freshman, and was thus on the team four successive years without staying to take another degree or so, as a number of stars since his day have done.

In case you didn't know . . . . Charles W. Bell, M. P., for Hamilton, is equally famous as a playwright and barrister, as author of "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," and as having saved 22 people from the gallows. They say he has never lost a capital case . . . "Peter" Heenan, Minister of Labor in the King government, has been in some adventuresome occupations. At one time or another he was a miner, deep-sea diver and a locomotive engineer. Remembering his perilous exploits of old, however, he kept a stiff upper lip, and the airplane landed safely at the french capital. . . . While on this personal strain . . . Not one of Canada's party leaders play golf, so far as I have ever heard. That goes for Messrs. Bennett, King, Bob Gardiner and J. S. Woodsworth, as well as Agnes MacPhail. Some of their colleagues do, though. Charles Stewart is the president of an Ottawa golf club and plays a steady game. You occasionally see "Jock" Vallance on the Ottawa golf courses, also Senator J. H. King, Senator Sharpe, Dr. T. F. Donnelly, "Ted" Garland, Dr. J. S. Stewart and a few others, but most of the golfing members save their games for the recess, and their home courses.

Although the hand of circumstance has fallen heavily upon the farmers of Southern Saskatchewan, some of them evidently have retained their sense of humor through it all. One of them questioned by the inspector of taxation about his crops gave an itemized account of the last few years:

"First year I was dried out, second year hailed out, third year frose out, fourth year blown out, last year I got to blame out, and I've stayed out ever since."

The Customs Department got a shock the other day when the Exchequer Court ruled that certain coasting regulations under which the customs officials have been doing business, including the seizure of contraband vessels, for over fifty years, were drawn up incorrectly in the first place, and thus have never had any legal existence.

Two of Peterborough's junior citizens had a big time in Toronto this week, when they were special guests of the Crosse & Blackwell Company, at the Exhibition and the Royal York Hotel. Some time ago, the Crosse & Blackwell Company advertised that fifty children would be given this treat at Toronto Fair time, the lucky children from Ontario being those who were able to collect the most silver tokens of the company's products. Two gained the prize from Peterborough: Richard Roberts, eleven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. F. Roberts, of 301 Aylmer Street North, and Gwen Record, twelve-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Record of 656 Reid Street. Incidentally, Richard Roberts was the kingpin of the whole half-hundrred of children, as he collected no less than 1532 tokens, the highest number collected by any child in the contest. Gwen Record collected 425 tokens, and stood eleventh in the list. The children were met in Toronto by representatives of the company, and were taken to the Royal York Hotel where they spent two pleasant days. They had numerous drives around the city and were entertained at the Exhibition during the two days. On their return home each child brought a large metal box, the top enamelled in colors, containing large jars of each one of the Crosse & Blackwell products, as well as biscuits from the Eduactor Biscuit Company, and gum from the Wrigley people.

Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors, conducted by Anne Wilcox

To everyone there comes a time when quick decisions must be made.

* * * * * * *

Sometimes the matter which calls for immediate judgment is of small importance, sometimes of great. In whichever event, the mind must be made up without time to carefully weight the points for and against the determination.

* * * * * * *

It is impossible always to make the right decision under such pressure of time, but neither are decisions always infallibly correct even when the subject has been pondered long.

* * * * * * *

In both situations, however, intuition a naturally good or a cultivated good judgment, comes to one's aid.

* * * * * * *

Intuition is alien to some people, and to others it is a power not to be disregarded. For quick decisions the latter group let intuiton influence them. This is often termed the sixth sense.

* * * * * * *

If this is so, it is a spirtual sense, rather than a physical one such as sight, hearing, taste, etc., for it has to do with adjustments to life.

* * * * * * *

Those who follow their intuitions, or hunches, if you prefer to call them that, generally make good decisions. They cannot be swayed by their wishes, for intuitions or hunches are entirely apart from them.

* * * * * * *

There are other persons who have what is called naturally good judgment. This estimate is founded upon the repeated evidence of its wisdom. These persons are those blessed with clear mental visions.

* * * * * * *

In decisions they do not permit personal prejudices to sway them, they have what is known as the judicial mind, which can and must make impersonal decisions. People with naturally good judgment are apt to make quick decisions wisely.

* * * * * * *

For the large group who do not rely upon intuition as an aid, nor have the assistance of naturally good judgment, quick decisions are bugbears. They are to be shunned, but avoid them as best they may, they will cross their paths occasionally.

* * * * * * *

To be prepared for such emergencies, a great help is to cultivate the habit of reliance upon one's decisions, however made. This means that the person endeavours to make up his mind intelligently and sensibly at all times.

* * * * * * *

This does not mean that he should be ponderous, but discriminating.

* * * * * * *

To refuse to acquire good judgment by not following what quite evidently is the right course at times when speed is not a consideration a person's power of wise decisions is dulled.

* * * * * * *

Results of continual inattention to the dictates of good judgment are miserably apparent, to oneself as to others. It is possible to avoid repeating errors of judgment. Just by so doing one grows to have good judgment.

* * * * * * *

It can be cultivated, and by so doing, wisdom in quick decisions is fostered.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR CENTRAL PRESS

By E. V. SHEPARD

TWO-SUITERS FORBID NO TRUMPS

It is axiomatic that a strong two-suiter plays best at the suit declaration the better fitting the 26 cards of the declaring side. Only when suits are short is a no-trumper preferable. The bidders of the hand shown below did not arrive at the proper final call, thus going down needlessly.

Run n cut here

Only East and West were vulnerable when South dealt. Bidding went: South, 1-Spade; North, 1-No Trump; South, 2-Hearts; North, 2-No Trumps; South, 3-Spades, to show greater length than in hearts; instead of bidding 4-Spades, as he should have done, North ended bidding with 3-No Trumps.

The opening lead was the K of clubs. North's Ace won the second trick in the suit, after the drop of West's 8 made it appear as if that player might have no more of the suit. It was impossible to go game without establishment of the spades so the declarer had to lead a spade, hoping that West, and not his partnr, might be the player having the stops to spades. When East played the J of Spades, dummy's Ace won the trick, but East won the second trick in the suit, after which he ran off three good club tricks. Then East took his good spade trick. Four club tricks and two spade tricks defeated the contract two tricks. The declarer would have done better had he taken his eight visible tricks before letting East in. One club trick, two diamond tricks, four heart tricks and a single spade trick would have enabled North to win within a trick of his contract.

Game could not have been won at hearts, on account of the very bad distribution of trumps, but South did his best to induce his partner to play the deal at spades, if possible, and North should have heeded the advice.

Try playing the hand at spades, with a normal opening lead of the Q of diamonds, although that lead is not particularly advantageous.

Win the opening lead with dummy's Ace. Lead the 9 of spades. When East plays the J, win with the Ace. Lead a second round of spades. West's last trump falls. East wins the first trick for side. East will lead back the K of clubs. Dummy will win the trick. Don't bother to waste a trump in each hand to pull East's winning trump. Lead winning hearts until East uses his last trump to ruff. East will lead his clubs and win one trick in that suit, then the declarer will spread his hand for game, having lost only two spade tricks and a single club trick.

You can get feather epaulettes that clip on to the straps of an old evening gown and give it a very new look. There are also feather muffs to match.

The newest coat for football game wear has a hood. It drops down into a sort of collar when not being used to keep the neck warm.

JAMES SCRIVER IS 84 YEARS OLD

Has Long Resided At Hastings And Recalls Its Prosperous Past.

CARPENTER BY TRADE.

Mr. Scriver was born in Prince Edward County on September 8th, 1849, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Roland Scriver. When a young boy he came with his parents to Trent River, where they took up farming, which occupation this, now the oldest man of the district, followed for a number of years before moving to Hastings, where his ability as a carpenter and conscientious worker earned for him an enviable reputation.

This grand veteran can remember Hastings as a much busier village than it is to-day, and with a population nearly twice as large as it has at the present. Disastrous fires have ruined what at one time promised to be one of the best towns in the district.

Mr. Scriver married Mary Jane Tyler, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Orme Tyler of Trent River, who has been his constant helper for fifty-nine years of wedded happiness.

While not enjoying good health, a multitude of friends hope he will have many more birthdays.

Sugar Bowl and Oshawa Tuxis Tie 7-7 in First Game

BOTH TEAMS MAKE BAD START BUT EFFORTS SPARKLE LATER

Motor City Lads Take Lead But Bowl Crabs Six In Third.

SMART DOUBLE PLAYS.

Sugar Bowl and Oshawa Tuxis battled to a 7-7 draw in nine innings at Stevenson Park last night to deadlock the first game of their O.A.S.A. playdown series. Tightening up the last five frames, after a wobbly start, both teams played air-tight ball to give a good-sized crowd a fine display of snappy softball. It was considered too dark to continue to play after the ninth.

The visitors hopped on Ross Currie to gain three runs in the second, got one more in the third and another trio in the fourth. They didn't get a man to third the rest of the way, Lefty Sturgeon hurling excellent ball and getting good support. The Bowlmen broke through to get six runs in the hectic third, but one more in the fifth was all they could add to it, not a man reaching second the last four sessions.

Currie had trouble from the start, being somewhat wild and getting touched for five hits before he retired. Sturgeon, though wild at times also, twirled fine the rest of the way, but for the third. He gave seven hits, walked three and struck out five, improving as he went along. Powell threw them up for Oshawa, fanning two and holding the Dormer bunch to seven hits, five of which weer bunched in the third. Both teams gave their pitchers good support for the most part, the homesters clicking on two double plays.

Chappell, Boyce, Chamberlain and Dalton all showed up well defensively for the Tuxis crew, which has not lost a game to date. For the Bowlmen, Pat Calladine, Smith and Russell went good, while Playford and Bill Calladne pulled off some smart saves, too. Most of the hits were earned on both sides.

Weir led the locals at bat with two in four times, and Russell clouted a two-bagger to score three in the third. Chappell got three hits in five for the visitors, Chamberlain, Conlin and Boyce coming through with two apiece, the latter having a double.

Oshawa had runners on second and third in the first but failed to score. They climbed on Currie for three in the second on two walks and four singles, Sturgeon relieving him to retire the side on a double play with the bases full. A single, wild pitch and error gave the Tuxis outfit one more in the third. Then, the Bowl batters started and didn't stop running till six runners had crossed the plate. Two hits on bunts, Dormer and Playford beating them out, two errors, singles by W. Calladine and Weir, a walk, steal, and a double by Russell did the trick.

Oshawa came back in the fourth to take the lead with three runs on two walks, error, two singles and a double. Snappy fielding cut them down in order the rest of the game. Sugar Bowl evened it up with a run in the fifth, Sturgeon drawing a walk, stealing second, going to third as Bill Calladine was thrown out and scoring on Weir's fly to the outfield. They didn't get the semblance of a counter the remainder of the game.

Large Sports Day Held At Pontypool

PONTYPOOL, Sept. 8.—A large crowd attended the sports day which marked the opening of the Memorial Park here Labor Day. The men's softball tournament was keenly contested between teams from Oshawa, Orono, Kirby, Janetville was given a bye to the finals against Oshawa when that team eliminated Orono. The strong Motor City entry then swept to victory over Janetville. Pontypool won the baseball game, 12-3, from Yelverton, batteries for the former being Thorndyke and Mitchell, and for Yelverton being McGill, Heaslip and Syer.

Janetville girls won the softball game from Blackstock, and a men's softball game between Peterborough Caledonians and Clarke resulted in a 3-2 victory for the Caleys. Many followers saw some good horse-shoe pitching and races. A cafeteria lunch was served by the ladies on the grounds, after which a large crowd attended the dance in Orange Hall. Music was supplied by Wilson's Merry Makers of Oshawa.

The field day was considered quite successful and everyone expressed admiration for the new grounds, purchased by the Park Committee. There will be about $150 clear after expenses, and Pontypool can boast of an excellent park and athletic grounds in good location.

LONDON, September 8. — Stern tussles for the leadership of the English soccer league are in prospect on Saturday, and a general switching of the leading teams is likely., Portsmouth, at the top of the league as the result of a midweek drawn game, visits the Midlands to play Stoke City, promoted from the Second Division at the end of last season.

Four teams tied for second place with five points each will clash and hard battles are assured. Arsenal are at home to Manchester City, while Tottenham Hotspurs, runners-up in the Second Division last season, will meet Leicester City.

Leafs, Royals And Bisons Locked Together In Battle For Play-offs.

BUFFALO IN FRONT.

Royals' Victory Over Leafs And Buffalo's Win Does Damage.

(By Herbert Barker, A.P. Sports Writer.)

Toronto Maple Leafs, Montreal Royals and Buffalo Bisons were locked in a virtual tie for the fourth International League playoff position to-day with the end of the regular season only three days away.

Buffalo's 13-5 trouncing of Rochester Red Wings, coupled with Montreal's 9-2 victory over Toronto, left the three clubs so closely bunched a blanket would cover them, and sent the experts into a battle with the problems of long division. The net result of these calculations was to reveal Buffalo a fraction of a percentage point ahead of Toronto and Montreal another fraction behind as follows:

Clubs:	Won.	Lost.	%
Buffalo	81	84	.4909
Toronto	80	83	.4907
Montreal	79	82	.4906

Charley Perkins, just recalled by Brooklyn Dodgers, pitched great ball for Buffalo as the Bisons swamped Rochester under a 15-hit barrage with three apiece going to Ollie Carnegie and Jack Smith. Perkins, fanning ten men, allowed nine hits, but he was working behind a seven-run lead after the third inning.

Toronto, in bowing to Montreal, suffered its fifth successive beating Babe Phelps gave up only seven hits and would have had a shutout but for his own wildness. Ervin Brame pitched well for the Leafs until the sixth when the Royals got five hits in a row, after two were out, and scored seven runs.

Jim Stroner's homer with two on and Cliff Melton's steady pitching gave Baltimore Orioles an 8-3 victory over Newark Bears who already have clinched first place. At the same time, one of the season's greatest pitching streaks was shattered. When Margin Duke was lifted after the fifth inning it marked the first time in 14 successive games that Newark's starting pitcher failed to go the route.

Albany clubbed out six hits for five runs in the fifth inning and beat Jersey City 7-4.

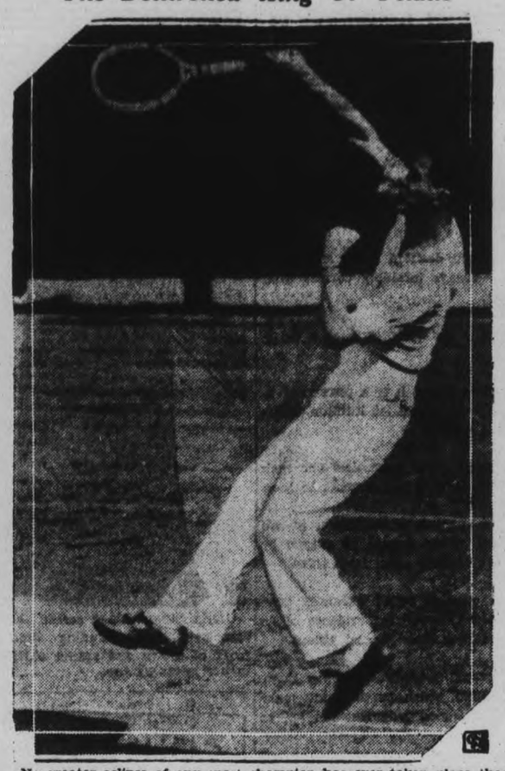
The Dethroned King Of Tennis



No greater eclipse of any sport champion has ever taken place than the swift descent from the tennis heights of Ellsworth Vines, shown as he practised to defend his U. S. men's singles championship. By startling decisive scores Bryan M. Grant Jr., of Atlanta, aged 22, robbed Vines of his last laurels on the court at Forest Hills, N. Y. Vines decline has been complete, all his championships having been lifted from him in the past few months.

GIANTS' POSITION IS SERIOUS WITH LATE PIRATE VICTORIES

Another Win By Buccaneers Will Leave Leaders Slight Margin.

BLAST THREE PITCHERS.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, Jr.
(A. P. Sports Writer)

A series which started out a few days ago as a matter of importance only to Pittsburgh Pirates, second place club of the National League, moved into its final stage to-day looking like a serious matter indeed for New York Giants.

The Leaders, beaten in three of the first four games, had reached a position where they almost had to win the final clash in order to enjoy any degree of safety during the remainder of their western tour. Their margin, 7½ games at the outset, was reduced to 5½ by the 14-2 drubbing they absorbed yesterday. Another to-day would leave them a slim working margin on which to tackle five games at Cincinnati, followed by series against Chicago Cubs and St. Louis Cardinals, who seem to be almost unbeatable on their home grounds.

Hoist Giant Hurlers

Heinie Meine did a neat job of halting the Giants yesterday, giving them 10 hits including a homer by Rookie Phil Weintraub, and pitching his way out of a few tight spots. Roy (Bud) Parmelee couldn't get the Buccos out. They blasted him from the hill with four straight singles, following a walk and a sacrifice, to get three runs and made it 5-0 before Adolfo Luque managed to end the inning.

Luque went out before a four-blast in the third. Lefty Watson Clark gave up a few more runs and Gus Suhr and Earl Grace nicked young Johnny Salveson for home runs in the sixth to leave the Giants a thoroughly beaten set of players.

Others Follow Suit

The Cubs and the Cardinals also took a few cuts at the Giants' lead, winding up 6½ and and 8½ games behind respectively. The Cubs edge out Boston Braves 2-1 in a mound duel between Lon Warneke and Dutch Brandt as Gabby Hartnett did all Chicago scoring and Warneke lost a shutout through Wally Berger's 26th homer.

The Cards walloped the Phillies 10-1 behind Dizzy Dean for their 13th consecutive home victory under Frankie Frisch and moved into fourth place a half game ahead of the Braves.

Beck in Form

Walter Beck gave the last Cincinnati Reds their 20th shutout of the season as an eighth inning rally against Red Lucas brought Brooklyn a 2-0 victory.

New York Yankees finally nipped a game off Washington's American League lead as Lou Gehrig led them to a 12-8 victory over St. Louis Browns while Chicago's White Sox beat out the Senators 1-0 in a mound duel between Sad Sam Jones and Monte Weaver and ended a five-game winning streak despite Weaver's three-hit pitching. Gehrig walloped his 25th homer, a double and a single for the Yanks.

Philadelphia unveiled another rookie hurler, Johnny Marcum from Louisville, and he gave a five hit mound performance to beat Cleveland Indians 6-0. The Detroit-Boston clash was halted by wet grounds.

One-Armed Title Goes to Glasgow

EDINBURGH, Scotland, Sept. 8 (AP)—W. R. Thomson of Glasgow, who lost an arm in the service of his King, yesterday won the first one-armed golf championship ever held, with the highly creditable score of 82-87—169, from a field of 43 British army veterans. This unique tournament brought out some fine golf with Thomson carrying the green with his drive on a 262-yard hole and another player, A. L. Groundrill of London scoring a birdie two on a 140-yard hole, putting his drive eight feet from the pin.

DIFFICULT TASK AWAITS SANDY

Johnny Goodman, Open Champion, Looms As His Strongest Opponent.

SEEKS REVENGE.

CINCINNATI, O., September 8 (C.P.). — Just a year ago golfing stars and spectators at the Five Farms Course at Baltimore were wont to pass a silent figure seated on a log near the home fairway.

He was a competitor in the United States amateur golf championship that year, some knew, some didn't. No one disturbed him, for as a matter of fact none of the critics or even the contenders gave this quiet young iron artist a thought.

To-day found the same silent, sandy-haired athlete the centre of all eyes.

He is C. R. (Sandy) Somerville, London, Ont. returned across the border to defend the crown he won in such surprising fashion at Five Farms.

It is only the second time since 1895 that a golferr other than a native of the United States has defended the Havermeyer Trophy. Harold Hilton. Briton of bulldog tenacity on the links, won the championship in 1911, but failed to retain it.

Somerville faces what appears an even more difficult task than Hilton. The man who appears his most dangerous foe is Johnny Goodman, United States open champion who arrived here yesterday. Goodman is seeking revenge for the sound incing the Londoner gave him in the amateur final last year.

Sandy simply wore Goodman down by his boring-in tactics. The rugged training he had received in Ontario amateur hockey circles, in footbal games, and on the cricket pitch had given the Canadian a physique far too powerfu for Goodman to cope with.

Two down at the end of the last nine, Sandy just tightened his belt and went on to victory by winning the 28th, 29th, and 30th holes in succession from the tiring American who lacked the stamina of his Canadian opponent.

Keene-Westclox Clash In Big Final

The Girls' Softball League has the local sporting stage to itself as Westclox and Keene put on their last playoff act of the year Saturday afternoon at three o'clock in the Ashburnham Bowl. No other ball game is billed for tomorrow here, and the largest crowd of the season is expected to watch the girls battle it out in the final game for the league championship. Both have won two games in the five-game titular series and tomorrow's contest will go overtime if the teams are tied at the end of the ninth.

Westclox surprised and overjoyed their many hundreds of followers here by turning back the classy Keene champions twice and they have an even chance of coming through to bring the flag to Peterborough the first time since this league was organized three years ago. However, the battling Keensters, with their large following of rooters, are determined to grab off this tussle Saturday and retain the Percy Bond Trophy another season. It promises to be a worthy fight between two well-matched and smart girls' teams.

Alleges O. B. A. A. Aids Favorites

ST. THOMAS, Sept. 8. — Favoritism is alleged by the executive of the St. Thomas baseball club in the draw for playoff games in the O.B.A.A. In a letter to William J. Snyder, Secretary J. Sutherland points out that St. Thomas and Moodie Tigers are forced into a playoff, while Toronto Riverdale Grads draw a bye, thereby ensuring them a place in the finals.

The Grades should play the winner of the New Toronto-Kingston series which are allowed 18 days to play off their first round. The contention is that the play-offs are for the strict benefit of the Toronto teams in the hope that the Queen City will take the O.B.A.A. title.

At Least 15 U.S. Huskies Are Now Lined Up On Big Four Teams.

NO PROTESTS MADE.

TORONTO, September 8 (C.P.). —Invasion of Canadain rugby by United States stars, begun in 1931 when Warren Stevens moved his deft forward passes from Syracuse to Montreal, has reached a new high this fall with enough foreign players in the Interprovincial Union alone to form a team with a few subs and two coaches.

Men who learned their football across the border will pilot two of the Big Four teams this season, and sprinkled through the playing rosters is a foreign legion of 15 huskies bringing the tricks of the American game to aid interprovincial teams.

As yet no one has brought up the embarassing fact that the union has a June 1 residence rule. As far as league heads know that date and no protests are expected from club officials who have gazed too often on empty stadiums.

Wally Masters, dropped by Ottawa last year when it was proved he was a professional baseball player, is coaching Rough Riders this fall and, with the training season just started, has five United States players bolstering the Natives who haven't been able to hoist the Capital out of the cellar in years.

All Are In It.

Rough Riders, who may boast an "All-American" backfield are closely followed in the race for American material by Montreal and Toronto Argonauts. Winged Wheelers, with whom Stevens started the craze for American forward flippers and Hal Baysinger. Syracuse quarter, carried it on last year, has four United States players ready to help carry their fortunes against Hamilton Tigers, union champions, whose only foreign star is Don Gardiner, Gettysburg back.

Lou Hayman, who came up from Syracuse to help Warren Stevens coach University of Toronto last fall and now is piloting Argos, has gathered three United States players together in an effort to strengthen his outfit.

Masters has Tom Graham, Abe Eliowitz, Lorne Johnson, Jack Kline, and Bud Andrews working for him. He expects Eliowitz, former Michigan State full back, Johnson of the Temple College, and Andrews of Pennsylvania Military College, will form his "All-American" backfield. Graham, a towering end from Temple, probably will be used at middle wing, and Kline, from the University of Pennsylvania, will be spotted at snap.

Some of the Stars.

Fred Coulson, Princeton tackle, Lou Newton, Syracuse snap, Lyman Abbott, Maine quarter, and Carl Perina, Penn. half, make up the U. S. quartette Clarry Foran will weld into his Winged Wheelers.

Frank Tyndall, a young giant who came across the border to help Hayman coach Argos, may be used on the Scullers' line or in the quarterback position. Andy Millan of Newark, and Jack Maynard, who played for Notre Dame back in 1928, complete the Argos' foreign group.

HECTIC STORM.

Ellsworth Vines And Wilmer Allison, Outstanding Players Are Fallen.

By GAYLE TALBOT,
Associated Press Sports Writer

FOREST HILLS, N.Y., Sept. 8—the storm to-day and prepared to championships dug out from under theh storm to-day and prepared to carry on at Forest Hills, but they will never look the same.

Gone, as the quarter-final matches began, was H. Ellsworth Vines, Jr., champion of the United States for the last two years, the victim of a fighting little rooster from Atlanta, Bryan Grant, Jr.

Gone, also, was Wilmer Allison Davis Cup stalwart, swept from the tournament by Adrian Quist, a human hurricane from Australia. Both members of the United States first line of defence went down in the course of as hectic a day as the championships ever witnessed.

Nine players still survived when darkness mercifully closed the carnage. A pair of them, Clifford Sutter of the United States and Vivian McGrath, of Australia, had a forenoon date to-day to settle their engagement, which was called after each had won two sets. They resume the fifth and deciding set with McGrath leading 3-1 in games.

Of the seven who won their way into to-day's round, four were bent on taking the big trophy to far away Australia, another carried England's last remaining hope.

In the two upper bracket matches, Bryan Grant, Jr., conqueror of the mighty, but listless Vines, ran into Lester Stoefen of Los Angeles, while Fred Perry, of England, faced the surprising Quist.

Frank Shields of New York, at the tip of the lower bracket, engaged Gregory Mangin of Newark in a match that promised fireworks. Shields, who now looms as Uncle Sam's stoutest bulwark against England and Australia, pelted out Ryosuke Nunoi of Japan in straight sets yesterday.

Jack Crawford, greatest of the Australians, still lurked in the lower bracket, but his quarter-final opponent hinged on the outcome of the McGrath - Sutter play-off. Crawford who already holds three of the world's four major net titles, had a struggle in eliminating Sidney Wood, Jr., in four sets, finally pulling out the clinching set at 8-6 after the New Yorker was within a point of tying the match at two sets apiece.

SPYING ON SPORTS

International Canadian

"Gossip and Such"

THOUGH THE NEXT DAvis Cup matches are about as far away as your next vacation—some 10 or 11 months—things are already happening which may have a bearing on the United States chances to win the international tennis trophy for England.

For instance, Australia and Japan are contemplating challenging in the American zone instead of the European, as heretofore.

At first thought, this would seem to place added obstacles in the path of the American team as it strives to reach the challenge round. It does. However, in the long run, the benefits from such an arrangement might prove greater for the United States than the difficulties.

• • •

ONE OF THE REASONS some tennis experts gave for the sudden collapse of the United States players against England was that they had not had sufficient strong competition in the early rounds of play.

England has already beaten the tough Australians and were going full steam when they met Uncle Sam's boys.

Heretofore, the United States met only Mexico and Canada or Cuba before going abroad to meet the European zone final winner. Australia and Japan will make the American division of Davis cup play productive of better tennis than the European group for, outside of England and France, there is hardly any other nation on a tennis par with the United States, Australia and Japan.

• • •

OF COURSE, WITH AUStralia and Japan permanent members of the American zone there will be times when the United States, if not the cup defender and thus saved from playing in any but the challenge round, will come acroper against the boys from Down Under or the Little Brown Brothers.

With expected improvement in Canadian play the American zone may within the next several years have a group of four nations nearly on a par in tennis matters.

However, this all depends on whether or not Australia and Japan decide to enter American zone play. The chances are they will.

SPORTS DAY BY DAY

Baseball—Softball—Lacrosse Soccer—Wrestling, and Others

(By C. J. P.)

The big event of a sporting nature here tomorrow is that final game between Keene gals and Westclox at the Bowl at three. The loop championship and the Bond Cup depend on the outcome of this tilt, and may the better team win. It generally does, but not always. When everything depends on one crucial game and the teams are very evenly-matched throughout, sometimes the breaks decide the winner. Or, occasionally, bad umpiring makes a break for one team. But the umpiring in this series has been quite good and the breaks so far about equal, so it's pretty much up to the nine damsels on either side when they take the field against each other tomorrow. Bet a dime it'll be a record-breaking crowd.

• • • • • • •

Down at Bailieboro Saturday at three o'clock, an exhibition baseball game has been arranged to raise finances for their team. An All-Star E.P.L. outfit, minus Cog players, will be managed by Len Foster and will tackle the Bailieboro intermediates. The latter team will be re-inforced by Cy Whatley, Fred Ash, Archie Deyell and maybe one or two others of the Petes' seniors, and Johnston, C.G.E. star second-sacker. Should be quite a ball game, all right.

• • • • • • •

Three of our teams are away tomorrow in various playoffs. Cogs go to Picton in the first game of their O.B.A.A. intermediate series.. Terriers clash with Toronto Lansdownes in Bowmanville in the third game of their O.B.A.A. juvenile semi-final series. And Sugar Bowl softballers journey to Oshawa to tackle Tuxis in the second contest of their O.A.S.A. intermediate series, also second round. Cogs and Picton are back here Monday at 3.15 at Riverside, and Sugar Bowl plays the Tuxis team here at the same park at 5.15 Tuesday.

• • • • • • •

Sugar Bowl and Oshawa Tuxis tied up their tilt here last e'en, 7-all, before a good crowd. It was too dark to continue play after the ninth, but it was a fine old battle all the way. Both were a trifle loose at the start but turned on the pressure the last half to flash some fine softball. Tuxis haven't lost a game yet, but the Bowlmen came mighty close to breaking their season's' record. Two well-matched and mighty snappy squads. Sturgeon relieved Currie in the second and pitched good ball, while Powell made the Bowl boys earn their seven markers.

• • • • • • •

Talk about noise—most of the time in that game it sounded like a combination square-dance on a tin roof and a sewing circle meeting in the Tower of Babel! The rival players were yelling and fighting for every point and nasing each other, while the crowd took turns jeering the opposing players and umpire and yodelling for the Bowlmen. An awful lot of crabbing took place and there was some excuse due to a number of disputed points such as a guy stealing home, and not being called out first, when the pitcher was on the rubber, etc. The umpiring wasn't perfect but we've seen lots worse.

• • • • • • •

By knocking off the Office, 7 to 1, last night Machine Shop went into the C.G.E. Inter-department Softball League finals against Engineers. They start their three-out-of-five playoff series at 5.30 tonight at King Edward Park. Should be a pretty fair scramble for the top of the pile and may go the limit before one is crowned. In the tussle the other eve, Ernie Reynolds, doing the 'Machinists' gunning, let the white-collar boys down with three measly hits to get a decisive nod. Fred Martin dished 'e'm up for the losers.

• • • • • • •

Oy, oy, hockey it gives, already yet! Yessir, the local Hockey Club executive—minus only Charlie Curtis and Bob Cotton who couldn't make it—met last night, the following being present: Ernie Wolff, secretary; Fred Scates, treasurer; Geo. Wolff, of the executive; Eddie Wright, intermediates' manager; Frank Buckland, juniors' manager; and Shorty Burgess, assistant manager of the juniors. They decided to hold a dance to raise necessary finances at the Brock Sept. 21st, provided the players will give them co-operation. Another meeting will be held shortly, when officers and players will attend and talk things over.

• • • • • • •

Lots doing in tennis these days around town. A couple of championships were settled last night in the Open Tourney here, George Scott and Walter Jackson nabbing the men's doubles, while Isobel Davidson won the ladies' singles. Mixed doubles, ladies' doubles and junior singles are all that remain of a fine tennis tournament which was open to all players in the city. Then, tomorrow at the Kawartha Club the tie between Oshawa and Peterborough Clubs in the Central Ontario finals will be run off about 2.30, three out of five matches. If Whitby can come up, they will play the Kawartha Club netters on the same courts that afternoon, too.

THREE CHAMPS EMERGE FROM TENNIS TOURNEY

Isobel Davidson Defeats Bertha Pickering For Ladies Singles.

TWO STRAIGHT SETS.

George Scott And Walter Jackson Win Men's Doubles.

Miss Isobel Davidson won the ladies' single championship in the Peterborough Open Tennis Tournament yesterday, while George Scott and Walter Jackson emerged victorious in the men's doubles finals. This latter match was played on the Kawartha Club courts, while the ladies' singles was settled at the Peterborough Tennis Club. Miss Davidson and Herb Wilson advanced into the semi-finals of the mixed doubles, lower half, following the singles on the Peterborough court.

The ladies' singles saw Isobel Davidson take two straight sets from Miss Bertha Pickering, 6-1 and 6-4. The latter was nervous to start and drove balls out regularly in the first set, but settled down and made it a fine battle in the second. Both girls played a deep-court game, driving hard placements from the base-line most of the time. Miss Davidson had 72 to 49 points, showing the advantage in both sets, though the second was much closer contested. This one saw the rival matters go to deuce in four games, the concluding game being carried to deuce five times.

In the men's doubles, George Scott and Walter Jackson outplayed Jack and George Kirkwood to win the championship in three straight sets, 6-1, 7-5, and 6-1. As the scores indicate, only the second one was close, the Kirkwood boys appearing below form and wild for the most part. The two winners played a heady game, a deep-court lobbing type of play making the other pair beat themselves with killing smashes that often drove out. It was a good fight in the second set, after an easy first-set victory for the Scott-Jackson team, but this pair again came through to win handily in the third.

In mixed doubles, Isobel Davidson and H. A. Wilson defeated Ruth Sutton and Jack Cowling, 6-1 and 6-2, giving the former pair a place in the semi-finals of the lower bracket. Miss Sutton played a good game but her partner was wild at times and seldom got his hard smashes under control, while the winners flashed some good, steady tennis to keep on top at all times.

Mrs. Dewart and Miss Davidson will play Miss Pickering and Miss Dixon to-night at five on the Peterborough courts in ladies' doubles.

In junior men's singles, Jack Cowling and Doug. McPherson will play this evening about 4.30 also on the Peterborough courts; and there is a good possibility of further mixed doubles being played to-night.

No Soccer Game On Saturday

Canada Packers soccer executive notified the secretary this afternoon that all their players had received instructions to work until 6 o'clock Saturday evening, and Caledonian versus Packers League game is postponed.

CRICKET

Peterborough C.C. chalked up another victory recently, and Oshawa were the victims.

Oshawa, batting first, put on 101 runs, featured by a fine inning by A. Mann. Dewberry, Ritchie and Hodgson also contributed useful scores.

Dyer bowled well, taking eight wickets for 22; and he dismissed the other two batsmen by fine catches.

Peterborough opened shakily; 3 wickets falling for 21, but a partnership by Rev. Worrall and Hamilton left the Peterborough club sitting pretty. The remaining runs were knocked off; Oshawa's total being passed with three wickets in hand.

Oshawa C.C. will play a return game here on September 16.

England Displays Sailing Supremacy

NEW YORK, Sept. 8—After forty-seven years, an International Marine Trophy has passed out of the hands of the United States for the first time. The old silver pitcher known as the International Challenge Cup that is emblematic of decked canoe sailing supremacy, was won by England, when Uffa Fox, 36-year-old rover of the seas, and his 21-year-old Oxford companion, Roger DeQuincey, scored another smashing triumph over American defenders in the third and deciding race of the series this week.

They accomplished the feat after two other Englishmen and three Canadians had failed at various intervals over a period of almost half a century. The event was sailed in Little Neck Bay off Bayside, Long Island.

The two English victors were guests of honor at a dinner at New York Athletic Club. They were due to sail home from New York to-day on the Olympic.

Praise from a railroader

"... In adding to the large measure of praise which has already been accorded your Wakefield tobacco, I do so in the knowledge that this brand will supply a long-felt want to dissatisfied smokers. As a regular consumer of Wakefield, I can enjoin tobacco users in Canada who have looked for a blend that 'packs well in the pipe,' 'is free from superfluous moisture' and 'does not burn the tongue,' to switch to Wakefield..."

MILLBROOK L.A. PLANS SUPPER

St. Andrew's Treasurer Reports $72.60 Receipts From Garden Party.

CANVASSERS NAMED

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, September 8. — Ladies' Association of St Andrew's church was cordially welcomed to the home of Mrs. L. S. Clarry, Regent street, for its September meeting on Tuesday afternoon, the Misses Mabel Clarry of Peterborough, and Blanche Clarry, Reg. N., of New York, assisting their mother in extending greeting to the guests. Mrs. L. F. Clarry of Calgary, received with them also.

The gathering, presided over by the president, Mrs. F. J. Smith, was held on the large and well-shaded lawn, the business items including the decision not to have a booth at the fall fair this year, leaving this privilege to the Mission Circle, which is most anxious to increase its funds.

The annual fowl supper will be held as usual on the Tuesday following the church anniversary which comes on October 15 or 22, according to which date a suitable minister can be secured for the special services of the day. The program committee was appointed to include Mrs. H. W. Johnston, Mrs. (Rev.) W. W. Jones, Mrs. P. Stinson, and Miss Burnham. The president and Mrs. J. McKnight were made responsible for buying the fowl and canvassers for provisions were also named: East end, Mrs. W. West; Tupper street, Mrs. Weston Falls; centre, Mrs. Stinson, who will also cover Anne street; West end, Mrs. F. A. Kidd.

In the country the canvassers are: Fallis line, Mrs Arthur Fallis; Zion, Miss Burnham; Fourth Line, Mrs. J. Might and Mrs. H. A. Earle; Seventh Line, Mrs Edgar Fallis.

The treasurer, Mrs. McKnight, reported total receipts from the garden party as $72.60; from the hot supper served by the Wear-Ever Aluminum Company, $14.75; approximately $65 was cleared from these two events. Communications read included some accounts to be paid in connection with repairing of the parsonage roof, and laundering of table cloths, an itemized bill to be asked for in the first case.

Mrs. Smith read an appropriate article, "Pay up, Ladies' Aiders," and Mrs. Stinson also gave a reading, "When All Goes Wrong." Mrs. McKnight following with a timely message, "Looking down the Portals."

Tea was served on the lawn, Mrs. L. F. Clarry pouring, and members of the committee assisting the hostesses in serving the guests.

A hearty vote of thanks was accorded the hostesses for their hospitality, which is to be further extended next Wednesday, September 13, when the Woman's Auxiliary is to be entertained at Mrs. Clarry's home.

THE STARS SAY . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Saturday, September 9

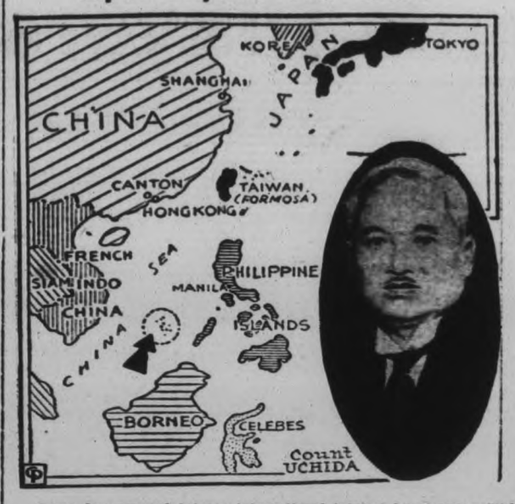
Excepting for those in the employment of others or those holding places of power and authority, this may prove to be a quiet and routine day, according to the weak positions of the ruling planets. The former are justified in currying favor from superiors or those in high places, as promotion, preferment and honors are imminent. But in finances the outlook is rather hazardous, calling for conservatism and caution.

Those whose birthday it is may have a fairly routine year in all affairs outside of employment, but in this there is promise of honors, preferment and favors from those in authority. But finances are not under an auspicious sign and there is need of conserving funds as well as shuning extravagance, loans and hazardous investment.

A child born on this day should be capable, ambitious and should win the attention of employers and those in high places, succeeding better in employ than in finances.

There were 2,734 dairy factories in operation in Canada in 1932, comprising 1,219 creameries, 1,172 cheese factories, 317 combined butter and cheese factories, and 26 concentrated milk plants. The total number shows an increase of 32 compared with 1931.

Japan Disputes Over Island



Japan has aroused intense international interest by claiming "title and rights" in nine China Sea islets recently annexed by France. Japan insists, through Count Yasuya Uchida, foreign minister, that the problem of sovereignty be discussed and questions the legality of France's claim. Japanese capital has exploited the resources of the islands. The proximity of the islands to other outposts of the far East is shown in the map above.

STRESS IS LAID TO BORROWING

Summer School Told Future Canadian Policy Will Guide Monetary Soundness.

NEED RIGID CONTROL.

NEWMARKET, Ont., Sept. 8 (CP)—Foreign borrowing policies of Canadian Governments in the past had played a major part in bringing on the acuteness of economic conditions in the Dominion to-day, Prof. E. E. Reilly, of the University of Western Ontario, told the Liberal-Conservative Summer School here Thursday.

The practice of borrowing in prosperous times, being unable to borrow in lean years, has simply accentuated the swing of the pendulum in both directions, he said. "How we handle this matter in the future will in great measure influence the soundness of our monetary system, the credit, the consequent cost of money to governments and industry, in fact the economic welfare of our people," he contended.

Prof. Reilly recommended the establishment of a national board with regulatory powers to supervise all foreign borrowings by the provincial and municipal governments, the larger corporations, particularly public utilities, when it was realized every foreign loan had an inflationary or deflationary effect on our money, the urgency of rigid control was appreciated, he said.

Grace Presbyterian Picnic On Otonabee

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, September 8. — A jolly outing was enjoyed by the young people of Grace Presbyterian Church on Labor Day afternoon, to Wallace Point, Otonabee River, the organized young men's class, T. W. Belch, teacher, acting as hosts for the members of the young women's class, taught by Mrs. Nathaniel Belch.

Swimming, games, story-telling around a blazing camp fire, with the service of a substantial supper, the menu including weiners, apple pie, bread and butter and coffee, filled out the time happily, and the evening hours were far spent before departure was made for home. The guests voiced their appreciation of the kindness of their hopes before the party finally broke up.

Wake up your Liver Bile —Without Calomel

You are "feeling punk" simply because your liver isn't pouring its daily two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels. Digestion and elimination are both hampered, and your entire system is being poisoned.

What you need is a liver stimulant. Something that goes farther than salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum or roughage which only move the bowels—ignoring the real cause of trouble, your liver.

Take Carter's Little Liver Pills. Purely vegetable. No harsh calomel (mercury). Safe. Sure. Ask for them by name. Refuse substitutes. 25c, at all druggists. 55

NEW SETTLERS IN NORTH ARE FAVORED CLASS

the pioneers by the Government with its special favours and assistance to the new settlers. The pioneers are finding it difficult to compete with farmers so completely backed by the Government, he said.

Pockets in Bush

"Twenty years ago civilization in the real Northern Ontario north of the divide amounted merely to a series of pockets in the bush" Rev. Paterson said. "The great area was nothing but a wilderness with a railway running through the middle."

He traced the gradual awakening of the north with the discovery of gold and other minerals. Each time a new mine was opened up, it was thought that at least all the minerals had been discovered. However, every year sees new mines opened and here is still far more gold to be discovered, he asserted.

There is no talk of depression at the present time around the gold mining areas of the north, the speaker reported. Miners are now receiving fifty percent more for their gold than they did in 1920. The high price of gold is making the rich ore mines more valuable and, in addition, is permitting the low grade ore mines to operate on a profitable basis, he said.

John Lewis, manager of the Kresge Store was welcomed to membership of the Kiwanis Club during the luncheon. Two piano solos were offered by Robert Maybee of this city.

Unemployed Congress Would Bar Machado

OTTAWA, Sept. 8.—(CP)—The National Congress of Unemployed today had closed its three-day annual convention after passing resolutions protesting against Canada harboring ex-President Machado of Cuba, condemning the growth of Fascism in Canada and the activities of Hitlerism in Germany.

Yesterday a deputation from the Congress presented to members of the Federal Government a "charter of demands for the right to live," stressing non-contributory unemployment insurance, higher relief payments and establishment of a $1,000,000,000 - federal building scheme to provide jobs. Sir George Perley told the delegation its representations would be considered.

MONETARY POLICY IS LACKING IN CANADA EDITOR DECLARES

World Will Sooner Or Later Return To Gold Standard Liberals Told.

"ANCHOR TO WINDWARD"

PORT HOPE, Ont., Sept. 8 (CP)—"I doubt if we have had a monetary policy in Canada in recent years, or, if we have had one it has been purely negative," said editor Floyd S. Chalmers of the Financial Post in addressing the Liberal summer conference here yesterday.

The conflict between advocates of inflation and deflation was what drove the countries of the world to a policy of economic nationalism and was the main element contributing to the failure of the recent world conference, Mr. Chalmers stated. He expressed the opinion, however, that there was no doubt that the world would sooner or later return to gold. Governments were getting ready for such a restoration, he said.

Two features had developed out of the world conference as far as Canada was concerned—one was the signing of the monetary agreements and the other the floating of the Canadian loan in London. Neither the one nor the other had definitely tied Canada to sterling, although the loan had indicated to the world that Canada "had an anchor to the windward." The loan however had been made as much on the insistance of British investigators who were dissatisfied with interest rates prevailing elsewhere, as at the request of the Canadian government. Mr. Chalmers regarded it as an isolated case.

The speaker touched on the matter of establishing a central bank in Canada. He defined the purpose of such an institution to be a "bankers' bank" a "government bank," one that would issue the country's paper money, that would advise the government in international policy, exercising control over credit.

Mr. Chalmers felt that the present chartered banks with their numerous branches, performed very capably most of the functions that a central bank would be called on to perform.

NIAGARA MASON DIES

Saint Ignatius of Loyola was the founder of the Jesuits.

MACON ORDERED TO BEGIN SEARCH IN NEW ENGLAND

Great Dirigible May Cruise Over Ontario Seeking Two Balloons

WAITING ON WEATHER.

600 Men Ready At Sudbury To Comb Area Around Meteor Lake.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—(AP) — The United States Navy Department plans to send the dirigible into New England and probably into Canada to aid in the search for four missing men in two of the James Gordon Bennett balloon race as soon as the weather in those sections clears up.

600 Searchers Ready

Six hundred men were ready in Sudbury, Ont., district, to comb the territory around Meteor Lake, north of there, were three fishermen said they saw a balloon briefly last Monday. Eight aeroplanes were available at Sault Ste. Marie if the Ontario Forestry Department decided to send them on search flights.

The Government of Quebec ordered all agents of its streams commission to be on the lookout for the missing balloons, and two agiers reported seeing one of the bags sweeping over the territory near Lakes Bonlac and Wilbridge, only 13 miles from the Portneuf County hamlet of Riviere a Pierre. The anglers, Quebec business men, saw the balloon from different points and said it was drifting not more than 25 feet above the ground. They said its markings were red, green and blue, Poland's national colors, a report that led authorities to believe its basket contained Captain Francisek Hynek and his aid.

Believed U.S. Craft.

The balloon sighted near Meteor Lake was thought to be that piloted by Ward Van Orman and Frank A. Trotter of the United States. Fears for their safety were aroused by a story their craft had vanished in a thunderstorm. Joseph L. Paul of Sudbury, one of the fishermen who reported seeing it, said he and his companions were unable to sight it after a vivid flash fo lightning streaked across the sky in which it was riding.

Should the men have landed safely, however, bush experts said they would be in no danger of starvation, as game and edible berries are bcuntiful in the district.

Saw Balloon Monday.

SUDBURY, Ont., Sept. 9 (C.P.).—Definite word that a balloon reported to have "disappeared" near Meteor Lake, north-east of here, late Sunday was still in the air 24 hours later was received to-day. Lionel Gauthier, Rutter, Ont., said he and a companion, Herbert Richeldaffer, Homestead, Pa., saw the balloon drifting at an altitude of 5,000 feet Monday.

"No doubt about it," Gauthier said, "and I'm sure of my time too —4.30 in the afternoon. It looks to me as if the balloon had stayed in that district since Monday.

Gauthier said he and Richeldaffer were crossing a small lake when they sighted the balloon, believed to be the Goodyear XI., which started a week ago from Chicago in the International Gordon-Bennett race.

CUBAN REBELS TRAP OFFICERS INSIDE HOTEL

Over 200 Cornered Plotting Coup Against Four-Day-Old Junta.

REPLACE CESPEDES

Old Army Leaders Prepare To Sell Lives Dearly If Arrests Attempted.

(By E. A. Chester)

HAVANA, Sept. 9 (AP)—Rumblings of a possible coup against a four-days'-old Cuban junta, itself the product of revolt, grew to-day as 200 army officers were held virtual pirsoners in the National Hotel.

The men, leaders under the deposed de Cespedes had convened to consider their course when several companies of heavily armed soldiers swooped down on the hotel and, with machine guns, surrounded it.

Fulgencio Batista, one-time sergeant who now is commander of the army, gave the officers until 10 a.m. to-day to obey his orders that they return to their posts, from which they were evicted Monday when Batista led a revolt and established a commission form of government.

Last night, when the guard about the hotel was increased, they emphatically answered, "No" to the demands. "We do not recognize this government," said one of them. "Let the commissioners get out."

The officers freely said they were prepared to sell their lives dearly if efforts were made to arrest them or send them back to duty at the point of guns.

Attack on Palace

The government was said to have received reports the officers, some of whom still count on the loyalty of their units, had planned to attack the presidential palace.

BOXING CONSCIOUS

The class listened with bated breath to the teachers account of her encounter with a bandit.

With dramatic gestures she reached the climax of her story, and concluded by saying:

"And then I fainted."

"With your left or your right, teacher?"

The Last Straw

And she never objected when he removed a $300 diamond ring from her finger.

But when the same armed gunman asked for a kiss, she slapped him down.

He escaped.

DOCTORS DENY KING POISONED

Body of Feisal On Way Home For Burial in Bagdad, Iraq

SON ASCENDS THRONE

BERNE, Switzerland, Sept. 9. (AP)—The body of King Feisal of Iraq, dressed in white silk robes and white turban, left Berne today for Brindisi, Italy, there to be transferred to a British destroyer bound for Bagdad.

He died yesterday from a heart attack that came so suddenly that some circles entertained suspicions he had been poisoned. This was emphatically denied by doctors who said investigation proved the absence of poison.

His private doctor, who assured questioners that there had been no foul play, said: "Only the other day I warned the king he must take a complete rest. He replied, 'I pledged myself to Great Britain and the League of Nation, and I prefer to die rather than break my word'."

This apparently was a reference to recent reports of trouble between Assyrian Christians and Kurds in Iraq, and to the mandate England held over his kingdom until its recent recognition by the League of Nations.

Son Takes Throne

BAGDAD, Iraq, Sept. 9. (AP)—In an atmosphere of deepest mourning, 22-year-old Ghazi I began ruling this young kingdom today in succession to his father, King Feisal, who died in Berne yesterday.

A seven-day period of mourning was decreed, because of which there will be no further ceremonies attending the ascension to the throne, other than the brief induction before the cabinet yesterday and reception for prominent subjects and cabinet members.

$40 A TON FOR GRAPES

ST. CATHARINES.—At a meeting of the executive of the Grapegrowers' Association here, it was agreed unanimously to accept $40 per ton from the "Big Four" wineries for whatever quantity of blue and white grapes they will require this year. The decision brought to conclusion a long series of meetings held between growers, winery officials, and, on several occasions, Liquor Control Board officials.

BANDS TO GREET SCOTS GUARDS MONDAY NIGHT

Rangers, Salvation Army Band and 45th Regimental Band Be On Parade

GUESTS OF DIRECTORS

Three Programs Starting At 7.00 O'clock In Downtown Area

Three bands will geet the Scots Guards here Monday evening in simultaneous half-hour programs on George street at Charlotte, Hunter and McDonnel street in a salute of welcome which virtually opens the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition.

These program will begin at 7 o'clock, the Rangers playing at Charlotte street, the Salvation Army at Hunter street, and the 45th Regimental Band of Lindsay, under the direction of Rupert Gilddon, at McDonnel street.

At 7.30 the Rangers Band, directed by W. H. Peryer, will move off; at 7.32 the Salvation Army, and at 7.35 the 45th will follow in a consecutive parade to the Exhibition Grounds, where the bandsmen will be guests of the Exhibition Board. In these arrangements there is no suggestion that the Scots Guards Band will take part in the procession, although it is expected that they will start by bus about the same time for their first program which features the opening of this year's Exhibition.

Tribute to Guards

This musical demonstration is designed not only as a tribute to the Scots Guards, but also to emphasize their presence here, an engagement which scarcely needs any recommendation to music lovers of the city and district. The conductor of the Scots Guards is Lieutenant H. E. Dowell, L.R.A.M., P.S.M.

All those who appreciate the high standing of these musicians, their British background and tradition, and the fact that they are one of the bands of His Majesty's Brigade of Guards, will be anxious for the success of their Peterborough engagement. It is sincerely hoped that they will be welcomed by capacity crowds on Monday and Tuesday nights.

Activity at the Park

Preparations for next week's Exhibition were well advanced this afternoon. The "tented city" has already risen for its week of bustling enterprise, most of the booths in the building are almost ready for occupation, concessions have been placed, and are going to be as numerous as ever; recent rains have given the grass sward the freshness of lawns, the barns and stables have

INSANE PATIENT TAKEN AFTER WEEK'S LIBERTY

BRANTFORD, Ont., Sept. 9.—(CP).—An escaped patient from the Ontario Hospital for the Insane, who caused uneasiness for more than a week in the Port Rowan district, was taken into custody today, it was learned. Residents said the man went to his former home at South Walsingham and threatened to take the lives of his wife and seven children. He then escaped to nearby woods, armed with an axe.

A police constable and several special deputies waited at the house until the man returned and affected the arrest without difficulty.

PRICE UPHOLDS CANADA'S NEED OF SECTION 98

Curbs Forces Which if Given Free Rein Would Reenact 1919 Winnipeg Troubles

AID TO PROGRESS

Wonders How Far Socialists Are Prepared To Rely On Force

NEWMARKET, Ont., Sept. 9. (CP)—Defending Section 98 of the Criminal Code as legislation necessary in troubled times, Hon. W. H. Price, Attorney-General of Ontario told the Liberal-Conservative summer school here to-day the section in the last year or two kept in curb forces that, given free rein "would again cause such troubles as occurred during the Winnipeg disorders of 1919."

Section 98, he declared, merely served notice that Canadian desired to continue the British method of growth and advancement. Under the British representative system all and any changes were possible. Those who ran afoul of the section desired violent methods to attain their ends of the wisdom of the course they advocated. They wanted to substitute a government of minority, a tyranny for the government of the greatest number, a democracy.

Outgrowth of Strike

Mr. Price declared the legislation, an outgrowth of the Winnipeg strike of 1919, was designed only to ensure a peaceful progression, not to limit or impede that progress. "We have succeeded in prying the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation from the idea that force must be used to get changes in Government. We have, however, quite a large body of Communists throughout Canada who still rely on force. One wonders just how far the Socialist to-day is prepared to rely on force."

His idea of responsible government, the Attorney-General said, was a system that extended and changed to meet the needs of the time, "without chaos, without bloodshed, without bitterness." He quoted the histories of famous revolutions and their aftermaths to prove his contention that "Those who take the sword shall perish by the sword."

"Bearing in mind what we have done," he concluded, "bearing in mind how little real suffering there is now compared to what there was a century ago, is it not reasonable to suppose we can go quietly on, thoughtfully striving and earnestly working together for our mutual advancement?"

Tragedy is Climax To Violent Quarrel On Dance Refused

Eric McGillivray, 42, Found Dead By Own Hand Beside Nearyby Cottage After Posses Had Combed Area 7 Hours, Believing He Had Escaped In Car.

WOMAN, ESTRANGED MONTHS FROM HUSBAND DIES ON WAY TO DOCTOR—SHOT FIVE TIMES.

TIVERTON, Ont., Sept. 9.—(CP)—Infuriated at the refusal of his estranged wife to dance with him, Eric McGillivray, 42-year-old war veteran and member of one of Bruce County's most prominent families, shot her to death less than an hour afterward and then committed suicide early today.

The couple met at a dance hall at Inverhuron, a resort near here where Mrs. McGillivray was spending the summer with her mother and four-year-old daughter, Shirley. Police said McGillivray asked his wife to dance with him and she refused. They had not lived together for several months.

The husband left the dance hall immediately and went to the cottage where his wife, the former Catharines McKenzie, 23, was living. He waited on the veranda for her return.

Mrs. McGillivray and companion, Mrs. S. Shepherd, were accompanied part of the way home, police said. But she was alone when she walked up to the cottage where her husband waited with a revolver in his hand.

They quarrelled for a few minutes before McGillivray fired five shots. One passed through the heart of his wife, killing her almost instantly.

Help Too Late

Alfred McCarthy, whose mother owns the dance pavilion, heard the shots and ran 100 yards through heavy brush surrounding the cottages to where Mrs. McGillivray lay. He and Louis Schroeder of Inverhuron and D. C. Mackenzie, Kincardine, carried the woman to the office of Dr. H. Lough but she was dead on arrival.

An all-night search was carried on for McGillivray who police thought had escaped to a nearby bush. The hunt extended to all parts of the county, as far north as Port Elgin, where McGillivray lived until two years ago.

Main and sideroads throughout the district were patrolled in the belief the husband had left Inverhuron in a car.

Seven hours after the shooting, just as day broke, McGillivray's body was found outside the cottage of Mrs. D. McFarlane, a revolver clutched in the right hand. Police believe he shot himself a few minutes after murdering his wife.

An inquest was ordered held this afternoon by Coroner Dr. J. Fergusone of Kincardine.

RUSSIAN PRINCE DIES; WAS ARGENTINE CONSUL

MENTON, France, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Prnice Andrew Nikita Lvoff, Argentine consul at Lausanne, Switzerland, and nephew of the Russian Czar's last prime minister, died here Friday from a heart ailment.

He was imprisoned in Russia during the revolution and was said to have been under the death sentence 14 times, the strain of which injured his health.

He died at the home of Mme. Vicente Blasco Ibanez, where he was a guest.

CONCORDAT DELAYED

Vatican Prelates said today that there had been no failure to ratify, as reported in Canada. They asserted that concordats never are ratified until several months have passed.

CLAIM YOUNG SHORT $10,029

Figures Alleged To Cover Years 1930-32 and 5 Months of 33

SOME RECORDS BURNED

GODERICH, Ont., Sept. 9 (C.P.).—Alleged shortages totalling $10,029 in the accounts of Gordon Young, former county treasurer, were revealed to-day in a report of F. P. Gibbs, accountant, at the preliminary trial of Young. Young is charged with theft, mutilation of records and books, and conversion.

The alleged shortages were said by Crown-Attorney Homes to cover the years 1930-32 and five months of 1933. In 1930, it is charged, Young stole $2,690, and made up $1,270 of the amount.

Auditors were instructed to make cursory examinations of books of the 1928-29 period, insofar as available records, many of which are alleged to have been burned by the former treasurer, will permit.

Court granted Young a remand of one week on the ground that he had not sufficient time to study auditors' reports which were completed yesterday.

Gas Poisoning Kills Young Ridgeway Girl

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 9. (CP)—Elsie Green, 12, of Ridgeway, died in hospital here to-day from the effects of gas poisoning suffered Monday.

The child, it is thought, was cooking over a gas stove shortly before she was rendered unconscious by the fumes. She lay down and went to sleep and a pot on the stove boiled over, extinguishing the gas-fumes and letting it escape. She did not regain consciousness and yesterday her condition became critical.

WORK LIKELY TO START ON BRIDGE IN SPRING

"Very satisfactory" was the way Mayor R. Denne summed up the results of the recent deputation which waited upon the Deputy Minister of Railways and Canals at Ottawa, relative to construction of a new bridge over the Trent Canal on Highway 7, at the city limits.

The Mayor was accompanied on his visit to Ottawa by E. A. Peck, K.C., M.P., and by City Clerk S. R. Armstrong. The deputation was told it was improbable that the work of construction on the bridge would be started until next Spring, the Mayor said. Government officials had explained that the undertaking had been definitely sanctioned, and that it was just a matter of details being worked out by Federal and Provincial Government engineers.

A Bartender

NEW YORK, Sept. 9. (CP). Frank Mellie of the Rix Bar in Paris is here with a recipe for making a bartender. He says it requires a dash of personality and a drop or so of art added to a lot of knowledge.

"A good bartender has got to know everything," he said. "He's got to know where to get things, what's good for this and that, what to say and the exact moment to say it."

LITTLE CHANCE STERILIZATION BEING ADOPTED

Martin, Minister of Welfare Proves Skeptical At Conservative School.

BE NON-COMPULSORY.

Hints At Thrift Plan For Ontario—Special Course For Jobless Young Men.

NEWMARKET, Sept. 9—There is very little likelihood of Ontario adopting in the near future, any policy of sterilization for mental defectives, Hon. W. G. Martin, Minister of Public Welfare, told the Conservative Summer School here yesterday, in a brief discussion of features of his address on welfare adminstration and supervision in this province.

If, and when, such a policy does come, Mr. Martin believed, it will be non-compulsory in its operation.

Already, he stated, the practice of sterilization had been carried out in some of the provincial institutions, but only after the required consent had been secured To put such a policy into effect, generally, as has been strongly advocated by Hon. Dr. H. A, Bruce, Lieutenant-Governor and eminent surgeon, would require careful consideration, Mr. Martin felt. For there were "two sides to every story," he said, and as far as he could learn, the policy of sterlization in those western provinces that had adopted it, had not been carried out to any great extent.

HOGS ARE FIRM, CATTLE PRICES LITTLE LOWER

Receipts of Calves And Lambs Less During Week In Toronto.

PARTIAL CLEANUP.

TORONTO, Sept. 9. (CP)—Receipts on calves and lambs on the Toronto livestock market were lighter this week with hogs and cattle about the same in volume as last week. Cattle prices worked lower during the week while hogs held firm. Calves and lambs were steady at last weeks decline. There were 700 head of cattle carried from last week and about 900 head unsold at the close of this week's trading.

Good and choice cattle lost 10 to 15 cents cwt, with other grades 25 cents or more lower. A holdover of 1800 head on Wednesday was reduced by half on Thursday, salesmen letting the cattle go to effect a partial cleanup. Exporters shipped 500 head of cattle to Great Britain during the week, prices varying from $4.00 to $4.75 with tops mostly at $4.50. Rough steers sold in large numbers at $2.50 to $3.50 cwt. Best butchers dropped from $4.50 on Monday to close at $4.40. Common to medium butchers sold at $3 to $4 with some cutters at $1.60. Butchers cows opened the week strong at $3.50 to $3.60 but dropped at $3.25 before the close. Canners were unchanged at $1 while bolognas were lower at $1. while bolognas were lower at $1.50 to $2. A few heavy bulls sold for export at $2.50 to $3. Fed calves were firm at $6.50 to $7 for choice. They closed a trifle down at $6.50 for tops. Stockers were slow at $2 to $3.10 with a load of good westerners going at the top price. Milkers and springers were unchanged at $45 to $90 for tops.

Calves held steady at last week's decline closing at $6.50 to $6 for good and choice vealers with a few koshers at $6.50. Common vealers sold down to $3. Grassers and heavies brought $2 to $3. Some good heavy calves were offered as stockers but were finally sold to millers.

Hogs were firm at $6.50 f.o.b. for bacons, $6.75 off truck and $7 off car. They opened the week at slightly lower prices but recovered to close at the above prices which were last week's high level. Buyers issued lower bids for week-end loadings, claiming prices for dressed hogs had not kept pace with the advance in live hogs.

Lambs were steady at the previous week's closing decline at $5.50 for good ewes and wethers and at $4.50 for culls and bucks. A few western lambs were sold as feeders at $4. Sheep were unchanged at $1.00 to $2.50 cwt. according to quality with a few picked ewes at $2.75.

Winning Tactics

CARPINTERIA, Calif., September 9 (C.P.). — R. W. Waycott, retired Pasadena capitalist, is not a man to bandy words.

He heard a young man shout that his sweetheart had quarrelled with him and was trying to drown herself.

Waycott got into a boat and rowed to the young woman, who shouted, "Go away."

"Climb aboard at once, or I'll hit you over the head with this oar and drag you in," said Waycott.

She did and Waycott took her ashore, where she resumed the quarrel and departed without a "thank you" to her rescuer.

MINER IS KILLED THREE INJURED AT SCHUMACHER

McINTYRE SHAFT.

Rescuers Work Desperately For Ten Hours To Free Victim's Body.

SCHUMACHER, Ont., Sept. 9. (CP)—Sudden fall-in of a rock jam in a McIntyre mine shaft today had resulted in the death of one man and injuries to three others.

Robert Copps, Timmins, eldest son of a widowed mother, was killed almost instantly when buried beneath the avalanche of stones and dirt which showered down upon him and his companions as they worked in the stope yesterday.

For 10 hours rescuers worked gingerly, but desperately, before they were able to extricate his body from the mass of rock. Doctors said death must have been instantaneous.

Copp's fellow workers, Arthur Blake and Edward Parkent, were also completely covered by the cave-in, and were not released until eight hours later. Both were taken to hospital, Blake suffering from injured hips while Parent's stomach muscles were bruised.

The fourth member of the party, James Jackson, was only partly buried and was rescued shortly after the collapse occurred.

CHARGES LAID, BOAT TRAGEDY

Criminal Negligence Forces Drivers Of Craft In Fatal Collision.

TORONTO GIRL VICTIM.

COBOURG, Sept. 9. (C.P.) — Charges of criminal negligence have been laid against the drivers of two motor boats which collided at Presque Isle last month, resulting in the drowning of Dorothy Lewis, five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Lewis of Cosburn Avenue, Toronto.

The two men, Bert Meechim of Monarch Park Avenue, Toronto, and Harry Shewman, a Brighton boat builder, will appear in Brighton Tuesday for preliminary hearing.

The jury at the inquest held Aug. 30, found both drivers had been careless. Meechim was in charge of the boat bearing Dorothy Lewis and 12 others, while Shewman was driving a boat owned by Dr. Frank Dunnett of Brighton.

Although exceeded in dimensions by the lion and tiger, the leopard ranks with them in grace, quickness and ferocity.

Corn Mash Seized By Two Constables

Russell Hill and his wife, May, of Dummer Township, will both face charges of having liquor mash in their possession contrary to the provisions of the Excise Act before Police Magistrate Langley on Tuesday. The charges were laid following a visit paid to the Hill home last month by Provincial Constable William Warren and Constable Wood R.C.M.P., of Lindsay.

It is alleged that the two officers found 30 gallons of corn mash at the house. Mrs. Hill is said to have explained that the mash was just chicken feed and to have thrown a pail of milk into the barrel before the officers took a sample of it. However, a sample was taken and sent to Ottawa for analysis, the report having just been returned. Results of the analysis were such that the charges were immediately laid.

HEAT AT LONDON BREAKS RECORD

NORTH ESCAPES.

TORONTO, Sept. 19.—With the mercury soaring well over the usual mark for this time of the year, Ontario sweltered under a stifling blanket of heat yesterday. The highest official mark for Toronto was 90 degrees, 15 degrees over the average, and at London the thermometer recorded nearly 96, highest of the season. Despatches from all parts of the Province indicate that most cities and towns were hard hit by the heat. At Stratford the temperature was recorded unofficially at 92 degrees, the highest mark in September there in many years. Another September record was set at Brantford, where the thermometer registered 93 in the shade, the humidity adding to the suffering of the residents. The North seemed to have escaped the heat somewhat, the official temperatures being about 77.

The weatherman, however, holds out hope for the heat sufferers, announcing in the probs, that today will be a "little cooler."

UNITED FARMERS FAVOR ABOLITION BANK DIRECTORS

Replace Them With Independent Officials Responsible To Central Bank Board.

STABILIZE CURRENCY.

Suggest Central Bank Take Over Business Of Dominion, Provincial Gov'ts.

(By Ray Brown, C.P. Staff Writer)

TORONTO, Sept. 8 (C.P.) — Abolition of boards of directors of Canadian banks was urged upon the Royal Commission on Banking today. Their place should be taken by independent officials who would be responsible to the boards of the Central Bank or the National Investment Commission to be created. Existing bank shareholders should be put in the postion of preferred shareholders and not be permitted to exercise any control over banking policy or administration.

These were among the recommendations made to Lord Macmillan and his commission colleagues by the United Farmers of Ontario through R. J. Scott, president, and W. C. Good. Mr. Good read the brief to the commission.

He urged the appointment of a central bank.

Central Bank Functions

It should take over the Dominion note issue. It should gradually take over the greater part of the note issue of the banks. It should assume all the functions now exercised by the Treasury Board of Canada in the matter of advancing Dominion notes under the Finance Act. It should take over the banking business of Dominion and Provincial Governments and act as agents for such governments in all their borrowing operations. It should stabilize Canadian currency. And it should stabilize foreign exchanges.

Generally speaking the Central Bank should "supervise the structure, management and operation of the Canadian banking system so as to bring greater stability to economic development and minister to the welfare of the Canadian people."

"Catastrophic and disastrous price changes" were noted by Mr. Good as one of the main contributing causes of present depressed conditions.

After he had read his brief, Lord Macmillan adjourned the hearing until later in the day. Then Mr. Good will be subjected to some questioning on the points he has raised.

FIRE FIGHTERS BACK IN ACTION

BLAZE IN SARNIA AREA

Bush fire fighters were back into action to-day at two Ontario points, following a respite of more than a day from the outbreak which raged throughout the province during the early part of the week.

The thoughtless action of a woodcutter in throwing away a lighted match was blamed for the fire which late last night was raging half a mile north and two miles east of Windham Centre, near Simcoe. The outbreak occurred on the farm of James Elliott where woodchopping operations were in progress and in a short space of time flames were shooting skyward while dense smoke rolled over the tree tops. Two or three small homes are situated in the 400-acre area where the fire is.

Fifty farmers were standing by to prevent the spread of a fire which yesterday covered approximately 50 acres of bushland in the Sarnia area. Advance of the flames was controlled somewhat by plowing of wide furrows. Two men were believed to have caused the fire when they tried to smoke out a hive of bees in a hollow tree on the farm of Joseph Hescott.

CUBA EMERGING

From the Most Remarkable Revolution Known in Modern Times Has Begun Preparation for the Next Presidential Election in 1934.

(By H. W. L. MAHOOD)

CARLOS MANUEL DE CESPEDES is provisional President. Between now and the presidential election in November, 1934, his qualities as a constructive leader will be severely tried. Cuba is in turmoil although buoyant. Revolution without declaration of war is a new event. Revolutions have made the record of being long drawn out and bloody. This Cuban revolution was over in a few days. Ours is a day when opposition must be given a hearing. Machado mercilessly shot opposition down. His hands were literally red with blood. To keep his life he found it expedient to escape in an airplane.

The mass of the Cuban people will not stop short of political liberty. In an island republic they ought to have had it long ago. A despot in the office of President spoiled it all. The seeds of liberty sown in the soul of a people cannot be uprooted. Stable prosperity comes not without economic security. Restlessness sufficient to impede progress will last as long as economic security is delayed. At the present time a large part of the population cannot from the labor of their hands win the bare necessities. In the whole world labor is astir. The world to progress, to be fed, to be clothed, needs every able-bodied person. The world needs every bushel of grain, and fruit, and vegetable. The One who sends the harvests makes no mistake about how much. Where there is a surplus there is another where that needs it all. What an age this would be if all surplus nations were good Samaritans. Surely this surplus is not given for self-aggrandizement.

These three, Liberty, Economic Security and the Just Reward of Labor, are the Cuban masses' objectives.

For many years the United States has had deep interest in Cuban affairs. Her chief concern was to keep the island from falling into the hands of a strong European power. Since 1848 there has been a strong sentiment for its acquisition. In 1848 the United States offered Spain one hundred million dollars. The price was far above the price paid for all her other territorial purchases. Four times since the United States has intervened in Cuba with military force. Since the Spanish-American war Cuba has been practically a protectorate under the Stars and Stripes.

Think of the value of her trade with that island. In 1895 the trade was almost sixty-six million dollars. In 1923 trade climbed to five hundred and thirty-seven million. In 1898 American investments only amounted to fifty million dollars. In 1925 they were one thousand three hundred and sixty million. Of this last amount one hundred and ten million represented Government loans. America has given military strength to her trade and money interests in Cuba by securing a military base in the island. The Cuban Government is bound by treaty to make no loan without the consent of the United States. Nor can she dispose of any territory without the consent of the same Government. America has a representative in Cuba who exercises great influence over the political and commercial policies of the island. This sad word must be said: the economic life of Cuba is determined by absentee landlords and bankers living in the United States. But by no means are the Cubans dough in the hands of America. A nationalistic spirit has seized the people, especially Cuba's youth. Cuba for the Cubans is the watchword.

As truly as Carlos Manuel de Cespedes is on trial by the Cuban people, the United States policies are being sifted by an enlightened world standard. The United States is under obligation to develop a humane and Christian economic policy toward Libre Cuba. America made possible the success of the recent revolution. Cuba needs her to make possible a stable economic condition throughout the island. To interpret Cuba's revolution keep in mind that it was the cruel treatment of Machado that brought it. Had the cause been to rid the Republic of capitalism the policy of the United States might have been dictated by bankers and capitalists.

Cespedes is not a little capitalist. He can match coins with most Americans. In any part of the island resentment and considerable indignation can be sensed against the control by foreigners of her one basic product. Few are the nations that can profitably produce sugar. What wheat is to Canada and corn to the United States, sugar cane is to Cuba. Cuba can produce profitably, and refine, and put on the market sugar of the highest quality at two cents a pound. If an unjust American tariff were reduced from a prohibitive to a fair rate Cubans could become prosperous and contented. Their attention would quickly turn from revolution to methods of cane culture and sugar refinement. The machine gun would soon become a soil cultivator.

If in some way the United States will encourage Cuba to get out of debt to foreign capitalists and develop a system of agricultural education and find an eager market for her sugars, fruits, vegetables and nuts, the Cubans will forget their troubles. When peoples emerge from darkness into a day with tokens of political liberty, and economic security, and profitable labor, confidence takes the place of unrest.

A great deal of the joy of life consists in doing perfectly, or at least to the best of one's ability, everything which he attempts to do.

YOUR PROBLEMS

Religious and Social Questions Answered By DR. WYLIE CLARK

Can you explain to anybody's satisfaction why there should be crop failures through dry weather, hail and other things?—D.E.

LET us agree on two things—there are crop failures and they are hard to understand. Nature certainly makes us strive to get a living. When one thinks of all the things that may happen to prevent a crop the wonder is that there should be any at all.

Dr. Wylie Clark

It would almost seem as if there was always a struggle between success and failure and if man desires success he has to pay the price. This price includes not only hard work, but intelligent work. Nature has little use for the lazy or ignorant man. She expects and demands fair treatment.

My garden tells me that there may be very few failures. To be sure, a garden is not a farm, and may be watered and protected, where the farm has to take its chance.

What I am trying to say is this: many things which we have attributed to an adverse Providence are preventable by man's ingenuity and work.

This attitude of nature has brought man to a high state of mental development.

Are there any false prophets to-day and if so who are they? —T.B.O.

In Old Testament times the prophet was mostly a teacher with here and there one who spoke of the future. As teachers they taught what they knew or what they thought they knew. Some of them taught what they knew was not the truth and were thus false teachers. Some who knew they had not the gift of prophecy yet prophesied and led the people astray.

To-day we have many teachers who are teaching theories which are mere speculation. The people are receiving these as truth and are being fooled. Of course, we have to remember that all teaching is incomplete. The gaining of truth is a long drawn out process and many failures must be expected. What seems truth to-day may be discovered to be false to-morrow.

Those who are trying to foretell the future merely because they want it to be after their own type of thinking are apt to get it all wrong; but those who are declaring what will be because they are drawing the future out of the past and the present may proclaim some things which will come true.

We are more guessers than prophets.

The causes which lead to suicide are very different. Those which are brought about by disease and mental deterioration are the outcome of physical decay or disarrangement of the nerve system. These are like other diseases, and if they get a sufficient hold they are hard to overcome. When such conditions lead to suicide, death is really due to natural causes—it is similar to death from cancer, or any other disease which proves fatal.

There are a few suicides caused by incurable diseases. The mind is not affected, but the hopelessness of the situation produces the cause. Here the issue is not physical, but moral. Courage to meet the pain and the long drawn out illness is required. We should all be able to face this and get through.

Then here are business or social failures where nothing but ruin is left and in the collapse of things the heart sinks and the mind quails and the short way out seems the only way to be taken. The desire to escape consequences becomes supreme and forces the action.

This should not be so; we should rally ourselves to the need of the hour and face the adverse circumstances. For the brave, defeat is only a new call to a bigger and harder struggle.

JONATHAN

By DR. ALVIN E. BELL.

GREATER love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." So says Jesus, the friend of sinners and our ideal in friendship as in all other good.

Judged by this standard Jesus sets for friendship, the friendship of Jonathan for David must ever remain the ideal of human friendships through the ages. "The soul of Jonathan was knit with the soul of David, and Jonathan loved him as his own soul." This is literally fulfilling the law of loving one's neighbor as one's self.

Essentials of Friendship.

The first essential of friendship is unselfishness. When the jealous king Saul sought to poison the pure love of his son Jonathan for David, the young hero shepherd lad of Bethlehem, who had proved his patriotism and prowess in slaying Goliath, the Philistine giant, he reminded his son, that "as long as the son of Jesse liveth upon the ground, thou shalt not be established, nor thy kingdom." But Jonathan's friendship stood this acid test, for there was no trace of self-interest in his love for David. Jonathan was willing to say to David his friend, "Thou shalt be king over Israel, and I shall be next unto thee." He was ever willing to decrease if only his friend David might increase.

Fidelity in Friendship.

Another essential of friendship Jonathan shows us is fidelity. The course of friendship, like that of true love, never runs smoothly. But Jonathan's was not a fair weather friendship. It was willing and able to stand the storms of adversity. When Saul's murderous jealousy of David would have taken Jonathan's life with David's, Jonathan withheld not his love for his friend in his time of need, nor did he seek to hide it, though it cost him his own life. He never seemed to expect otherwise than that his friendship should cost him something and he was always willing to pay whatever it cost. So through the years of his father's insane opposition to David, Jonathan's friendship shone ever brighter and brighter against the dark clouds of adversity.

Friendship and Religion.

Still another essential to true friendship that Jonathan commends to us is the fine religious note that underlay his friendship for David: "So Jonathan, Saul's son, arose and went to David into the wood, and strengthened his hand in God." Jonathan recognized the hand of God in David's selection to succeed Saul on the throne of Israel, and he bowed submissively to God's will, and encouraged David to trust to Jehovah to bring his will to pass.

It is no wonder that at the sad death of Saul and his noble son David poured out his soul in the song: "I am distressed for thee, my brother Jonathan: very pleasant hast thou been unto me: thy love to me was wonderful, passing the love of women."

Cathedral Musings

HE who permits himself to manifest the destructive excitation of anger and strife throws himself out of harmony with the universe, and begins to destroy himself.

Love is the keynote to eternal life. Peace is the path upon which the loving being must tread to reach the immortal goal.

Let there be peace in your life. Peace profound, peace perfect, and eternal. Peace divine and immortal. Peace of the Christ. Peace of God. Peace of the Cosmic. Peace of THAT which is unspeakable, unknowable and yet mediate and immediate at our command.—"The Wisdom of the Rosicrucians," H. Spencer Lewis, Imperator, Western Jurisdiction, A.M.O.R.C.

Jonathan — Scripture—1 Samuel, Chapters 18-20 — By the Rev. Alvin E. Bell And Alfred J. Buescher

King Saul was subject to strange fits of madness which music had the power of soothing. News came to the king of the unusual skill with which David played the harp, so David, the shepherd lad from Bethlehem, was brought to the king's court to play for the king.

Jonathan had his admiration for David kindled from the time David showed his courage in meeting and slaying the Philistine giant, Goliath. From this there sprang up a strong friendship between David and Jonathan. Saul tried in vain to make his son jealous of David whom God had

Saul became murderously jealous of David because of his greater popularity and even planned to murder Jonathan with David. On one occasion as David played the harp before Saul the envious king threw a spear at David who barely escaped being killed by it as he fled

On one occasion during David's absence from court Jonathan was to find out his father's attitude toward David and whether it was safe to return. They arranged a secret code of signals through the shooting of an arrow. But they could not part without embracing and kissing

A GREAT BAND.

The Peterborough Industrial Exhibition will open in a most pleasing manner on Monday night with a concert by the band of His Majesty's Scots Guards, and it is to be hoped that this great British musical ensemble, one of the world's most superb military bands, will be greeted by a huge audience.

Music-lovers of the district who have heard the band at the Canadian National Exhibition would not dream of missing the opportunity offered by the local visit of this fine organization, and the enthusiasm they are displaying over the coming of the Scots Guards Band to Peterborough is likely to prove contagious.

It should be remembered that the band can only be here for the first two days of the Exhibition, and that it will play but two programs, on Monday and Tuesday evenings.

The bringing to Peterborough of the best available band talent, an innovation that began two years ago with the phenomenally successful visit of St. Hilda's Band and that was effectively repeated last year with the Besses o' th' Barns ensemble, is being continued this year by the engaging of the Scots Guards Band, the musical sensation of the Canadian National Exhibition.

The reputation of the band and the enterprise shown by the directors in booking its services should be recognized by a capacity audience at its two local concerts.

WHERE PETERBOROUGH STANDS.

Figures from nineteen Ontario cities in regard to the salaries paid to high schools and collegiate institutes show that in this respect Peterborough is following a middle course.

There are some cities in which the salary cost per pupil is considerably higher than in Peterborough, and at the same time in other centres in the province the salary cost per pupil is beneath the local figure.

The lowest in the list of the nineteen cities from which information has been obtain is Stratford with an average salary cost per pupil of $65.37, while Port Arthur has the distinction of paying the highest average salary per pupil, $93.40.

Niagara Falls is close in line with $93.09, and others report as follows: North Bay, $88.69; Kingston, $82.13; Galt, $82.05; Peterborough, $79.30; Sarnia, $77.37; Owen Sound, $77.14; Oshawa, $76.61; Brantford, $75.64; Fort William $74.95; Guelph, $74.30; Chatham, $71.37; Kitchener, $69.29; Sault Ste. Marie, $69.19; St. Thomas, $67.93; Woodstock, $67.82, and Belleville, $65.96.

These figures are interesting as offering a comparison on the basis of the cost per pupil of the collegiate institute salaries paid in the cities of Ontario.

It will be seen that the average in Peterborough stands just about half way between the highest in the province and the lowest.

A GREAT DIPLOMAT GONE.

It should always be gratefully remembered of Viscount Grey, of Falloden, whose death took place early on Thursday morning, that placed in a position of great responsibility he did his utmost to avert the World War.

He of all the diplomats concerned in the events that led up to the great conflict fought the hardest to prevent the beginning of hostilies, and while the circumstances proved too strong even for his diplomatic ability to overcome, his earnest efforts for peace should cause his name to be recalled appreciatively.

And Britons everywhere will not fail to remember, too, that when he realised that his efforts to maintain peace were futile he threw himself into the prosecution of the war with the same vigor and determination he had previously displayed in his attempt to avert the conflict.

When peace could no longer be maintained without the national honor of his country being injured, Viscount Grey was a loyal Briton eager to do all that he could to bring success to his country's cause in a struggle he had exerted every effort to prevent.

He was one of the world's greatest diplomats, and in his eleven years as Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs—incidentally the longest term in that office ever held by one individual—he did much to maintain peace and order in Europe.

OUR NEIGHBORS' REDUCTION CAMPAIGN.

The efforts of the United States Government to ensure adequate prices for farm products by reducing the production are assuming huge proportions, and the statistics of the campaign are so startling that a good many people must be wondering how long the drive can be maintained.

Bonusing the farmers of the United States to keep out of the market in order that price levels will be raised and forcing the consumer to pay for the grants made to agriculture for this purpose is an expedient that is too expensive to be adopted as a permanent policy.

Take the cotton business alone and we find that 10,000,000 crop acres have been turned under, and the growers who have thus reduced their production are to be recompensed by a tax of 4.2 cents per lint pound, which will, of course, have to be paid by the consumer.

Similarly with the hog business, in which the Government is taking an active part by purchasing four million pigs and a million sows to keep them out of the market and paying a premium on breeding sows. The cost involved, amounting to $50,000,000, is being raised by a process tax which will come out of the pockets of the consumer of bacons, hams, etc.

To recompense the farmers who are effecting a reduction of 20,000,000 acres in corn land, the huge sum of $150,000,000 will be paid.

The old law of supply and demand is for the time being pitched out of the window, but there is natural wonder how long it can be effectively ignored.

If the bonusing system is dropped the whole scheme will automatically collapse, and yet how can the army of consumers be expected to pay a tax on their food indefinitely to provide better prices for the farmer?

The whole scheme is a huge gamble, and its artificiality leaves it open to suspicion.

TERROR AND FAMINE IN RUSSIA.

Remember when Russian wheat poured into the world market, and the grandiose Five-Year Plan was on everybody's lips, and people talked of the triumph of Communism? There is little of such talk now. Occasionally, of course, somebody comes out of Russia with a tale of admiration, but for the most part the story is different.

The Five-Year Plan has become a hope deferred, Communism compromises desperately with Capitalism, and there is no longer a surplus of Russian wheat. There is threatened famine instead. In a despatch from Moscow, sent the first week in August, a correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph wrote:

"At this date—a late one for the Southern latitudes of the grain belt—only a third or less of the wheat crops in these belts has been reaped. Threshing is practically at a standstill. In one vast tract of grain land 300 machines have been delivered without either magnetors or carburetors. Into this scene of chaotic disorganization and of apathetic despair on the part of the miserable peasants the State Prosecutor, Vishinsky, has thrown a great army of volunteers to help the Soviet courts in their task of 'smelling out' class enemies. For all failures, in whatever direction, there is always the one treatment—the loosing of a new campaign of terror among the population, or the slaughter or sending into slavery of a new batch of victims, in hope that Moscow will not be held accountable for the consequences of its own insanity. . . . How many have perished since last winter can only be guessed; we have scattered first-hand evidence, but no statistics."

This, even though it be but half-true, is a terrible picture. Also a terrible commentary upon the pretence that the Russian people have a policy that the rest of the world needs.—Ottawa Journal.

STUDYING LIQUOR LAWS.

The committee of fifteen members appointed by the Massachusetts General Court to prepare a code of liquor laws is already at work. Its first public meeting was held in the Boston State House, and other hearings will take place in other parts of the state. The chief feature of the committee's work, however, that is attracting attention is the expedition to Canada in order to investigate liquor control laws in operation in the Dominion. An appropriation of $200 apiece has been made for "travel within and without the Commonwealth." To get accurate information of the working of these laws the committee deems it desirable to conduct a personal investigation. In this regard the New York Times facetiously remarks:

"If mere testimony were to be regarded, small libraries on the subject are at the committee's service. The state commission has reported voluminously on all known varieties of liquor regulation. Not from such lifeless if learned pages but from immediate observation, from study on the spot, from life itself, from the bar, the restaurant, the tavern, the container and the bottle is truth to be sought and found. The committee's travel will be mainly without the Commonwealth. The provinces of Quebec and Ontario will be the theatre of investigation. In Quebec are cellars of credit and renown. Choice wines, brandies and liqueurs of France invite that personal taste without which discussions of the policing of wet ways are but sawdust. The indigenous wines are to be tasted. The Canadian ales have their fame, and legislators upon whom long sittings in the shadow of the Sacred Cod must have acted as a cumulative shoehorn will find in Canada sound and rich whiskies; and notably that divine Caledonian drink and dew and veiled smoky fire."

The chief points of interest will be Ontario and Quebec. It is generally admitted that, if properly enforced, the province of Ontario has the best liquor control act in the Dominion. Without advertising the sale of liquor or permitting it to be sold for consumption in licensed public places, ample opportunity is afforded under strict regulations for those who desire to obtain it to get it. There is no denying the fact that while there is considerable drinking of liquor throughout the province, drunkenness in public places has very largely disappeared in the last seventeen years. This is not wholly due to the Liquor Control Act, but began when the bar-rooms were abolished under the Ontario Temperance Act in 1916. Since that time the scenes which used to be familiar to every citizen of drunken persons being turned out of bar-rooms all over the province have completely disappeared. The liquor traffic is undoubtedly an evil that requires the strictest regulation, and in abolishing national prohibition the United States does well to study the most modern methods of regulating the sale.—Brantford Expositor.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Get the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition away to a flying start by a record first night's attendance on Monday night when the Scots Guards Band will play its first program.

Mr. Bennett was undoubtedly right when he said that Canada would need a greater population. And he was even more correct when he declared that the present is no time to think about increased population.

How we long for the days to return, murmurs the Border Cities Star, wistfully, when every local small boy's ambition is to grow up and become a steam shovel operator.

And now they are talking about motor cars with a speed of 125 miles an hour. One thing is certain, that when faster automobiles are made there are plenty of motorists ready to drive them "all out."

The political schools have at all events provided some interesting and thought-provoking speeches, and that in itself has made them well worth while.

VACATION ESCAPADE

By ARTHUR SHUMWAY

CHAPTER 19.

For Sally it had been a quiet evening. At first she had hoped Ted would manage to meet her somewhere now that he had the car, but when she considered the matter she knew it would be impossible. So she sat and read and listened to the radio until Fred Proctor suggested a game of "dart baseball." He had Jasper bring out the new game, a board with a target designed somewhat like a plan of a baseball diamond, and a set of little steel-pointed darts gaily trimmed with red and yellow feather tips.

They were playing "darts" when Sally heard an automobile come up into the drive.

"Company," she said. "Maybe I'd better clear this away?"

"Nonsense," Proctor said. "We'll make them play with us. This is a good game." He cocked his head and listened. "Anyway," he added, "it isn't company. It's Chandler, back early."

"You're back early, Chandler," Proctor said pleasantly.

"Yes," Ted said. Sally recognized an edge on his voice. He seemed to be restraining himself from making some sort of outburst as he looked directly at Fred Proctor.

"Matter?" Proctor asked, turning and sending one of the little darts zipping through the air into the center of the target. "Anything wrong with the car?"

Ted smiled sardonically. "Why, yes," he said.

Proctor tossed another dart, taking deliberate and careful aim. "Not so good," he confided to Sally. "Well," he said, addressing Ted, "nothing you won't be able to repair, I hope."

"Corks?" Fred Proctor gave a little laugh, scarcely more than a faint cough, and threw another dart at the target. 'Good one!" he told himself.

"Yes, your car is full of holes," Ted said with strained patience.

'Holes?" Proctor went forward, stopped and began pulling the darts from the cork-backed target.

"Holes. Bullet holes."

'Bullet holes." Proctor looked up over his shoulder at Ted. 'Bullet holes," he said, quite seriously. 'Do you mean somebody shot at the car?"

Ted nodded. 'Exactly."

'While you were in it?" Proctor's eyes were half closed, his lips pursed slightly.

Ted nodded again.

'But why? What was the trouble? Hold-up?"

"I'll leave that to you," Ted said. As he paused Sally thought she would scream. It seemed to be coming; the showdown seemed to be coming. Ted would declare himself in a moment.

'Why—what—tell me about it, Chandler. Where did it happen?"

Proctor rose and tossed the darts on the table. 'Cigaret?" he asked, offering his case to Ted. ' You look as if you could use one."

"Thanks, no," Ted said coolly. It was coming, Sally was certain it was coming.

Proctor motioned Ted to a chair and sat down in one opposite, but Ted remained standing. With an unnatural precision of speech and manner he described the attack at Ormond Beach. Proctor listened quietly, his face stern, and gave no indication either of anger or surprise.

"So," he said when Ted had finished. "So. Hm. Looks as if there was a little mistake."

"How so?" Ted asked.

"I have no doubt the men in that touring car mistook you for someone else. To be exact—for me."

"Well, that s interesting," Ted said. "What makes you think so?"

"We're somewhat of a size, neither of us seems ever to wear a hat, it was fairly dark there on the beach—must have been from the looks of the night—and it was my car."

"Yes," Ted said, "it was your car." He rose to go.

"Maybe you'd like a bit of brandy or a pony of Scotch?" Proctor asked. "Steady your nerves."

"No thanks," Ted said. "I'll get along."

Proctor shrugged. "Right. Then, you'll let me drive you over? In the sedan?"

Ted shook his head. "Nice of you," he said, "but maybe it would be better if you didn't show yourself outside tonight—if, as you say, those hoodlums made a mistake."

Sally thought she could trace a grate of sarcasm in Ted's remark, but Proctor merely smiled, nodded and replied: "Possibly you're right, Chandler. But at least let me get you a cab." He went to the telephone and called the taxi stand.

"Sit down," he said, "the cab will be here in a few minutes."

Reluctantly, Ted sat down.

"What ever could anyone want to attack you for, Mr. Proctor?" Sally asked innocently.

Proctor's hard, dark eyes turned and regarded her steadily a moment "Hard to say," he said, finally. Sally felt as if he had turned her inside out, then back again.

"You haven't any idea who the man were, Mr. Chandler?" she asked Ted.

"No, ma'm, I haven't," Ted said. "They were in a long, pale-green touring car with curtains and ——"

"Why! I——" Sally began.

"What was that, Miss Gwynne?" Proctor demanded quickly.

"Why, I know who has a pale-green touring car, a big long one."

"Who has?"

"The man that came the other night," Sally said.

"You mean Collins?" Proctor asked.

"Yes, that tough, horrible person."

"You're sure he has a car like that? How do you know, Miss Gwynne?"

"I saw it. I saw Collins just this afternoon, coming out of the bank over on the mainland across from the Casino."

"Why didn't you mention it, Miss Gwynne?"

"Why—I ——"

Proctor smiled. "That's right," he said. "Of course you wouldn't know that I might have been interested in the matter, would you?"

"No," Sally lied.

The doorbell rang. Its sudden, though politely muted sound, rasped on Sally's nerves so that she sat quickly upright in her chair. Ted turned and stared at the hall.

Proctor laughed easily. "The cab," he said. "Excuse me." He rose and went to the door.

Sally leaned over and whispered desperately to Ted: "Don't go. Don't get into that cab!"

Proctor came back into the room. "I hope you get a good night's sleep, Chandler," he said. "We'll look at the car tomorrow. I'm sure nobody will bother you as long as you're not mistaken for—anybody else."

"All right, sir."

Sally looked at Ted imploringly and shook her head to warn him again not to get into the cab. He could not afford to recognize the sign, for Proctor was looking directly at him.

"And, Chandler," Proctor said quietly. "If I were you, I wouldn't make any report of this to the police. Not yet. Let me investigate this matter first."

"As you say," Ted agreed.

"Good boy. Well, good night, and take care of yourself. Get a good sleep. You needn't hurry about getting over in the morning."

"Yes, sir. Good night. Good night, Miss Gwynne."

"Good night, Mr. Chandler," Sally said pleasantly while with her eyes she begged Ted to beware of the cab driver. But Ted went on out and a moment later Sally heard the cab pull away and go down the drive.

"Got a lot of nerve, that young Chandler," Proctor commented. "But then,he should have, to fly airplanes. A lot of nerve. A darned shame that had to happen tonight the way it did."

There was a thousand questions Sally wanted to ask, not that she expected true answers to them, but merely to see what the man would say. She dared not appear too curious, however. She simply asked: "Do you think you'll be safe here in the house tonight?"

Proctor smiled. "Safe enough," he said. "And you might put the burglar locks on your windows when you turn in. You'll pardon me, I've some telephoning to do."

Sally took the hint and rose. "I think I'll go to bed," she said. "My, I'm so excited and stirred up inside; I know I'll never get to sleep. Good night."

"Good night," he said, standing by the telephone. He stood there without lifting the receiver until she reached the top of the stairs. Then she hesitated a moment before opening her door, but still he had not made his call. Defeated, she went into her room, knelt by the door and listened. She could hear nothi

To have to go to bed at a time like this! With Proctor making a secret telephone call. With Ted at the mercy of a cab driver summoned by Proctor who had let him take his roadster and go out and be shot at by gunmen on the beach—by the vicious Mike Collins. But there was nothing she could do except wait. It was intolerable.

NEWS OF OUR OWN VILLAGE

Rolly Denne's fall fair opens Mon. and the village and the whole country hereabouts is all agog, so to speak, over the same. Don't miss it is your scribe's advice to all and sundry.

Not many from here took in the motor race near Detroit, to the west of us, Labor Day, folks in these parts being slightly blase or something over speed boats since Hughie Campbell started to make sea horses here.

The Edison works in the village is starting a shorter work week Mon. and many of the lads will get back on the pay roll of the same, which looks like a brake in the clouds, we say hopefully.

A Scotch band is going to play at Rolly Denne's fall fair Mon. and Tues. and that means the Hall of Wisdom philosopher sees, we're going to get a lotta close harmony.

The village schools all opened Tuesday a.m., most of the kids being disgusted to learn none of the schools got burned up during the dry spell.

Rolly Denne, our worthy Mayor, has been deputed to visit Ottawa, east of here, to get the Govt. to build a new bridge at the locks, in other words to come across so the folks can get across.

Cap Philpott of Toronto, west of here, 1 of the fiery talkers of the C.C.F. shock troops, is billed to give a talk in the village shortly. Cap can surely make the sparks fly from all accounts and local capitalists, if any, is warned to take cover.

Jim Turnbull's machine gun militia has started training at the drill shed so this community is well prepared against emergencies and such like.

GREASED PIG

At last I did get over it....I mean the disappointment of not winning that pig....It was in the ball park on Fourth of July, and they had a greased pole and a greased pig and a lot of eager, helter-skelter kids to furnish the fun for the crowd.

The idea as you know, was to climb a greased pole and win a $5 gold piece. I wanted those five dollars, and so did a hundred other kids; but I knew I didn't have a chance, and, besides, I had my school suit on and I couldn't be ruining it with wagon wheel grease, could I? And I was only about 8 years old, so I had to hang around on the edges, wistful and longing hopeful. Maybe, after the bigger boys had rubbed most of the grease off, it wouldn't be so slippery and I MIGHT be able to make it up to the top....But they were too wise for me. They kept on greasing that pole and none of the kids ever climbed to the top. So they brought a grunting, struggling, middle-sized black pig out from under the grandstand and covered him with grease and said that any kid who could catch that pig could take him home...I wanted that pig, too. Not for eating, not to be slaughtered, you know, but just for a pet. To take home and add to the menagerie, to the list of animals we'd owned. To join the green water snakes and the white rabbits with the pink eyes, and the dog, of course, and the wild yellow canary we caught in the dry fields outside of town and the blue-winged dragon flies in the cage and the little lamb that went by our house in a big flock and went lame and was given to us by one of the herders.

* * *

But I didn't get that squealing, rampageous, darting, twisting, frightened, fleet and slippery pig. You know I didn't. I ran and I ran and I ran—all over the infield and all over the outfield—and everywhere the pig ran I ran, too. Usually I was behind, but sometimes when he doubled back on his trail I was in the lead for a while. He turned and the pack of kids turned, too, and once I had him by one hind leg, but he got away from me at last we got him into a corner and one big boy threw himself flat on the little fellow and he lay still and the chase was over, and the victor hoisted him up and hugged him close to his chest and went off home with MY pig that would have made such a fine pet around my house....My heart was broken. And, still, at times when I don't get just what I want, I think of that little greased pig and remember that I got over that disappointment after a while, and I'll probably get over this one, too, in time....Of course I will.

A DAY IN CANADIAN HISTORY

By Fred Williams

MONTREAL YIELDED TO BRITISH

On this date, in 1760 Montreal was surrendered to the British and the conquest of Canada was complete. William Amherst, the brother of the great General Jeffrey Amherst, in his journal, thus tells what happened:

"A flag of truce came out this morning (September 7) and a suspension of arms until 12 o'clock is granted.

"Articles of capitulation were sent out, which the general would not agree to, but imposes much harder—to surrender as prisoners of war, to be sent to France and not to serve again during the present war.

"The enemy seems not to agree to these terms, and the general expects them out tonight, for which reason he offered me corps to reinforce the left, where they will probably make the attack, if they come out tonight."

Later he wrote: "Mons Vaudreuil, governor general of Canada, surrendered to the British crown more than was ever given to any crown before.

"At night the Grenadiers and my corps took possession of the gate and the next morning (the 9th) I marched in at the head of two companies of Grenadiers and three of light infantry and had the pleasure of seeing their whole army lay down their arms."

It is one of the coincidences of history that the French surrender of Montreal to the British coincided with the anniversary of the death at Paris, France in 1676, of Paul deChomedy, Sieur deMaisonneuve, the founder of Montreal.

William Amherst, who had previously been sent to London bearing the official despatch telling of the capture of Louisbourg in 1758, was also the bearer of the good news regarding Montreal. He afterwards returned to America to duty and was for a time governor of New-

Character From Handwriting

By BLANCHE A. DRAPER

A Feature Conducted by Peterborough's Leading Handwriting Analyst for the Readers of The Examiner.

Chas. T. Toplis,
753 Water street, Peterborough.

Your handwriting as given on sample for analysis shows that you are rather hard to understand, rather set in your ways, and that you like to prove that you are right in an argument. You are not over-ambitious as to the future because you are pretty well satisfied with the way things are at present. You have a tendency to cast care aside and not to worry over things which cannot be avoided. You have a gentle philosophy which enables you to study deeply the wisdom of certain human actions, and to place the blame where it is due. Your word is your bond even at a sacrifice to yourself. You could practise psychology to advantage, thereby learn the phenomena of the human mind. Sometimes you wonder what it is all about, and you become afraid of yourself, afraid of what you do not understand. Psychology teaches one that nothing is impossible. The mind rules the body.

Susie Dickson,
Hastings, Ont.

Your handwriting tells me that you are a person who endeavours to have too many irons in the fire at once. You are over active and do not give yourself the necessary rest required by your system to recuperate your expended energies. You are positive in your likes and dislikes. If you say you do not like a certain person, that is final. Nothing can or will make you change your point of view. The same applies to your household appointments. You absolutely must have things exactly the way you want them. You are are rather close in your views sometimes and love to argue about facts. In the end you generally have your own way. You are often too frank, but yet you are not unkind. You are thrifty as regards money matters and know how to get the most out of a dollar.

Philomena J. Garvey,
Douro, Ont.

Your writing shows that you are an idealistic sort of a person, and that you have a romantic turn of mind at times. You are not always quite practical, though you mean to be. Your ideas get slightly mixed and cause you to lose out on really worth while things. Your extremely long capital loops denote the fact that you have a vivid imagination and often let this imagination soar away with you above the clouds of common every day thought. You love a good time, and you are cheerful company. You are quite optimistic and nothing bothers you very much. You have a happy faculty of casting aside and living only one day at a time. You have great dignity and deportment. Yet this attribute of yours keeps you constantly at attention because you adore all things important, and you like to be thought of in a light of importance. Many, many times you feel like letting both of these attributes slide, so that you could be just you—happy-go-lucky and fun loving.

Mary Eleanor Torrance,
469 Murray St., Peterborough.

The handwriting as portrayed on your sample for analysis expresses a highly nervous tension. You are extremely sensitive, retiring and modest. You seem to be lacking in progressive qualities. You may already be in business, but you really do not enjoy your work, because you do not belong to the business type. That is to say, 'not adapted to a life of detail and monotonous routine.' You need constant change of scenery. Travelling companion or governess might suit your type, and that only if your health is perfectly normal. In the writing of your signature, you appear to be a 'thin' person with not much reserve strength. But, the outlines of the address which are decidely heavier, indicate that you can draw on a reserve supply, if necessary. Your general character is good, though you are easily swayed by the opinions of others. Youthfulness seems to retard your progress.

WORLD'S AGE NOT FAR AWAY

To The Editor of The Examiner,
Dear Sir:

Mr. Burnham shows his old astuteness when he speaks of the self-confessed failure of our present rulers and the hopelessness of their near relations the Liberals.

I class them together as Mr. Burnham does, because each supports a helpless and broken system. He evidently can see Mr. Bennett's policy, just enunciated, of long hours and short pay, as a ghastly plan to set business in motion again. The only other alternative is the Co-operative Commonwealth plan, a movement of each for all and all for each, with service as the great essential. Our clubs are filled with those who have voted and worked for the old line parties, but are virile Canadians first and cannot sit down with our hands folded and our mouths open, as this system is forcing men to do.

We have faith in our brother man (and women) and if that is piety, may our old friend have it, also though the word never seemed associated enough with action for me, and smacked of sanctimoniousness.

What connection could the Federation have with the Drury Government? None whatever, any more than from the sins of the Liberals or Tories.

While the C.C.F. stands for the co-operative idea for which I have worked intensely long years before there was a C.C.F. all the bogies as to confiscation and irreligion will not drive me out of it. Those very things are operating now with the powers that be. We stand for even handed justice to the individual, be his business small or large and faith in God and the common sense of the people.

HOLIDAY VISIT ENDS IN CRASH

Returning From Peterborough Thomas Henderson and Family Hurt

HEAD-ON COLLISION

A Toledo family's holiday visit to Peterborough terminated near their home in an automobile accident in which eight persons were injured early Tuesday morning.

Thomas Henderson, brother of Joseph Henderson, grocer, at King and Bathurst streets, accompanied by his wife and two daughters, Mary, 12, and Ellen Lee, 8, had motored to Peterborough last Saturday and spent the week-end here the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Henderson. They left Peterborough Monday evening, and when nearing Toledo their automobile crashed head-on into a parked truck.

Mr. Henderson's left leg was badly cut, the knee cap fractured and ligaments of his chest were torn. His wife was cut on the face and also suffered leg injuries, and their two daughters were slightly injured. They were removed in ambulance to St. Vincent's Hospital, Toledo.

Howard Walton of Sandusky, driver of the truck, was most seriously hurt, his injuries including a fractured skull. His wife and one son suffered minor bruises and cuts and a second son was uninjured. They were also rushed to the hospital in the same ambulance.

Thomas Henderson is a former employee of the C.G.E. company, where he was at one time employed as a toolmaker. His last visit to Peterborough was during the Old Home Week celebration.

Market Closing On All Exchanges

TORONTO MINING.

TORONTO, Sept. 9.—(CP)—Saturday sessions were resumed today at the Standard Mining Exchange but the patrons were still in a holiday frame of mind. Business was in low volume in all groups, only substantial buying of San Antonio, a fair volume in Macassa and two or three penny issues stirring the placid surface. Senior gold shares and most of the base metal and silver stocks were steady.

Advances of 25 cents were held by Dome, and Bralorne and losses of the same amount were registered for Lake Shore and McIntyre. Teck Hughes and Wright Hargreaves weakened 5 cents each and Hollinger 10.

Trade in Noranda was limited to a few odd-lots at unchanged prices and International Nickel fell about 10 cents in ow volume.

WALL STREET

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Resumption of Saturday trading in the securities market today failed to arouse to the lowest level of the year to date. Professionals passed a few equities back and forth on the exchange floor, but price fluctuations were unimportant and the close was fairly steady. Transfers approximate 250,000 shares.

Canadian stocks and bonds were almost lifeless. Shares of McIntyre Porcupine and Dome were off fractionally, while those of International Nickel and Canadian Pacific were unchanged. Dominion Government 4s were down ⅝ of a point but other long-term obligations held at their previous prices. The Canadian dollar maintained its yesterday's rate of 95.12½ cents.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, Sept. 9 (CP)—Trading on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange during the first hour to-day was a repetition of yesterday's dull trade and wheat prices by mid-session were still at the minimum levels.

October option was pegged at 70¼, December at 71¾, and May at 76⅝ cents. A small export movement was reported, but it had no effect on prices. Hedges were being taken care of outside the market as there were few purchasrs in the pit.

TORONTO EXCHANGE

TORONTO, Sept. 9.—(CP)—Demand continued lively for Weston's common in the Saturday session of the Toronto Stock Exchange and the price advanced 2 to 51, a new high for the year. The buying was stimulated by a report that an American firm were seeking control of the business. The turnover was fair also in nickel but sales were reduced to a dribble over the rest of the board. Prices held steady with a few scattered narrow recessions.

Other food shares failed to perk up with Westons. Loblaw A was unchange at 15¾. International Pete showed a gain of ¼ but other oils were down where any changes developed. British American and Imperial were off ⅛ each. Walkers common was at 46 up ¼. Distillers Seagram fell back ¼ and Industrial Alcohol gained ¼.

Interlisted issued showed no change except nickel which moved up 5 cents to 20.75. Smelters sold at 130, C.P.R. at 16½.

KIWANIS PRIZES ARE ON DISPLAY

Service Club Has Taken Over the Old C.D.S. Store

SEPTEMBER 25-26

The Kiwanis Club yesterday took over the old Eaton building on the corner of George and Simcoe streets as a ticket-selling campaign headquarters for the Kiwanis Karnival in the Brock Street Rink, September 25 and 26. A grand display of the prizes to be given to ticket purchasers has been placed in the windows.

The campaign is now in full swing. Tickets are being offered to patrons at prices varying between 5 cents and 25 cents, according to the luck of the buyer. The price of each is concealed on the back of the ticket stub and is not revealed to the purchaser until after his ticket has been torn from the book. All Kiwanis members and many assistants in the city are selling the tickets. The proceeds from the tickets and the entire Karnival are to be devoted to the underprivileged child work of the club.

Twenty-six prizes in all will be drawn and every ticket purchased will have a chance at the prizes. The first three prizes are an electric refrigerator valued at $168; a royal Sarouk rug valued at $120, and an electric chime clock valued at $37.50.

Ivan Lillico, as chairman of the draw committee, is directing the the ticket selling campaign assisted by Charles Saunders and A. G. Gates.

EXPORT PAUSE CAUSES FALL WHEAT PRICES

WINNIPEG, Sept. 9 (C.P.).—Increased hedging sales and a pause in export demand found wheat prices sinking to the minimum levels established August 15, and pit trading greatly restricted at the close of the week on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange. Values ranged from ½ cent to 1¼ cents per bushel lower. All months were at the minimum levels, with October quoted at 70¼; December 71¾, and May at 76⅝ cents. Coarse grains and flax all recorded recessions, rye the leader with losses of 3¾ to 3⅞ cts.

Export demand for wheat had for some time been almost equal to the daily hedges against purchases made from the farmers in the west, but as the threshing progressed and deliveries approached the 3,000,000-bushel mark daily, the support was found to be insufficient.

Forecasts are hopeful, and a strong demand from the continent is looked for. Canadian wheat being required by European millers to mix with the weaker native supplies.

Teams playing away from home registered victories in four instances, while a similar number of games were drawn.

Local Girl Returned From Bermuda On Same Ship As Ex-President Of Cuba

Photographed aboard ship beside the deposed and exiled ex-President of Cuba, Gerardo Machado, was one of the novel experiences of Miss Eva M. Letellier of 215 Crescent Street, who has recently returned from a vacation trip to Bermuda.

Miss Letellier who joined the ship at Hamilton on her return journey to Montreal found that the deposed ruler of Cuba was included in the passenger list.

"Machado looked like a very tired business man", according to Miss Letellier. Seeking for some other apt description, she said," he looked weather beaten".

"Like most business men of today", The Examiner suggested.

"Yes," she laughed.

Miss Letellier remarked that Machado who was accompanied by three ex-ministers of his cabinet, did not participate in the social activity aboard ship, although upon every occasion that he appeared in public he was always very charming and gentlemanly.

One day Machado undertook to autograph each of his fellow travellers passenger lists. Miss Letellier has hers among numerous other souvenirs of the trip. As the "Lady Rodney" proceeded up the St. Lawrence into the port of Montreal last Sunday afternoon, Miss Letellier said she was invited by press cameramen to pose along with Machado. She had not seen any of the pictures in the newspapers yet, she stated, adding, "but I suppose they would blacken me out anyway".

On the outward journey Miss Letellier travelled on the "Lady Somers". The boat ran into the tail end of the hurricane that lashed the Atlantic seaboard, and all the passengers experienced mal de mer in varying degrees.

been renovated, the fences whitewashed, and the Midway will arrive Sunday.

Vivian Milburn, managing director, told The Examiner this morning that the accommodation for livestock is likely to be overcrowded again, with an exceptionally large showing of horses.

Mr. Milburn is successor to the late William Knox, whose kindly personality and broad experience are going to be missed next week.

"They told us that the exhibits of horses were going to be light this year," Mr. Milburn said, "but from the present outlook we can confidently predict something out of the ordinary in this department. I mention this because it was supposed to be a weak spot, and if it turns out to be much larger than was expected, the other departments will no doubt show the same progress."

MANY OF the racing fans thought there would be a shortage of horses at the Fall meetings in Ontario owing to so many American tracks operating but the opening today at Thorncliffe shows seven races all practically filled to the limit with plenty on the also eligible list unable to get in. Some of our topnotch jockeys will be plying their trade elsewhere but there are enough good boys around to pilot the bangtails home the shortest way.

• • •

JIM BADAME has shipped Khorasan back from Detroit and this one should account for a few handicap events before they leave Toronto for the south. It would not surprise us if Dude Foden is the leading jockey for the current Thorncliffe session. He is Conny Smythe's stable rider and also rides for J. E. Smallman, so he will be on real live horses and when he has a good horse he can get more out of him than any of them. Frank Mann who rides for Harry Giddings should also account for a number of winners as this is his favorite track.

• • •

A HORSE called Ladfield is in our midst and we might mention there is no smarter sprinter anywhere than this one. He has had a good rest and should be ready to click at the first or second asking. Neverfade is also here from Saratoga and he needs no introduction to the racing public. He is a real standout in any company and is very consistent, and remember they did not ship him up here just to give him his summer holidays. If you happen to see French Lass in the entries one of these days, don't let her run light as she is back in Harry Hatch's barn again after an absence of nearly two years.

• • •

WE LOOK for Phil R to come down in front one of these days as he was beaten only by a whisker the other day at Niagara Falls. Boscobel should crash into the winner's circle without further delay. They have been prepping this one up for the last month and the clockers tell us he is par' to go.

SCOTS GUARDS BAND

Under Leadership of Lieut. H. E. Dowell

(DIRECT FROM TORONTO EXHIBITION)

AT THE

PETERBOROUGH INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION

Many famous bandmasters have directed the Scots Guards Band which is at present touring Canada. The Band, which is one of the most famous in the British Army, is nearly 250 years old, and at first consisted of professional oboe players who were not enlisted men, but were engaged by the month.

The first bandmaster of the Scots Guards of whom there is any record was John Mahon, an eminent clarinettist. Mahon led the Band until 1797, in which year Edward Hopkins, recognized as one of the most brilliant clarinettists of his day, was appointed. Hopkins was in charge of the Band in Paris in 1815, where the musicians were stationed while the Scots Guards were fighting under Wellington at Waterloo.

In the middle of the last century, Carl Boose, one of the greatest bandmasters in the history of the British Army, was appointed director of music. Boose was in many ways the founder of the modern regimental Band. He was also the founder of the first musical journal dealing with band music to be instituted in Great Britain.

Lieut. F. W. Wood, who retired recently as bandmaster, was another great name in the history of the Scots Guards Band. Mr. Wood trained the famous York and Lancaster Band which won first prize in the competition of Army Bands held in London in 1898. In 1911, Mr. Wood succeeded Dr. Williams as senior director of music of the Brigade of Guards.

Lieut H. E. Dowell, the present director of music for the Scots Guards, will be in charge of the Band during the present tour.

The Scots Guards will give Two Complete Programs on Monday and Tuesday Evenings, September 11th and 12th, and it is expected this Band will draw enormous crowds.

SUSPECT POISON IN KING'S DEATH

Feisal's Ministers Are Thoroughly Probing Suspicious Circumstances.

HOTEL MANAGER DIES

LONDON, Sept. 9.—A Berne despatch to the Daily Mail today said that a thorough inquiry had been ordered into the allegedly suspicious circumstances surrounding the death of King Feisal of Iraq in Switzerland, presumably of a heart attack.

The report said the king's ministers with him at Berne had ordered a pathological examination of the body, fearing Feisal was poisoned. The official announcement after this examination said Feisal died of arteriosclerosis.

However, the examination failed to satisfy the ministers, who awaited another medical declaration. The report added that the manager of the hotel where King Feisal stayed in Berne died within three hours of the king's death.

LITTLE CHANCE STERILIZATION

late for lunch, had the unusual experience, after delivering his paper, of being besieged for information by many members of the class as he partook of a "potluck" meal, served by none other than Lou Golden, registrar of the school. Between forkfuls of meat, spoonfus of tea, and dibs and dabs at this and that, he managed to hint at three radical departures in present government policy, which, if not as yet actually considered by the Henry Cabinet, have at least the enthusiastic approval of Mr. Martin himself. They are:

2—A thrift plan for Ontario people, to be patterned somewhat after the thrif plans operated in England in the war years.

3—A Dominion-Provincial course of study for unemployed young men.

In his comprehensive survey, in his previous address on the welfare situation, Mr. Martin paid particular attention to the Mothers' Allowance Act administration, and in this connection, touched upon the possibility, some day, of extending the scope of the act so as to benefit the widow with one child, and thereby reviving the belief that before the next general election comes, this extension will either be in operation or will have been assured.

"While there is much to be said in favor of this amendment," Mr. Martin commented, "it should be pointed out that the additional cost would be $1,500,000 per year. However, I might say that I am very sympathetic towards the proposal that the act shall be so amended to include the widow with one child and I shall be glad to consider such a change when conditions permit of the increased financial responsibility which it involves."

CUBAN REBELS TRAP OFFICERS

—were that Horacio Ferrer, De Cespedes' Secretary of War, Julio Sanguily, and others of high rank, plotted to unseat the leftist commission and replace it with either De Cespedes and his cabinet or by some "concentration" government.

Tending to confirm that rumor, according to some observers, was the arrest in Bayamo, Jiguan I, Manzanillo, and Palma Soriano of 16 men who were accused of planning a croup on behalf of former President Mario G. Menocal.

Meanwhile, with the departure from Cuban waters of the United States navy Claude Swanson, a promise was made of an improvement in the administration.

The promise came from Sergio Carbo, spokesman for the executive commission, and represented a departure from the junta rule.

Carbo said the commission, in sessions that lasted far into the night, considered establishing a coalition cabinet with a president at its head, to replace the five commissioners.

Obituary

MRS. J. H. ISBISTER.

MILLBROOK, Sept. 9 (Examiner Correspondence).—The Centreville Presbyterian Church was filled to capacity on Monday, September 4, for the funeral of Mrs. J. H. Isbister, whose death occurred the Friday previous, following an extended period of ill health.

Deceased, whose maiden name was Mabel Irwin, was born at Millbrook fifty-four years ago, and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Irwin, early settlers in the village, her father carrying on a cooperage business here on Tupper Street for several years.

Over thirty years ago the marriage of Miss Irwin and J. H. Isbister took place, and since that time their home, of which a warm-hearted hospitality has been an outstanding characteristic, was located on the provincial highway at Centreville.

Deceased was a member of the South Monaghan Presbyterian Church, faithful in attendance at its services, a member of the choir, and an active worker in the Ladies' Aid Society, the Women's Missionary Auxiliary, and other organizations as long as health and strength would permit, and her death leaves a vacancy that will be most difficult to fill. A devoted wife and mother in the home, and widely known as a cheerful and helpful neighbor, Mrs. Isbister displayed always a keen and constructive interest in community undertakings.

Besides the bereaved husband, the immediate surviving relatives include two children, Ronald of Detroit and Kathleen of Peterborough; two brothers, George of Wingham and Alexander of Peterborough, and one sister, Mrs. William Tremaine (Mildred) of Millbrook.

A service in the home preceded the public gathering at the church, where the service was conducted by the pastor of the deceased, Rev. H. R. Williams, B.A., assisted by Rev. D. A. McKenzie, a former pastor on the Centreville circuit, recently come back to that community to reside. The pall-bearers were: Messrs. George Berry, W. Byers, H. Campbell, S. Donaldson, T. Thompson and H. Jackson. Interment was in the Presbyterian Cemetery at Centreville.

Friends from a distance who were present for the funeral included practically the entire office staff of the Sun Life Company, Peterborough; representatives from the Session, the Choir, the Ladies' Aid Society and the congregation of St. Paul's Church, Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Isbister, of Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. G. Irwin and daughter of Wingham; Mr. and Mrs. A. Irwin of Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. Hughes and their three sons, of Toronto.

MRS. HARRIET ROWE.

IVANHOE, September 9 (Examiner Correspondence). — Word was received here on Tuesday night of the sudden death of Mrs. H. B. Rowe at her home, 152 First Avenue, Ottawa, for many years on the staff of the Ottawa Public Schools, and widow of Rev. H. B. Rowe.

Mrs. Rowe had been in ill-health for the past four months, but was believed to be making satisfactory recovery, and was able to be up. She collapsed suddenly at home on Tuesday, however.

Formerly Miss Harriet Amelia Bishop, Mrs. Rowe was born at Bishop's Mills, where she spent her early life. Following her marriage to Rev. Mr. Rowe she had lived in various towns where her husband had charges.

Mr. Rowe died about 18 years ago and Mrs. Rowe went to Ottawa nine years ago from Tweed, where she joined the staff of the Public Schools in Ottawa, teaching for five years at Percy Street School and for the past four years at York Street School. Ill-health forced her to retire from active work last Easter and since that time she has lived quietly at her home. She was last year president of the Ottawa Women Teachers' Association, and the news of her passing will occasion sincere regret among former associates and friends.

Surviving are two daughters, the Misses Edith and Norma Rowe, both of Ottawa, and three sisters, Miss Alice Bishop, Smith's Falls, Mrs. W. J. Keegan, Portland, Ore., and Mrs. J. D. Keegan, Kemptville, two brothers, Fred Bishop of Fargo, N. D., and Frank Bishop of Alkamont, Man.

The funeral was held on Thursday morning, with interment at Bishop's Mills Cemetery.

The late Mrs. Rowe was a former Public School teacher at Ivanhoe, after her marriage her husband was pastor here for a number of years, and after her husband's death she resided here with her daughters, resuming her teaching in Ivanhoe Public School for a number of years.

SPECIAL FEATURES ARE OFFERED BY C.D.S. FOR EXHIBITION WEEK

VARIOUS DEMONSTRATIONS

Unmistakable signs predict the passing of another Summer!

To the merchants in general the near approach of Autumn means serious consideration of new season's stocks and the planning of sales and advertising campaigns.

To the manager of the Canadian Department Stores Limited it has meant revolutionary action.

J. H. Jamieson, local manager of one of the newest and most up-to-date stores in the T. Eaton Company's chain of department stores, announces that every one of the dozen departments is carrying complete new stocks of merchandise.

Not only that, but each department has been reorganized, extended or remodelled wherever it was found necessary, in order to increase and extend the facilities of giving the buying public that high type of service and value for which the C.D.S. have long been famous.

Exhibition Week Features

As will be seen from the advertisement pages of this issue of The Examiner, the Canadian Department Store is offering exceptional values especially for Exhibition week.

Something in the nature of an innovation, these special values are being offered to serve primarily as an introduction to the large number of visitors that will be here next week from widely scattered territory, to the new store that was only in the course of erection at this time last year. Various demonstrations will also be given in the store and at the special exhibit in the Manufacturers' Building at the Exhibition.

Eaton tailored suits, made to measure, will be the prenomenal values offered both at the store and at the Exhibition. J. C. MacDonald, a clothier of wide experience, has charge of the tailoring department, and claims that he has never before been privileged to offer such quality values. The suitings, he stated, are shipments of English woollens recently arrived at the Eaton Company's warehouses.

The super-value for ladies will be found in the special showing of Winter fur-trimmed coats. They will be on display at the store for next week only.

Various Demonstrations

Chief among the demonstrations to be held at the store next week, is that of the O'Cedar Wax Polish Company, who will have a gift for every user of their product; and the Hoover Vacuum Cleaner Company. It is learned that the Hoover people will have a permanent representative at the store, the agency for that line of vacuum cleaner having been assumed by the C.D.S. Limited. A silver polish demonstration will be staged on the main floor.

At the Exhibition special demonstrations will feature, the Hostess Electric refrigerators; Victor and DeForest Crossley radios; and the famous Eatonia Washing Machines.

The special Exhibition sale being held by the Canadian Department Store is eventful, in so much as it marks the definite beginning of the newest of Peterborough's largest stores, to settle down after a period of readjustment.

Since the business was transplanted from the old premises on George street to the new quarters a few blocks south at the city's main intersection ten months ago, the volume of trade has been maintained at a high peak, despite the temporary disadvantages and setbacks that run hand in hand with such an ambitious venture.

New Ideas and Methods

Mr. Jamieson who succeeded to the management six months ago, came here from North Bay where he had been in charge of the branch of the C.D.S. in that city for four years. With him he brought new ideas and methods harmonizing with the highest merchandising and business standards. The result of his influence is seen to-day in the generally increased efficiency of the staff of sixty hands; in the complete new stock of merchandise from basement to top floor; and in the artistic and pleasing arrangement of goods in the various departments.

From top to bottom of the store premises changes are to be seen. Increased floor space has been provided for the convenience of shoppers, by the judicious re-arrangement of counters and showcases; new decorative and display schemes have given place to those that have become outdated with the rapid changes in present day merchandising methods; in brief new life has been infused into the new store to fit it for a long period of usefulness and service to the large community that it is serving.

"Baby Day"

In close proximity to the enlarged lingerie, millinery, and gown departments, the new baby wear section will prove a delight to fond mothers. Wednesday of next week is "Baby Day" at the C.D.S., when the department will be officially opened.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday Miss Barron, the Nemoflex corsetiere ill be at the store to give special fittings in the new corset department. Here special fitting rooms are provided that will assure customers utmost privacy, and all facilities for obtaining expert advice and service.

One could elaborate upon the new features of the furniture and house furnishings department on the secod floor; of the beautiful display of Aynsley, Coalport and Crown Derby dhina and the display of English semi-pordelain in the basement, in charge of Mrs. Brown; or linger in the basement groceteria where the package goods are ingeniously displayed so as to be visible to the purchaser in patent glass containers, but those all are things that must be seen to be fully appreciated.

TYPHOID VICTIM.

OSHAWA. — After an illness of two weeks, Eric Sykes, aged 26, of Harmony, died in the Oshawa General Hospital yesterday from typhoid fever. The case was reported to Dr. F. J. Rundle, M.O.H. for East Whitby Township, on Thursday by Dr. R. W. Graham, who had diagnosed the disease. Dr. Rundle, who is conducting an investigation to ascertain the source of the infeciton, stated that there was no reason for alarm.

CAMPBELLFORD NEWS

The Rev. and Mrs. L. M. Smith have returned home from their vacation, which they spent in Weston, Ontario, and at Victoria Beach, Coiborne.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE REVIEWS

ONTARIO GRAIN.

Approximate prices track shipping point: Wheat, 64c to 65c; oats, 32c to 34c; barley, 40c to 43c; rye, 45c to 46c.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

An abrupt rise of grain values late yesterday more than eclipsed an earlier downturn of 2 cents a bushel for wheat.

Restored confidence on the part of speculative buyers was attributed largely to greater interest shown in wheat available for immediate use. Improved demand for this wheat was illustrated by the fact that red winter grades which were recently selling in St. Louis 8 cents under Chicago December delivery were yesterday bringing the December price or better.

Wheat closed unsettled, but near the day's top figures, ⅛ to ⅝ cents above Thursday's finish, corn unchanged to ⅛ cent higher, oats ⅝ to 1¼ cents up, and provisions carrying from 7 cents decline to a gain of 2 cents.

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

Butter and cheese prices advanced while other lines held unchanged on the Montreal Dairy and Produce Market yesterday. The butter market rose half a cent from Thursday to 18¾ cents to 19 cents a pound for No. 1 grade, in carlots or less. Dealers attributed this strength in butter to the stronger British market and increased export sales. Receipts yesterday totalled 2,787 boxes.

Gains of ¼ to ⅜ of a cent a pound were recorded on the cheese market. Ontario brought 10⅝c to 11¼c a pound for colored and 10⅛c to 10¾c for white, while Quebecs brought 10⅛c to 10⅜c for white and 10⅝c for colored. Prices overseas have also risen and exports this week are expected to be the heaviest of the season. Arrivals amounted to 2,727 boxes.

No change was exhibited by eggs. Graded shipments in carlots or less of Ontario eggs held at 22 to 23 cents a dozen for extras, 17c to 18c for firsts and 13½c to 14c for seconds, with offerings totalling 402 boxes.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, September 9.—With more wheat offered in the pit than the market could absorb, wheat prices remained at the "pegged" minimum price on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange yesterday and the values at the close were unchanged.

Expert sales ranged between 200,000 and 250,000 bushels, but the movement was not large enough to take care of "hedges," and prices showed no recuperative tendencies. Chalking up the high and low on futures was a mere formality for board markers, as the bottom levels ruled across the board.

October wheat closed at 70½c, December at 71⅝c, and May at 76⅝c. Trade was quite small and at times the pit was deserted. There was more wheat for sale than there were buyers for it, but it was stated all farmers' hedges were taken care of.

Liverpool displayed an easier tone and finished 1⅜d to 1½d lower, while the Argentine market was also weaker, despite continuance of the drought there. Broomhall's agent reported the last appreciable rainfall in the Argentine was late in March.

Precedent was established in the cash grain market when no official quotations were established for oats and barley. Futures prices in each of these grains were at minimum levels, and, since no provision has been made for absorption of 'hedges' which the market could not take cash closing prices for oats and barley were not established.

Better grades of cash wheat were in demand, but trading was dull. Scattered liquidation in flax and rye in the opening minutes was the only feature to an otherwise dull coarse grains market.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY EXAMINER

Mr. Picobac Attends a Montreal Cabaret

The head waiter led the way to a table at the edge of the shiny dance floor, beckoning to the Master of Ceremonies as he did so. Coming over, the latter greeted Mr. Picobac with a hearty handshake and led him out on the floor, where the chorus immediately engulfed him.

"Ladies and gentlemen," announced he; "we are honored in having with us this evening our old friend Mr. Picobac, the Burley philosopher of Essex County, Ontario, who will now say a few words.

Caught thus entirely by surprise, and embarrassed by the proximity of so many beautiful girls, Mr. Picobac was for the moment at a loss.

"I did not expect—nor do I intend at this time—to make a speech," he began amidst applause. "I just want to call your attention to one thing."

"Picobac," suggested an enthusiastic listener.

Handy pocket tin, 15¢ also in ½ lb. Humidor Tins

Picobac tobacco, "the pick of Canada's Burley crop, grown in sunny southern Ontario," is the manufactured product of a favored climate, a favored soil and the most modern systems of cultivation, curing, grading and maturing. Try it. On sale everywhere.

Good for making cigarettes too.

June 28, 1933.

To beware of thieves posing as salesmen or solicitors, seeking admittance to the home. STRANGERS SHOULD NOT BE ADMITTED UNTIL THEIR CREDENTIALS HAVE BEEN CHECKED AND VERIFIED BY DEPENDABLE LOCAL FIRMS OR PERSONS.

IN MANY CASES strangers without reliable credentials are "LOCATORS OR SPOTTERS" for professional criminals, and according to police records, lack of caution on the part of householders has often resulted in costly property losses and bitter experiences.

DO NOT PAY CASH IN ADVANCE OR ISSUE A CHEQUE TO PEDDLERS, because as a rule, you receive nothing for your money, when asked to pay in advance, except a promise that your merchandise will come to you through the mail, and oftentimes your cheque will be RAISED OR ALTERED and cashed for several times the correct amount by a third and innocent party.

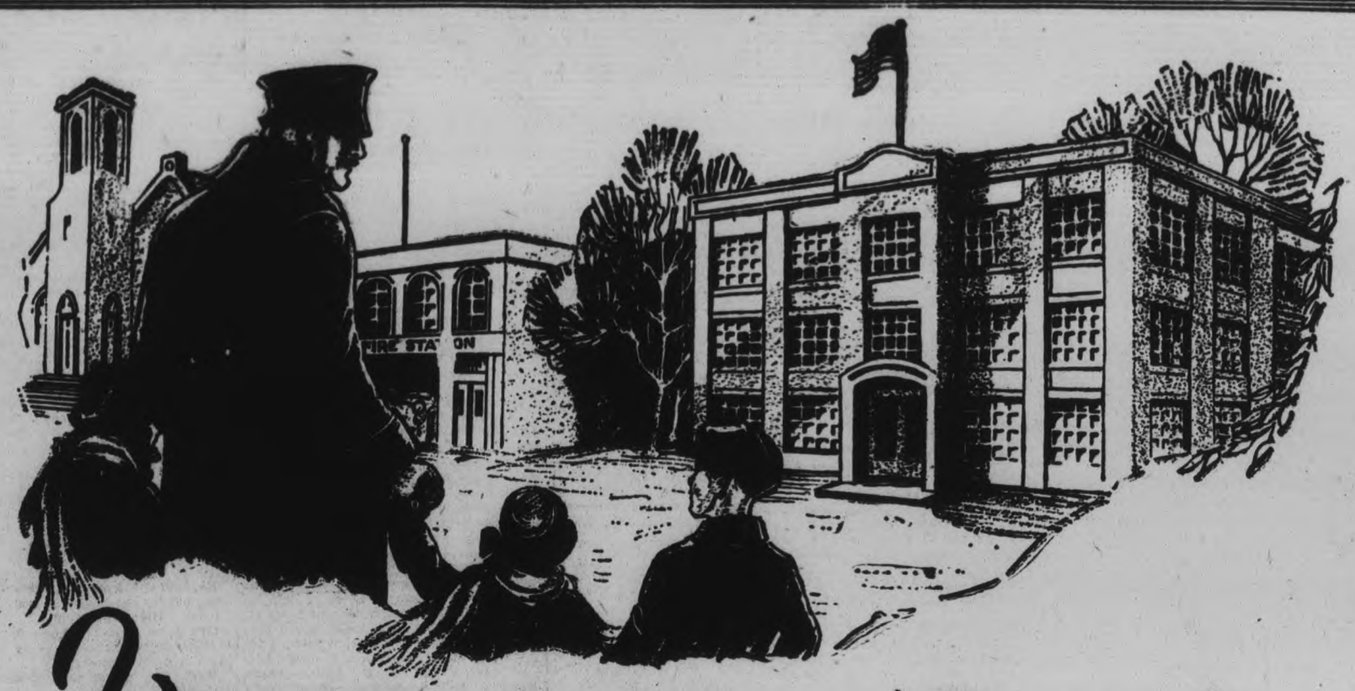
IT IS BETTER TO BE SAFE THAN SORRY. BE SURE YOU KNOW WHO YOU ARE DOING BUSINESS WITH BEFORE YOU ALLOW THEM TO ENTER YOUR HOME.

THE POLICE DEPARTMENT OF PETERBOROUGH IS ANXIOUS TO CO-OPERATE WITH CITIZENS AT ALL TIMES TO KEEP THESE DANGEROUS STRANGERS IN CHECK. IF SUSPICIOUS STRANGERS COME TO YOUR HOME WITH SOMETHING TO SELL PLEASE PHONE THE PARTICULARS TO THE POLICE AT ONCE.

LOCAL UNEMPLOYED WHO ARE TRYING TO MAKE AN HONEST LIVING BY SELLING FROM DOOR-TO-DOOR SHOULD HAVE WRITTEN PERMISSION FROM THIS DEPARTMENT TO DO SO AND NO EXPLANATION TO THE CONTRARY SHOULD BE ACCEPTED AS SATISFACTORY.

ONE NEED NOT BE AFRAID OF OFFENDING THE HONEST SALESMAN REPRESENTING A LOCAL FIRM, AS THEY HAVE THEIR CREDENTIALS WITH THEM AND WELCOME INVESTIGATION.

SAMUEL NEWHALL,
Chief Constable,
Peterborough.



When the Peddler calls again what will he say?

REST ASSURED that he will be prepared with "Free Samples"— and all the clever phrases and sales arguments which Master Peddlers have been able to assemble---and some of this ammunition will be so effectively Disguised that it will seem reasonable when considered from the peddler's point of view.

You Ask The Transient Peddler

Do You or the firm you represent create any employment for my family or my neighbors?

How Much Money Do You or your firm pay toward the upkeep of our public schools---wherein my children obtain their education?

Would I have a place to worship IF I depended upon the subscriptions paid by YOU or Your Firm?

How Much are you as a Transient Peddler or your firm, taxed towards the upkeep of our Police and Fire Departments which offer ample protection for my home?

How Much do you, Mr. Peddler, or your company pay towards the support of our general welfare work?

Remember Your Merchant is maintaining a business institution---hiring Local Help---which is a factor in your city. He is ready to serve you at ALL TIMES and He Pays His Share on all of the above requirements.

You Would NOT Be Guided in money matters---or in politics by this Wandering-Door-Bell-Ringer. WHY be influenced by him in making your decision between the RIGHT and Wrong thing to do in supplying your needs.

THE RESIDENT SALESMAN selling goods for responsible manufacturers contributes to the civic finances through taxes by either having a store or store connection, and is not in the same class as the Transient Peddler who is here for a few days and then away, usually never to be seen in the locality again.

PLAY SAFE Better Be Sorry You DIDN'T Buy than sorry you did.

Constable Mackie Dies From Wounds

MONTREAL, September 9.—Constable James Mackie, 43 years old, of the Canadian Pacific Railway Police, died in hospital last night as a result of bullet wounds received yesterday while attempting to arrest two men in the railway yards at Lanorale, Quebec.

Death came after three blood transfusions had been given Constable Mackie. Following first-aid treatment in Joliette, Que., shortly after the shooting he was rushed to Montreal, where physicians toiled throughout the day to prevent death. Constable Mackie suffered four bullet wounds, two in the left arm, one in the chest, and the fourth in the abdomen.

SPLENDID TONE ONE OF VIRTUES OF GUARDS BAND

NEARLY 250 YEARS OLD.

First Choice In Selecting Musicians From British College.

To hear a British Guards band play the National Anthem is an experience comparable only to hearing the Garde Republicaine of France play the Marseillaise. The two experiences are exactly opposite and just as thrilling.

Peterborough will have an opportunity of judging how "God Save the King" should be played at the Exhibition Monday and Tuesday nights by the band of the Scots Guards by the gracious permission of H.M. The King. Where the Garde Republicaine play their anthem with fiery fervor, the Scots Guards will play "God Save the King" in that solemn, restrained and imposing manner that admirably reflects the sturdy but undemonstrative character of the Britisher.

Like all Guards bands, that of the Scots Guards believes devoutly in the virtues of fine tone. Anyone who has heard these musicians will remember the ravishing sound of the brass and the fine, sweet tone of the wood wind instruments. This perfection of tone is due partly to the long tradition which the Scots Guards carry, a tradition extending backwards of nearly 250 years and also to the fact that the bands of the Brigade of Guards have first choice in selecting musicians from the British Army's college of music at Kneller Hall.

To be a bandsman in the Scots Guards, or in any other regiment in the Brigade of Guards, is regarded as a great honor. The Scots Guards Band is one of the oldest and finest in the British Army. It is renowned throughout the world and has been hailed with enthusiasm during its tours of France, Italy and other parts of Europe.

The band has visited Canada twice before. It was heard here in 1912 and again in 1922. On both occasions it received a wonderful welcome. The third tour is thus in the nature of a visit from a musical institution which Canada knows, honors and admires.

Weddings

LeTOURNEAU—LINSEY

A pretty wedding took place quietly at seven o'clock last evening, at All Saints' Church, when Flora Maude Linsey, eldest daughter of Mrs. John Hierons of Chemong Road, and the late Mr. Linsey, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. James Vincent LeTourneau, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. LeTourneau of Toronto. The Rev. J. D. Paterson officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her stepfather, Mr. John Hierons, wore a frock of brown satin trimmed with white, with white hat, shoes and gloves, and a bouquet of pink and white asters and fern.

The bridesmaid, Miss Kathleen Hierons, step sister of the bride, was in wine-colored satin with matching hat, white shoes and gloves, and bouquet of asters.

Mr. Fred Linsey, brother of the bride, acted as best man.

After the ceremony, a party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hierons, and dainty refreshments were served. Mr. LeTourneau and his bride will leave on Sunday for their future home in Toronto, the latter travelling in a brown suit with brown hat and accessories.

BETWEEN BOOK ENDS

PANORAMA, WITH MUSIC
(By Grace E. Thompson)

Take one ANTHONY ADVERSE, one CAVALCADE, add a section of WHO'S WHO and a dash of Hugh Walpole and Galsworthy, dilute and you have PANORAMA WITH MUSIC This entertaining book is the saga of the O'Dean-Blackwood family down through the years from 1774 to 1932. Lady O'Dean and her lovely descendants are, of course, fictitious characters, but they move in atcual scenes brought to life from contemporary diaries, memoires and intimate letters. They gamble with the 'ton'; flirt with the Prince of Wales, gossip with Princesses and Dukes and authors of the day by the score. With them you move all over fashionable Europe, you live in the London of Pitt and the witty Sheridan...Vienna after Waterloo ...London again in the Decadant 90's and New York during the Wall Street crash. You follow the swing of the pendulum from license to purdery and back again... and back again. You go behind the labels Georgian, Victorian and Edwardian, finding all the teeming life and overtones which those labels freeze into dead generalaties.

These pages make vivid that sense of every-dayness in which we live in the present. You realize that after Waterloo there was much the same atmosphere as after November, 1918. In some ways it is very chastening reading. This good-termpered, gossippy, humorous book has been one of the highlights of the lighter summer books We have a small regret that Miss Thompson did not attempt to erect a novel out of this mass of material she has collected. But that is probably playing Dog-and-the-Bone.

THE EPIC OF AMERICA
(By James Truslow Adams)

The Public Library has added a copy of THE EPIC OF AMERICA to their shelves, a valuable addition. Professor Adams possesses one of the finest balanced minds of contemporary comentators and historians. He has made this latest book as absorbing as it is impartial; original as it is sensible. In it he paints a picture with broad strokes of the variegated past which has made the New World's story and at the same time tries to discover for himself and others how the ordinary American—under which category most of us come—has become what he is to-day in outlook, character and opinion. He endeavours to trace the beginnings at their several points of entry such American concepts as "Bigger and better" of our attitude towards business, the typical aggressiveness and American dream of the "right of every man to life, liberty and the persuit of happiness."

THE EPIC OF AMERICA is stimulating fare.

THOSE DISTURBING MIRACLES

Lloyd Douglas, author of MAGNIFICENT OBSESSION, has a new book, entitled THOSE DISTURBING MIRACLES...a book filled with compassion, mellow wisdom and a new viewpoint. Another small book by the same reverend author, PRECIOUS JEOPARDY, a Christmas Story, will be ready in November.

PRESENTING LILY MARS
(By Booth Tarkington, 1933)

This new story from the typewriter of one of the deans of American storytellers ran as a serial in the Saturday Evening Post and is soon to be filmed. In it Mr. Tarkington returns to the theatre. It is the story of one Lily Mars, actress; of her temperament and its immediate effects upon all the males within sight. It starts a bit unconvincingly, but rapidly gathers speed. Lily grows into a real and diverting person and eventually quite lovable. Tarkington's swift-flowing sense of humour and his deep human sympathy see to that. Lilys scenes with the leading lady ...her man-snaring with her large innocent eyes...her superb gestures of noble renunciation...all are handled with typical Tarkington adroitness and quiet satire.

The best-sellers during August in Peterborough are reported as:
PANORAMA WITH MUSIC—By Grace Thompson, a lively saga of an English family from the French Revolution to 1932.
PRESENTING LILY MARS—By Booth Tarkington. Lily who comes to storm Broadway with her charm.
LITTLE MAN, WHAT NOW?—By Hans Fallada, a touching and humorous story of a lovable couple caught in the web of the present crisis.
PROTECTING MARGOT—Miss Alice Grant Rosmans seventh best-seller.
STRANGER'S RETURN—By Phil Stong. An amusing tale of a grandfather and his prodigal grandaughter against designing relatives.
MARIE ANTOINETTE — By Stefan Zwieg is still in great demand.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE WEEKLY COLUMN

A goodly thing it is to meet
In Friendship's circle bright,
Where nothing stains the pleasure sweet,
Or dims the radiant light.
No unkind word our lips shall pass,
No envy sour the mind;
But each shall seek the common weal—
The good of all mankind.

WARSAW

Some methods of being thoughtful summer (or for that matter any time) guests have been discussed by Women's Institute workers as well as others.

Some of the delegates carry their own pillow-slips and towels. One rather frail woman carried a pair of blankets, though she did not always unpack them. One mentioned to her hostess that if her suitcase would only hold them she would carry her sheets.

It really is not a difficult thing when people are going to spend a night or so as guests in another home to take their own linen, especially to summer cottages, where laundry conveniences are not apt to be so complete as at home, and more so if there are several small children.

It really is a small matter, especially as most such guests motor from place to place, to put in a supply of needed linen. It is a great matter for the hostess not to have a pile of linen to launder after a few days' visit of some friends.

This little (or is it big?) bit of thoughtfulness is being practised fairly frequently throughout the country, and more than one hostess has expressed pleasure at the kindly thought. It is reported that one hostess resented it. Later she realized that both she and her guests benefitted by it.

MILLBROOK.

"Seasonable Recipes" was the theme chosen for an Institute gathering near London, Ontario, last week end, when requests of a varied nature met with a prompt response, members having been previously warned to come prepared with pickle and other recipes, 'tried and tested," and be in readiness to pass them on to others 'correct in every detail.'

The first response to the indication from the chair that the meeting was "thrown open for questions and information" brought an unexpected query for a "Cure for colds so prevalent just now"; but this was no 'sticker' for one elderly lady told of a prescription in use in her family from mother to daughter for three generations as follows: Place a handful of elder blossoms and one of peppermint in a jug, then pour on one pint and one-half of boiling water; steep on the back of the stove for thirty minutes, keeping closely covered. Strain, sweeten with honey, and drink the whole while remaining in bed and while it is as hot as can be swallowed. This should be followed by covering the patient warmly, allowing a free and thorough perspiration takes place. "The drink is absolutely harmless, and if desired, can be divided into two or more smaller portions, and taken at intervals of a few minutes."

Duly recorded in note-books by those interested, the next query was for "good hand lotion to use from now on when skin is likely to roughen from cooler weather, and fall cleaning, etc." Again there was one ready who read from her W.I. note book suitable reply for this difficulty the information having been given the previous fall. "You see the advantage of keeping a note book and bringing it to our meetings," the president mentioned previous to the reading of the required prescription:

One ounce German cologne, two ounces each of alcohol and glycerine, one pint of soft water, and one-quarter ounce gum tragacanth; heat the water and pour over the gum, allowing to stand half a day until the latter is melted. Then add the other ingredients, bottle, and shake well before using; in case it is too thick add a little more water.

A bride of the community, rather inexperienced in housework, was most anxious for a "good recipe for chili sauce, of which my husband is very fond." An older woman gave this, adding the information that it would be "just as good as your husband's mother used to make, for I knew her well, and she made her sauce from this recipe."

Thirty ripe tomatoes; ten large onions; seven large red peppers; one bunch celery cut fine; seven cups vinegar, fifteen tablespoons sugar, five tablespoons salt. Peel onions, cut all ingredients fine, boil until well cooked, and thick—it may take quite a long time"; bottle while hot and seal; make smaller quantity if desired.

The next inquiry had to do with keeping brown sugar from hardening, the remedy suggested being to keep it in the bread box with the loaves, leaving the sugar in the paper bag in which it comes from the store. The call for macaroons "that get nicer the longer they are kept" was readily answered, though the president suggested this might prove a 'sticker' when the eager request was put in.

Mix together one can condensed milk, one pound shredded cocoanut, one teaspoon cornstarch, and one teaspoon salt. Drop by spoonfuls on a greased tin, put a cherry on each one, and bake in a moderate oven until brown; makes about six dozen.

Time being up shortly after the discussion on this last item, the meeting closed with many complaints that it had been altogether too short, and the subject would be resumed another day.

Afternoon Gown Has New Name

Formal Afternoon or Informal Evening Mode Given Sales Name of "Beer Garden" Frock--Replacing "Cocktail" Dress.

By LUCY CLARE
Fashion Writer for Central Press

Our old friend, the cocktail hour frock, now has a new rival in the "beer garden" frock. Not that it makes much difference as far as the frocks are concerned. It's just a new name for an old fashion, a sort of any port in a storm sponsored by the "dance of the depression," when a frock by any other name may have better selling qualities. Perhaps, after all, "beer garden" may be a more legitimate name just now, though not half as sophisticated sounding.

However, call them what you will, cocktail, beer or just plain formal afternoon or informal evening gowns, they are more elaborate than our old friends for informal-formal evening or formal afternoon, and don't at all jibe in with our conception of dressing up for beer as practiced in the nineties, when cocktails were legitimate and nobody thought enough of them to name gowns for them. For one thing, skirts are longer, reaching to the ground, and there is much more elaboration in trim and handling. The cocktail jacket is still in evidence, even if it does go under the name of beer.

An evening frock, second, fashioned from ruby red velvet, is accompanied by a closely fitting evening wrap. Here there is an interesting outstanding treatment of shoulder and upper arm. The waistline is slightly raised at the front and slightly dropped at the back, achieving the effect of a slimmer silhouette with the long sheath-like skirt. This waistline treatment, by the way, is one of the more recent tricks of Paris designers.

In line with the formal afternoon silhouette for street wear, is the tunic-length coat, third, which gives itself a break at the knees, achieved by a hemline border of fur. These trimmed with long or flat fur, or of flat fur trimmed with the long hair variety. The one here shown is of moire black caracul bordered line, and large button fastenings. Big buttons, on a big scale, is another Paris feature.

Apropos of the penchant for the sleeveless jacket is a costume the college girl is bound to take to right. This is in a two-piece knitted suit of ostrich mixture tweed, with sleeveless bodice of chamois, the broadened shoulder line effected by an epaulette treatment.

"Dry cleaning" is a translation of French "nettoyage a sec" and means cleansing without water.

Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors conducted by Anne Wilcox

Looking at rooms with a freshness of vision is important if a homemaker would keep her rooms at their best.

* * * * * * *

Now is a good time to give the rooms this scrutiny, for, if you have been spending the summer vacationing, you will come back with renewed interest in the house and an eye to discover faults, which you had become so accustomed to through seeing them constantly that you were scarcely aware they existed.

* * * * * * *

Or the keenness of the renewed sight may awaken a pride in the good things which were scarcely appreciated for this same reason. The decoration should be keyed up to these.

* * * * * * *

The important thing is to make use of this discrimination. Refuse to permit the unsightly decoration to remain. Feature the good. Do no let the chair which should be upholstered continue in this condition.

* * * * * * *

If the money cannot materialize, immediately a slip cover can be made which can serve its purpose. This you can make yourself. For the main rooms of the house, select a plain linen, or linen finish material, or a glazed chints.

* * * * * * *

These are preferable to figured textiles as winter coverings. The seams can be piped with black, or mattress seamed, which seaming is done by making a French seam on the right side of the goods.

* * * * * * *

The color of the fabric itself should harmonize well with the upholstery of other furniture.

* * * * * * *

Window draperies may need renewing. Here again outlay may prove a deterrent. If so, do not be discouraged. Dye the old ones if they are worth it and are not too heavy for your own dye pot.

* * * * * * *

If new hangings are imperative, you can do much with inexpensive materials well chosen for color and deftly ornamented with your own needle.

* * * * * * *

Keep decorations simple. They are more restful too. It is better to have few ornaments, and these right, than many which are not correct.

* * * * * * *

Avoid multiplicity of colors. Use brasses for lighting dark parts of rooms. They catch and reflect light. Watch for all details which combine to make good decoration.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR CENTRAL PRESS

By E. V. SHEPARD

WATCH FOR SQUEEZES

Sixteen or eighteen years ago I noticed that Sidney S. Lenz was making more squeezes than any other player I knew. To my comment upon that fact he replied: "There never is a session of bridge when a squeeze cannot be made. There usually can be made about three squeezes by one of the four players. Any time that a side has a lay down for 11 tricks, watch for a squeeze. It may be inherent and unavoidable by opponents, or there may be a pseudo-squeeze, due to an opponents inability to tell which of two cards to hold. Watch discards from the time play starts: note suit distributions; soon you will be adding squeezes to your scores."

Players who take to heart the above advice will find it paying big dividends. Probably Lenz is the most remarkable player of all time. He never misses a play. He never becomes careless. His ability to read holdings and what players in big tournaments fail to show his name, but that is because he plays only in American Whist League contests. This is the oldest and best known of such organizations.

Lens never cares to play for high stakes. So careful is he of his amateur standing that he has refused all offers to teach. I know of one instance where a man offered $1,000 for a one-hour bridge lesson, just to say that he had a lesson from Len, but the offer was refused.

If any reader has been misled into supposing that Lens is not as good as he once was, let him read the record Lens made at Hanover, N.H., in July, against the countrys best contract bridge, auction bridge and whist players. In 21 contests Lens won six major trophies for teamwork, and in addition he won 13 top score cups, or 10 prizes in 21 trials. That was going some.

How Many Can North Win at Clubs?

An automobile driver notes many things which are not apparent to those who are merely onlookers. On the other hand a back-seat driver many see something that escapes the attention of he driver. It is the same thing at bridge.

The Senior honors were captured by Mary Kingsbury, with Francis Bestard a close second. Mary Kingsbury took first place in diving and Hazel Schirrama and Mary McPherson tied for second.

In the Intermediates, Peggy Edmonds, a future speed swimmer, was first in speed with Dorothy Bestard second. The diving was won by Dorothy Bestard and Ethel Barnes was second.

Jimmie Cummings was first in speed and diving in the babies' group, and Edward Bestard second.

The special shuttle relay race was won by Peggy Edmonds, Frances Bestard and Mary McPherson, and Mary Kingsbury, H. Schirrama and D. Bestard in a close second.

Miss Littlefield announced that swimming classes are in full swing again and congratulated the "Y" girls who had distinguished themselves at the various summer regattas this season. The Association is very proud of their swimmers who always figure prominently in the summer swimming competitions.

The usual swimming meet will be held next Friday. All swimmers are urged to take part in the keen competitions.

NEW MOTOR HEAD IS COMING TO "EX"

Everett Castle Will Show His Invention At Peterborough Fair.

A product of the inventive genius of J. Everett Castle, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Henry Castle of 572 Romaine street, the Lambert-Castle High Compression Motor Head is to be on public display at Peterborough Industrial Exhibition.

Acclaimed by prominent engineers as an invention that promises to revolutionize the automotive industry, the Lambert-Castle Motor Head is to be on display all next week. It will probably arrive in the city to-day.

Mr. Castle, the inventor of the motor head was formerly employed at the local plant of the Canadian General Electric Company before leaving here to work in various automobile plants in the United States. His invention for which amazing claims are made, is briefly a motor head for internal combustion engines comprising upper or auxiliary pistons which are operated by means of cams on a camshaft in a definite timed relation to the lower or power pistons.

It is claimed that by use of the new motor head efficiency of motor fuel will be considerably increased and resultant economy in operation of motor vehicles realized.

The inventor has offered to the Hon. R. B. Bennett, Prime Minister, the free rights to use the invention on power equipment for national defence.

It is claimed that the Lambert-Castle Motor Head which is to be manufactured and marketed by the newly incorporated Lambert-Castle Motor Head Company Limited, can be made to fit any type or make of motor vehicle or internal combustion engine.

The prospectus of the new company has just been issued from the head office at Windsor. The present board of directors consists of Thomas B. Lambert, manufacturer; John Everett Castle, mechanical engineer; James Ernest Zeron, barrister; and Emerson Harcourt Arnold, merchant.

Mr. Castle points out that at the Exhibition he will confine himself to demonstrating the motor head. He has no intention of conducting a stock selling campaign.

"We have the product and have proven that it is a marvel in performance," he stated. "We do not intend to ask or urge individuals to invest in the company. We do however, want the public to know that there is such an opportunity available to them."

Three hundred engineers from the United States recently joined a party of Canadian engineers in witnessing a demonstration of the invention at Windsor. They were all greatly impressed with the possibilities that the motor head possesses.

It is anticipated that wide interest will be aroused throughout this district by the demonstration of the invention that is to be given locally. Mr. Castle extends a cordial invitation to all engineers and particularly those engaged in the is due to the efforts of Brothers branch of automotive engineering to see the demonstration.

CUBS LOOM AS NEXT THREAT TO GIANTS' PENNANT SEARCH

Pirates Have Faint Hopes But Chicago Gains Tie For Second Place.

GREAT PERFORMANCE.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, Jr.
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Carl Hubbell's already famous ability to pitch his best when the going gets tough once more had enthroned him as New Yorks baseball idol to-day and had virtually wiped out the pennant hopes of Pittsburgh Pirates.

Driven to cover and beaten in the first game of the important series between the Pirates and the league leading Giants, Hubbell came back with a superb mound performance yesterday to defeat the Bucs 2-1 in the fifth and final clash and send the Giants on to Cincinnati with a 6½-game lead.

The Pirates won three of the five games, but their failure to take the final clash left them with only faint hopes of getting back into the race and installed Chicago Cubs as the next big threat to the Giants' pennant search. While the Pirates lost the Cubs beat Boston Braves again, 8-3, and climbed into a virtual tie for second place. And next week the Giants have to tackle a six-game series at Chicago.

The prospect looked bad for the Giants yesterday after the terrific drubbing they absorbed Thursday, but a couple of hits and an error by Pie Traynor gave them a one-run lead in the third. With that margin to work on, Hubbell pitched five straight hitless innings. He ran into trouble in the eighth when singles by Tommy Thevenow and Earl Grace gave the Pirates their run and they went on to load the bases, but he pulled himself out of that difficulty and tore through to the finish, giving only six hits in all for his 21st victory of the season.

The Cubs gained their second place tie by battering Ben Cantwell, Leo Mangum and their successors for a dozen hits while Guy Bush pitched steadily. It was their fifth straight victory and their 47th in 62 home games so far.

The fourth place St. Louis Cardinals swept their series with the Phillies by winning 6-5 despite Chuck Klein's 37th homer. Silas Johnson, Cincinnati pitcher, finally found the victory he had been seeking since May 26, holding Brooklyn to six hits to win 12-0.

Washingtons Senators avenged Thursday's defeat and maintained their 6½ game lead in the American League by walloping the hapless Chicago White Sox 11-2 to give Al Croder his 22nd mound victory of the year. The New York Yankees kept pace by besting St. Louis Browns 5-3 when Russ Van Atta, recently recovered from an attack of 'flu' pitched four-hit ball.

Jimmie Foxx's 42nd home run of the season and 'Sugar' Cain's six-hit flinging aided Philadelphia Athletics to a 9-2 victory over Cleveland. Detroit Tigers took two decisions from Boston Red Sox, each by 4-3.

EMPIRE STRONG IN U.S. TENNIS

Two Britishers Meet Americans In Singles Semi-Finals.

FEAR INVASION.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—Big Frank Shields and Bigger Lester Stoefen kept this country's colors aloft in the men's national tennis championship yesterday, and to-day engage the two top-ranking players of the world in an effort to prevent the first all-foreign final the tournament has seen since 1926.

Shields, who gained the round of four by humbling Gregory Mangin of New Jersey, 6l4, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3, will meet Jack Crawford, Australian, French and Wimbledon champion, who advanced by polishing off Clifford Sutter of New Orleans, 6-3, 6-3, 6-4.

Stoefen, who conquered Little Bryan Grant of Atlanta, 8-6, 6-4, 3-6, 7-5, will be pitted against Fred Perry, Britain's No. 1 player and man of the hour since, almost, single-handed, he won the Davis Cup. Perry advanced yesterday with a 6-4, 6-4, 6-0 triumph over Adrian Quist, cherubic Australian youngster.

CLERKS TAKE OUTLAWS GAME WITH 14-7 TALLY

CAMPBELLFORD Sept. 9 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent). — The last of the Campbellford Town Softball League games was played last evening on the local High School grounds, when the Outlaws dropped to the Clerks by a 14-7 count. Only one more softball game is scheduled for this season now, and that will be the clash between the Clerks, league leaders of town, and Petherick's, winners of the title in the Seymour League. The date for this game has not yet been arranged.

The game last evening went the full seven innings and, despite the heavy count, was a good exhibition. Taking two blank innings the Clerks broke away in the third, registering eight runs. The Outlaws followed close, however, when they came back with a four count, but they were unable to gain the advantage the Clerks had gained. Two homers featured the play. Campney and Bush for the Clerks, both encircling the bases. The teams:

Umpires—Plate, J. Scanlan; bases, L. Bush.

Score by innings:

Turns Down Connie Mack's Offer

Here is Adam Lloyd, Jr., and his mother. Adam is going to be a school teacher and not a major league ball pitcher, because he refused an offer made him by Connie Mack. His mother does'nt want him to be a ball player.

MOTHER SAYS "NO" AND YOUTH LOSES CHANCE TO PITCH FOR A'S

GOING TO BE TEACHER.

MILLVILLE, N.J. Sept. 9.—Because his mother rebelled at the thought of having a big league pitcher in the family, Adam Lloyd, Jr., is to become a manual training teacher when he grows up.

The youngster who is 18 years old, weighs 200 pounds and stands almost six feet tall, has reached that decision because his mother, Mrs. Celia Lloyd, forbids him to join the Philadelphia Athletics.

Just before the Mackmen left on their last swing around the western circuit of the American League, Connie Mack, manager of the A's told him to report in September to spend the remainder of the season with the big league club. At the end of that time a contract would likely be forthcoming, Adam was told, and he would go south with the Mackmen next spring.

* * *

Adams mother thought the matter over. She and her husband operate a small grocery store on Vine street, Millville. Neither were ever blessed with good fortune. A good big league job means good big money.

Mrs. Lloyd talked it over with her husband. Having Adam home with them would be an asset. Away, he was lost entirely. He still had two more years of high school to finish and perhaps some normal school education was required before he could qualify as a teacher of manual training.

"Adam you're not going to join the Philadelphia team," was the final decision of Mrs. Lloyd. "You're going to stay right here in Millvile and finsh your schooling. Your father and I have worked hard to get you an education."

* * *

"This baseball idea," concluded Mrs. Lloyd, "is a lot of foolishness for a boy as young as you. Besides, you're bashful, not used to being away from home for long and the big city might teach you bad habits. No, sir, you're not going into baseball now."

And that settled Adam and the Athletics.

Evidently wishing to settle the controversy that ensued in the newspapers, Manager Mack declared later that he had not intended to sign the youngster, but merely give him some valuable perience at the hands of Pitchers George Walberg and Bob Grove.

But Floyd (Chalky) Clunn, of Millville, one-time left-handed pitcher with the New York Highlanders, tells a different story.

"Connie Mack was impressed with the youngster's fast ball," says Clunn. "Adam, who is a left-hander, looks like Grove. He was thrilled with his Athletic possibilities."

Bowling Gossip

MARMORA, Sept. 9 (Examiner Correspondence).—The weekly bowling jitney held on the Deloro greens on Thursday evening resulted as follows:

DAVE LEETHER NEW PRESIDENT

Leads City Carpet Ball League Which Prepares For Active Season.

RULES OUTLINED.

Dave Leether was elected president of the City Carpet Ball League at the annual meeting held in the parish house of All Saints' Church. About fifty members were present at the successful gathering to start another season's activity in this sport. Considerable business was done besides the election of officers to carry on in 1933-34.

Retiring President C. Wiggins thanked all for their support during the past six years in which he held the chair. W. Styles, president of St. George's Men's Club took the chair during the elections. C. Wiggins, D. Leether, F. J. Parsons and J. Price were nominated for the office of president, Mr. Leether being elected. F. J. Parsons, J. Price, E. Cooney and W. G. Howden were nominated for vice-president, Mr. Parsons being elected. C. Groombridge was unanimously returned as secretary-treasurer for the sixth term. G. Soulby and W. G. Shiner were named auditors.

On taking the chair, President Leether asked that he be accorded the same co-operation as the past president received, and felt confident the league was about to start its most successful season. Several items of general interest were discussed. Registration forms are drawn up and will be signed by the presiding officers or secretary of the organization entering team. Teams must play four men where possible. If necessary any registered member of the league may be drawn from the gallery to complete a team which is short-handed. This is left to the referee and skips.

Another point of interest was the fact that a club cannot have on their team or teams men who are not necessarily members of that club but who are picked as their representatives. It was decided to hold the next meeting in the S.O.E. Hall on Wednesday, September 20th, at eight o'clock when all registrations must be in and it is urged that any club or organization considering entering teams will cooperate with the league and have representatives at this meeting. Applications can be obtained by phoning Mr. Groombridge at 2535J or writing 296 Rogers street.

The Games Committee will be picked at the next meeting. Following is the list of officer for this coming year: Immediate Past President, C. W. Wiggins; president, D. Leether; vice-president, F. J. Parsons; secretary-treasurer, G. E. Groombridge; auditors, G. Soulby and W. G. Shiner. Following some further discussion on plans for the new season, the gathering adjourned.

Inside Sportin' Dope—By A. Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

Well, Mac, they ain't been a great deal doing locally since my last, except that our bantam team passed outa the picture when they got bumped off at Toronto. Mister Deannard's kids run into a coupla bantam pitchers that musta worked their hidden ball on them cause the Peterborough lads wore themselfs out swinging and missing. In the 2nd game of the serious 23 of our kids was retired by the ozone route, which ain't the kinda hitting that wins many ball games, and in view of the fact that our senior ball team was in the cream puff class as a batting crew, it ain't the kinda hitting that we like to see the kids indulging in. However, you can't expect a championship crop every year, and some of them youngsters that was out there this season will be heard from plenty later on.

Our juveniles, the Terriers, done better, Mac. They give the T.A.B.A winners a tough battle in Toronto last Sat. and a nice licking here Mon., and they should grab off the 3rd game and the serious, judging by the way they outhit the opposition. Mister Lefty Lesurf, a promising young portsider, turned in 2 artistic games against the Toronto youngsters, and his brand of puzzlers look plenty good enough to win out, specially as he has the assistance of a fast fielding and hard hitting bunch of kids.

The show in the big leagues, Mac, looks to be over, and you can start in figgering out whether it will be the Giants or Washington for the world's title. The 2 outfits is so far out in front now that only a train wreck could keep them outa the big money. In the National race the Braves cracked just when they looked like the big threat, and although the Pirates has been making motions, they don't seem to have a chance to overhaul the flying Terrymen. As for the American loop war, it's over now; the Yanks, called by most of the experts to repeat this season, is outa the picture, and right now it looks like a question of how many games Joe Cronin's men will finish in front. As for the world's serious, it should be a wow, and somehow I like the Giants. Usually I pull for the American League titleholders, and I ain't got nothing against Washington, but the way Bill Terry's men has been playing makes me think they'll be dangerous customers in my opinion before the 1st game, but right now I like them Giants a lot.

Well, old-timer, the big sport next week will be watching the hay burners travel at Rolly Denne's fall fair. Mister Stan. Lowe has hooked up a rare lotta harness horses, and they oughta put on quite a exhibition of speeding in the ring.

Well, I'll be seeing ya there.

Sportfully yours,
A. WISE CRACKER.

"Gossip and Such"

ON SEPTEMBER 12, which is a Tuesday according to the insurance calendar on the office wall, a black-eyed, white-toothed kid will get up from a little green stool, shuffle his feet and then advance, left hand cocked and right one ready, to the centre of a square of heavy canvas set up in the middle of a New York ball park known as the Polo Grounds.

The young man will be Barney Ross of Chicago.

And Barney will be making good on a promise—a promise which every newly crowned champion has made but few, almost none until Barney came along, has fulfilled.

Barney said—as they all do: "I'll be a fighting champ."

He is. Or he wouldn't be in that ring on the night of September 12, going out to meet Tony Canzoneri, from whom he took the world's lightweight title and almost beyond question the toughest foe he could possibly meet.

* * *

MAYBE WE'RE giving Barney Ross too much credit. Maybe the reason Barney is meeting Canzoneri is because this bout will bring him more money than any other he could possibly make would bring.

However, he is risking his newly-won championship, an asset that by judicious selection of opponents and careful scheduling of non-title scraps might, in the ensuing months, bring him more than he'll earn against Canzoneri.

For—if Tony bops Barney a good one—young Ross will become an "ex" and the price of champions, these lean pugilistic days, is low enough. "Exes" are almost a dime a dozen unless they become champs again—which few do.

And don't forget—the way the fight shapes up now, Tony has at least a 50-50 chance of bop Barney that good one.

* * *

The Chicago scrap in which Tony lost the decision and the title was so close that even the boys who thought Barney got a hometown decision had to admit it was as near anyone's battle as you may ever see.

If it was a hometown verdict the Canzoneri folk have no kick Barney has given Tony a chance and in New York, which is Canzoneri's home town. So what?

So this—perhaps Ross believes in precedent. If he does he knows no other lightweight champion has ever won the title back after losing it. And a lot of great fighters have held that title, a number of them losing it when they were still plenty good.

Tony thinks he is ticketed to be the first ex-king of the light ones to turn the trick. Maybe. If he is he'll need to dodge a sharpshooter and break through one of the best defenses the lightweight ranks have developed in years.

HAROLD KITCHEN LEADS ALBIONS

PLAN BALL TOURNEY.

HAVELOCK, Sept. 9 (Examiner Correspondence).—Havelock Albion Club annual meeting was held in the club rooms on Wednesday evening, Sept. 6, with a goodly attendance of the membership. The election of officers resulted in the following being elected: President, Mr. Harold Ketchen; vice-president, Mr. George Kennedy; sec.-treasurer, Keith Chiles.

After some discussion, it was decided to hold a ball tournament and street dance on Wednesday afternoon and evening, Sept. 20, and a general committee composed of Messrs' Paul and Frank Voyer, Douglas McColl, Clarence Spencer, Jack Davidson and George Kennedy was appointed to look after the arrangements for the same.

The club has had a most successful season, the Juniors bringing home the Norwood District Softball Cup last Fall, the hockey team succeeding in getting in the finals for the Central County League, losing out by a narrow margin to Madoc; and the baseball team bringing home the Trent Valley League championship this summer.

Votes of thanks were tendered by the members to Mr. Yuill, the efficient manager of the baseball team.

Engineers Falter Before Machinists

The heavy-hitting Machinists batted their way to a neat win over the Engineers in the first game of the C.G.E. Inter-department Softball play-offs last night at King Edward Park, when they took the big end of an 11 to 7 decision.

Ernie Reynolds, pitching star for the winners, was in top form and with the team clicking behind him, had little difficulty in holding the edge At the end of the sixth the count stood 11 to 3, but big Jim Smith, who learned his softball on the Pacific coast, gave the Engineers a burst of encouragement by pasting a homer with two on. Bill Brown, his teammate, added another circuit clout in the seventh, but the scoring ended there and the two teams will tangle again on Tuesday night at 5.30. The teams:

LEAFS REGISTER VICTORY TO GO AHEAD IN RACE

Hurling Of Frazier And Hits By Brubaker And Boone Secures The Win.

BISONS LOSE.

With Only Two More Games To Play Leafs Have Edge.

(By Herbert Barker, A.P. Sports Writer.)

Given valuable assistance by Rochester Red Wings, Dan Howley's Toronto Maple Leafs had regained the lead in the hot three-cornered struggle for the fourth International League play-off position to-day.

The Laefs themselves took care of one of their chief rivals, Montreal, yesterday, by downing them 3-1, while Rochester beat the other, Buffalo, 15-5, in a night game. The standing of the three clubs to-day, with only two more days to go, was:

Club:	Won.	Lost.	%
Toronto	81	83	.494
Buffalo	81	85	.4879
Montreal	79	83	.4877

Toronto's triumph could be credited chiefly to young Keith Frazier, who limted the Royals to six hits, two of which were bunched with a pass for Montreal's one run.

Brubaker's homer off Curly Ogden tied the score in the second, and Ike Boone's triple after Nolen Richardson had beaten out an infield hit, provided the winning run in the fifth.

Rochester concentrated its attack in two big frames to wallop Buffalo and all but ruin the Bisons' chances of landing in the playoffs. After counting five runs in the second, the Red Wings scored nine in the sixth. In that frame ten Red Wings in a row reached base before anyone was retired and in all 13 men batted. Pepper and Mize each contributed three hits to Rochester's attack.

Jersey City beat Albany 5-2 in the only other game of the day. Ed Pipgras outpitching Ned Porter by a wide margin. Pipgras allowed only eight hits while Jersey City collected 13 and had assistance from five Albany errors of which Third Baseman King contributed three.

Cogs-Picton Here Monday For Game

Picton is here Monday at Stevenson Park at 3.15, standard time, to play Cogs in the second game of their second round O.B.A.A. intermediate series. The first one is being played today in Picton. This game Monday was postponed from last week due to rain but should draw a good crowd of fans since it is being staged in the seniors' stamping grounds here and since there is no other sporting attraction in town that day.

Manager Dorsey Davis has his team at full strength and will send them in to battle here for all they're worth Monday, no matter how today's fixture winds up. He has Left Billingsley, Casey Masterson and Percy Vannest all ready to do the twirling and is confident his squad can take the cocky Picton intermediates into camp here. They have the idea that since trouncing Napanee, Belleville and other fair outfits, that Cogs will be just another scalp in their belt, but the local Clubmen who surprised everyone by walloping O.G.E. to cop the local title, and then beat Havelock, will prove no easy mark when they take the field Monday afternoon in this important contest.

OTTAWA, September 9. — Ottawa's Rough Riders, finding the training grind for the Big Four season tougher than ever, are calling their new coach "Simon Legree" Masters. The gaces the former University of Pennsylvania forward passing star calls conditioning seem more like slavery to team aspirants, but they like it, and are rounding into shape more rapidly than any Ottawa team in years.

Masters, called "Wally" when it isn't "Simon," starts his five; new United States players, remnants of the old guard and the youngsters coming up from the intermediate Rangers on their evening workout with a run up and down the field until they have had enough. Then he puts them through a physical training session.

With their tongues hanging out and every muscle aching, Coach Legree harnesses them in a shoulder mill and they push it up and down the field while he cracks the whip. What is left of the peppy young footballers of a few minutes before then, get down to the real hard work of plunging, tackling, and blocking.

SMART VICTORY OVER COBOURG IN HARD BATTLE

First Defeat Of Strong Lakeshore Squad Throughout Season.

THREE-GOAL MARGIN

Petes Take Early Lead But Count Knotted Three Times.

The Peterborough Junior lacrosse team known as Dinty's Inn handed their followers a big surprise in Norwood last night by beating Cobourg 10 to 7 in the first game of the Inter-County League play-offs. It was the first defeat of the year for the strong Lakeshore team, and gives the Inn boys a three-goal margin to take to Cobourg in the return game Monday night. The young Petes outplayed their rivals throughout.

It was a fast, exciting tussle, run off before a good crowd. Both outfits opened up from the start and played a speedy, passing game with close checking and good goalie work shown. The play was clean as a whole. The winners deserve credit as they are younger and lack the ruggedness and experience of the classy Cobourg crew. Manager Ken Sine, following the surprising victory, was predicting a win again in Cobourg Monday.

The Petes opened fast to score twice before Cobourg found the nets, and were never headed though the count was tied up three times. The locals' high scorer was Cadd with three well-earned ones, as the other goalie outguessed many of them time and again when they were right at the goal-mouth. McGregor was robbed repeatedly by great network by Platt. The whole Peterborough squad, from the net-guardian out, played sparkling lacrosse, clicking well together with no outstanding stars. The Cobourg forwards and goalie went best for them, though their whole team worked hard in a fine battle where the young Petes were just a little better. The teams:

Cobourg.—Goal, Platt; defence, Spooner and Morphet; rover, Cooper; wings Johnston and Henderson; centre, Hie; subs, Ovens, Lucas, Young, Cooper Comrie and Peck.

Dinty's Inn—Goal, Lefevre; defence, Magee and Sloan; rover, Cadd; wings, Routley and Gardner; centre, McGregor; subs, Hatton, Creighton, Collins, Todd and Vitarelli.

Goal scorers—Cadd, 3; McGregor, 2; Routley 2; Creighton, Collins, Todd, Johnston, Cooper, Henderson, Hie, Ovens and Lucas.

Referees — Creighton and Reynolds; official scorer—H. Tudhope; goal umpires—G. Puffer and Smith; timers—G. Creighton, A. Hall and K. Sine.

All Dinty Inn players are requested to be at the Market Rest Room Monday evening at 6.45 sharp to go to Cobourg for the return game.

SPORTS DAY BY DAY

Baseball—Softball—Lacrosse
Soccer—Wrestling, and Others

(By C. J. P.)

In view of the three big days of harness horse racing at the Ex. next week—and with a purse of $500 and three races being run, interest and competition should be plenty keen this time—it's sort of interesting to delve a bit in the history of this sport. According to Frank Menke's All-Sports record book, the first mention of trotting by horses anywhere was in an English paper which merely stated that "in 1791 there was a brown mare, 18 years of age, which trotted 16 miles on the Essex Road in 58 minutes." Trotting thoroughbreds from England later were brought to the States and crossed with the rugged Canadian horses, American trotters and pacers thereby inheriting speed from their Arabian ancestry and durability from the Canuck horses.

* * * * * *

It's no so very long ago that the standard trotting distance was cut to one mile, from the usual four, and the heat system begun. Whereas in running races, the hoss tears off one race and calls it a day, the harness horses are called to run anywhere from two to seven times in one afternoon, depending upon whether the race is best two out of three heats, three out of five, or occasionally four out of seven.

* * * * * *

'Way back when our grandpops were calling on their Big Moments in a horse-and-buggy, this type of racing was mighty popular all over the continent, and it retained its spot in the public eye for quite a while, too. But gradually, in the bigger centres, owners and public switched over to the running races—that is where the jockey perches up on the bronc's neck and boots her around. And today, the horse that tears around with the rubber-tired gig on his heels, must take second place to his running mate in the heart of the fickle public. That is, in the larger centres.

* * * * * *

But not so in the smaller cities and towns. Nossir, that's where they still gather to watch the bikes being towed around the track at a rapid clip, and to heck with the pari-mutuel races and the big bets. Not that no dough is wagered on the harness hosses, but nothing compared to the big running race tracks. Fall fairs and summer meets in the smaller centres, with ocassionally a big one like that at the Toronto Exhibition, keeps this sport going. And who knows that changing times may see this type of racing swept back into public favor again. Just try to grasp this: Away back in the 60's, Goldsmith Maid began racing at the age of eight and ran until she was twenty, to win $364,200—with harness race purses very small in those days!

* * * * * *

The owners and drivers of these horses are gallant survivors of times that have not treated them any too well. They put much more into the game than they can hope to get out—although the love of horses and horse races must be quite a recompense, too. None of them make any real dough, and most of them lose their shirts unless they have plenty of coin to start with. There is plenty of work and worry, also, and small recognition from the present-day public. But they don't kick. They just go on training the trotters and pacers and sending them around the circuit of meets and fairs in the summer and fall.

* * * * * *

One of the things that has hurt this game a lot is the trouble getting a field of horses away at the start of a heat. The starter must score them time and again, trying to give all a fair break. If they could only be sent off from a standing start, but that's out of the question, and they must jog up the track, wheel about and come racing down past the starter, each driver jockeying for position and trying to get a break on the others. After bringing them back four or five times, not only the spectators but the starter himself is highly disgusted. The race itself is worth watching, but there's no fun in getting them going.

* * * * * *

We've listened to 'em often enough, and can still hear Starter Art Blade bellowing through his megaphone: "Go right up to the end of the stand before you turn! Easy now, easy....Hey! take back on the far side . . . take back, I say . . . No, that won't do!" And again the bell goes. Or he'll finally threaten: "Now, No. 6, I'm not going to wait on you any more, you've spoiled three good starts. I've given you every chance. Better come down right this time." And sometimes it's: "Listen, Mr. Blank, if you come down ahead of the pole-horse just once more, it'll cost you ten bucks, and I mean it." He knows the fellows can't afford it and is as lenient as he can be, but any starter expects a little co-operation from the drivers. And the crowd gets pretty impatient at false starts.

* * * * * *

But when a good field does get away! Then, it's a pretty sight. If the day is clear, the track fast and some eight or ten good pacers get away to a perfect start, that's when the crowd sees a real race. And that's the time when we can fully appreciate why our elders used to go ga-ga over the harness horses. They go thundering past on the first half-mile, manes and tails streaming out with the wind, the horses panting along with foam-flecked sides, the driver leaning far over with lines held high, taking quick glances around to see how the others are forming up—and then they tear around the back-stretch and coming fighting it out on the rail down under the wire! Yes, it's a man's sport and will always have a good following.

IT WAS a smart move on the part of the Boston ownership when McKechnie as given a five-year contract. It let Bill know that win or lose he would be around the Hub for quite a spell. And it let the player know it, too. Which is more important.

BOXING SCIENCE IS ONLY CHANCE OF CHALLENGER

Benny Leonard Advises Canzoneri To Forget Knock-out Punch.

ROSS IS CLEVER.

NEW YORK Sept. 9 (A.P.)—To it from Benny Leonard, who ought to know, Tony Canzoneri had best place his reliance on boxing skill rather than hitting power if he wants to regain his lightweight championship from Barney Ross in the Polo Grounds Tuesday night. The fight is expected to gross more than $100,000.

Himself one of the greatest lightweight title-holders in pugilistic history, Leonard thinks Tony will make a serious mistake if he fights Ross with the idea of putting the Chicagoan away.

"Tony is as clever a boxer as he wants to be," Benny said, after watching the challenger work out at Pompton Lakes, N.J. yesterday, "and he ought to stick to it.

"Of late he has been trying to knock out his opponents. He should not do that with Ross for he is liable to find himself outboxed by the fast clever champion."

In that opinion Leonard has plenty of company. Some competent critics believe the worst thing that ever happened to Canzoneri were the knock-out victories he chalked up over Al Singer and Jack (Kid) Berg late in 1930 and early in 1931.

BOWLING NOTES

(By Herb Martin)

About one of the best exhibitions of bowling that has been seen for a long time was turned in last night between Benny Chesler and Wilf. Wood playing against George Gimblett and his partner, G. Fallan.

* * *

It was in the semi-finals of the Central Ontario play-offs and each team was working hard to see which would meet the Coleman brothers in the finals at 7 on Monday night. The game started off with the Chief and his helper taking the first four ends, but by some clever bowling the other pair finally caught them and with three ends to go were seven up and looked to have the game in the bag, but on the 12th end Gimblett made a perfect pick-up to count two and three on the 13th end. Fallan drew the shot that made his team only four down going home.

* * *

Now here comes the funny part: Fallan made his four bowls count against Chesler's four shot bowls and there the game was tied; about this time Benny was running around in a circle and was calling upon the N.R.A. to lead all the help it could to try and save the situation, but the best Wilf Wood could do was just enough

GOLF FACTS NOT THEORIES

By ALEX J. MORRISON

Number 51

ALEX MORRISON says:

Most of the difficulty you have in properly aiming the clubface for a shot is due to the way your hands are placed on the club.

You probably pick up the club and take your grip while the club is in the air.

This may enable you to arrange your hands in the right relation to each other, but it makes it almost impossible for you to have them in the right relation to the clubface.

You'll do a great deal toward straightening out your shots by having the clubhead resting on the ground when you take your grip.

The month of September is generally the beginning of a new stamp season, in which the collector starts out after a rather quiet summer, with the renewed conviction that he or she is going to attempt to gather together a real stamp collection. New enthusiasm takes a grip on the collector, and the old album is brought out, dusted off, and you are away to a new and happy start.

What better time than this to inaugurate a great exchange club, extending across the entire Dominion of Canada from Halifax to Vancouver, in addition to which he will doubtless secure many collectors from other countries who are anxious to exchange their duplicate stamps with Canadian collectors?

On July 24, the 75 cent value of the recent pictorial airmail issue was surcharged to a value of $4.50 (8,000 copies, only), for use in franking letters to be carried to Europe by the Italian Air Armada which was due to touch at Newfoundland on July 26. All stamps unsold after the departure of the Italian Squadron were to be destroyed.

Iceland

1 Krona—5,900. 5 Kroner—4,600. 10 Kroner—4,000.

There were only 298 covers carried from Iceland to America. I venture to say these will soon demand a very good price. Unused stamps will not be nearly so good, of course.

Great Britain

In 1934 the stamps of Great Britain are to be printed by the new photogravure process. The designs will remain the same, although some of them may be improved in their general appearance. Colors are to remain at at present, but it is expected that entirely new shades will be found, especially among the lower values, which now appear "too washed out."

HASTINGS, Sept. 9 (Examiner Correspondence).—Hearing considerable about St. Denis Golf Links, an Examiner correspondent motored dent, Mrs. A. Brown of Peterborough, and also the Presbyterian Associate Helpers' secretary, Mrs. Stephens of Peterborough, both of whom spoke to the gathering.

Mrs. Brown, in her address, told short stories of several Bible women, including Rebekah, Hannah and Deborah, who were faithful and courageous women and ideal models for women of the present day. Mrs. Stephens explained the Associate Helpers' work as a three-fold way of serving God, by praying, studying and giving. She closed by repeating John Wesley's golden rule.

The meeting was favored with a solo, "The Beautiful Garden of Prayer," by Mrs. M. Baker of Hastings, and a duet, "Oh, How He Loves," by Mesdames Mortlock and Wood of Westwood was also much appreciated. Mrs. R. C. Brackenridge gave a reading, "The Minister's Wife, Priscilla"; Mrs. Don Cameron told of the Sunday School work in Korea, and a reading on "The Plant—Gratitude" by Mrs. J. Clysdale was very interesting.

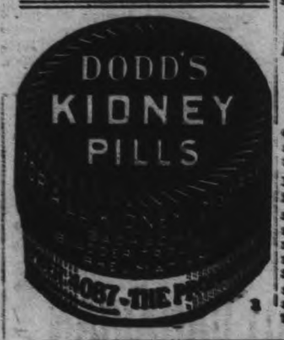
...ssion are under way. An element of duplicity, fraud, or secrecy tends to retard matters, but with sagacity and wariness all may be turned in profitable direction.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of many conflicting situations and conditions. Although there may be definite breaking away of old obstacles and stagnations, yet there are also menacing signs of fraud.

A child born on this day may be persevering, hard working and studious but prone to exaggeration, schemes and subtlety.



Place Restriction On Exports Of Tea

In April a restriction was placed on tea exports from Ceylon, India, and Java, in order to raise prices to growers, who, for almost four years, had been suffering devastating losses. Higher prices have resulted, not only at the gardens, but also here on our own markets, and many package teas already cost more than they did six months ago. Some of the finer quality brands are as yet unchanged, however, and are, consequently, even better value than at last April.

Record Entry Is Assured at "Ex" New Exhibitors

Cattle And Horse Barns Will Be More Than Filled — Some Notable Herds Of Livestock Have Arrived From The Canadian National Exhibition.

SECRETARY HALL EXPECTS INCREASED ENTRIES IN ALL DEPARTMENTS OF FAIR.

In its background of competitive display of farm products, notably livestock, Peterboro's Industrial Exhibition presented every evidence this morning of setting up a new record of quality and quantity in this the first year of its class A official rating.

More new exhibitors have registered for the week than in any other year within the memory of the present directorate, and one of the certainties in this essential department was expressed by Vivian Milburn, managing director, in the statement that accommodation of the cattle and horse barns was going to be greatly overtaxed.

"We are going to have an overflow of stock," Mr. Milburn said. "There is apparently no doubt about that, if we get all the entries that are on file. We can simply do our best for the exhibitors and hope they will be satisfied."

Among the new exhibitors is Mrs. A. B. Colville of St. Henri de Maschouche, Que., with a splendid herd of Holsteins. Mrs. Colville sent an entry last year, but did not exhibit.

Some Fine Herds

Hereford cattle are going to be prominent in the beef class. Senator O'Brien of Renfrew, Lorne Bagshaw of Uxbridge, R. E. Birdsall and Son, Allan E. Linton of Cobourg, the Acton herd from Sunderland, all arrived over the week-end and will make for keen competition in this class.

Alex Hume and Son of Menie unloaded a car of Ayrshires Saturday afternoon. J. Gordon Mann and Son of Smith and the Nelson herd from Campbellford are also well represented in the Ayrshire division.

Ontario county cattle breeders are exceptionally well represented. In fact a glance over the entry list leaves the impression that the Uxbridge district regard the Peterborough Exhibition almost as their own. Bertwin Blackburn, Lorne Bagshaw, Wesley Page and Son, Fred Ormiston and Sons of Brooklin, and many others are all here this year.

GIRL HALES M.P. TO POLICE COURT

£2 FINE LEVIED.

EPSOM, England, September 11 (C.P.). — Sir Leo Chiozza Money, distinguished economist, author, and former member of Parliament, was convicted in Police Court to-day on charges of annoying a young woman passenger in a Southern Railway car compartment last month.

He was sentenced to pay a fine of £2 10s. He gave notice he would appeal.

The prosecution asserted that Sir Leo followed the girl Miss Ivy Ruxton, into the compartment, insisted on making conversation with her, and finally seized her in his arms and repeatedly kissed her. Miss Ruxton was forced to leave the train at the next station, according to the prosecution, in order to get away from him.

The court was informed that, among other things, Sir Leo said to the girl: "I'm old enough to be your papa." (He is 63).

It was testified that Miss Ruxton said: "If you are a gentleman, you will leave me alone."

In a statement made to the authorities when he was questioned after the incident, Sir Leo was quoted as saying that there was nothing in the girl's charges, that they had an amicable conversation in the train, and that she offered no objection to his kissing her fingers in a way complimentary to the smallness of her hands, which he admired.

"I did not take her in my arms or kiss her at all, other than I have described," the statement continued.

J. E. SULLIVAN NEW PRESIDENT OF CREDIT MEN

MEETING IN WINNIPEG

Big Achievement is Establishment of Canadian Credit Institute.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 11.—J. E. Sullivan of Peterborough, Credit Manager of the Quaker Oats Company, was elected national president of the Canadian Credit Men's Trust Association at the eighteenth annual meeting of the head office Board of Directors here to-day. The convention will come to a close to-morrow night.

W. G. Graham of Marshall Wells Limited, Edmonton, Alta., was chosen vice-president for the coming year and Henry Detchon continues as general manager of the Association.

Premier J. T. M. Anderson of Saskatchewan is one of the speakers at to-night's dinner. A general convention of the Association has not been held since 1931 when the sessions were held in Toronto. Since then the annual meetings have been confined to the directors and managers.

In acknowledging the honor of his election to the presidency, Mr. Sullivan, who attended the convention as the representative of the Ontario division of the Association, referred to the valuable service which the Association had again rendered during the year to its membership of thirteen hundred Canadian manufacturers and wholesalers.

The Canadian Credit Men's Association was organized in 1910, Mr. Sullivan recalled. With

Snowden Backs Protests On Party Broadcasting

LONDON, September 11 (C.P. Cable). — Viscount Snowden of Ickernshaw, former Chancellor of the Exchequer, warmly supports the joint protest of Austen Chamberlain, Lloyd-George, and Winston Churchill against the policy of the British Broadcasting Corporation limiting political broadcasts to the party nominees.

"It crushes out all independent political views," declared the former Labor leader, "and will give nothing but the opinion of the official parties who will criticise each other and try to make out a case for themselves."

Replying to the protest of the three senior Privy Councillors in the House of Commons, J. H. Whitley, chairman of the Broadcasting Corporation, said space limitations prevented the inclusion in the autumn program of any but speakers selected from the Government and the official Opposition.

CLOUDBURSTS TAKE 12 LIVES TRIO MISSING

South Dakota Indian Reservation Hardest Hit—2 Families Drown.

2 DIE IN DENVER.

FORT THOMPSON, S. D., Sept. 11.—(C.P.) — A cloudburst that swelled tiny creeks into raging streams, took eight lives and caused heavy damage on the Crow Creek Indian Reservation.

Members of two Indian families, trapped by the onrushing waters as they slept yesterday, were drowned. Fifteen other persons were marooned in precarious places of safety for some time before they were rescued.

A downpour of rain that measured 10 inches sent a 12-foot wall of water raging down Soldier's Creek. It crushed the Fred Loudner home, and Loudner, aged 41, his wife, 37, their four children, ranging in age from 3 to 17 years, and Mr. and Mrs. Sol LaPlante, of Rosebud, were swept away in the wreckage. The LaPlantes were guests of the Loudners.

DENVER, Sept. 11 (CP)—Receding flood waters in six streams of the Denver area left a toll of two dead to-day, possibly three missing and property damage which authorities said will reach close to $1,000,000.

Mrs. Elizabeth James, 86, and her 9-year-old grandson, Beny James, were drowned.

Two boys, unidentified, were reported to have been in a car which skidded from a highway into the Platte River. Authorities believed the report erroneous. A farmer was reported drowned south of Littleton, but this also was unsubstantiated.

Cloudburst filled Clear, Dry, Sand, Cherry and Bear creeks to overflowing. All empty into the Platte River and their combined output sent the larger stream on a rampage.

A huge gully was washed in the main street of Englewood and three buildings collapsed; 75 basements were flooded in Denver and extensive damage was done to crops north of here.

WINDHAM FIRE UNDER CONTROL

Over 200 Men Battle 24 Hours to Save Two Houses.

BLAZE CLINGS TO TURF.

WINDHAM, Ont., Sept. 11. (CP) Fire that burned completely around two homes, causing hurried evacuation of residents, and kept more than 200 men at work for 24 hours, was holding to the hard turf to-day near here, ready to spring up and endanger other houses as soon as a strong enough wind blows up.

Four hundred acres of scrub and light bushland was burned over by the blaze that started Saturday and reached its most serious stage last night. A crew of 100 fire-fighters were rushed to the town by special train to battle the outbreak. They left the scene this morning.

Spading of ground in two wide circles saved the homes of L. H. Howitt and F. Burgess. As the flames crept closer to the buildings last night, men with spades dug a six-foot-wide protection around them. At the same time furniture was carried from the homes to safe points. Later it was replaced.

As long as the fire retains its hold on the turf, the danger will remain, it was believed to-day. Other houses are within a quarter-mile of where the flames kept burning over short grass.

The Peterborough Exhibition A Community Enterprise

"The Peterborough Industrial Exhibition is first and last a community affair," Mayor Denne, president of the Board of Directors, stated this morning in a final appeal to the public for their generous support.

"The Exhibition belongs to the people of the city and district not to the directors. They are simply the executive, but for years they have also assumed the financial liability connected with the Expense of the annual Exhibition and the improvements which have been made to the plant. In the past the co-operation of the people of the city and district has been the main encouragement which has prompted the Board in all its efforts toward expansion, and with their assistance Peterborough is now in the class A list of exhibitions.

The Exhibition is not run for profit, but as a means of improving every branch of agriculture in this part of Ontario. So, we are making another appeal to the public to give us their best co-operation again especially in this year when a special effort should be made by everyone to help in making the Exhibition a solid success. The directors have done their part in arranging the plans since last September. It is the public's turn this week, and I believe they will agree that the show is the best we have ever held."

NUN SUFFERS STROKE.

QUEBEC.—Rev. Sister Catharine O'Donnell of Windsor is in Hotel Dieu Hospital here in a critical condition. The two sisters were going to Rome as the guests of Bishop John Kidd of London.

Secret Out

NEW YORK, Sept. 11 (C.P.). —The whale has two enormous plugs in his nose—much like bathtub stoppers—and that's why he's a submarine.

This discovery was announced yesterday by scientists at American Museum of Natural History. They said the plugs, when in place, close the apertures leading from the nose to the throat.

When the whale is deep down in the ocean, the plugs prevent the escape of air from the lungs.

POLISH BALLOON PILOTS ARE SAFE IN QUEBEC TOWN

Hike Week, Covering 90 Miles Through Bush Before Finding Railroad.

LIVED ON 12 ORANGES.

Two Polish balloonists walked safely into civilization in Quebec Saturday night and two Americans still are missing this morning, believed to be somewhere in the Northern Ontario forests only unreported entrants in the James Gordon Bennett balloon race which began September 2 in Chicago.

Ward Van Orman, greatest of all living aeronauts, and his aide, Frank A. Trotter, are believed to have been wrecked somewhere north of Capreol, Ont. Their craft, the Goodyear XI, was last seen in the air a week ago to-day.

Captain Franciszek Hynek and Lieutentant Zbigniski Burzynski, arrived at the village of Riviere a Pierre, 60 miles northwest of Quebec City, after tramping 90 miles through forests, hills and rivers during the five days they were missing. They had landed last Monday in the wilderness and, with only the 12 oranges which they had carried from Chicago two days previously, started for civilization.

Canadian Ships Aid

Governors of the annual balloon classic said last night that the Polish aces so far hold the lead in the year's race for distance, their point of landing lying roughly 820 miles from Chicago. Commander T. G. W. Settle, piloting the United States Navy entry, came down at Brantford, Conn., 750 miles from Chicago and was considered the winner until the Poles reported.

Van Orman, if his craft is found, may be found to have travelled further still. Planes of the Royal Canadian Air Force and the Ontario Forestry Patrol which are flying in the Northern Ontario services have been ordered to watch for the missing balloon, but no organised search is planned yet. The United States Navy dirigible Ma-

Slashed Power Line Summons Repairman To Pair Sick, Chilled

Pilots, Located In Wilds 50 Miles North Of Sudbury, Tug Their Rescuer—Admit Deliberately Cutting Wire Hoping It Would Bring Aid.

CRASHED SUNDAY AFTERNOON IN TREE-TOP IN STORM—BOTH UNHURT—LIVED ON BERRIES

SUDBURY, Ont., Sept. 11.—(CP)—In a wooded, remote region 50 miles north of here, approximately 500 miles from Chicago, where they started in the International Gordon Bennett balloon race, Ward T. Van Orman, famous United States balloonist and his co-pilot, Frank Trotter, were found alive today. Their clothes were in tatters and they were wan and chilled.

About 15 miles from where the Goodyear XI crashed into a giant pine tree, damaging it beyond repair but not injuring either of the men in the basket, Van Orman and Trotter were found by Jim Barrett, Hydro repairman who went out on a power line to repair a cut deliberately made by the airmen in the hope it would summon help.

The race that started from Chicago on Saturday, Sept. 2, was won by the Polish couple, Captain Francisek Hynek and Lieut. Zniglieu Brzynski, who set down their bag 812 miles from the starting line, near Riviere A Pierre, Que.

The Poles estimated they had drifted 812 miles. The United States navy ace, Lieut. Commander T. G. W. Settle, landed on Long Island sound, just 750 miles from Chicago.

Very Little Food

Van Orman and Trotter came down more than 24 hours after the start and wandered through the rocky forest north country for more than a week before help reached them. They were able to eat berries that grow in profusion in the woods but had very little other food.

Yesterday afternoon, the Ontario Hydro Electric telephone line between Sudbury and Abitibi Canyon was out of commission, and this morning Patrolman Jim Barrett set out to find the trouble. At tower 830 he found the following note pinned to the broken telephone:

"This telephone pole was cut Sept. 10th by U.S. Goodyear balloon team of W. T. Van Orman and Frank Trotter in the hope that repair men would aid us in getting to civilization from here. We will continue south along the high voltage line. Please come after us.

"We have a gun and some food, but are both sick, evidently from ptomaine poisoning. Fire your gun

POPE RATIFIES GERMAN PACT

Final Text of Concordat Flown to Italy—Plane Has Forced Landing.

SIGNING IS SURPRISE.

VATICAN CITY, Sept. 11.—(AP) —Ratifications of a concordat between Germany and the Holy See were exchanged yesterday by Cardinal Pacelli, Papal Secretary of State and Dr. Eugene Von Klee, Counselor in the German embassy at Vatican City, it was announced today.

Following a cabinet meeting in Berlin Saturday, the final text of the pact was sent to Rome by aeroplane and arrived yesterday morning after a forced landing in Northern Italy.

After receiving it, Dr. Von Klee communicated with the Vatican and later came to the Vatican with the First Secretary Von Saurma of the German Embassy. Ratifications were subsequently exchanged. The concordat was signed a month and a half ago. Last week reports were published in Canada that a failure to ratify was likely, but Vatican prelates said concordats are infrequently ratified before several months had passed.

The Pope was reported in Vatican circles as not altogether pleased with the situation in Germany, partly because of Chancellor Hitler's attitude towards Jews who have become Christians, but they said there were no grounds for refusing to ratify the agreement.

The sudden ratifications, particularly on Sunday, came as a surprise to both the Vatican and the German Embassy.

SOMERVILLE IS ONE UNDER PAR IN QUALIFYING

Defending U. S. Amateur Champion Shoots a 70 for First 18 Holes.

TIES MUNGER FOR LEAD.

Kenwood Country Club, Cincinnati, Sept. 11. (AP)—Holing a 30-foot putt on the home green, C. Ross (Sandy) Somerville, Canadian holder of the United States amateur golf championship, shot a 70, one under par to-day, to tie Jack Munger of Dallas, Texas United States schoolboy champion, for the early lead in the first round of the 36-hole qualifying test.

Evans Holding His Own

They had a threat zooming up behind, however. Chick Evans, of Chicago, holder of the title in 1916 and 1920, seemed very much on his game carding a birdie threat on the first, and continuing to shoot par golf on the next three holes.

With sub-par on the first nine to work on, Somerville drove ahead to two under par on the 11th, dropping a long putt for a birdie.

His otherwise steady and machine-like golf was slightly interrupted, however, on the 14th hole, where his second shot caught the edge of a trap. He chipped right past the pin and his putt hung on the lip, costing him a five.

"Sandy" made the long 17th look

MANY PROBLEMS ARE DEALT WITH BY FOUNDATION

Dr. H. S. Speakman Describes Some of Industrial and Agricultural Experiments.

THE WIDOW'S GEESE.

Director of Ontario Research Work Addresses Rotarian Club.

A glimpse at the many problems in industry and agriculture that have occupied the attention of the Ontario Research Foundation since its organization a few years ago was given members of the Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon to-day by Dr. H. B. Speakman, director of the Foundation. Dr. Speakman, who was introduced by Rotarian D. G. Melton, prefaced his address by a plea for co-operation with the Research Foundation, stressing the fact that unless those with a practical knowledge of industry and agriculture used team play with the scientists associated with the Foundation it was idle to expect worthwhile results. Similarly business heads with a constant strain of executive business to deal with could not be expected to solve technical problems arising in their industry without the assistance of scientific training.

Using lantern slides and graphs Dr. Speakman explained some of the diversified problems the Research Foundation has been successful in solving. These included some widely different matters, as protecting chimneys from destruction by gas-fire boilers, the problem of fading in the manufacture of automobile cloth, a campaign against contagious abortion among Ontario cattle, and the interesting story of how the mystery surrounding the death of the widow's geese was fathomed.

Dr. Speakman declared that contagious abortion was as economically important to the farmers of the Province as was tuberculosis among cattle, and that 30 per cent. of Ontario's cattle were affected. He explained how with the co-operation of the farmers a district in Ontario was being rapidly cleaned up as regards both contagious abortion and tubercu'osis. In regard to disease among geese the Foundation had been able to trace the cause

WANTON MURDER GETS FOUR, LIFE

KIDNAPPING INVOLVED.

MT. CLEMENS, Mich., Sept. 11. —(A.P.)— Under concurrent sentences of 45 to 90 years' imprisonment for kidnapping, and life for murder, two of the four men who kidnapped, robbed and killed Joseph Nesbitt, last Thursday, were taken before dawn to-day from the county jail here to begin the journey to the Michigan branch prison at Marquette. They were Robert Buffa and Robert Frazer.

A few hours later, their companions in the crime, one of the most wanton in Michigan's criminal annals, Douglas and Louis Whitsitt, formerly of Toronto, were taken from the jail and started on their trip to the Michigan State prison at Jackson, where they will serve similar sentences.

Three deputy sheriffs accompanied each group. Frazer, who shot Nesbitt, and Buffa, considered the two most desperate criminals, were handcuffed and wore leg irons, but the Whitsitt Brothers were merely handcuffed.

The four were given life sentences by Circuit Judge Neil Reid, Saturday evening, because the slaying of Nesbitt occurred in Macomb county. Each was given a separate trial before Judge Reid, after they had been sentenced in the Wayne county recorder's court on a kidnapping charge.

The law worked speedily in the cases of the four hoodlums; they were under sentence within 48 hours after the kidnapping and slaying of Nesbitt had occurred.

Funeral services for Nesbitt, slain as he stood with upraised arms and pleaded for mercy, were held here Sunday. The body was taken to Warren, Ohio, his birthplace, for burial.

CONVICTS SHOOT WAY TO FREEDOM IN BLOODY FIGHT

Eleven Leave Pal and Two Prison Officials Dead Behind.

TAKE VISITOR'S CAR.

ANGOLA, La., September 11 (C.P.) — Scores of armed gaurds early to-day began to close in on a canebrake seven miles north-east of Angola Prison Farm where 11 desperate convicts were believed surrounded after a bloody Sunday prison break in which three men were killed and at least four others were wounded.

Twelve convicts, three of them inmates with previous escapes and many of them long termers, used smuggled pistols to take possession of Camp H, a sugar farm at the State Penitentiary, during a Sunday afternoon baseball game.

They held guards at bay and terrorized visitors at the prison farm for half an hour, raided the lockers, confiscated a dozen shotguns, rifles and pistols, and then shot their way through the main gate of the prison.

The fleeing convicts left one of their own dead, Bill Stone, 28, of Dallas, Texas, as they sped away in a visitor's automobile which was abandoned at the canebrake. It was believed another convict was wounded.

Two Guards Slain.

Two guards were killed during the fierce gun battle. J. W. Fletcher, of Slaughter, La., foreman of Camp E, was shot down as he attempted to disarm Charlie Frazier, one of the ring leaders who is facing sentences in three south-west states for murder and bank robberies. Arnold Davis a guard was killed by convict fire about the same time.

Captain John A. Singleton was felled with two bullets after he had pleaded with the convicts to disarm. J. L. Watkington, engineer at the sugar farm, was wounded in the side and Ed. Sharp, a guard, received a bullet wound in the hand.

The rebellious convicts seized an automobile belonging to Simpson Reed, of Mamou, La., a visitor, piled into it, and fled.

Fournet, after his battle with the automobile load of desperadoes, headed a company of guards in a commandeered car and pursued them to the canebrake where they took to the thickets.

FOUR VICTIMS WEEK-END TOLL

OTTAWA YOUTH DROWNS.

TORONTO, Sept. 11.—(CP)—Two men and two women met sudden deaths in Ontario over the week-end. Automobile accidents were responsible for two of the deaths while gas poisoning and a drowning caused the others.

Struck from behind by an automobile, David Swain, 36-year-old Collingwood resident, was killed almost instantly near Wasaga Beach late Saturday. The car was driven by C. McEacher, Brantford bank accountant, who was arrested on a charge of reckless driving. Swain, alone at the time, was on his way to meet his 16-year-old son, employed at a Wasaga Beach riding academy.

The second motor-car fatality occurred at Toronto Saturday when Mrs. Kathleen Martha Finch, 63, was hit by a motor truck, driven by Albert Foster, Oriole, Ont. The driver was not held by police.

Miss Elsie Green died in London hospital Saturday from gas fumes inhaled accidentally at her home on the Ridgeway. An open valve was responsible for leakage. A brother, Harty Green, resides in Toronto.

Lone drowning reported over the week-end occurred at Ottawa where Lawrence A. Gillis, 22, lost his life in a hotel swimming pool. Gillis, Canadian National Railway employee, failed to come to the surface after diving in the shallow end of the tank heart failure was believed responsible for his death.

2 WOMEN HELD FOR CAR THEFT

CAPTURED IN NORTH BAY.

NORTH BAY, Sept. 11.—A village policeman was blushing to-day because he provided two women with a chauffeur for an allegedly stolen automobile.

The police said the women, one married and one single, from Niagara Falls, N.Y., stopped a Huntsville youth on the street there, pressed an imitation pistol against him, and forced him to act as their chauffeur from Huntsville to Sundridge, 35 miles north. There they are said to have removed the young man's trousers and dismissed him. They needed a driver, it is said, because their two male escorts had been detained by the Huntsville police on a liquor charge.

When the women proceeded on to Callander, it is reported, Constable Payee of that village, unaware that they were "wanted," provided them with another chauffeur to drive them to North Bay, where they were arrested by Constable Belanger.

12 TRUANT BOYS BACK AT SCHOOL

CITIZENS AID OFFICIALS.

MIMICO, Ont., Sept. 11 (C.P.)—Shivering from the chill of summer's first cool night, 12 youths who ran away from Victoria Industrial School here, were back at the Institution to-day, "not very pleased with themselves," in the words of Superintendent W. G. Green. Nine boys were still at large.

Police and school officials discovered three of the lads walking along a highway shortly before daybreak and returned them to school. Green said they were glad to get back.

Search for the other nine was continued by police and Mimico citizens. So far no citizen has collected a single $5 reward that goes with capture of an escaped boy, seven of the 21 who ran out yesterday having returned voluntarily and the rest been captured by either police or school attaches.

A total of 21 made their getaway in the wholesale break, 11 of them clad only in night shirts. Starting early Sunday morning and lasting until early Sunday evening, the steady exodus continued until the total reached 21.

Egged on by reports of a $5 reward for the return of each lad, citizens took an active part in the hunt for the youths.

The average age of those who left in their night attire was 12 years, and it was nine of them who returned.

JAP OFFICER FACING DEATH

State Demands Supreme Penalty for Assassination Of Premier Inukai

WIDE OPPOSITION.

TOKYO, Sept. 11. —(AP)— The state demanded death sentences today for three young naval lieutenants accused of leading seven fellow officers in the assassination of Premier Suyoshi Inukai in May, 1932.

The procurator, the state's prosecuting officer, also asked life imprisonment for three others charged with active participation in outrages accompanying the slaying, six year sentences for three accused of being accomplices in the conspiracy, and three years imprisonment for the tenth.

Demands for the unexpectedly heavy penalties brought one of the major climaxes of the court martial, which began at the Yokosuka Naval Base, Aug. 10, because all Japan wondered whether the government would dare to ask the extreme sentence for the accused, for whose support a powerful and ultra-patriotic movement seeking clemency has developed on the grounds that the alleged assassins acted on pure and patriotic motives.

Premier Inukai fell mortally wounded before the revolver fire of terrorists who entered his official residence at dusk on May 15, 1932. Simultaneously five Tokyo buildings were bombed.

The terrorists left handbills signed "The Young Army and Navy Officers' Association" which expressed disgust with the political parties and the way they handled internal and foreign affairs.

EINSTEIN FLEES TO HIDDEN CAMP

British Host Places Armed Guards Around Famous Scientist.

WORKING ON NEW THEORY.

CROMER, Norfolk, England, Sept. 11 (AP)—Anybody attempting to molest Albert Einstein in his humble refuge on the Norfolk coast may get bullets from guns of his host's game-keepers.

And if Commander Oliver Locker-Lampson himself is around, any intruder may have to face the revolver which the member of Parliament reputedly is carrying while the celebrated mathematician is under his protection.

Professor Einstein arrived from London yesterday, fleeing reported Nazi threats against his life, and set about at once in his quiet, tree-surrounded retreat to work on a new mathematical theory—the nature of which was not disclosed.

Seemingly content, Dr. Einstein said: "All I want is peace. Where could I find a more peaceful retreat than here in England?"

He said he was not responsible for the "Brown book" which incurred Hitlerite wrath and which, Nazis alleged, was a compilation of victims of persecution.

It was understood to-day that no permanent police guard has been provided at the Locker-Lampson estate, but local police are aware of the positon and can be summoned instantly if necessary to aid private guards which the member of Parliament employs to insure the safety of his famous guest.

Einstein's retreat has not been disclosed to the public although its exact location is known to a few intimates who describe it as a "hut" or "shooting camp."

ROBBER TAKEN AT THOMASBURG

CHASE FOLLOWS.

THOMASBURG, Sept. 11 (Examiner Correspondence). — Burglars again entered the store owned by Mr. Raymond Oliver here early Saturday but were foiled by neighbors of Mr. Oliver, who took the distributor brush out of the car and called the police from Belleville.

While the thieves were trying to regulate their car the police car came along. The robbers ran through the fields, where one was captured after about a five-mile chase; the other one is still at large.

Mr. Glen Ish at Roslin had 30 gallons of gasoline, eight quarts of oil and a jack stolen the same morning.

Reds Parade Streets Advocating Death For U. S. Envoy Welles.

(By Edmund A. Chester.)

HAVANA, September 11 (C.P.)—Cuba's fourth Government in a month rode in the saddle to-day, with a 48-year-old former professor at the reins, and the going was none too easy.

No sooner had Dr. Ramon Grau San Martin, chosen President by a Junta which assumed control only last Monday, pledged himself to "fulfill entirely the revolutionary program" than 300 former army officers demanded he step aside in favor of Carlos Manuel de Cespedes, whose brief regime began a month ago.

In Santiago there were disquieting reports that heavily armed bands roamed the countrys'de ready for revolution in behalf of former President Mario G. Menocal, that unrest led merchants to close their stores, and that army officers refused to return to their duties.

And in Havana Central Park 5,000 persons met to hear agitators decry the newest government as lending itself to "machinations of Wall Street's financiers," shout "Down with Yankee Imperialism!" and demand the withdrawal of United States warships from Cuban waters.

Banners carried by Communists here demanded that the American Marines "leave Cuban waters," and advocated "Death to Sumner Welles," United States Ambassador who has sought to mediate Cuban political differences.

MAN WHO SHOT OFFICER DIES BY POISON IN CELL

MONTREAL, Sept. 11.—(CP)—Paul Thouin, 26, arrested following the shooting of Acting Investigator James Mackie of the Canadian Pacific Railway Police at Lanoraie, Que., on Friday was found dead in provincial police cells today. A preliminary examination showed Thouin had poisoned himself.

According to Chief L. Jargaille, of Provincial Police detectives Thouin had concealed some poison in the heel of his shoe. During the night he opened the heel and took the poison, Chief Jargaille said. He was found dead when guards visited his cell early today.

Getting Even

NEW YORK, September 11 (C.P.), — Morris Simmons, listening to a street evangelist, interrupted to air some theological views of his own—and the result was a broken nose.

Police told a magistrate the crowd beat him up, but Simmons said it was the police.

"Afterwards, at the police station," he said, "a policeman kept looking at his wrist watch, the crystal of which had been smashed ;and each time he looked at it he hit me on the nose."

HAMILTON MAN BESTS ROBBER IN FIST BATTLE

Beats Alleged Thug Over Head With Own Revolver, Fracturing Skull.

GUARDED IN HOSPITAL.

Desperado Pulls Gun Hammer Twice, Shell Failing to Explode.

HAMILTON, Sept. 11.—Fighting back after a hold-up man had twice clicked the trigger of a .32 calibre revolver while it was pressed against his ribs, Harry Rymal, 279 Locke Street South, frustrated a robbery early yesterday and handed over to Provincial Police the alleged bandit after he had beaten him unconscious.

The man, who is alleged to have attempted to rob Rymal while his car was parked on the York Road near the Clappison cut, at 12.30 o'clock yesterday morning, is in the General Hospital suffering from a fractured skull and other injuries. He is under police guard.

Two men took part in the attempted robbery, according to Sergeant Oliver of the Provincial Police, who late Saturday night arrested a man who resided with the first prisoner. The second man faces a charge of vagrancy.

The second man, it is said, took no part in the fight, but fled when Rymal attacked the bandit.

The car owner fought with the would-be robber on the roadside and again in a field when he attempted to escape. Rymal struck the man on the head with the butt end of the weapon, which he had

Tomatoes Injured By Early Frost

Gardens in an area of low ground in the south end of the city and North Monaghan township suffered considerable damage when the temperature sank below the freezing point during last night. Extensive injury to tomatoes, cucumbers and other vine crops was reported this morning.

Walter Peters, official weather recorder of the city, reports that the arrival of frost in the city this early in September constitutes a record over a number of years past. His own official thermometer, located on the high ground of north Reid street, showed only a minimum of 35 degrees for the night, but he stated that temperatures at the freezing point and even a point or so below were likely experienced in the lower regions of the district along the Otonabee river.

The minimum temperatures of the night came around four and five a.m., according to reports. Despite the brilliant sun which rose later in the morning, the temperature climbed slowly. The temperature at nine o'clock hovered around the 40-degree mark.

Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors conducted by Anne Wilcox

Today we are going to devote the space to a group of foods which can be used for fuel, but which have another more important use—the ability to build muscle tissue.

• • • • • • •

This group is classified under the group "'protein.'" It is well named, it deserves the tribute of the Greek word from which it is derived, meaning "to take first place."

• • • • • • •

Compared to fats and starches and sugars, proteins are complicated foods. Most of our protein supply comes from animals: meat, fish, milk, cheese and eggs, giving our largest supply.

• • • • • • •

Nuts, cereals, grains and vegetables such as beans and peas are the vegetable foods which give up an invaluable supply. These proteins while they have the same general characteristics, are very different from each other. Some are what are known as "complete" proteins and upon these we could depend if necessary for our whole supply.

• • • • • • •

It is difficult, for instance, to get a full protein supply from an exclusive vegetable diet.

• • • • • • •

Vegetable proteins are inexpensive and should be considered: cereals with milk, for instance, will give us everything that is needed for a protein supply.

• • • • • • •

Adults draw the largest part of their protein supply from meat. Many adults use little or no milk in the diet. Milk should have some place there but not on account of its protein, rather for its mineral and vitamin content.

• • • • • • •

Proteins are usually assimulated easily, digestion taking place in the stomach and intestines and in normal conditions takes place quickly.

• • • • • • •

In general diet one protein food will replace another. It makes little difference to the body which type is used one day as long as during a specific period of time, proteins which will supply all the body needs, are offered.

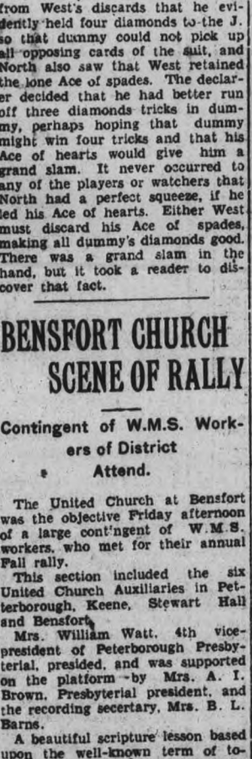
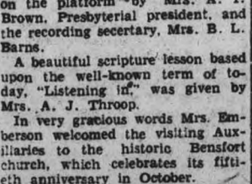
HOW MANY CAN NORTH WIN AT CLUBS?

Frequently the only point of a hand that causes discussion so absorbs both players and kibitzers as to leave another interesting point in the background. On July 7 the following hand was given publicity wholly on account of a dangerous bid made by South. Neither players nor gallery mentioned whether North should have been defeated or could have done better on the play, but among careful readers, W. Y. Penn, San Antonio, has been first to call attention to the latter subject. North played the hand at 6-Clubs, doubled by West. The opening lead was the 3 of spades. How many tricks can be won against perfect subsequent play by opponents?



Bidding went: North, 1-Club; East, 1-Heart; South, 2-Diamonds; West, 2-Spades; North, 4-Clubs (forcing); East, 4Hearts; South, 4-Spades (to show no losing spades and support for clubs); North, 6-Clubs, which West doubled. All present took South to task for making his dangerous bid with only two trumps.

Play went as follows; Dummy ruffed the opening lead of spades; dummy's last trump was led, and two leads luckily captured all opposing clubs. Then the declarer continued to run off five added club tricks. At the end of the eighth round of play the four players held the following cards:



At this point the declarer saw from West's discards that he evidently held four diamonds to the J, so that dummy could not pick up all opposing cards of the suit, and North also saw that West retained the lone Ace of spades. The declarer decided that he had better run off three diamonds tricks in dummy, perhaps hoping that dummy might win four tricks and that his Ace of hearts would give him a grand slam. It never occurred to any of the players or watchers that North had a perfect squeeze, if he led his Ace of hearts. Either West must discard his Ace of spades, making all dummy's diamonds good. There was a grand slam in the hand, but it took a reader to discover that fact.

BENSFORT CHURCH SCENE OF RALLY

Contingent of W.M.S. Workers of District Attend.

The United Church at Bensfort was the objective Friday afternoon of a large contingent of W.M.S. workers, who met for their annual Fall rally.

This section included the six United Church Auxiliaries in Peterborough, Keene, Stewart Hall and Bensfort.

Mrs. William Watt, 4th vice-president of Peterborough Presbyterial, presided, and was supported on the platform by Mrs. A. I. Brown, Presbyterial president, and the recording secertary, Mrs. B. L. Barns.

A beautiful scripture lesson based upon the well-known term of today, "Listening in" was given by Mrs. A. J. Throop.

In very gracious words Mrs. Emberson welcomed the visiting Auxiliaries to the historic Bensfort church, which celebrates its fiftieth anniversary in October.

Mrs. A. I. Brown, on behalf of the ladies, responded to the welcome.

An interesting feature of the meeting was the calling of the roll, when representatives responded as follows:

Bensfort 16, Keene 3, George Street, Peterborough, 2; Knox 6, Mark Street 9, St. Andrew's 4, St. James' 6, Trinity 12, Stewart Hall 6.

One of each Auxiliary gave a condensed report both as to finances and general progress of their work, which proved very encouraging. A review of the doings at the Bay of Quinte W.M.S. branch meeting, held in Cobourg this year, was given in a report by the Presbyterial delegate, Mrs. T. J. Jackson of Bethany.

Mrs. C. M. Scott, in her address, brought a very vivid picture of India and her work there. To illustrate her descriptions of the dress of the various classes, several young ladies came forward in native costume, giving a most realistic touch.

Mrs. Scott told many amusing stories regarding these people of India. She had a table loaded with curios which were most interesting; the begging-bowl of brass and many pieces of silverware showing native handicraft. Fine needlework by women and girls was also on exhibition.

Interspersing the addresses the audience enjoyed two fine solos, Mrs. James Wood singing "That Beautiful Land on High," and Rev. E. M. Cooke's contribution was "Confidence."

BE BEAUTIFUL

By GLADYS GLAD

Toby Wing, a platinum blonde young lass, who has appeared in a good many of the latest and best musical comedy pictures, was recently adjudged the most perfect chorus girl in Hollywood. Toby, who possesses flawless proportions, among other things, is a firm believer in exercise for toning the system and keeping the body shapely. And rope jumping is one of her favorites.

Gladys Glad

Rope jumping is really one of the best little all-around exercises going. It's an important part of every pugilist's training. And you know what firm, lithe figures those babies have! Of course, no woman wants to possess the bulging biceps of a professional pugilist. But rope jumping doesn't over-develop muscles in that manner. It's a balanced exercise. And with the exception of swimming, it can do more to develop harmonious figure lines, and to make the body flexible and supple, than any other one exercise.

Rope jumping benefits both overweight and underweight individuals. So, if your figure is not perfect, cut yourself a piece of rope, and use it every day. Begin slowly, if you find yourself panting and gasping for breath after only a few jumps. Skip the rope for only a short time, at first. Then gradually increase the length of the rope jumping period. Don't hunch up your shoulders and stiffen your arm and neck muscles. Relax! Give your muscles a chance to work!

Rope jumping is excellent for stimulating the blood circulation. It will send the blood coursing swiftly through your entire body. It will leave you as flushed and glowing as it does your youthful offspring or your little kid sister. And it will make you feel almost as young.

Skipping rope has other attributes, too. It will trim down overplump calves and ankles. It will shake off that soft fat around the bust and hips. It will harden the muscles of the back and waist. It will do away with any upper-arm flabbiness, and will increase the flexibility of the wrists. So give yourself enough rope, and skip your way to figure loveliness!

Sense and Nonsense

Herbert Marshall

The lucky stars who will escape sweltering days in the sound stages are Claudette Colbert, Herbert Marshall, Mary Boland, William Gargan and Leo Carillo.

Lest you all be too envious, however, De Mille promises a difficult and even dangerous location trip. He'll try to inject realism into the plight of his four characters who escape from a plague ridden vessel in an oriental port and flee through the jungles towards civilization.

First of the company to leave will be De Mille and his technical staff. They sail Saturday to survey the entire island group for suitable locations. The principals follow in a couple of weeks.

Oddly enough, Claudette Colbert will be making a trip from which her husband, Norman Foster, has just returned. Wonder whether Edna Best will run true to form and accompany Marshall? Henry Duffy has been trying to get her to take the lead in "There's Always Juliet" and she also has been up for a part at Warners.

Strangely enough, the most successful British films on this continent have been the musical comedy or operetta type and, judging from film trade-paper reports, "Bitter Sweet" appears to be the most auspicious in music, theme and photography. As a stage play, seen in Canada with the blonde and beauteous Evelyn Laye in the leading role, the stage version charmed multitudes; as a picture, it should multiply that fine reception. Once again, the versatility of Noel Coward is indicated. First the English playwright saw his "Private Lives" transferred to the screen, a hilarious comedy of domestic temperament; then came the mystical beauty of "Cavalcade." The third is "Bitter Sweet," just a simple story of a great love in which a husband gives his life in the protection of his wife's honor. Much of the perfect pattern of loveliness lies in the melodies. It is the first starring picture of Anna Neagle, the little chorus girl of two years ago, who snatched the cinematic plum when even Evelyn, the star of the stage piece, was reaching for the film role.

"Be Mine To-night," which opened Monday night at the Capitol Theatre, is a film and not a phographed stage play. It has thrown off the shackles of the studio and escaped to the open air. It presents an evenly flowing continuity of swift motion against richly varied and really magnificent scenery. A picture should be a panorama. "Be Mine To-night" is a panorama of Alpine settings of exquisite beauty perfectly photographed and flawlessly knit together in dramatic sequence.

Kiepura, who has a golden voice, and is the sensation of Europe, brings to this film a soaring ecstasy of song altogether without parallel in motion pictures.

The director, Anatole Litwak, is a young Russian exile who to-morrow will be famous.

Your Health

By DR LOGAN CLENDENING

Mad dogs are encountered in all countries and during all seasons. In the United States hydrophobia, or rabies, is present in all sections, and in one year 111 people died as the result of the bite of rabid dogs.

Dr. Clendenins

This may not seem a large number of deaths compared to the toll taken by other diseases, but when one considers the horror of the form of death that hydrophobia takes, the indescribable suffering the patient goes through, and the fact that all such deaths are preventable, the need of vigilance and increased activity in preventive measures is seen.

Once the disease is established, recovery, so far as I know, is unheard of. Prevention, therefore, is the gospel of the disease.

In prevention the first thing to do is to be able to recognize the disease in the dog. Two forms occur: the furious and the dumb rabies.

In the "furious" form the first stage is a change in the dog's disposition. It will become slinking and dejected, startled at slight noises. A change in appetite occurs, and the animal will eat all sorts of truck such as stones, sticks, hair, leather, etc. This is followed by the stage of excitement. The dog becomes maniacal, runs away from home, running aimlessly over the country, snapping and biting at people and dogs. If it returns home it is exhausted and covered with wounds received in fights with other dogs. The third stage is that of paralysis.

In "dumb" rabies the paralytic stage is reached early. The dog's mouth is especially paralyzed; it slobbers and gags. It cannot drink or swallow, from which the name "hydrophobia" (hatred of water) comes.

Particularly dangerous is the possibility that the owner of such a dog will think that the symptoms are due to a "bone stuck in the throat." Attempts to dislodge this supposed bone result in abrasions of the skin of the hand and consequent infection with the dog's saliva.

The saliva contains the infectious agent, the virus which has an especial affinity for the central nervous system, producing convulsions and paralysis.

In the presence of definite symptoms of rabies in a dog, the anti-rabic treatment should be given at once to the person bitten.

In case of suspicion of rabies in a dog, it is best to commence the anti-rabic treatment of the patient and isolate the animal for observation for a period of 10 days.

Rabies treatment should be given in all cases when the dog cannot be found following the biting of a person.

When a person has not been bitten but the hands or face have been licked by a dog that subsequently developes rabies, it is necessary to ascertain (a) whether there were abrasions or scratches on the skin at the time, or (b) whether such injuries occurred afterwards but before the saliva was removed by washing. In the positive findings, it is advisable to administer the anti-rabic treatment.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS

C. V., Rockford, Ia.: "Is there any danger for an adult to contract tuberculosis while being a waiter in a tuberculosis sanitarium?"

Answer: The modern idea is that there is very little danger. The emphasis should be put upon the fact that it is an adult. According to the present idea of tuberculosis infection it occurs almost exclusively in childhood.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1933

NOW UP TO THE PUBLIC.

The gates of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition are thrown open to the public to-night, and for the balance of the week the Exhibition will be in the forefront of local activities and to a great extent monopolize the attention of the whole district.

For the first time the Peterborough Industrial presents itself to the public as a Class A fair—a rating won by its all-round growth and development during the last decade.

With the new ranking comes, of course, bigger prize lists, more and better entries and keener competition, and along with this development a more extensive entertainment program.

It should have—it must have—the support of the people of the city and district throughout the week, for no such enterprise can succeed without the sinews of war—in other words, without adequate box-office patronage.

Everything that judicious planning and hard work in advance could do to ensure the success of the Exhibition has been done.

Practically ever since last September the directors have been preparing for this week; there is nothing more that they can do, and from now on the issue is in the hands of the public.

It is to be hoped that, starting with to-night when the magnificent band of the Scots Guards will play its first program, that there will be record crowds in attendance.

THIS IS NEEDED HERE.

The Rotary Club of St. Catharines is carrying on a campaign that might well be copied by some local service club, inasmuch as there is need here for a similar effort.

The St. Catharines Rotarians are appealing to former students of the Collegiate Institute and to the parents of former students to come to the aid of the large number of boys and girls who are unable to attend the Collegiate because they are not in a position financially to purchase the books required.

It is felt that there must be a great many text books discarded and idle upon the book shelves of many owners, practically useless to the present owners, but invaluable to prospective students, who because of the unusual economic conditions are without the means necessary to equip themselves with the required books.

Similar conditions exist in Peterborough.

There are undoubtedly a number of children who because of lack of funds cannot finance the purchase of books and for whom, without assistance, secondary education will be impossible; at the same time there must be a large quantity of used text books in the city that could be utilized to advantage.

Some way of bringing the two together would be a community service decidedly worth while; it would spell opportunity to many bright youngsters who otherwise will be forced to stay away from school.

HERE IS A SURPRISE.

It must have been surprising to Canadians to read the other day that an English challenger for the International Challenge Cup for sailing canoes, a trophy held in the United States for nearly fifty years, had been successful in his quest and had taken the cup back to England after winning a three-heat contest.

Not only that, but the English canoest was triumphant in the contest for the national canoe sailing championship of the United States, so that that trophy is also on its way across the Atlantic.

The canoe has always been looked upon as a craft peculiar to North America, and to find an English challenger carrying off the two main titles in canoe sailing is a rather amazing development.

The Challenge Trophy which American canoe sailors have held ever since it was put up for competition has been sought by Canadians on eight occasions without any success, and two previous English challenges had no better luck.

Finally, however, the representative of the Royal Canoe Club of London have proven their supremacy, and the coveted trophy will spend at least the next year on the other side of the pond.

With the canoe such a popular craft in Canadian waters, it is rather a remarkable thing that English canoeists should have succeeded in wresting from the American holders a championship cup that no Canadian canoe sailor has been able to win in nearly fifty years.

IMPOSSIBLE "DEMANDS."

"Demands" made on the Federal Government by a deputation from the so-called National Conference of the Unemployed the other day are not likely to receive a favorable reply on any one point.

It is decidedly unlikely that the persons who voiced these impossible "demands" ever expected to have any of them granted.

Judging from the fervor with which they sang Red songs and cheered for Tim Buck and other Communists, it is a natural thing to conclude that their visit to Capital Hill was merely a demonstration for purposes of publicity, and that the things they asked for were in the nature of propaganda.

Certainly their request that a system of non-contributory unemployment insurance should be adopted as soon as possible, and that in the meantime there should be a general increase in relief allowances was not one to commend itself to any responsible Government.

The burden of the present relief system is sufficiently onerous and any suggestion of more generous relief grants could not be seriously entertained; unemployment insurance is another matter, but there would be few thoughtful Canadians who would support a non-contributory scheme.

The deputation also urged the repeal of Section 98 and the withdrawal of Mounted Police from duty in connection with unemployment activities, neither of which requests is likely to be acted upon; neither the section in question nor the work of the Mounted Police need give any concern to law-abiding citizens who respect Canadian institutions and keep the laws of the country.

THE ROOSEVELT EXPERIMENT.

As the days pass by intense interest is being manifested in President Roosevelt's plan to restore prosperity to the United States under the operation of the National Industrial Recovery Act. People of all classes without respect to political, industrial or commercial relations earnestly hope that the President's attempt will succeed. Already it is said that 2,000,000 men have been placed at work and the expectation was expressed that by Labor Day 6,000,000 men in the United States would have been restored to their jobs. Whether this hope was realized is not known. Even those, however, who are showing the greatest anxiety that the plan shall succeed are earnestly endeavoring to face the facts of the situation in a sound economic manner. Speaking the other day from the point of view of a Canadian observer, the Hon. L. A. Taschereau, Premier of Quebec, expressed the following opinion:

"The fault of the system as I see it is that the United States, being already a producing country, has again started on a vast production movement that will eventually lead to more merchandise being on the market than the people can use. If they don't open their markets to the world in a few months they will be back where they started from. I hope I'm wrong when I say this, but I doubt it. To me it seems that the best thing to do is to stabilise currency, and then talk of treaties and reduce tariff barriers."

Because many industrial leaders in the United States are candidly examining the working of the act it should not be charged against them that they are endeavoring to hinder its operation. These are prudent, far-sighted men who are endeavoring to weigh all the factors of the case in order to be prepared for any emergencies that may happen. President Roosevelt was so confident that his plan was going to succeed that he changed his attitude entirely and that of his delegates at the London Economic Conference. It is a colossal attempt on the part of the United States to prove that the 120,000,000 people in the Republic are able to bring prosperity to themselves without the assistance of other nations.

Certain manufacturers in New England made a survey of their employees to find out what they intended to do with the extra money they were receiving. Large numbers of the thrifty workers replied that they intended to purchase certain necessities and with the balance restore their depleted savings accounts, on which they had been compelled to draw during the years of depression. If this policy is carried out, how will this affect industry? How can the industries of the United States, which are organized for high production, continue to operate unless an extensive market is provided for their products? The other day it was announced that the Guaranty Trust Company of New York had made a survey in which occurred the following significant paragraph:

"The great majority of business men apparently are determined to accept the federal program and to live up to its terms, although many business enterprises find themselves in the position of having raised wages and shortened the working hours without any clear idea how the resulting increase in costs is to be offset. Selling prices are still subject to consumer demand, and, to the extent that larger payrolls are balanced by higher prices, the increase in aggregate consumers' purchasing power is obviously nullified and the purpose of the plan is defeated."

This is unquestionably a sober view of the experiment and it may be said to fairly express the opinions of Canadian industrial and commercial leaders. The survey concludes:

"Most business concerns, after three years of severe depression, involving heavy drains on their cash resources, are in no position to endure arbitrary advances in costs without some compensation in the form of increased revenues. They are expected voluntarily to raise their costs in the hope and faith that the larger payrolls will increase consumption and that the greater demand will find its way back to them and expand the market for their products. In the meantime, their cash position is further impaired."

It certainly can do no harm to look the whole experiment squarely in the face. A policy of careful watching will not hinder the effect of the plan. While the Dominion should stand ready to learn by the example of other countries, it should accept only that which has been demonstrated to be sound.—Brantford Expositor.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Don't fail to hear the band of the Scots Guards to-night and get the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition away to a good start.

In every department Peterborough's big fair promises to make an excellent showing. It is up to the public to ensure success at the box-office as well.

An all-British final match came close to completely ruining the United States tennis championship. The elimination of all the home talent before the final round was a bitter pill.

The locks bridge proposition goes over until the spring—an announcement that will be disappointing to those who saw some hope of employment.

The Scots Guards Band, it should be remembered, will play only to-night and to-morrow night at the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition. Their programs should be heard by every music-lover.

VACATION ESCAPADE

By ARTHUR SHUMWAY

CHAPTER 20.

Sally rose next morning with the feeling that the events of the previous night had been only part of a wild dream. It seemed impossible that so many exciting and sinister things should happen in such a short time. Then she recalled Ted's departure in the cab Proctor had ordered, with the driver Proctor had talked to quietly through the door. She splashed hurriedly through her shower, threw on her clothes and raced downstairs. The first person she saw was Jasper.

"Has Mr. Chandler reported yet, Jasper?" she demanded.

Jasper's mouth dropped open. He scratched his woolly head, then broke into a broad smile. "No, ma'm, Miz Gwynne," he said, "No, ma'm, he ain't come yet."

What was the meaning of that smile? What did Jasper know about all this business? About the killing of John Kemble Proctor, for that matter? But Sally hurried on and ran out to the garage. Fred Proctor was there already. Having backed the roadster out into the drive he was examining it.

"Oh, good morning, Mr. Proctor," she said.

Fred Proctor, clad in gray flannel trousers, a white sweater and blue sport coat, looked up and smiled. "Chandler was right," he said. "I suppose you want to take a look at this, Miss Gwynne?"

"Yes," Sally lied, "I was dying to see it. It's so exciting, having your car shot full of holes."

"Exciting, yes. And a damned nuisance," Proctor added. "Look."

Sally examined the back of the car. The trunk, the top of the sloping body and the fenders resembled a sieve. And the spotlight on the driver's side of the car, extending out from the windshield, had been shattered by two of the slugs.

"What are you going to do, Mr. Proctor?" Sally hazarded.

"Do?" The thin, blue-black line of mustache curved slightly in a half-smile, not at all a pleasant smile. He shrugged, regarded the tip of his cigaret and made no reply. But his silence was more frightful to Sally than anything he might have said.

"Well," he said at last, "a bit of breakfast is indicated. Have you had yours?"

"Why, no, I haven't," Sally said. "All excited, eh?"

"Yes—I guess I am." She laughed nervously, praying that Proctor would not guess why she was excited—because of Ted Chandler.

They started toward the house. As they walked up the shell path Sally saw a sight that made her sigh with relief: Ted Chandler coming briskly up the drive. Proctor also saw him.

"Well, there's our young man, looking none the worse," he commented. He stopped to wait for Ted.

"Good morning, Mr. Proctor, Miss Gwynne."

"Well, Chandler, you're looking quite hearty," Proctor said.

"Thanks. I'm all right, I guess."

"You had a narrow squeak last night. I was just looking at the car, Miss Gwynne and I. She couldn't wait to eat her breakfast; she had to come out and see the wreckage."

Sally clenched her moist hands.

"Good thing I didn't signal for any of my turns," Ted remarked. "I noticed last night that they just about blew the spot light off. I wouldn't have any left arm if I had."

"Chandler," Proctor said. "I'm going to want your services on the boat today. We're getting ready for a little cruise down the river tonight—just a little party."

Sally looked questioningly at Proctor. He smiled and nodded.

"Sure, we're going to go right ahead with the party," he told her. "I'm not going to let that stop me," indicating the car with a motion of his head.

"All right, sir," Ted said. Sally noticed that he was in control of his temper today, the perfect chauffeur and man of all work again.

Sally and Proctor breakfasted together, both carefully avoiding the subject of the attack on the beach. Proctor announced that he must run down to Port Orange for an hour or so and that he would like Ted to remain until he returned when they would drive over to the boatyard and start getting the yacht in shape.

As soon as Proctor had gone Sally hurried out to the garage where she found Ted dismantling the shattered spotlight.

"Ted!" she said.

He gave her a warning glance and nodded toward the house.

"I know," she said, "but I'm so glad to see you back safe this morning. I hardly slept a wink for thinking of the way you went off in that cab right after all that shooting."

"The cab was all right. The driver was about as big as Jasper. No, I'm sorry to report there were no more hair-raising episodes, baby."

"Ted, what do you make of it?" she demanded.

Ted shrugged his shoulders as he busied himself with the light. "All in the point of view, I guess. Could mean anything. There's only one thing that's certain."

"What's that?"

"Proctor knew what he was doing when he gave me that car."

"Oh, Ted, do you think so?"

"I know so. Remember what I said about his killing me with kindness. Hmph!" He made a little sound, half laugh, half snort, full of contempt.

"But that green car. That must have been Mike Collins."

"Maybe. Yes, probably. But how do I know Collins didn't get his orders from Proctor?"

"Why, he couldn't have. Don't you remember how I heard them quarreling down there in the hall that night?"

"Yes . . ." Ted admitted slowly. "I'd thought of that, of course. Maybe so, maybe so. . . . The fact remains that I was put on the spot. Whether my own spot or one intended for Proctor, I don't know. And I can't see where it makes a whole heck of a lot of difference. Being shot for a duck or a decoy is all the same—it doesn't make the bullets any softer."

"Oh, Ted, you mustn't take any more chances like that, you mustn't. Do you hear?"

"You're telling me?"

"But why do you suppose Proctor would want to—to put you on the 'spot'?" she asked. "Do you think he suspects? He wants to get you out of the way?"

"A question that rests entirely with the character of the man, my child. I mean it depends on just how heartless, how cold and efficient that oyster is. If he suspects, well and good. And if that's the case it makes it look again as if he had something to do with his uncle's death—or at least knew who did. I just wish it were that simple, but it isn't. The whole trouble is that Proctor is a cold, crafty operator, whatever he is. Look in those eyes, just study the man. And listen to what people have to say about him. He's got about as much conscience as Napoleon had—and he's about as smart, too, if you ask me. Do you see, then? If he had any idea somebody might be saving some lead for him, he'd do just what he did last night—send out a decoy who might be mistaken for him."

"Do you suppose?" Sally was staggered by the thought. Not that it hadn't occurred to her fleetingly, but to hear Ted, the victim himself, discuss it so logically, so coolly, was almost too much for her.

"What about this party?" Ted demanded suddenly. "I'm not so sure you'd better get mixed up in it."

"Why, it's just a little moonlight boat trip Mr. Proctor is going to give for some of his friends. There'll be plenty of people along, young married people, he said."

"They're the worst kind," Ted remarked seriously. "Don't go, Sally. Especially after last night. If this guy, Proctor, is telling the truth, and his number is up, you'll only be courting lead by being seen around with him—let alone what he might do."

"No, I'd better go, Ted. If I balk too much he's liable to get suspicious—that is, if he isn't already, and I wouldn't be surprised. I wouldn't even be surprised if he wasn't from the start."

"Well, of course, if you won't take my advice," Ted said sullenly, going into the garage.

Quotations For To-Day

When bad men combine, the good must associate; else they will fall, one by one, an unpitied sacrifice in a contemptible struggle.—Burke.

ALL OF US

By MARSHALL MARLIN

OUR BRIGHT BLUE STAR.

High rose the great hills around us. Wherever we looked they walled us in securely, magnificently. Deep lay the lake below us, and far, far above us shone the millions of stars, twinkling less than they do for people in the lowlands below. Here, a mile and more above the seaports and the plains, the stars were clear and close and a shooting star was a bright scratch across the heavens and the spaces between the stars were dark blue and purple and the stars in the blue, blue Sierra lake were twins of the stars above them.

Over there in the west shone the evening star. (I should be knowing its name, but it's beyond me.) And never in my life did I see a star move more swiftly to its setting. We could see it moving toward that wooded line of the hills where it would disappear and follow the blazing sun. . . . So the children and I, sitting before a leaping fire on the rocks above the lake, watched that bright blue star drop behind the mountain peak and stood on tiptoe to watch it go and said goodby to it and turned our eyes to other stars. . . . And turned them back again to the place of its disappearance—and saw, amazed, that it was back again. It had dropped below the sharp edge of the hills. We had seen it go. And now it was back. We saw it still. . . . It had gone. It had returned. It wavered on the line of going and staying and going and staying and for minutes played at this strange business of being and not being. . . . And though I know this has a natural explanation that has something to do with the thickness of the atmosphere or the heat waves from the earth or some such phenomena as "persistence of vision," still I was moved and delighted and understood why people of the hills have myths and strange beliefs that are not in accord with the measurements and analyses of science.

And watching that single star, I could easily understand how it is that a man's star may seem to go and yet may return again to him. How he may think he is lost, but still may find himself. How his light may waver, but grow bright again. How he may lose courage and faith and hope—or so he thinks—and live to find all three a part of his life once more. . . . Even as that star returned to us on those high mountain peaks and went away and came again on another night.

ON THIS DATE

A DAY IN CANADIAN HISTORY

By Fred Williams

THE GENIUS OF THE C.P.R.

On this date in 1917 the death took place of Sir William Cornelius Van Horne, the driving power in the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway and its second president. Few Canadians of the present generation know the debt they owe to this man from Illinois, who, coming to Montreal in 1881, became in every truth one of the makers of Canada. It was he who organized the first operating staff of the C.P.R. It was he who personally supervised construction in many sections and endeared himself to the workers all along the line, sharing their bunks and their food when food was none too plentiful, although he made it a rule that no matter what else suffered the men who were making the road should have the first call. It was he who made it possible for the railway to be completed from Montreal to Burrard Inlet within five years from its inception when the contract would have allowed ten years.

It was he who kept up the confidence of George Stephen and Donald Cook and R. B. Angus in the days when the enterprise seemed to be on the verge of failure. While Edward Blake was thundering in the House of Commons about the "sea of mountains" which, in his opinion, blocked the way and predicting that it would never pay for its axle grease, while Cartwright and his satellites fought every step to secure completion of the pledge made with British Columbia in 1871, Van Horne never lost his faith in Canada. It was he who supplied the information and the assurances of success which enabled John A. Macdonald and Charles Tupper and John Henry Pope to answer the attacks of the opposition and persuade Parliament to come to the rescue of the company, when in 1884-5 things were at a very critical stage indeed.

When he stood by the side of Donald A. Smith at Craigellachie, B. C., on November 7, 1885, and the future Lord Strathcona drove the last spike in the railway which united the Atlantic and the Pacific on British soil and made the Western Canada of to-day possible, there were men who said tha Van Horne had finished. He had proved himself a master railway manager. But he did. Not only had he the most entire faith in Canada, not only did he plan the giant enterprise which, like the British flag, never sees the sun set upon its activities, but he had the vital faculty of picking the right man for the right place and of building up an organization which, for effectiveness and loyalty to the spirit of its founder, has not an equal in the world.

It was my good fortune to have to meet W. C. Van Horne almost daily for a number of years, and although he was sometimes irascible and exhibited that wonderful eloquence of "language' for which he was noted, I can not recall one occasion when he failed to realize the importance of telling the press and the public the news, and most especially the facts, about the C.P.R. and its developments. He it was who, realising the importance of publicity, engaged that prince of publicity men, George H. Ham, to keep the C.P.R. in the front window of the newspapers every day in the year and thus laid the foundation for its present excellent publicity organization, reduced of recent months but still functioning 100 per cent.

It has always seemed remarkable to me that no statue of this great maker of Canada has ever been erected. Some one said to me once when I made the suggestion: "Why he needs no statue; the C.P.R. is his monument; and the great port of Vancouver is a daily proof of his wisdom of location and of his genius for organization. There would never have been any Vancouver had it not been for W. C. Van Horne!" That may be so, but it would still be a gracious thing if Canada were to remember in stone and brass the man who was the C.P.R. in its days of birth and early growth. Perhaps Van Horne may have left some request that he be not so remembered, preferring to be recalled only as the man who enabled Canada, in record time, to keep its pledged faith with British Columbia. That province above all others should revere his memory and keep it alive.

Character From Handwriting

By BLANCHE A. DRAPER

A Feature Conducted by Peterborough's Leading Handwriting Analyst for the Readers of The Examiner.

Stanley B. Ivison, 276½ Wolfe St., Peterborough, Ont.: Your handwriting with its small angular formations and uneven pressure, which creates the impression that it is sprawling across the page, delineates you as a person who is given to moodiness and sudden temper. You are alert and have a keen mind but you are easily irritated and extremely sensitive. You are not always as outspoken as you ought to be but somehow manage to conceive the right thing to say when necessary. You generally act in an impulsive manner on the 'spur of the moment' and have what is known as 'luck' in the frantic decision. You could improve your position greatly, if you care to make more use of the talent depicted in the tops of your 't' bar which gives you the power to analyse and criticise, and to go deep into subjects which interest you. It shows that you must do your own thinking because you are not at all satisfied with the viewpoint of another.

Miss Edith Bray, Birdsall, Ontario: The handwriting as clearly depicted on your sample for analysis represents you as a nervous temperamental person. In fact you are just a little afraid and excited about what I might have to tell you. Rest assured I shall not hurt your feelings. My wish is to inspire confidence and happiness, to give courage and lead talent in the right direction. I think you are not quite mature enough to possess such an abundance of nerves. Why not undertake outdoor work for the summer months? You do not like meeting people because of this nervous tendency, but meeting them constantly will overcome this trait. There are numerous ways in which you could acquire confidence out of doors. For instance . . . care of children, hotel work at a beach, where you could have hours off for swimming, etc., and many other sensible occupations. Health will bring talent and poise. Isn't it worth the effort?

Catherine Grace Curtis, Westcott Street, City: The handwriting as delineated on your sample for analysis reveals a tender disposition. You are genuine and friendly, pleasant and courteous and adaptable. You are artistic and appear to enjoy music. You have a very good imagination, but you are not quite as ambitious as most people. At least, not yet. Very likely you will set your mind upon one certain objective in the near future, and then persevere till you have obtained your goal. Your general character is jolly and fun-loving, honest and forgiving.

L. Mac McDonald, Queen Street, Lakefield, Ontario: This handwriting suggests that you are interested in artistic things. You are secretive and conservative. You dearly love praise for work well done, and you are quite demonstrative in your affections and never fail to show your appreciation for the well-merited work of others. You are well poised and refined, intelligent and keen minded. You think quickly and usually know what you want to do. In fact your hands are clever and capable of fashioning many useful and artistic objects. Your type is classed as the restless natured, because you seem to always want something to do. You can not just sit down and wait for things to happen. You have to be on the go, and make things happen. You are thrifty and you know how to dress with the utmost care and the best of style. You are fond of art and all that it implies. Yet you do not care to make a study of it as a life-work. You abide by a certain code of honor and are strictly conscientious as regards religious matters. You are vivacious and light-hearted, merry and fond of good times, but you do not go out of your way to make pleasure predominate in your life.

Master Allan Carpenter, R. R. No. 1, Keene, Ont.: Your writing illustrates youth and ambition. I do not think that you are really old enough to have your writing analysed definitely, but yet you have many noteworthy characteristics. You have imagination and seem to be rather determined. Your smaller letters reflect a changeable nature, that, however, is to be expected, for one of your years should not be 'set' in any manner. If you were, you would be stubborn and then people would shun you. That capital 'M' of yours is expressive of a generosity, which you will have to guard against, before you allow yourself to give away more than your share. You seem to have a very humorous disposition, and to enjoy life to the fullest extent. Kindness means more to you than monetary recompense. The terminals of your words show that you often find it rather difficult to make yourself complete tasks. You will have to learn to concentrate, try to keep your mind trained to do the right thing at the right time. Count how many times you can do the right thing each day, and soon you will find that you will do the correct thing almost without thinking. If you have a secret ambition, you may write me about it through The Examiner, and I shall be glad to help you if I can. You may tell me your birthdate too.

Man Who Shot Railway Detective Reveals Cache Few Hours Before Suiciding.

TAKES POISON IN CELL.

MONTREAL, Sept. 11 (CP) — Paintings valued at $30,000, stolen this Spring from the Montreal Art Gallery have been recovered, Louis Jargaille, head of the Quebec Provincial Police Detective Bureau, announced to-day. Announcement was made a few hours after Paul Thouin, 26, confessed thief of the pictures and facing a murder charge following the shooting of a railroad detective, was found dead in a police cell from poisoning.

When Thouin was told Friday night Mackie had died he wept hysterically. Saturday he appeared calmer and apparently wanted to make some form of restitution directed police officers to the cache where the paintings were hidden here.

Thouin was out on bail on another burglary charge when the Lanoraie shooting took place. He had made a proposal to police to restore the pictures if he were give a suspended sentence on the burglary charge then pending against him. With suicide already in his mind he decided Saturday to reveal the hiding place of the pictures.

Recently anonymous letters were received by Montreal newspaper editors offering return of the pictures in one-quarter of their value was paid over. The letters contained parts of a mutilated picture and the editors were told the whole group would be reduced to "jig-saw puzzle form" if payment was not forthcoming.

Gaston Bouchard, arrested near Lonarale following the shooting of Mackie, is in jail here. He has disclaimed any knowledge of the box-car theft or the shooting.

Market Closing On All Exchanges

WALL STREET

NEW YORK, Sept. 11 (AP) — Stocks moved upward to-day at a rather dull but even pace. Advances in the late dealings ranged from 1 to 5 points or so. Alcohols were particularly buoyant while other firm groups included metals, specialties, rails and utilities. National Distillers soared 7 points. Issues up 2 to around 5 included U. S. Steel, American Telephone, Chrysler, Case, Du Pont, U. S. Smelting, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Public Service of New Jersey, American Commercial Alcohol, New York Central and Santa Fe. Transfers approximated 1,560,000 shares.

STANDARD EXCHANGE.

TORONTO, Sept. 11.—(C.P.) — Mining stocks followed the New York Board to higher ground today in trading that was slow at the start, just fair around noon and lively at the close. Gold issues, despite a lower quotation on bar metal in London, firmed up well, led by McIntyre, Dome and Bralorne. Base metal and silver stocks also closed with small gains to their credit.

McIntyre showed a net gain of 15 at $38.90 at the close, Bralorne 60 cents at $11.10, Hollinger 10 at 10.30. Wright Hargreaves and Tech Hughes closed off about 5 cents each and Lake Shore was unchanged at $46. Dome gained 25.

The high-priced base metal stocks had narrow gains at the close, Nickel finishing 50 higher at $21.25 and Noranda steady at $38.50.

TORONTO EXCHANGE

TORONTO, Sept. 11 (CP)—Trading was boiling at the close to-day on the Toronto Stock Exchange, having worked up from a sluggish morning tempo and prices were higher all along the line. The market feature was the sharp advance of the distillery shares, the whole list touching the best prices of the month so far.

Walkers Common gained 4½, closing at 80½; Distillers Seagram 3¾ at 30½; Industrial Acohol 3¼ to 20½, and Brewers and Distillers was up 20 cents at $2.65.

Interlisted leaders pulled ahead sharply when New York steamed upwards. Nickel closed 55 higher at $21.25, Smelters up 4 at 136; Brazilian gained ¼ to 14; C.P.R. ¼ to 16½, and Ford of Canada pulled up ½ to 15. The turnover was heavy in Nickel and Smelters.

MISSING TEAM FOUND IN NORTH

three times and we will answer. Please hurry. Signed, F. A. Trotter."

Five Miles From Note

Without stopping to repair the damaged pole line, Patrolman Barrett proceeded to search for the missing balloonist. At 10.30 a.m. this morning, he located them in a camp at Tower No. 736 which is aproximately five miles from where he came upon the note. He gave them such food as he had and immediately returned to repair the telephone line.

In a brief report to head office in Sudbury, he stated that both Van Orman and Trotter are in bad shape. Their clothing is tattered to ribbons and the soles of their shoes worn through.

"I never saw two men in my life who were so glad to see another human being as they were. They hollered with glee and hugged and kissed me as soon as they saw me," he told A. H. Skene, Hydro manager at Sudbury.

Ends 4-Day Quest.

Finding of the American balloonists ended a four-day quest for four missing starters in the Bennett race. The Poles, Captain Franciesk Hynek and Lieut. Znigview Erzny-ski, apparently winners of the race, were found near Riveire a Pierre, Que., late Saturday.

Barrett provided Van Orman and Trotter with food and hoped to be able to bring them to Sudbury before night.

Reports from the scene of their finding said the Americans landed in the Temagami forest reserve on Sunday, Sept. 3—probably only a few hours after they were sighted battling a terrific storm over Meteor lake and later were seen at a high altitude over the Ruel district.

They were not sure of the time of landing, but believed it to be about four in the afternoon, approximately 24 hours after they went aloft at Chicago. They descended from an altitude of 8,000 feet, landing on a pine tree more than a foot in diameter. The tree snapped in two from the force of the crash.

The bag was badly damaged, but neither of the men in the basket were more than superficially hurt. They walked about 15 miles to the power line.

PICKING UP.

CHICAGO.—At 15 Mrs. Sue Douglas was a sickly girl. In fact she was 60 before she began to enjoy robust health. Yesterday she celebrated her 100th anniversary.

RECORD ENTRY IS ASSURED

Shorthorns: Edwards Brothers of Watford; Wm. Duffy of Newmarket showing Jerseys, and many of the breeders from the local district.

The presence of so many exhibitors is convincing proof of the standard of livestock competing in Peterborough, and while this department is the most active on opening day, the directors also expect to have increased exhibits in the grain classes which have been encouraged by increased prize money this year.

The prizes for honey are also higher, and it is believed that there will be the biggest showing in this department the Exhibition has ever collected. Directors decided that the number of honey producers in the district should be recognized, and that the Exhibition should be a medium of stimulating this important industry.

F. J. A. Hall, secretary of the Board, told The Examiner that he fruit exhibits were more numerous, and if the sheep and swine sections maintain their prominence of the last few years, the increase in exhibits will be general in all the departments.

More Concessions

"If we had another building I think we could have filled it with concessions, there have been so many asking for space this morning," Mr. Milburn reported.

On every hand to-day's information supported Mayor Denne's predictions that the Exhibition this year would be the best balanced the directors have ever planned.

Just by way of brief summary:

The Scots Guards Band in two concerts to-night and Tuesday night.

Conklin's All-Canadian Midway, with amusements for everybody, and under the management of Paddy Conklin, an attraction feature which carries the confidence of the entire Board of Directors.

On the home hole, he drove into the rough and his niblick shot for the green landed in a bunker. His explosion shot was none too good, leaving him the 30-footer which he canned for his four and a sub-par 70.

$60,000 STOLEN IN ST. PAUL RAID

8 ROBBERS TAKE PART.

ST. PAUL, September 11 (C.P.). —Eight masked robbers held up two railway express company employees at the door of their office early to-day, escaping with two large cash boxes which the police said contained between $60,000 and $100,000.

The cash boxes were on a hand truck outside the door of the express company office, near the Union Station, ready to be taken to Minneapolis.

The police said the eight men backed a big sedan under the depot concourse, not far from the express company office.

As T. J. Mangan, a guard and S. Moles, messenger, opened the door of the office to wheel out the truck carrying the cash container, five robbers surrounded them.

Two men guarded the victims, while the others loaded the cash boxes into the automobile.

After disarming Mangan and Moles, the robbers sped away in their car. They fired two shots in the air as they went.

The victims said the robbers had white handkerchiefs tied around the lower parts of their faces. They said the license plates on their sedan were turned so it was impossible to read the numbers.

The loot included cash, cheques, and non-negotiable vouchers.

THORNCLIFFE SELECTIONS

The following look the best in their respective races at Thorncliffe tomorrow:

First Race—	Second Race—
Corsinax	Mythical Lore
Nantanis	Acajou
Hanover Jean	Clarry
Third Race—	Fourth Race—
Milestone	Crout Au Pot
Pat Gaiety	Exhibition
Mr Gaiety	Chrysmute
Fifth Race—	Sixth Race—
Bushman	Uppity
Partisan	Traumagne
White Thorn	Bright Day

Seventh Race—
Make Believe
Matadi
Virado.

THORNCLIFFE ENJOYED a wonderful opening on Saturday. In the morning the weather looked doubtful but as afternoon came on Old Sol returned to flood the plant grounds with sunlight to make weather conditions, including a fast track just right for the opening of the Autumn running horse season in Toronto. W. I. Newmarch's' Piyat was the winner in Francis Nelson memorial handicap, feature event of the day. The race was worth $875 to the winning owner together with the S.P.A. silver plate.

• • •

AND THE DOUBLES didn't do bad around the circuit on Saturday, the highest price being paid at Thorncliffe, that of $668.90 on Jay Vee and Miney Myerson for a $5 smacker wager. Money Man and Marion Ormont returned $198 at Blue Bonnets while Uluniu and Injustice paid off at $46 for the smallest price of the day at Detroit. Lincoln Fields ranked second highest price with Journey's end and Snobeedo at $225.42.

IN CONVERSATION with the writer several days ago, Harry Gildings remarked that he had next year's King's plate winner in his stable. On further questioning he admitted it was one of the two eligibles he has and its name is Pitchblende. It is owned by Cowie of Oakville and is out of the same dam as Queensway and Frothblower, both recent King's plate winners and claims for its sire none other than Harry Hatch's famous sprinter Sweepster. This hide had only started twice this year, once at Fort Erie, earlier in the summer and again Saturday at Thorncliffe. He won both events easily and as a word to the wise, don't overlook him in the Clarendon Plate and Coronation Stakes, both to be run this fall.

MAJOR, GENERAL ran a good second on opening day and should be ready to take down a purse his next time out. Khorasan received a very poor ride on Saturday and was asked to carry a large package of weight but before very long he will run away and hide on the very ones that defeated him on Saturday.

• • •

LADFIELD FINISHED far in his race but that is no discouragement as he probably needed this race as a tightner following his long lay-off. Golden Spur has developed into a very useful sprinter of late and don't be surprised if in the near future he takes a real high class field into camp. Conny Smythe has been keeping his good handicap performer, Ladder under cover for some time now and it is about time for him to go out and do his stuff. We don't think there is a horse in Canada today that can trim him in a six furlong event at even weights. Top Hattie has yet to win a race this summer but there are still twenty-seven days of racing in Ontario and he will probably find a muddy track in this time.

SHORTAGE OF WATER IN CAMBRAY STIRS MEMORY OF COSTLY WELL

Villagers Seek Hole Where Slicker Was Paid Richly To Drill For Oil.

TOOK CASH AND "FADED"

LINDSAY, Ont., Sept. 9 (C.P.).—A smooth-tongued city slicker who took hundreds of dollars out of Cambray, small village north-west of here, 70 years ago, was recalled to-day by a few of the oldest residents. Drought has so dried up wells in the district that a search is being made for a new water supply. And that brings Cambray to the most famous well of all.

No one even remembers the name of the flashy individual who strolled into the village one summer morning, smoking a 25-cent cigar, and remarking to a few friends on the similarity of Cambray soil and the soil of the great oil state, Pennsylvania. The stranger was so glib that when he let out the secret to a few, others farmers came with their hard-earned money, begging that it be taken away from them.

This the stranger did reluctantly.

It is not known if the man really thought there was oil in Cambray, but in due course a rickety drilling outfit arrived and was set up on the farm now occupied by Peter Wilkinson, south-west of the village. More money came to the promoter as the drilling continued, until time dragged on without any appearance of oil and the inevitable "I-told-you-so's" got to work.

Then, one night, the well promoter disappeared into the outer darkness, and when he returned next morning the well bore the odor of oil. The village ancients, hard-bitten farmers, and even school children, came, sniffed and admitted that it was so. For a few days the promoter was simply swamped with money, which he still accepted reluctantly, and then he disappeared. Land values had shot to unheard-of peaks.

Disappears Over Night

Suspicions that he had poured a quantity of oil down the well as bait proved correct but no trace of him was ever found. In time the rickety drilling machine fell down and rotted away.

About 30 years ago the hole was again discovered and was found to be overflowing with spring water. Surplus water was of no use at the time so a wooden plug was inserted in the hole and a stone piled on top of it, and in time it was forgotten.

But now Cambray is badly in need of water and the villagers believe that if they can locate this well once more their troubles will be over. The main difficulty is that no one remembers the exact place, and friendships of many year's standing are threatened as the older residents throw shovels over their shoulders and stamp off to various places on the farm trying to prove that they know where the fabulous, and possibly entirely imaginary, water supply is situated.

Rumor has it that many side bets are being put up on the energetic diggers, almost spading mud in each other's faces as they try to locate the lost oil well and get some benefits from the hundreds of dollars spent years ago to buy 25-cent cigars and flashy raiment for the smooth-tongued stranger.

Record Shipment is Made to Canadian Firm

Mr. W. K. Sloane, Local Manager of Tip Top Tailors has announced the release from his Head Office of the largest advertising campaign in the history of their business. "Our customers are very fortunate this Fall", stated Mr. Sloane, because they will be given the full benefit of the wonderful purchases made by our buyers last Spring when prices were so low. Here is a photograph which I just received showing the delivery at our Headquarters of Three Thousand Dollars worth of English, Scotch and Irish Worsteds, Tweeds and Serges. This represents the largest one time order of such material ever brought to this country. It also indicates the tremendous growth in Empire trade. At the same time, it is worthy of note that our designers have surpassed the best tailors in Bond Street in the new Fall suits and overcoats. Canadians are now looked upon generally as being amongst the best dressed men in the world. It will be advisable for men who are in need of new suits and overcoats to make their purchases early while the range is absolutely complete and because we anticipate an increase in price in the near future."

BOAT CAPSIZES FOUR DROWNED

BULL KILLS FARMER.

MONTREAL, Sept. 11 (C.P.).—A quadruple drowning, a man killed by a bull, a child struck by a street car and an apparent suicide constituted Quebec's week-end toll of violent deaths.

At Contrecoeur, near Montreal, a rowboat crossing the St. Lawrence River was swamped by the swell of a passing steamer. Of the seven occupants four were drowned. Those who lost their lives were Normand Philille, 37; Paul Emile Lussier, 22; Rosaire Regimbald, 23, and Sylva Gauthier, 22, all of Montreal. Ernest Lapointe, Herve Charbonneau and Hermenegilde Villamaire were able to cling to the overturned boat until rescued.

In attempting to chain an angry bull at a country fair, Gustave Bordeleau, 22, a farm hand, was gored and almost instantly killed at St. Druno. The animal charged as Bordeleau was attempting to hook a chain into his nose ring.

At Quebec the coroner will open an inquest to-day into the death of Joseph Dube, 50-year-old war veteran, who was found dying in his room with a bullet through his chest and a rifle at his side.

Gertrude Paquet, four years old, was struck and killed by a street car while playing in the street near her parents' home in Quebec.

Unrest Continues

Although Havana generally received the new government dispassionately, unrest continued in the interior.

Two men, one an army sergeant, were arrested for conspiracy in Marianao, near here. In Oriente province rebels were reported in the field. They were said to be Menocal supporters.

The Havana officers, loyal to Dr. de Cespedes who gave way before an enlisted men's coup last Monday, demanded his return but indicated that whether he continue in office or resign shortly after his re-instalation was for him to decide.

Dr. Gau San Martin, a lanky surgeon who has had few direct political connections, received the demands fom Colonel Horacio Ferrer, De Cespedes' Secretary of War, and announced he would answer them some time to-day.

The officers also asked that Sergio Carbo, publisher and junta member, and all leaders of the army and navy "mutiny" be returned to civil life.

In taking the oath of office yesterday, Grau San Martin promised his government would assure the "maximum respect for all interests." Later he said his administration would be friendly to the United States and would honor all obligations "to the last penny."

SIX POUND PUFF BALL IS CAMPBELLFORD FIND

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 11 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent. — A record for puff balls has been made at Campbellford, when Bert Reynolds, a local resident, produced one of these plants, measuring 44 inches in circumference and weighing six pounds. Another ball measured 21 inches and weighed one and three-quarter pounds. He secured the puff balls in his garden, near a wood pile.

Wrong Shells.

Had it not been that rim-fire cartridges were used in a centre-fire gun, it is doubtful if Rymal would have been alive to tell the tale. Examination revealed that the trigger had been twice pulled, the bullets failing to explode because they were the wrong type for the weapon.

When the gunman made two attempts in quick succession to fire, Rymal realized that to fight was his only chance, and a fierce struggle ensued. He had been standing with his hands in the air while the robber searched his clothing. Throwing himself on the thug, he knocked him off his feet and then he grappled with him on the roadway.

Rymal fought for the gun, and when the man released his grasp, he obtained possession of it, but the bandit jumped to his feet and ran into a field. Rymal jumped the fence and gave chase, capturing his quarry 30 yards away. Blows were struck, and as the tottering thug weakly fought back, Rymal cracked him over the head with the butt end of the revolver and he dropped unconscious.

Dragging him by the coat-collar, the motorist hauled him back to the road, lifted him into the back seat of his auto and drove to Clappison Cut, where he called the Provincial Police.

Rymal had sensed trouble when he heard someone creeping through a thicket. Next he saw a man standing at his car door. He was told to get out of the car, throw up his hands and hand over his money. Rymal was just out of the machine when he heard the trigger click.

Tree Top Catches Balloon.

QUEBEC, Sept. 11—Capt. Francisek Hynek and Lieut. Zbignski Burzynski rested yesterday in the village of Riviere a Pierre and in a telephone interview told of their adventure while their waited for the arrival of the Polish consul.

Their balloon landed in the top of a lofty tree 100 miles from Riviere a Pierre last Monday. The two men, with nothing to eat but a dozen oranges, then started a hike back to civilization which lasted until noon Saturday, when they struck the railroad tracks which led them to the Village of Lemieux. From there they rode in to Riviere a Pierre.

"Our balloon," said Lieut. Burzynski, "landed in the tree at 10.46 a.m. Monday Chicago time, due to lack of air. We had covered about 1,050 miles which we think is a new record. We climbed out of the basket taking the dozen oranges with us.

"For five solid days we walked through dense forests, not sighting a single soul until we struck the railroad tracks at noon Saturday. Then we found out that we were near the Village of Lemieux where we were greeted warmly. We were given substantial meals—our first in five days.

Craft Undamaged

The baloon is not damaged and I think they will send a plane to salvage it because it is in the midst of a dense forest.

"We were aloft for 39½ hours. I think that minerals caused our compass to vary and for that reason I can't say exactly how far we were from this village.

"We suffered no hardships other than acute hunger. On the third day after we landed we saw a lake and a canoe with fishing tackle but since there was no road leading to the lake we could not get to it.

"We rationed ourselves to an orange a day each, and fortunately did not suffer from thirst as there was plenty of water along the way. At night we built fires and one of us slept for an hour at a time while the other stood guard. There was plenty of game around but we were helpless since we had no weapons of any kind.

"When we finally reached this village we were amazed to learn that the world considered us hopelessly lost and that we apparently had drifted out over the Atlantic."

The balloonists said they will learn from the Polish Consul whether they are to return to Chicago via Montreal or by way of Quebec.

Two search parties sent out by the Province of Quebec Saturday still are in the woods unaware that the two men have reached civilization.

CHARLES FOSTER IS FINED $200

DENIES OWNERSHIP.

A bottle of moonshine liquor and several other bottles which were alleged to have contained the same fiery liquid held the spotlight in police court to-day. Considerable mystery surrounded the ownership of the illicit spirits and the bottles, a quartet of witnesses swearing positively that they knew nothing about them. However, the bottled evidence was uncovered by Constable L. A. Denton, R.C.M.P. of Cobourg, and Constable George Carey, in the outbuildings on the property of Charles Foster, 72 Monaghan Road, on August 5, and after all the evidence was in, Police Magistrate Langley found that Foster was guilty of the charge and that he did have in possession illicit spirits without lawful excuse under section 181 of the Excise Act. He ordered Foster to pay a fine of $200 or be confined to the county jail for the next three months.

Constable Denton and Carey both told of searching the Foster property and finding several hundreds of empty whiskey bottles in the woodshed, drive shed and barn. One full bottle of moonshine was unearthed in a stall in the barn, they said, and a statement from the Government analyst showed that it was 57 percent proof spirits.

Foster denied any knowledge of the whiskey bottles or the full bottle. He maintained that the empty bottles belonged to Golden Bugg, a man who worked about the place, who collected and sold bottles. Mrs. Foster also denied any knowledge of the liquor or the bottles. Golden Bugg, Hart Avenue, admitted ownership of eight empty whiskey bottles which he had secured from a local veterinary but denied possession of any of the other bottles. Levi Mosher, 44 New Romaine, who also said he was a frequent visitor at the Foster home, said he knew nothing concerning the whiskey or bottles. Bert Howden, next witness, told of frequent visits to the Foster's but denied having seen any liquor there.

Magistrate Langley in giving sentence said there was no doubt that Foster was guilty under the meaning of the Act although it had not been shown that the liquor was actually in his possession as in the meaning of the Criminal Code.

J. A. O'Brien conducted the defence and Constable Denton prosecuted.

Two local men, charged with being intoxicated in a public place, pleaded guilty and were fined the usual $10 and costs. One of the pair, Chief Newhall said, was trying to support the wall of a local bank while the other was found asleep in a gutter.

Weddings

EISDELL—GRAHAME.

The wedding was solemnized by the Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr, on Saturday, September 9th, of Hubert Mortimer Eisdell, only son of the late John Arthur Eisdell of London, England, and cousin of the late Sir William Mortimer Clarke, at one time Lieutenant Governor of Ontario, and Lilian de Alvardo Grahame, second daughter of Captain Thomas Grieve of 55 Brock street, late 6th Dragoon Guards.

MOWAT—REID.

"Pale yellow gladioli and large white exhibition 'mums were used in lovely profusion in St. John's Church, Quebec and Humberside Avenues, Toronto, on Saturday afternoon, when Agnes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fraser D. Reid, Kingsway Crescent, became the bride of William H. Mowat of Windsor, son of Mr. Alexander Mowat and the late Mrs. Mowat of Peterborough. Rev. C. W. Holdsworth officiated and the church organist played soft music throughout the ceremony.

"The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore an exquisite robe of vellum colored satin, fashioned after the mediaeval type, with drop shoulder formed by striking corded cartridge pleats outlining a yoke of matching net. A very full trained skirt fell from a low hip line which was also finished with the cartridge pleats, setting off the straight front panel of the gown. Voluminus sleeves with fitted forearm, distinguished the bodice. The bridal veil was of matching tulle, moulded to the head into a pointed Juliet cap by two folds of satin, the hair of the bride gleaming through the net. She carried a muff bouquet of pale yellow orchids, gardenias and lilies of the valley from which fell streamers of maidenhair fern and single flowers.

"The procession of bridesmaids included Mrs. John Kent as matron of honor, Miss Kathleen Murphy of Haileybury, Miss Athol Bain and Miss Alice Langstaff. All wore similar gowns of yellow chiffon made on princess lines, form fitting to the knees and flaring below in three flounces which formed a train at the back. The bodices were distinguished by bateau neckline and sleeves formed of two flounces similar to the skirt flounces, all being edged with matching mohair to give them a stiffened effect. The bridesmaids' hats were picture models of the yellow chiffon with crowns fashioned entirely of small yellow daisies. They carried tiny muffs of single yellow 'mums from which fell long streamers of maidenhair ferns and yellow 'mums, emphasizing the centre panel idea of the whole wedding.

"Mr. Fraser Wilson was best man and the ushers: Mr. Tullis Carter of Winnipeg, Mr. R. D. Mulholland of Montreal, Mr. A. de L. Panet of Windsor and Mr. Fred Pugh of Windsor.

"Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, 65 Kingsway Crescent. The bridal party received in the gardens, lovely with summer flowers and picturesque lily pool, while the bride's table had been arranged in a large marque from which refreshments were dispensed. Mr. and Mrs. Reid, Mr. Alex. Mowat, father of the groom, and the groom's sister, Mrs. A. C. Macdonald of Cleveland, received with the bridal party on the terrace. Mrs. Reid had chosen a Viennet model of pied d'alouette crepe lisette made on long princess lines, a wide brimmed hat of matching blue felt and corsage bouquet of bronze orchids. Mrs. Macdonald was in a pale green ensemble with corsage of orchids.

"Later the bride and groom left on their honeymoon trip to Virginia, the bride travelling in a smart suit of light beige tweed, the coat fashioned after Schiaparelli with widened shoulders, collarless and buttoned down the full three-quarter length. With it she wore one of the new high brimless hats of brown felt with accessories to match and a string of three martin furs. On their return they will reside in Windsor."

REILLY—HUFFMAN

Early Autumn leaves, gladioli in varied shades, and palms and ferns formed a pretty setting for an interesting wedding, solemnized at one o'clock today at Trinity United Church by the Rev. D. Wren, when Hylda Beulah, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Sheldon Huffman of Park Hill Road, became the bride of Mr. Leonard Mackenzie Reilly, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Reilly of Toronto.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was exquisitely gowned in ivory white crepe-back satin, made on long princess lines, with a cowl neckline and a row of tiny, self-covered buttons extending to the waistline, at the back. The sleeves were puffed to the elbow where they tightened to the wrist, and the back of the frock, fashioned in the new mermaid silhouette, ended in a spade-shaped train.

The long white tulle veil, following the lines of the train, was formed into a close-fitting cap about the face by a delicate chaplet of seed pearls and clusters of orange blossoms over either ear. A band of real lace extended across the brow.

The costume was completed by brocaded white satin slippers, light flesh-colored silk hose and short white kid gloves. The bride wore a string of pearls and carried a handkerchief of hand-made lace which was carried by her mother and grandmother, at their weddings. The bouquet was of pink Butterfly roses, showered with lily of the valley and adiantum fern.

The bridesmaid, Miss Olga Huffman, sister of the bride, wore a lovely frock of pale rose-pink French chiffon. The skirt was fashioned with ruffles at either side, in panels extending from the knee to the hem, and the same soft ruffle treatment appeared above the puffed elbow sleeves.

A gay French touch to the pretty dress was a wide sash in two tones of taffeta; sunset yellow and white, which was tied at the back. The same soft shades edged the large hat of pink mohair. White kid slippers with flesh-colored hose, and white gloves, were worn, and the bridesmaid carried a bouquet of Claude Pernet yellow roses, tied with yellow.

Mr. Cecil Reilly of Toronto acted as best man for his brother.

The wedding music was played by Mrs. George Nicholls, and Miss Isobel Black was the soloist, singing "At Dawning" during the signing of the register. Miss Black wore a gown of cafe au lait georgette, with matching hat and slippers.

After the ceremony, a reception to fifty guests was held at the home of the bride's parents, where Mr. and Mrs. Reilly of Toronto and Mr. and Mrs. Huffman received with their children. Mrs. Reilly was gowned in Eleanor blue crepe, with black hat and shoes and corsage bouquet of deep pink Premier roses. Miss Huffman wore a jacket frock of Vionett blue triple sheer crepe, trimmed with blue lace, a hat of blue velvet, black kid shoes, white gloves, and corsage bouquet of Butterfly roses.

The rooms were arranged with a profusion of gladioli, cosmos, yellow Shasta daisies, and dwarf helenium, and the table, done with a lace cloth, was centered by the three-tiered bride cake.

Mr. and Mrs. Reilly left later by motor for a honeymoon trip through the New England States and the Maritime Provinces. On their return, they will live in Toronto.

The bride's travelling outfit was a tailored suit of light brown flecked tweed, with blouse of red crepe, brown satin hat, brown suede shoes and brown gloves and purse of red leather.

The gift of the bridegroom to the bride was a diamond brooch, to the bridesmaid a sterling silver bracelet, to the best man a signet ring, to the organist and soloist, bracelets, and to the ushers, stick pins.

THIEVES AT WORK IN LAKE DISTRICT

Cottages Entered — Gasoline Stolen, Also Outboard Motors.

STONEY LAKE, September 11.—Complaints that several untenanted cottages have been entered and that thievery has been prevalent around Stoney Lake during the past few weeks have been heard from cottagers.

The entrance of maurauders into the cottage of Charles Brewer on Big Island, near Kawartha Park, was discovered by visitors to the cottage yesterday. A screen had been cut from a door and a lock forced by the prowlers in gaining the inside of the building. Evidence of a search for valuables was to be seen, but apparently nothing of value was removed.

Gasoline thieves have been at work at McCracken's Landing and other points on the lake. Frequently cottagers have discovered the tanks of their cars parked near the boat landings siphoned dry by petty thieves. During the summer season a number of motorists at McCracken's Landing have been forced to follow the practice of keeping only small quantities of gasoline in the cars at a time.

Provincial police are still on the hunt for the thieves who stole two valuable outboard motors at Crowe's Landing earlier in the season.

REAL RESULTS

PHILADELPHIA.—Four-year-old Joseph Smolinski got the surprise of his life swatting flies. A few minutes after he smacked at one on the front of a fire-alarm box, fire engines roared up. Exasperated firemen said the jar apparently had set off the alarm.

GOLD OUTPUT WILL INCREASE SAYS McCREA

Abitibi Canyon to Play Big Part in Northern Ontario Development.

BEFORE BANK PROBE.

(By Ray Brown, C.P. Staff Writer.)

TORONTO, Sept. 11.— A statement by Hon. Charles McCrea, Ontario Minister of Mines, on the metal production of the province, featured Saturday's sitting of the Royal Commission on Banking. He dealt particularly with gold, and, in answer to a question by Lord MacMillan, Commission chairman, said he expected the production of this precious metal to increase. He felt that a power development "known politically as the Abitibi canyon," would be a factor in increasing mineral production of Northern Ontario.

Up to the year 1912, the total production of gold in Canada had been approximately $5,000,000, continued Mr. McCrea. During the period from 1923 to 1932 gold production had jumped to $333,000,000.

This year it was anticipated that gold production would amount to $45,000,000 which, with the premium added, would amount to $62,000,000 in terms of currency.

Mining Stood Up.

Agriculture and lumbering, two great industries of the province, had suffered seriously as a result of the depression, the Ontario Minister continued. The mineral industry, however, had stood up well. This applied to the production of both base and precious metals.

A tribute to the assistance rendered by the chartered banks to the mining industry was paid by Mr. McCrea. While banks did not finance mines, their assistance in the business of mining had been very valuable.

The Commission sat until about one o'clock in the afternoon, and again there was no dearth of submissions, James M. Connor, Secretary of the Labor Party, asked that bank directors should not be permitted to hold directorships in any other organizations.

"The present situation is exceedingly dangerous," he said. He gave statistics covering the number of directorships held by Canadian bank directors.

Lord MacMillan asked the witness if it was not desirable that the directors of banks should be men of affairs experienced in business.

Mr. Connor replied that he thought a bank director had sufficient to do in that office alone.

Lord MacMillan remarked that he quite agreed with Mr. Connor in regards to what he called "guinea pig directors."

Banks and Education.

On behalf of the Ontario Educational Associations, and number of Teachers' Associations in the Province, S. H. Henry submitted a brief dealing with the relation of banks to municipal financing, with particular reference to educational budgets. In the past two or three years, he said, action taken by banks in relation to municipalities "seemed not only coercive but unintelligent." In a populous county of Ontario, which he did not name, Mr. Henry said that supervisor of the banks last winter met representatives of all the High School Boards and told them that they must cut their educational budgets to 60 per cent of the previous year's figure or no money would be forthcoming.

Mr. Henry declared that such drastic measures had a most definite effect on the teaching of children in the province.

The League for Social Reconstruction, through Graham Spry, laid before the Commission a brief, but made no verbal representations. Mr. Spry explained that the points covered were similar to that which Professor J. F. Parkinson, of Toronto University, had dealt with in a paper just presented.

CONKLIN SHOWS ARRIVE AT "EX" FOR BIG WEEK

Show Arrived From Kingston on Sunday—Unloaded This Morning.

20 CAR TRAIN.

Touring Exclusively in Canada—Bigger and Better Than Ever.

Dawn to-day saw the yellow-painted cars of Conklin's All-Canadian Show Train, disgorge an army of showmen, whose combined efforts effected the mushroom-like growth of the big Midway that is now open at Peterborough Industrial Exhibition.

Larger than last year—and better if that is possible, the show arrived over Canadian National lines from Kingston early yesterday afternoon, just about twelve hours after the Midway had closed its engagement in the "Limestone City."

Yesterday afternoon and evening, being Sunday, the showmen enjoyed a well-earned rest, but bright and early to-day work started in earnest for them all. The train consists of twenty cars, four of which house the staff of 185 hands. The remaining sixteen baggage cars each 80 feet in length, or double that of the standard baggage cars, had to be unloaded; the paraphernalia transported to the Fair Grounds and set up.

That represented real work, but the men are accustomed to that. Possibly one of the hardest workers is J. W. "Paddy" Conklin, president and general manager of Conklin's All-Canadian Shows. A man of youthful appearance magnetic personality, keen business ability, and broad knowledge, he has so guded the destinies of the show he controls, that it ranks as the biggest and best in Canada. He was not content to rest when the train arrived yesterday afternoon, but was found by The Examiner at the Fair Grounds busy at the end of a steel tape measure, mapping out the plans to which his men were to conform in erecting the Midway this morning.

Pride of the Show

It is on the train that Mr. and Mrs. Conklin make their home amid luxurious surroundings. Occupying a special coach their apartment is most compact and inviting. It consists of a large living room, bedroom, office, bathroom, den and kitchenette, the same as last year, but with the important addition of a nursery for the 4-months old baby that was born to Mr. and Mrs. Conklin at Hamilton early in May. In care of a special nurse, baby is the pride of the show train.

Mr. Conklin's private apartment car is one of four cars serving as the living quarters for a large percentage of the people connected with the show. Each person on the train has his allotted berth or compartment comfortably fitted up to meet all requirements in the way of privacy and personal convenience. Clean bed linen is provided at frequent intervals, there being enough linen carried to last four week with three changes a week.

Hudson Bay blankets are provided for the comfort of the show people and of these there are enough in stock on the train to provide two for each person, should a sudden drop in temperature make it necessary.

Staff Well Accommodated

Connecting with the men's sleeping quarters is the club car, an airy well-lighted coach fitted with games, reading material and a canteen. The married couples connected with the show have a separate coach, containing a series of separate rooms, each equipped with a comfortable bed, dressing cases, cupboards, bookshelves and a wash basin with hot and cold running water at all times.

Touring exclusively in Canada, Conklin's Show Train is the exclusive property of the company, and under an arrangement with the two great railway concerns, matters are so facilitated that it may travel over either of the company's lines.

The train started its present season's tour at Hamilton, going from there to Kitchener and other places in Western Ontario before heading off for Northern Ontario goldfields and as far west as Lloydminister, Alberta.

Frank R. Bickford general agent Conklin's All-Canadian Shows told The Examiner that the show had experienced a most successful season so far this year. He was of the opinion that conditions generally were beginning to show slight improvement over last year.

Conklin's Show Growing

"It is significant," he remarked, "that while the tendency so far has been for other shows to reduce their size, we have actually continued to grow. The world's entertainment centres were combed for the best material, and the result is a wonder aggregation of variety, magnificence, originality and clean sensationalism'."

The astounding sideshows include Princess Dolly, the diminutive 33-inch, wife of a normal husband, and her normal baby, Marguerite; Monkey Circus; Will Wright's world-renowned "Death on the Guillotine"; Al Salvail's World Museum of Freaks featuring Ernie and Len, two brothers with one head—alive; and other attractions.

It will be recalled that "Ernie and Len," who was born at St. Joseph's Hospital, Winnipeg, on June 7, 1931, was at Conklin's Show here last year. Now at the age of 2¼ years "Ernie and Len" is here again. It was stated by Mr. Bickford that he is "the pet of the show," and despite his physical abnormality, is a child of unusual brightness of disposition, who gives promise of having the gift of impersonation, and mimicry. At the age where most other children are just beginning to talk and walk, he can mimic Bluey-Bluey, and other people in the show with remarkable ease.

There are an increased number of the latest and finest rides to provide joyous thrills for kids of all ages: the Lindy Loop last word in thrillers; the Tilt-a-Whirl; Ferris Wheel; Merry-Go-Round; Caterpillar; Chair-o-Planes; the Whip, and the Shetland Pony Ride.

From Peterborough, the show train will go to Stratford, then double back to Lindsay, after which it will play at Collingwood; Owen Sound and then wind up the 1933 season at Leamington, with possibility of a further engagement at Hamilton. At the close of the season in October, it is learned, Mr. and Mrs. Conklin and baby are planning a vacation trip to Honolulu.

President Dr. Moir announced that in association with the Women's Patriotic League the Rotary Club proposed to put on four high-class concerts, two at the end of October and two in the middle of November. Cogs Drop First Game of Picton Series 3-2

"Lefty" Phillips Stars In Relief Role to Give Homesters Game Lead

COGS PLAY STELLAR GAME IN GARDEN; CUTHBERTSON LEADS CLUBMEN AT BAT

Cogs lost the first game of their intermediate O.B.A.A. playdown series in Picton Saturday, 3 to 2, before seven hundred fans. Great relief hurling by Lefty Phillips, who was rushed to the rescue when the Peterborough team climbed to within winning distance in the eighth, saved the day for the Picton outfit. Masterson twirled a four-hit game for Cogs but his teammates failed to hit in the pinches.

It was a classy ball game between evenly-matched teams. Some fine hurling was dished up and smart fielding, particularly by the Clubmen. Casey Masterson struck out four, walked three and gave them but two hits in the first frame, one in the seventh and another in the eighth. Church kept Cogs' seven hits scattered till the eighth and he fanned eight. Phillips, who replaced him, retired the side and then fanned three right-hand hitters in a row in the ninth.

Cuthbertson led the locals at bat with three in three trips, Padgett, Rooke, Moore and Masterson getting the others. Thompson topped the homesters with the willow, clouting out a double and single in four. Leavens and Hudgins were the only others to hit safely.

Play Nice Defensive Game.

The whole Cog squad played a nice defensive game, infield and outfield clicking in snappy fashion, with Masterson having five assists in box. Moore and Padgett featured on good saves. Rorke and Church were the best defensively for the winners, some of the others booting the ball around at times. They handed Cogs one run.

Picton tallied two runs in the first frame on a fielder's choice, after a walk, Thompson's' double and Leavens' single. They got their other marker in the third, Rorke walking, pilfering second, taking third on an out and getting home on a fielder's choice when Wood juggled the ball after tagging him in time. Not a runners reached third the rest of the way, good pitching and fast fielding cutting them down.

How They Scored

Cogs went out in order in the first two, and Cuthbertson's single and steal came to naught in the third. An error, steal and Rooke's hit had runners on second and third in the fourth but the next two went out. A walk and hit by Cuthbertson was wasted in the fifth, as was Moore's hit in the sixth. Cuthbertson hit again in the seventh, stole second, went to third on the catcher's wild heave and scored on a bad throw by the centre-fielder Padgett singled and stole in the next, going to third on an error but was nipped easily at the plate on an infield roller Rooke, safe on a fielder's choice, moved up as Moore walked and scored on Masterson's single. Moore tried to score on a squeeze play by Vennest but the latter was thrown out to end the the frame. Three fanned in the ninth.

SOFTBALL REPLAY HERE ON TUESDAY

Oshawa Tuxis and Sugar Bowl to Tangle in Third Game of O.A.S.A. Series.

Another great men's softball playoff game is billed for Stevenson Park at 5.15 Tuesday evening. Oshawa will be here once more to tangle with Sugar Bowl in their hectic O.A.S.A. playdown series. The game is a re-play of their 7-7 tie here last week. The Bowlmen are one game up on the series by virtue of their ten-inning victory over the Oshawa outfit in the Motor City Saturday afternoon.

This defeat was the first one suffered all year by the smart Tuxis team, and they are loud in their threats of a terrible vengeance here tomorrow. However, George Dorner's boys are confident they can now take this squad again and advance into the next round of the Ontario softball race. It promises to be one swell battle at Riverside, as any two teams that finish one game in a dead heat and have to go overtime to settle the second, must be pretty well-matched. Lefty Sturgeon will likely do the locals' flinging in this fixture.

TWIN WIN FOR ALBANY.

(By Canadian Press)

Buffalo earned its play-off berth on the closing day, beating Rochester 5-2, while Toronto took a 7-5 beating from Montreal Royals. The net result was to give Buffalo the fourth place and a play-off place, while Toronto took fifth by a fraction of a percentage point over Montreal.

Home runs by Ollie Carnegie and Buck Crouse helped Buffalo down the Red Wings as Charley Perkins allowed only eight scattered hits. The Bisons flogged Jim Mooney for 11 hits in 5 1-3 innings to win the tie.

Montreal slugged Orlin Collier for eight hits and six runs in the first three innings, and then coasted in to its victory over Toronto. The Leafs drove Johnny Michaels out of the box with a four-run attack in the sixth, but Art Smith stopped them thereafter.

22nd Homer for Hoag.

Myril Hoag's 22nd homer with the bases loaded in the fifth climaxed a six-run rally and gave Newark a 6-5 decision over Baltimore. It was "Red Rolfe Day" and the Newark shortstop responded by making four errors for one of the poorest fielding days of his career. He contributed a double and two singles to Newark's attack, however.

Albany closed its season with a pair of 3-1 victories over the last place Jersey City Skeeters. Albany finished seven, a half-game behind Montreal.

Unofficial Averages Gives International Honors to Baltimore Slugger.

BOONE IS SECOND.

(By Canadian Press)

Julius Solters, of Baltimore, who was recently sold to the Boston Red Sox, captured the International League batting crown for 1933, unofficial averages compiled yesterday at the conclusion of the regular season show.

Solters finished the regular playing schedule with a mark of .361, three points more than his nearest rival, Ike Boone of Toronto, who won the I. L. batting crown in 1931 with a mark of .356. Boone finished the 1933 season with an average of .358. Solters' mark of .361, however, is far short of the high average of .391 with which George Puccinelli won last season.

CLOCKMAKERS TRIUMPH OVER KEENE 9-5 IN FINAL TUSSLE OF GIRLS' SOFTBALL SERIES

Bond Trophy, Emblematic of League Championship, Brought to City for First Time Since Loop Formed—Attendance Records Broken.

MILDRED MORTIMER STARS ON WESTCLOX MOUND, WINNERS OUTHIT RURALS BY 12 TO 10 COUNT

A four-run rally in the eighth innings of the deciding game for the championship of the Ladies' City and District Softball League, gave the Westclox girls a 9 to 5 victory over the classy Keene team in a sterling battle on Saturday afternoon at the East City Bowl before a crowd of fans that surpassed all previous records for attendance. This splendid victory brings the Bond Trophy to the city for the first time since the league was formed three years ago, as the redoubtable Rurals from the lakeshore village had captured the laurels two years in a row and this season forced a five-game series into seven battles before a winner was decided.

Mildred Mortimer, Westclox first string hurler, took over the mound duties on Saturday after weathering a period of illness that has kept her out of two playoff games and led her fighting teammates to a neat win. She turned the visitors back in six out of the nine frames scoreless, striking out three and walking two. In the fifth innings with two in scoring position, she nabbed a line-drive and threw out a runner at third for the only double-play of the game and again in the ninth she took a hot one off Lois McCarthy's bat to retire the side.

Good Mound Performance.

Mary McCarthy, pitching ace for the visitors, tossed them in for Keene and showed an improved style over her previous performances as she only passed one batter. The Westclox, however, seemed to find her no mystery and pelted the horsehide for twelve hits, including two doubles. She blanked the locals in four frames, fanned two and walked one. Difficult situations developed in two innings, the third and sixth when she loaded the bases with two out but on both occasions her teammates made spectacular catches to retire the side. Dot Gainor taking a high foul fly in the 3rd and Helen Nelson's catch of Laura Chartren's liner in the sixth was the feature play of the game.

The Clockmakers came through in the field with their best performance of the year, with every outfielder having a perfect card. Dot Merret in left, Audrey Crary in centre and Barb Blade in right dividing seven chances between them, the first named making the most difficult catches. In the infield Marie Ferguson at short was the star. She nailed two flies and six assists without a miscue. Chartren, Hawkes and Gladys Mortimer all went good while Dot Webb, catching played a real heady game.

Fail To Hit in Pinches

By ALEX. J. MORRISON
Central Press

Number 92

ALEX MORRISON says:

To play any shot successfully your downswing must be absolutely simple.

This means that both mental and physical processes must be simplified to a point where you can devote most of your attention to hitting the ball.

Hitting it clean is next to impossible with the amount of worry you generally go through during your downswing.

Once you've reached the end of your backswing you should think only of swinging directly downward toward the ball and keeping your chin back.

ELECTRICS WIN FROM SMELTERS

LEAGUE FIXTURE.

MARMORA, Sept. 11 (Examiner Correspondence).—Deloro football team were at home on Saturday afternoon to Canadian General in a Peterborough and District League fixture, and after a fast game suffered defeat by the score of 2-1. Considering their long period of inactivity, they gave a rather good exhibition and though they lost out, one feature of the game seemed to afford them satisfaction—they had for the first time in many a moon kept their worthy opponent, Ben McMaster from scoring.

The visitors kicked off and for a while play was even. Then, racing for the ball as it threatened the Deloro goal, Smith connected to send it into his own net. Shortly afterwards, Burgess scored a beautiful goal as a result of good combination close in; O'Neill had not the slightest chance to save. Deloro now took up the aggressive and many good movements just lacked the necessary finish. Bolton was in great form and his saving of Hart's terrific drive at close range was remarkable. A nearer approach to a score quickly followed. Brooks hit the crossbar and then Hart and Brown were unlucky in the space of a few seconds. Gray not long afterwards outwitted Blowers, but failed to get a goal. With the venue of play changing, a corner came to the C.G.E. Ben McMaster nicely headed the ball but O'Neill cleverly cleared. Half time came with C.G.E. leading by 2 goals to nil.

Endeavoring to increase their lead the visitors pressed in the opening stages of the second half, but the Smelters defended soundly. During a rush on the other end, a penalty of a questionable nature was given against Bolam and this, taken by Brown, was successful.

Burgess almost scored again following another dash by the C.G.E. Both teams kept up the pact until the final whistle blew and the goalies were kept busy. The best save was that of O'Neill's when he negotiated Alex Mitchell's hot shot.

CANINES LOSE 3-2 DECISION TO LANSDOWNES

Oster's Double With Two On in 10th Settles O.B.A.A. Semi-finals.

LESURF GOOD ON MOUND.

Oster's double base clout into left field was the death knell for Herb Ralph's Terriers, local entrants in the O.B.A.A. Juvenile semi-finals and they dropped a 3-2 decision to Toronto Lansdownes in a ten-inning struggle at Bowmanville on Saturday. The game was a nip-and-tuck struggle from beginnng to end with the Petes having an edge on their opponents in the defensive line.

"Lefty" Lesurf was a shade the better man on the mound than his opponent McLaren who held the Terriers to 6 hits against the seven gained by his teammates off Peterborough offerings, the local portsider had eight strike-outs to his credit with only one walk, while McClaren had six strikeouts and three free bases on balls.

The Canines would have had a better chance to gain a win Saturday had it not been for misplays on the part of two of the local aggregation; Mowry failing a victim to the ancient hidden ball trick after gaining first on a clean single to centre. And again in the tenth frame Allen Clarke slaughtered the Petes' chances of getting in the winning run by attempting to steal third base, to be caught out and retired the side.

How They Scored

Allen Clarke started the ball rolling for the Terriers in the sixth frame, gaining first on a single to deep second. Starr went to first on a fielder's choice, while Clarke rested safely on second when keystone baseman dropped the ball. Galvin hit into a double play from short to second to first. Dunkley singled to centre field, scoring Clarke. The Toronto crew evened it up in their half, when Donnelly scored on Coleman's single over third.

The Petes again took the lead in the 7th: Lesurf connecting for a double sacker into right field. Clarke gained the initial bag when the first baseman dropped a perfect throw from third, Lesurf scoring on the error. The Lansdownes again tied it up in the 8th, Surfiis scoring on Donnelly's long hit into centre field. Three batsmen won the game for the playground crew in the 10th, Surfiis singled through left field; Curtis repeated into centre and with two men on bases Oster doubled over the left field fence to score Surfiis and settle the juvenile semi-finals.

SPORTS DAY BY DAY

Baseball—Softball—Lacrosse
Soccer—Wrestling, and Others

(By C. J. P.)

Two local ball teams won and lost two over the week-end—making it a fifty-fifty frolic. Only one game was played here, the gals' final one at the Bowl, the others being in Oshawa, Bowmanville and Picton, Westclox gals' won their game over Keene, 9-5, to cop the title; Sugar Bowl softballers licked Oshawa Tuxis, 12-6, in overtime to get an edge on their O.A.S.A. series; Terrier juveniles lost a 3-2 heartbreaker in ten frames to Toronto Lansdownes to eliminate the local boys from the O.B.A.A. playoffs; and Cogs dropped their first intermediate O.B.A.A. game to Picton, 3 to 2. All good battles, two going overtime

• • • • • • •

Cogs couldn't hit in the right spots but at that they almost took the decision in Picton. They were coming on fast in the seventh and eighth, after repeatedly threatening, but Lefty Phillips dashed to the rescue of Church and saved the day with his sizzling stants. Casey Masterson allowed only four bingles but it takes hitting to win games. Cogs had the better pitching and fielding, and came mighty close to squeezing that equalizer over several times, but it was no soap. They were due to play the other game here this afternoon at three in Riverside.

Down in Oshawa there was lots of fun as the Bowlmen slipped the Tuxis lads their first licking of the year. They didn't like it, nohow! Ross Currie, besides flinging a good game, smashed out two homers to score seven runs, one in the tenth coming with the bases loaded. It looked like a young Donnybrook for a while in the tenth when Powell came in to pitch. He's the bird that all the fuss was made over here last week as he uses a side-arm delivery which is contrary to softball pitching rules. Umpire Bob Batley warned him about it again and then began calling "balls" whenever he brought the wing around in a tennis sweep. Players and fans gathered 'round Robert and made noises like a Southern mob with a nigger and a rope. But the field was finally cleared and the melee continued.

This is one ruling upon which the umps was okay. It's' clearly covered in the rule-book and rules should be lived up to. Any team can dig up star twirlers if they let 'em bring the pellet around with the whole body back of it. Bob ought to be getting kind of used to mob scene now, being smack in the middle of one not so long ago up in Lindsay. The only difference was that in Oshawa they cleared off the grounds. Sugar Bowl and Tuxis resume their series in Stevenson Park at 5.15 tomorrow (Tuesday), a replay of their 7-7 tie of last week. If they Bowlmen take this one, they advance into the next round. If not, they must play another tilt with Oshawa on neutral grounds. Should be a lively old scrap.

Herb Ralph's Terrier Juveniles are out of it now, though they gave Lansdownes quite an argument in the third game of the O.B.A.A. semi-finals. Seems we just can't get a juvenile championship in this town. Lesurf pitched a fair game and had fair support, though not enough hits to give him any lead. It was really the breaks of the game that cost 'em the contest. Always in a close ten-inning tussle. For instance, Oster comes up in the tenth after fanning three times and conks out a double to send in the winner. And Mowry got nipped on the ancient hidden-ball trick. Just little things but important in a close game. Too bad, Herb and boys, but it's the luck of baseball.

Congratulations, Westclox, for bringing the Girls' Softball League championship to Peterborough. The smart Keene team won it twice in a row and looked to be holding a mortgage on the Bond Trophy. They did not relinquish their grip on the silverware this year, either, without a grand old battle. Both good teams, and we're handing the mitt to that game bunch of Alarm Lasses who rose to the occasion in these playoffs, getting good pitching, some nifty defensive playing and hits when they counted. Mike Latimer's team was short on reserve strength but those who stayed in there were long on what it takes to make champions. Looked like everybody and his girl friend was at that contest Saturday—something like two thousand jamming the Bowl for a real gals' game.

• • • • • • •

Yammy Jamieson's homer in the tenth setto of the Kingston-New Toronto senior playoff game in Toronto Saturday gave the Ponies an even break on the series. Must have been quite a contest from all accounts, with Coach Joe Daley, after twice being chased by the umps and twice sneaking back on the bench, finally getting a police escort off. The third and deciding game of the series will be staged at three bells in Stevenson Park here Wednesday, and ought to draw a big crowd. When the Petes were eliminated from further competition we thought local fans would see no more senior ball this year, but this is a break, even though a lot of people will have to work that afternoon.

Orde's took a 6-5 decision over Selkirks Saturday to force a third City Lacrosse League playoff game. It'll be played at three next Saturday in the Bowl rink. Selkirks took the first decision by a big margin but found the Barbers tough onions in this second one which turned out to be a fast, clean and even tussle. Selkirks claim somebody changed the score on the board when it was 5-4 for them in the last spasm, but there was no way of proving this. At any rate, Orde's deserve credit for their strong comeback and it's' just a toss-up now as to which one will be doing the flag-waving next week-end.

Outhit Tuxis 13-10

FANS AGAINST "UMPS."

George Dormer's Sugar Bowl Confectioners cut themselves a nice piece of cake on Saturday at Oshawa when they stepped into the Motor City and grabbed off the second game of their O.A.S.A. playdown series from the hitherto undefeated Tuxis team in a wildly exciting contest, the final count being 12 to 6 in ten innings.

The game which in the early stages saw the Peterborough team apparently headed for an easy victory, by virtue of a 4 run splurge in the second, developed into a near-riot in the 10th, when with the score tied, Powell, the "side arm" pitcher whose delivery the Bowl players objected to so strenuously in the game here last week, took over the pitching duties for the homesters. When Umpire Batley, after warning Powell, commenced calling each illegal pitch a ball, the fireworks started. The enraged fans swarmed on the field surrounding the arbiter and for a time, violence was threatened before the field could be cleared and the game resumed. The mob scene after the game was even worse with the Peterborough umpire and players being subjected to much verbal abuse but no harm was done.

Fielding Features

The game was a snappy played affair with plenty of fielding features, the gem of which was Bill Calladine's one-handed catch of Dalton's line drive in the exciting ninth, when Tuxis had tied the score and had the winning run on third. The blow had "finish" written all over it when it left the bat. Playford roamed all over the park to pull down seven flies and the rest of the team went good. Currie, in addition to pitching nice ball was the big hitter of the day with two mammoth homers accounting in all for seven runs.

Two Double Plays

Oshawa executed two fast double plays while Boyce accepted seventeen chances with one error at first. Gabbard pitched nice ball after the second until he gave way for a pinch hitter in the ninth. Powell who relieved him retired after walking the Calladine brothers in the tenth, while Guiltinan who was called on to finish the chore showed nothing.

Here's how the runs were scored. The Bowl chased four over in the second on Sturgeons walk, W. Calladine's triple, Weir's charity and Currie's homer. They added one in the 3rd on W. Calladine's single and steal and Weir's single. They made it 6 in the 6th, Currie being safe on an error and scoring on his steal and Dormer's hit. They won the game in the tenth on two walks, an error, Currie's second homer, Dormer's single and doubles by Russell and Playford. The Oshawa outfit did not move a wheel until the seventh when they scored 4 on 3 hits and an error, including Pollard's homer with 2 on. They tied it up in the ninth on three singles, a double, a walk and sacrifice.

PONIES DEFEAT NEW TORONTO

Kingston Takes 7-6 Victory in Ten Inning Battle.

THIRD GAME HERE.

TORONTO, September 11. — "Yammy" Jamieson's mammoth home run to deep right in the first of the tenth enabled Kingston Ponies to capture the second game of their series with New Toronto in the first round O.B.A.A. championship senior playdowns 7 to 6 at the Goodyear field on Saturday afternoon.

The third and deciding game is slated to be played in Peterborough next Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock, standard time, the winner qualifying to meet Riverdale Grads of Toronto the following Saturday in the second round.

As was the case in the first game, played in the Limestone City, there was little to choose between the teams, both executing sensational plays throughout, and dividing a total of 28 hits equally.

ORILLIA GETS LEAD ON HAMILTON TEAM

Terriers Trim Tigers 14 to 9 in Ontario Lacrosse Semi-final.

HAMILTON, Sept. 11—Buoyant hopes for a Canadian lacrosse championship were blasted almost beyond repair at the Arena here on Saturday night when Orillia Terriers, striking with power and despatch, handed Hamilton Tigers a 14 to 9 defeat in the first game of the provincial semi-finals. The five-point margin for the return game in Orillia Tuesday night looms gigantic, and unless the Bengals can show difference from that of last night, the Terriers will continue on in the playdowns.

The game proved that the teams are evenly matched, but errors in startegy on the part of Tigers made the five-point deficit. The most glaring mental lapse on the part of the Hamiltonians came in the final frame, when O'Malley made the count 9 to 9, with the Northerners leading. Tigers charged frantically then and the defence was crashed to allowe five forwards to swing into action. When this failed another defence man came off, and the Tigers presented a team composed entirely of forwards. Fast breaking by opposing players brought disaster, however, and when Orillia had thrust in several counters, they left Hamilton too little time in which to equalize.

CHICAGO CUBS HOPE OF WEST TO HOLD GIANTS

Move Into Second Place By Walloping Phillies in Double Bill.

PIRATES PRACTICALLY OUT.

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr.—A.P. Sports Writer).

Chicago Cubs, who are about as hard to beat on their home grounds as any team in the National League, looked more than ever like the sole remaining hope of the West to beat New York's Giants out of the pennant to-day as Pittsburgh's lack of success against Brooklyn had virtually put the Pirates out of the running.

Move Into Second Place.

The Cubs, still 7½ games behind the Giants, moved into second place yesterday by walloping the Phillies twice while the Dodgers assisted their New York neighbors in a friendly fashion for the second time in a row by dividing a doubleheader with Pittsburgh. With Bud Tinning and Lynn Nelson attaining something near "tops" for pitchers, the Cubs won 4-0 and 4-2 to bring their record up to seven victories in the last eight games and 49 in 65 home games this year.

Tinning blanked the Phils with six hits in the opener, and got some assistance from a home run by Stanley Hack. Nelson followed with a four-hit performance, and another "rookie," Dolph Camilli backed him up by walloping a homer for his first major league hit and bringing in the winning runs in the sixth.

Fail To Gain On Giants.

Despite the double victory, Chicago couldn't gain a thing on the Giants. The League leaders had a couple of close calls in Cincinnati, but came out with two victories, 6-1 and 2-1, to make it three in a row over the Reds. It took some brilliant relief pitching by Carl Hubbell to hold their edge in the opener, and the second game went 11 innings in a duel between Hal Schumacher and Ray Kolp before Mel Ott's double led to the winning run.

The Pirates, playing the second of three straight doubleheaders, got an unearned 2-1 decision when Linus Frey, young Brooklyn shortstop, made two wild throws with runners on base in the sixth. But the Dodgers made a comeback in the last two innings of the second game with the aid of Pirate misplays, and won 3-2.

Cards Keep Pace.

The fourth place St. Louis Cardinals kept pace with the leaders by beating Boston Braves twice, 7-0 and 10-5. Bill Hallahan pitched four-hit ball in the opening and the Cards followed up with a 20-hit attack and were halted by darkness in the eighth.

FRED PERRY WINS U.S. TENNIS HONORS

Defeats Crawford of Australia in Terrific 5-Set Struggle.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11 (CP)—The flower of English tennis bloomed with a new glory to-day, while that of the United States was sorely wilted about the edges, and no water in sight.

Dashing Frederick J. Perry, England's 26-year-old star, held the coveted American singles title. Tennis-wise commentators said American recovery of the Davis Cup seemed further away than at any time since the French took it from these shores in 1927.

Perry, hero of England's successful challenge for the cup at Paris in July, completed his all-conquering campaign with a five set victory over Australia's Jack Crawford in the final match of the singles at Forest Hills Sunday.

Fourteen thousand spectators sitting on unhappily at the first final of invaders since Rene Lacoste and Henri Cochet of France fought it out in 1926 saw the Athletic, versatile Perry tire Crawford out in the first three bitterly played sets and then overwhelm him in the last two. The scores were 6-3 11-13, 4-6, 6-3, 6-1.

Orde's Wins From Selkirk Crew 6-5

Orde's nosed out Selkirks 6 to 5, at the Bowl rink Saturday to square the City Lacrosse League playoffs at one game each, before a good crowd of roosters. Selkirks won the first tilt last week, and the deciding contest will be staged on the same grounds at three next Saturday.

Orde's had a 3-0 lead in the first quarter Saturday, and made it 4-3 to end the half. Selkirks came back in the third to even the count, and then Orde's ran in two to the losers' end in the last canting stanza. Selkirks claim they were robbed of a goal in this quarter through a mistake on the score-board, and also protested three goals they scored but were disallowed, the goal-umpire stating they took the ball in the crease.

It was a fast, clean contest with little difference shown between the finalists. Good goal-keeping and defensive lacrosse besides some smart rushes and shots made it a nice one to watch. The teams:

Referee: V. Reynolds.

157 AMATEUR GOLFERS START IN U.S. TOURNEY

KENWOOD COUNTRY CLUB, Cincinnati, Sept. 11 (CP)—A brilliant array of 157 of North America's rank amateur golfers set forth to-day to do battle in the 37th U.S. championship.

Thirty-two players striving to gain the crown now held by C. Ross Somerville of London, Ont., will emerge Tuesday night from the two 18-hole qualifying rounds of medal play. From ten on it will be 36 holes of match play each day until the 1933 champion is crowned Saturday.

Over the second longest course in the history of the championship—6,780 yards with a par 71—the battle here at Kenwood retains all the drama of its predecessors, with the possible exception of 1930 when Bobby Jones, who was here to-day, made his grand slam. Observers believed a pair of 75's or 76's would qualify.

APSLEY, DISTRICT'S OPENING FAIR DRAWS EXHIBITS WELL OVER 600

Livestock Entries Exceed 1932—Nine Horses Make Keen Race Contests.

LIVE BALL GAMES.

(Examiner Correspondence)

APSLEY, Sept. 9—The Apsley Agricultural Society's Fair held on Wednesday and Thursday was again a decided success. The exhibits numbered well over 600.

Live stock entries were in excess of last years, and the speed events attracted a large number of competitors, nine horses being entered for the two classes, two of which were withdrawn before the start. Gate receipts were approximately about the same as last year, a little less than $125.

Ladies' work showed a decrease over previous years and the root exhibits were also less, but of finer quality, citrons, cucumbers and beets being exceptionally large, onions also being better than ever exhibited here before.

During the afternoon an exciting game of softball was played between Apsley and the Cleveland Mohawks, resulting in a victory for Apsley by one run, after 10 innings, the score being 28 to 27.

A second game between Apsley and Warsaw too much for the local team who went down to defeat, the final score being Warsaw 35, Apsley 4.

Excellent Speed Trials

The day though cloudy was fine and the race track after Wednesday's rain was in good shape and free from dust. Art Blade officiated as starter for the trials of speed most efficiently, the whole of the arrangements being carried out without a single hitch.

The directors are to be congratulated on the success attending the event. The trials of speed resulted as follows:

Here's Mamma's Cheque

It always comes on the first of the month. Now Mamma can pay the bills.

YES, thanks to a husband's love and forethought, here is another home protected by an Imperial Monthly Income Policy.

Here are two children who will have cause to bless their daddy's memory. There is a widow who will breathe a prayer of thankfulness each time the Imperial Life cheque comes, a pledge of safety amid a changing world.

To ensure your wife and children an income of $50, $75, $100 or more per month, should you pass on, might not seem much in comparison with what you are doing for them now, but it is amazing what a woman can do with even a small income, if it is regular.

A few dollars saved every year from money you now readily spend or invest in other ways would make certain this guaranteed income to your family.

More than that—the income can be planned to come to YOU in your later years when your earning power will decrease and when a regular cheque would be very welcome.

BLACK KNIGHTS ATTEND SERVICE

Local Lodge Hears a Challenging Sermon Preached by Rev. C. D. Daniel at Mark Street Church.

COMBAT COMMUNISM.

More than a hundred members of the local lodge of the Royal Black Knights of Ireland marched to Mark Street United Church, headed by a fife and drum band, for their church service together and heard an impressive sermon preached by Rev. Charles D. Daniel. Basing his challenge for Christians to live more fully the true Christian life upon his text from Kings, "How long halt ye between two opinions? If the Lord be God, follow him; but if Baal, then follow him". Mr. Daniel stated that if Christianity were truly practiced in daily lives it would be the strongest weapon to overcome the threat of Communism and other isms which are endeavouring to overthrow British institutions and traditions.

The Black Knights is an institution aimed at furthering the spiritual and intellectual life of Orangemen, he explained. The Black Knights due to very things they are sworn to serve and respect should be in the forefront of the battle against evil influences, and are usually to be found there standing shoulder to shoulder. They are dedicated to the task of combatting Communism and other united forces for the destruction of religion and high principles, he stated.

Limping Along

To-day he said due to modern conditions many people are limping along trying to keep step with the world and yet due to this very fact are losing ground in their Christian life.

The church was crowded for the service and the choir sang an appropriate anthem. One of the features of the service was the singing of "One Sweetly Solemn Thought" by the male quartet, composed of Messrs. Greenslade, Morphet, Agnew and Payne.

Sir Knight George Porter marshalled the parade which formed at the Orange Hall at the corner of George and Brock streets before marching to the church, and which reurned there after the service.

Jack Cowling Wins Junior Net Honors

Jack Cowling won the junior singles championship of the local Open Tennis Tournament Saturday, defeating Doug McPherson in the finals, 3-6, 6-4 and 6-4. McPherson put up a surprisingly strong battle against his experienced and older opponent to take the first set and give a good account of himself in the next two.

The semi-finals of the lower bracket of the mixed doubles was cleaned up Saturday also, when Miss Isobel Davidson and Herb Wilson won over Miss K. Benson and J. Donaldson, 6-1 and 6-4 to advance into the finals which were to be played this afternoon at the Kawartha Club courts to wind up the tournament.

Ross And Canzoneri Ready For Title Go

(By Herbert W. Barker, A.P. Sports Writer.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 11 (AP) — Training completed, Barney Ross and Tony Canzoneri settled down to-day to the nerve-wracking wait before they step into the ring at the Polo Grounds to-morrow night for their 15-round lightweight championship battle, while Promoter Tim Mara counted the dollars as they rolled in a steady stream into his box offices.

Excited as it has not been over a lightweight match since Lew Tendler made his second vain bid for Benny Leonard's crow ten years ago, New York's fight populace probably will contribute gross receipts of more than $100,000.

CANUCKS CAPTURE SOFTBALL HONORS

Defeat Orioles 11-0 to Take Southend League Championship.

Canucks won the South End League softball championship by defeating Orioles 11-0 on Saturday in the third game of the best three out of five game series. It was the clubmen's third straight win. The score does not really indicate the play. The Orioles being robbed time after time on hard hit balls by Leo Burke's spectacular fielding. The Canucks did have the edge on pitching as Jack Heffernan was going great guns. Ridley, hurling for the Birdmen inclined to be wild, while his teammates fell down at critical moments.

The Canuck infield played a nice game, working in clock-like manner on hard hit balls. Adamson, Millard and Cliff Smith proved the best for the losers.

Line-ups:

Orioles—Gardino 2b; Adamson, 3b; Ridley, p; Carter, cf; Leggit, c; Millard, ss; C. Smith, lf. c; Faires, rf; Gordon, 1b.

BOYS FORMED ATHLETIC BODY

BRONZE MEDAL CONTEST

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 11 (Examiner Correspondence).—The boys of the High School met in Mr. Barrett's room on Wednesday afternoon and organized a Lakefield High School Athletic Association; the following officers being appointed: President, Russell Elliott; vice-president, Walter Spence; secretary, Fred Hampton; sports convenors—football, Dominico White; field and track, Harry Nicholls; softball, Hugh Morrison; hockey, Robert Chittick.

Ford representatives are: Form I, Wilfrid Morin; Form II, Harry Jewell; Form III, Bernard Johnston; Form IV., Arthur Kingdon; Form V, Charlie Tanner.

Enthusiasm has been strong and the new society was launched under the happiest auspices and will no doubt be a material aid to the High School sports in future in organizing for each season and its particular sport.

Bronze Medal Contest

Twenty-six young girls competed for five bronze medals given by the W.C.T.U. of this district in an elocution contest which drew a fair gathering to the United Church in Lakefield on Wednesday night.

Mrs. Throop of Peterborough, county president of the W.C.T.U., was in the chair, and was supported by Mrs. W. W. Yale, organizer and director of the Loyal Temperance Legion (L.T.L.) in Lakefield, and to whom the credit of the success justly belongs, as she has given a great deal of time and effort to the arrangement, organization and presentation of the contest.

The judges were Mrs. F. S. Brown, Mrs. J. M. Simpson, Mrs. W. M. Stinson, and they gave close attention to the duties involved. During the evening, Mrs. W. J. Charlton gave a very fine selection on the Hawaiian guitar; Miss Margaret Richardson sang a solo, "I Walk Alone With God," with Mrs. H. E. Moore as accompanist and the L.T.L. sang several songs with Lois Yale at the piano.

The following girls competed: Mildred Miles, Jean Clark, Winnifred Blewett, Dorothy Pearson, Patricia Wannamaker, Grace Ward, Fern Mullen, Wilma Armstrong, Eleanor Rowsborough, Jean Kingdon, Marjorie Ward, Phyllis Webster, Patricia Earnshaw, Freida Webster, Lois Yale, Irene Dunbar, Velma Northey, Doris Hart, Constance Orr, Nora Webster, Thelma Bullock, Minnie Charlton, Ethel Lake, Mary Blewett, Hazel Telford, Ada Dunbar.

The selections were all well given and reflected credit on the girls and those who had coached them. Mrs. Simpson gave the decision of the judges, the following being considered to have best conformed to the standards set: Wilma Armstrong (Fairview), Jean Kingdon, Patricia Earnshaw, Freida Webster, Mary Blewett. These go into the silver medal contest.

Mrs. W. A. Payne presented the girls wth the bronze medals and congratulated them on their excellent showing, giving the highest praise to Mrs. Yale for her inspiring efforts.

The W.C.T.U. in Lakefield has disbanded, but the members have become honorary members of the L.T.L. The next step will be the contest for the silver medal and the winner of the silver medal will enter the Provincial Gold Medal contest at the convention which will be held in October in Peterborough.

CANADA COLD FOR MACHADO

Will Not Stay His Allowed Three Months, But Seek Warmer Climate.

POSSIBLY SOUTH FRANCE.

MONTREAL, Sept. 11. — General Gerardo Machado, exiled former dictator of Cuba, will spend less than three months in Canada and may go from Montreal to Paris or Southern France to live, it was learned yesterday.

Machado has been granted permission by the Canadian Government to stay in this country for three months, but Julius Brown, spokesman for the former Cuban president, said yesterday that he will not stay for the duration of this permit.

Dispatches from Philadelphia last night indicated that two of Machado's daughters and their four children—the Sanches and Obregon families—had left their hotel in that city to motor to New York, where they were to entrain for Montreal.

Senora Machado, wife of the ex-president, left Montreal last night with her daughter, Senora Baldomero Grau, her son-in-law and her 12-year-old granddaughter, Maria. She indicated that she would stay in either New York or Philadelphia.

SCUGOG RESORT STORE IS RAZED

FAIR SPACE RATES CUT

LINDSAY, Sept. 11. (Examiner Correspondence) A destructive fire occurred at Caesarea, Scugog Lake, on Friday night when the store and resort of David Harron was totally destroyed, together with the contents. The cause of the fire is a mystery. Mr. Harron lives about half a mile from the store, and was awakened by a passing motorist. When he arrived on the scene the building was a mass of flames. The loss is estimated at $2,500 with insurance totalling $800.

Garfield Fogue, government relief inspector for this district, reports that the number on relief in the north country has been greatly reduced and expenditures for relief cut to the minimum. In Haliburton some $30,000 has been spent under contract for the past couple of year on Eagle Lake Road. The Standard Chemical Company is establishing a large sawmill at Squibanaw Lake, southeast of the village of Haliburton. They will employ in the woods and at the mill sixty or more hands. The best hardwood will be trucked to the village and exported. A contract has been let for the cutting of 5,000 cords of wood for the Standard Chemical Co. at Donald. The plant is expected to reopen within a few weeks.

The directors of the Lindsay Fair have decided to cut the rates charged merchants for space in the main building ten percent. This reduction is made with a view to encouraging more business men to exhibit. The wage of ticket sellers, constables, etc. was fixed at $2 per day. This does not include meals.

WARSAW LADIES WILL PACK BALES

Make Final Arrangements at Meeting in Sunday School.

WARSAW, Sept. 11 (Examiner Correspondence). — A fair number attended the W.M.S. meeting in the United Church S.S. room on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. G. G. Taylor presided. Mrs. Taylor read a short article. Mrs. Roland Payne led in reading a Psalm. Nearly all supplies for bale are on hand, and Mrs. Arthur Edwards, Mrs. G. G. Taylor were named as a committee to pack bale.

It was decided to hold election of officers at the December meeting. Mrs. David Miller gave a synopsis of the Study Book chapter.

Mrs. Taylor read a notice that any women who had been members whose finances were such they could not be members another year be considered and treated as members for the ensuing year.

Ice cream and cake were served; a social half hour was spent, and articles which had been donated were sold. Among them there were tomatoes, yarn, bread, eggs, cucumbers, crocheted mats.

Personals

Miss Lillian Hinton, now on her way to Chengtu, is one of two young ladies who attended school here, while their fathers were ministers, and have devoted their lives to missionary work. Miss Hinton's father was a Methodist minister who was stationed at Warsaw, and moved to Campbellford in 1916.

Miss Chrissie Currie, daughter of Rev. Peter Currie, a Presbyterian minister some years ago, was in Korea for some years.

Born,—To Mr. and Mrs. Milton Drain on Saturday, Sept. 2, a daughter.

Warsaw School reopened on Tuesday morning with the same teachers as last year. Mr. Sloan has 24 pupils including an entrance class of nine; Miss Vance has 18 pupils, and Miss Burgess 22.

A blaze started in the straw from the blower at David Payne's threshing on Monday. It was seen almost immediately by Sherwood Payne, and smothered by straw. John Payne, who operates the mill, believes these blower fires are caused by matches which have been dropped. He has seen stones, bits of iron, and many other things go through and no fire, but a match will start it every time.

Elias Thompson took 20 people to Apsley Fair, and a good many car loads went from Warsaw, as many around here are much interested in Apsley.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE REVIEWS

ONTARIO GRAIN

Approximate prices track shipping point: Wheat, 64c to 65c; oats, 32c to 34c; barley, 40c to 43c; rye, 45c to 46c.

CHICAGO GRAIN

Rains that broke six months' drought in Argentina took the heart out of speculative buyers of grain Saturday and prices tumbled down right and left.

Rallies lacked vigor, and the close for wheat was shaky at the day's bottom level. Even Paris reports that a European war would certainly take place if Austria became a part of Germany, failed to cause traders to more than lift an eyelash.

Wheat closed weak, 1⅞c to 2⅛c under Friday's finish; corn 1⅛c to 1⅛c down; oats, ⅝c to ⅞c off, and provisions varying from 20c decline to a rise of 5c.

CHEESE BOARDS

NAPANEE.—At Saturday's meeting of the Napanee Cheese Board, 360 white and 331 colored sold at 10 9-16c.

PICTON.—At Saturday's meeting of the Picton Cheese Board, 300 white cheese were boarded. One hundred and sixty sold at 10 11-16c, and the balance at 10⅝c. Buyers, Cook and Murphy.

MADOC — At Saturday's meeting the Madoc Cheese Board, 350 white cheese were boarded. One hundred and ninety boxes sold to Cook, Belleville, at 10 11-16 and 100 sold to Hodgson-Rowson Co., Montreal, and 60 boxes to Lovell and Christmas at 10⅝c.

BELLEVILLE. — At Saturday's meeting of the Belleville Cheese Board, 1,576 boxes white cheese, no colored, sold at 10 9-16c.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

Butter and cheese prices advanced on the Montreal dairy and produce market last week while eggs and potatoes declined. Heavy demand from overseas following the marked improvement in the British market caused the strength in the butter market.

No. 1 butter advanced about a cent a pound to end the week at 18¾c to 19c a pound for cartots or less. Receipts totalled 17,891 boxes, as against 14,149 boxes the previous week. Butter exports last week amounted to 2,710 boxes, compared with 1,807 in the preceding week and 321 boxes in the corresponding week last year. So far this season, butter exports total 4,232 boxes, against 36,575 at this date last year.

An advance of approximately a cent a pound was registered on the cheese market. At the close of the week Ontario colored brought 10⅝c to 11¼c a pound, with white at 10⅝c to 10¾c. Quebec colored sold for 10⅝c a pound and Quebec white 10⅝c to 10¾c Arrivals amounted to 30,547 boxes. The previous week 31,453 boxes were offered for sale. Exports of cheese for the week totalled 36,141 boxes, compared with 36,095 the preceding week and 54,536 in the corresponding week of last year. Last year's volume is away ahead of this year, shipments so far in 1933 being 415,054 boxes, against 492,784 a year ago during the corresponding period.

The egg market was slightly easier, graded shipments in cartots or less becoming 22c to 23c a dozen for extras, 17c to 18c for firsts, and 13½c to 14c for seconds for Ontarios. Westerns were down to 21c for extras, 17c for firsts, and 14c for seconds. Arrivals were 6,343 cases. The previous week 7,161 cases were offered. Exports of eggs last week amounted to 548 cases.

In anticipation of arrivals from the Maritimes, prices of Quebec potatoes eased slightly last week. At the close of the week new Quebecs in 80-lb. bags sold from 75c to 80c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, September 10. — A fair trade in the May future relieved an otherwise dull wheat market on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange on Saturday and succeeded in lifting the distant month off the "peg" temporarily, but at the close of the week-end session all futures prices were unchanged.

The October and December futures were dormant throughout at minimum levels, and no apparent trade was done in either. May future rose a quarter of a cent and then dropped back to close at 76⅝c, October finished at 70⅝c, and December at 71⅝c.

It was reported a moderate export business had been done in cash grains, some estimates ran to 250,000 bushels, but this was not reflected in the futures market beyond purchases of hay wheat, which might have been against export.

Pressure or nearby Argentine wheat caused Liverpool to stagger a little in the late dealings, and prices on the Engish hmarket closed ⅛d to ¼d lower.

Commenting on the international situation, Broomhall pointed out that while European wheat crops looked like being 79,000,000 bushels larger, non-European crops were 370,000,000 bushels smaller, not taking into account any losses that might be suffered in Argentina and Australia.

Demand for various grades of cash grains was moderate and the spreads were generally unchanged. Offerings were not liberal. Coarse grains trading was featureless, and oats and barley never left minimum prices.

PRESS WRITER TREKS 20 MILES FOR INTERVIEW

Finds Co-pilots of U. S. Balloon Resting in Woodcutter's Shack.

AIM TO WALK OUT.

Tell Vivid Story of Crash Into Tree-top and Week on Meagre Rations.

The following interview with Ward T. Van Orman and Frank Trotter, noted American balloonists, was obtained by a Canadian Press correspondent who trekked overland during the night to their isolated cabin and back—30 miles through dense bush country—to be the first newspaperman to reach the balloonists.)

(By James Y. Nichol, C.P. Correspondent, Copyright, 1933, by the Canadian Press.)

THOR LAKE, Ont., September 12 (C.P.). — While all that remains of the proud balloon Goodyear XI reposes amid the jack-pines of the Thor Lake area, ruined beyond repair, Ward T. Van Orman and Frank Trotter, co-pilots of the big Bennett air race bag, hoped to get out of the Northern Ontario backwoods to-day — under their own power.

To a newspaperman who reached the rough woodcutters' cabin where they rested last night, the American balloonists laughing'y remarked: "Send word home that nobody's going to carry us out of here on a stretcher. We are walking out of the shop here just the same as we arrived, on our feet."

Matching their wits for a full week against the wiles of the wilds, traversing country that is an almost impenetrable maze of slash in the lowlands and a defiant ridge of rock above, laid low almost to the point of death by ptomaine poisoning, Van Orman and Trotter are still prepared to chal'enge the hazards of balloons and brush heaps

Laugh Over Adventure

SPECIAL BOARDS TO ENFORCE NRA

Duty Will Be to Investigate Complaints of Violations, Obtain Compliance.

IN EVERY TOWN.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12 (A.P.).—N.R.A. "compliance boards" are to be set up in every city and town in the United States to assure observance of the Blue Eagle agreements.

As outlined to reporters to-day by Hugh S. Johnson, the administrator, the duty of each board will be to investigate complaints of violations, hold hearings and seek to obtain voluntary compliance.

If this is not forthcoming, they will report to Washington for disciplinary action.

This endeavor to enhance results for the Blue Eagle campaign was launched as the N.R.A. advanced to consolidate its permanent industrial control work, holding hearings on codes for motion pictures, boots and shoes, silk textiles and other industries.

Cancer Is No Longer Regarded as Hopeless

ANGOLA, La., Sept. 12. (C.P.)—Heavily armed posses scoured isolated sections of two states to-day in a search for 11 desperate convicts who left three dead and 11 wounded behind them in a sanguinary break from the Louisana state penal farm here Sunday.

Following elusive trails, officers tracked the fleeing convicts to Black Hawk, where they are believed to have ferried across the Mississippi river on logs and scattered to the almost inaccessible swamps of Concordia and Catahoula parishes.

Marion Russell, 21, wife of James Russell, one of the escaping prisoners, was held in New Orleans under suspicion of having smuggled weapons into the prison. She admitted visiting him recently, but denied having taken him weapons.

Scott-Paine's Road Speed Lands Him In Court, With Further Probe Pending

TORONTO, Sept. 12.—(CP)—Ontario Provincial Police heads said today Hubert Scott-Paine British Harmsworth Trophy challenger was picked up by a traffic officer near Ingersoll yesterday for speeding. He later appeared before Magistrate Patterson of Ingersoll who decided no charge would be laid.

Major General Victor Williams, Commissioner of Provincial Police ordered an inquiry into the incident and demanded a report from the constable.

"He was picked up while speeding," said a police official. "This incident arises also in the London area where a previous case arose recently in which two American motorists charged they had been unfairly dealt with when one was fined for reckless driving, following an accident. This case is still under consideration by Attorney-General W. H. Price, who stated today he had asked for further details from the magistrate at Wardsville who levied the fine."

Attorney-General Price said a report from Traffic Officer Killings showed that Scott-Paine had been travelling 76 miles an hour over a highway that at the time was heavily travelled. The officer had much difficulty overtaking him, he reported. The magistrate issued a warning.

"It was a question of courtesy to a British sportsman who was accustomed to travelling 100 miles an hour on water," said Col. Price.

J. J. MORRISON RESIGNS POST WITH THE U.F.O.

"Father" of the Ontario Group is Forced to Quit as Health Fails.

SECRETARY 19 YEARS.

Recognized as One of Canada's Outstanding Farm Leaders Past Decade.

TORONTO, September 12 (C.P.).—J. J. Morrison, "Father of the United Farmers of Ontario" in the kitchen of whose home the idea of the agrarian organization was conceived, has resigned as secretary of the U.F.O. because of failing health, it was announced to-day. He is 72 years old.

Accompanying his resignation to the executive was a letter from his physician urgently advising that he give up his U.F.O. duties. While officially severing his connections, Mr. Morrison said his heart would "always be with the movement."

For more than a decade Mr. Morrison has been recognized as one of the outstanding farm leaders in Canada. His temporary successor is H. H. Hannam, educational secretary of the U.F.O., who has been appointed acting secretary for the balance of the year.

Secretary Since 1914

Interest in farm movements most of his life, Mr. Morrison took an active part in the early-century patrons' movement, and later in the Grange. He was elected secretary of the Grange in 1914 and at once conceived the idea of uniting all Ontario agrarian bodies.

The birth of the United Farmers of Ontario was said to have taken place in the Morrison kitchen in Peel Township, Wellington County in 1914. Among those at this intimate conference were E. C. Drury, later U.F.O. Premier of Ontario, and Col. J. Z. Fraser. Mr. Morrison became the first secretary of the organization and held it until this week.

In 1921 Mr. Morrison organized the farmers' organizations of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia and in July, 1922, went to the Maritimes again to organize the eastern section of the Canadian Council of agriculture consisting of Ontario, Quebec and Maritime farmers.

UP TO MUNICIPALITIES.

TORONTO. — Daylight saving time rests entirely in the hands of municipalities under authority of the Municipal Act, according to Attorney-General W. H. Price, who declares that there is no likelihood of the government passing legislation to make a set time compulsory throughout the province, where daylight saving is in force.

Welland Board of Trade raised the question by asking why legislation could not be passed making the period uniform.

PAIR ARE TIED FOR 36 HOLES WITH 144 TOTAL

Ward and Long Play Sensational Golf to Qualify for U.S. Amateur.

SOMERVILLE STARTS LATE.

Nicol Thompson, Jr., Miller and Homans Also Among Qualifiers.

KENWOOD COUNTRY CLUB, Cincinnati, Sept. 12 (AP) — Two players making their tournament debut, 20-year-old Jimmie Ward of Nakoma, Wis., and William R. Long Jr., of Austin, Texas, to-day sprang a sensation by going into a deadlock for the qualifying lead in the United States amateur golf championship.

Long came through with another 72 for a total of 144 after Ward set a new competitive course record of 69, two under par, for the same aggregate.

Thompson Qualifies

Nicol Thompson, Jr., of Toronto, apparently qualified for match play in the United States amateur golf championship by finishing his second round to-day with a sparkling 73. This, combined with his 77 yesterday, gave him a 150 total, which seems snugly under the borderline of the limit set by observers following yesterday's low scoring.

Another outburst of low scoring marked the renewal of the 36-hole qualifying battle in the United States amateur golf championship to-day, played under overcast skies but otherwise good shot-making conditions.

With the first day's twin leaders, champion C. Ross Somerville, of London, Ont., and youthful Jack Munger of Dallas Texas, among the late starters, the early pace for the second round was set by Ernie Caldwell, of Baltimore, former Middle Atlantic amateur champion, with 74, 72—146, for the 36 holes.

The majority of early starters were doing as well or better than yesterday. The prospects were strengthened that 151 would be on the borderline.

Denmar Miller, of Des Moines, Ia., with 147 and Gene Homans of Englewood, N.J., with 148, made sure of qualifying positions.

Meanwhile some of the favorites struck trouble. Johnny Goodman took 38, two over par, for the outgoing nine, on top of his previous 72. George T. Dunlap, Jr., of New York, who had a first round 71, blew himself to an outward 41.

ERIC THE ROBOT LIKES BLONDES

3RD SHOWING IN CANADA.

Gentlemen prefer blondes! They are Eric the Robot's preference also.

Mechanical sensation of the age, Eric the Robot provides an entirely new attraction at Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, where he will remain for the balance of this week in a tent immediately opposite the Manufacturer's Building. His visit to Peterborough is his third public showing in Canada, since he first arrived here on August 4.

"Eric told The Examiner during the course of an interview today that he did not like little boys and girls because they asked too many silly questions. "Then do you like the ladies?" he was asked by Sidney Anam, the man in charge of the Robot. "Yes", he replied. "What kind do you like?" he was asked. "Blondes" said the electrical marvel.

For the benefit of the press, Robot stood up and sat down, raised his arms and lowered them several times as well as answering several other questions. During the remainder of this week he will perform for the benefit of patrons in addition to talking.

No human agency is employed either for speaking or moving the robot. It is all done by a form of mechanism operated by light rays. Eric is attired in a shining suit of armor—very much like a knight errant of old. Part of his suit was made from the Duraluminium from the British dirigible the R-100.

The robot is one of the most marvellous inventions of the electrical world and is well worth a visit. It is something that has never been witnessed at the exhibition and will prove one of the foremost attractions. He weighs two tons. Eric's larnyx is a transformer; his windpipe is flex; his heart a resistance; his lungs are rheostats; and his brain a condenser.

Province, Dominion Pressed To Assume 75 p.c. Direct Cost

Resolution Also Suggests Two Governments Contribute 75 Per Cent. Of Materials—Believe Day Near When Total Cost Will Be Taken Over.

TORONTO, Sept. 12.—(CP)—A resolution urging the Provincial and Dominion Governments to assume at once 75 percent of direct relief costs and contribute 75 percent of the cost of materials used in unemployment relief undertakings, was passed unanimously, by the Emergency Municipal Association, meeting here today.

Passing of the resolution was the first important step taken by the Association comprising mayors from approximately 15 Ontario centres, which opened its session here today.

Later in the day the mayors will interview Premier George S. Henry and present the resolution to him.

Heated debate preceded the passing of the motion in the course of which a large bloc of the organization urged the government be asked to increase their share of direct relief to 100 percent.

Finally passed, it read as follows: 'Indications are that present relief expenditures will continue, and that it is impossible for municipalities to meet the burden. While in our opinion the government should, and eventually will, assume the total cost of relief, we press upon the government at once to increase their proportion of direct relief to 75 per cent and should any municipality take advantage of the relief labor regulations the governments do contribute 75 per cent of both labor and material cost."

Minimum Wage.

A resolution to set a minimum wage for men, applicable to all occupations, was sponsored by Mayor David A. Croll of Windsor, and passed by the Association. As a rider to the resolution the government was asked to enforce the minimum wage law applicable to women.

CHILDREN'S DAY AT EXHIBITION ON WEDNESDAY

Children Will Be Admitted to Grounds for Five Cents.

HUMAN TORCH.

J. A. Carroll, Superintendent For Agricultural Societies Here.

The Scots Guards program tonight and Children's Day to-morrow are the immediate features of the Exhibition.

As reported elsewhere Peterborough is the only smaller city in Canada having the privilege of hearing the Guards Band on their present tour. Like the good wine that needs no bush it should be unnecessary to remind the music lovers of Peterborough of the opportunity which is available to them to-night. The audience last night was deeply impressed by the beauty of tone and the mastery of technique which they expected of Lieut. Dowell's band, and were not disappointed.

Wednesday afternoon the children will be admitted for five cents, with the same charge at the grandstand, and in the afternoon and evening programs the program of vaudeville attractions will be presented in its entirety.

Last night's crowd was introduced to the class of the Conklin's Midway by the thrilling diving act performed by Capt. Lavalley and Miss Pauline Black of Vancouver, Canada's champion lady diver.

Capt. Lavalley climbed to the peak of a lofty, slender ladder, and on a platform 84 feet above the ground, ignited his gasoline-soaked suit, and dived into a tank of water the surface of which was aflame with gasoline. The lights of the grounds were turned off and the sensational element of this act was accentuated by the swift descent of the human torch into the shallow, blazing tank of only 4½ feet of water.

The children will have a big afternoon if the weather is fine. The Midway is larger than last year, larger and brighter, and there are

Beer Issue Nearer Says Premier Henry

TORONTO, September 12 (C.P.).—Sale of beer and wine as an issue in an Ontario provincial election is gradually growing nearer. Premier George S. Henry admitted to-day in an interview, The Telegram said.

"The Premier agreed that his Cabinet will shortly discuss the question in view of the growing feeling that the Liquor Control Act requires alteration in connection with the distribution of beer," said The Telegram.

The newspaper quoted the Premier as saying: "The present Act, it was admitted by former Premier Ferguson, was more of an experiment. There appear to be some now who believe the distribution of beer requires a change. That has to be taken into consideration, and we will discuss it.

"It may be before the House meets or not until an election."

PLEADS GUILTY TO 21 COUNTS

William J. Montgomery Faces Additional Charges in Police Court.

REMANDED ONE WEEK.

When Clifford Curtis local service station operator, refused to comply with William J. Montgomery's order to "stick 'em up" as Montgomery, concealed behind a latticed gate, poked a loaded revolver into his face a week ago last Friday night, but instead grappled with the thug and beat him so badly that he was easily captured by police, Curtis' action was the means of bringing to justic a criminal whose path of crime stretched full way across the province.

These facts came to light to-day when Montgomery, still wearing a pronounced bruise on his left temple, the result of the fractured skull he received at the hands of Curtis, appeared in police court and faced the longest battery of criminal charges to be arrayed against a single prisoner in the local police court in years.

In all, Montgomery was arraigned on 21 new charges to-day, and in a low voice he said "guilty" to each one.

17 Charges of Forgery

They included 17 charges of forgery by which Montgomery had

SCOTS GUARDS BAND DELIGHTED AUDIENCE ON THE FIRST NIGHT OF PETERBOROUGH EXHIBITION

Brilliant Programme Presented by Splendid Military Band.

MEMORABLE EVENT.

Second Programme Will Be Given by Band This Evening.

The Scots Guards band last night played Tschaikowsky's "1812" solennelle overture, the great Russian's graphic impressionism of the relief of Moscow and defeat of Napoleon's armies, one of the classics of nationalistic and patriotic music, and for many of the audience the dynamic and brilliant interpretation by Lieutenant Horace E. Dowell and his musicians will remain the most memorable event of Peterborough's 1933 Exhibition.

The Guards simply toyed with a program that may be described as modernistic in its obvious design to please the present day popular demand and taste in music—a taste which is supposed to have been educated and elevated by radio—comparatively light numbers ranging from the lyric to the novel, charmingly and scintillatingly played by virtuosi, but in the Solennelle Peterborough heard the splendid musicianship that has been so long a tradition and true synonym of the bands of the Guards.

Incidentally, Peterborough was not as largely represented as it should have been, but it was a thoroughly appreciative audience that greeted Lieut. Dowell and his talented bandsmen on the opening night of the Exhibition. An early autumn chill in the air afforded some excuse for the fact that all the benches in the grandstand were not occupied. One wondered where the recent warm evenings of summer had so suddenly gone: but if the weather was a rather uncomfortable distraction to the audience it was not less unfavorable for the band. However, the frostly breath of the armed Orion approaching up the heaven in the mid hours of night was unnoticed in the transport of the imagination under the spell of the inspired overture with which the band concluded its concert.

Tschaikowsky wrote the "1812" on a broad canvas depicting in sharp colors and moods the doubts and fears of the citizens of Moscow as Napoleon pounded at their gates, the opening theme of preoccupation with alarm, probably with prayer too, the drum fire of the tympani accompanied by the crescending brass, culminating in the majestic Russian hymn of thanksgiving as the enemy was turned back, the clangor of the church bells and the turbulence of celebration. Lieut. Dowell brought out all the color with impressive effect, his trombones standing at the climax to intensify the glory and victory in the realism of his brass choir.

The sheer power of the Guards' instrumentation and also their lyric sweep, were revealed in this final number which suggested more than any other their abilities when unrestricted by the compulsions of popular appeal.

Welcomed By Mayor Denne

The Scots Guards were warmly welcomed to Peterborough last night. Three bands greeted them at the George Street gate of Exhibition Park, the 57th Rangers, the Salvation Army and the 45th regi-

TWO YOUTHS PAY LIVES FOR CRIME

Nova Scotia Companions Walk to Scaffold Resigned to Fate.

MURDERED AGED WOMAN.

AMHERST, N.S., Sept. 12 (C.P.).—In a dim little room into which the sunlight flowed through a grilled window of the Amherst jail a coroner's jury to-day returned a verdict of death by execution after examining the bodies of Alvah Henwood and Trueman Smith. Bodies of the 19-year-old youths were then released to their families for interment in family plots.

The brief inquest, purely formal in character, was held a few hours after the boys, companions since childhood, had walked unassisted to the scaffold to pay the penalty for the brutal slaying of Mrs. Elmer E. Smith, an aged woman, whom they battered and robbed of some $130 in cash, late last winter.

Surrounded by their immediate families, both youths appeared resigned to their fate and took solace in the words of comfort expressed by two clergymen and a Salvation Army captain, all of whom remained with them to the last. It was not until a few hours before their final walk the boys both were told the Dominion Cabinet had not seen fit to interfere with the death sentences.

The executions, carried out during the night while a quiet crowd thronged the streets outside the prison, were just about seven months after the discovery by her son of Mrs. Smith's body. She was found in the hallway of her little home, her skull battered and her throat lacerated deeply. Her savings of $130 were missing, and it was through the free spending of the boys that police found the necessary clues. Smith was arrested at Sackville, N.B., while Henwood was taken from the apartment into which he had just moved with his bride of only one day.

URGE INFLATION UPON ROOSEVELT

Must Do More Than We Are Now Says Senator—Commodity Prices Must Rise.

COUNCIL SUMMONED.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—(A.P.)—President Roosevelt interrupted his conferences on finances to-day to receive an urgent recommendation from Chairman Harrison of the United States' Senate Finance committee for "rational inflation."

"Commodity prices have got to go up." Senator Harrison said. "I favor some form of rational inflation. We have got to do more than we are doing. This will help the bankers and the farmers and the latter are the ones who really need help just now"

The President summoned his recovery council to meet this afternoon following a long session yesterday with his chief financial advisers

New steps to aid the rise in prices and to provide credit for the NRA members appear in prospect. Before going into the session of the recovery council, Mr. Roosevelt received F. M. Law, the new President of the American Bankers' Association. Law went to the White House with Jesse Jones, chairman of the reconstruction corporation, who was a member of yesterday's White House party.

Predict 40-Cent Gas Midwinter In West

CALGARY, Sept. 12—(CP)—With gasoline selling in Calgary for 32 cents a gallon following the recent advance believed due to the United State NRA movement, oil company officials today predicted the retail price would reach 40 cents a gallon by midwinter. Increased freight rates on U. S. lines effective Nov. 4 are expected to cause the further advance.

Turner Valley operators said revenue of their companies would probably be swelled by thousand of dollars each month owing to the higher prices. The Turner Valley Naptha price, payable by Calgary refineries, has jumped from $3.16 to $3.50 per barrel and for discolored Naptha from $2.92 to $3.26.

CUBAN OFFICERS PREPARING FAST FOR SHOWDOWN

Former Army Chiefs Well Armed, Have Backing of Secret Societies.

BESIEGED IN HOTEL.

New President Gives Cornered Men 36 Hours to Come to Terms.

(By John P. McKnight.)

HAVANA, September 12 (C.P.).—Defiant army officers, barricaded and besieged in the sumptuous National Hotel resisted the new government's demands to-day that they come to terms immediately.

They scoffed at an ultimatum from President Ramon Grau San Martin that they yield in 24 to 36 hours, and made ready for a showdown on their stand that former president de Cespedes' administration be reinstated.

Backed by the powerful A.B.C. and O.C.R.R. secret societies, the erstwhile commanders were armed and prepared for any contingency—continued siege or, as some predicted, battle.

Soldiers who arose against them last Monday and toppled over the de Cespedes regime—which was supplanted first by a revolutionary Junta and, on Sunday, by Grau San Martin—kept an airtight line about the building. The soldiers denied they had orders to attack.

As the Grau San Martin deadline approached, the defiance of the officers increased. Some said there were 300 in the hotel; others set their number at 500. Many predicted a crisis before night.

Sees Bloodshed Ahead.

Captain Mario Torres Menier, former head of the Aviation Corps, was one who saw trouble and possible bloodshed ahead.

"This can't go on," he said. "We've got to do something, even if it means fight."

Needing only three more men to complete his cabinet, Grau San Martin cal'ed upon Cubans to support his new Nationalist program, and seemed determined to brook no opposition.

Ever since the enlisted men's coup d'etat of last week the army officers have defied the executive commissioners, and since Sunday the government of Dr. Grau San Martin.

"Mutinous soldiers," the officers declare, "must step out and let de Cespedes return to power."

BIRD HITS WINDSHIELD DRIVER CATCHES FISH

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 12 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent). — Earl Craighead caught two birds with one stone. At least, one bird and one fish. And it was not a stone either: it was a car. Driving home from a trip in Seymour Township, a bittern smashed against the windshield of his truck, and was stunned in the collision. Getting down to see what was the matter, and to put the bird out of its agony, he found that the force of the impact had made the bird disgorge a four and a half inch speckled trout. And that bird must have had some up-take to catch such a trickly dinner.

EXTRA BUSINESS FOR CHURCHILL

Saskatchewan Pool Sending 400,000 Bushels Wheat North for Export.

ENOUGH FOR ONE SHIP.

CHURCHILL, Man., September 12 (C.P.). — Assurance of another cargo for export this season and reduction of storage rates to-day gave Canada's most northerly seaport a new lease on its 1933 export life.

Threatened with idleness through lack of grain for shipment overseas before its official closing five weeks hence, Churchill began to buzz with renewed activity as word came the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool was providing 400,000 bushels to be exported shortly.

Meanwhile the S.S. Brandon, which has carried one cargo from the port to the United Kingdom this season, was en route back to Churchill to carry another cargo to the United Kingdom. Besides wheat, it will carry lumber and cattle.

Gloom that rettled over Western farmers and exporters when it became known only 32,000 bushels of wheat were left in the 2,500,000-bushel elevator after the S.S. Gardenia steamed away was dispel'ed last night by announcement of the Hon. H. H. Stevens, Federal Min'ster of Trade and Commerce, the S.S. Brandon would make another trip. It will carry 326,000 bushels of wheat, and if further deliveries of wheat to the port are made by farmers and grain companies, more ships likely will be available before ice hems in the port.

Urge United Front For Civil Servants

WINDSOR, Ont., September 12 (C.P.). — "In the last 18 months the civil servants of this country have lost more rights and privileges than ever they gained in the preceding ten or fifteen years," declared Harold Baker, Vancouver, National President of the Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada at the open meeting of Government employees last night.

Fred McGrath, New Westminster, vice-president, and Fred Knowles, Ottawa, National secretary-treasurer, joined the president in urging need of organization in various departments and then amalgamation into a united front to defend their rights.

SOME LOOSENING OF BEER RULINGS SEEN IN ONTARIO

Government to Consider Question Before Appeal to People Says McCrea.

NO FALL ELECTION.

Hopes for Boom in Lumbering—Means Jobs for Thousands.

OTTAWA, Sept. 12—"Loosening" of the present Ontario beer sale regulations will be considered by the Henry Government before the next election, according to Hon Charles McCrea, Minister of Mines.

Mr. McCrea, who told newspaper interviewers here yesterday that he believed there would be no general electon this Fall, answered questions as to the government's beer-and-wine policy by dictating, slowly and carefully, the following significant statement:

"There is a large section of public opinion in Ontario which feels there should be some loosening of the beer regulations. That and other problems will have the consideration of the government before it appeals to the people."

The Mines Minister's reply to queries regarding the date of the general election, which must occur within the next 12 months, was guarded. "It is for the Premier to say that," he answered. "But my personal opinion is that there will be no election this Fall."

Mr. McCrea did not amplify his brief statement on beer but it was noted that the verb he used "loosening") was the same one that Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, former Premier, employed in speaking on the same subject a few weeks ago here. At that time the word was taken to indicate possible policies of anything ranging from beer by the glass in taverns to the sale of the foamy beverage on a non-permit basis in groceries or other licensed shops.

Lumbering Boom

The Mining Minister, who is here on a holiday, stated that in his opinion the best thing which could happen to Ontario at the moment would be a pickup in the lumbering industry. He believed that this would result in the re-employment of thousands of men, particularly in New Ontario.

He pointed out that Ontari's gold production this year would reach the greatest money value in the history of the province. It was estimated, he said, that the gold output would be worth 62 million dollars compared to 47 millions last year. At the standard price of $20.67 an ounce, Ontario's gold would run to only 47 million dollars in value, but the present premium being paid on the London gold market would bring the total price up to 62 millions.

"What do you think of the C.C.F.?" asked a reporter as the intervewers filed out of the ministers' hotel room.

"I haven't found out yet what they are advocating,' 'was the smiling reply.

CANOE UPSET COUPLE SAFE

Girl and Youth Nearly Drown Before Rescue is Made.

BOTH PLAYED OUT

COBOURG, Sept. 12.—Pitched into the water when waves upset their canoe, Mary Spragge, College street, Cobourg, and D'Arcy Macdonald, King street, had a narrow escape from drowning, being rescued at the point of collapse by Jerry Harris, who had rushed to the scene in his motor boat.

The two canoeists, who were paddling several hundred yards off the east beach, were in the act of turning, when a sudden wave upset their frail craft. Both decided to abandon the boat and swim to shore but were part way in when Macdonald became exhausted. His companion pluckily went to his rescue and assisted in keeping him afloat, while both shouted for help.

Although their cries were not heard, the upset canoe was noticed by Mrs. Cecil Peterson on shore and Terry Atkinson, who was with some swimmers on a raft, a short distance from shore. Atkinson noticed that the canoe was floating upside down and, becoming alarmed, told J. Lafay to go ashore and wheel out the pier and notify Jerry Harris, who owned a motor boat, to start up his engine. Lafay hurried out the pier and Atkinson made the trip on foot, arriving at the moment that Harris had the engine going and was awaiting particulars.

The three got in the boat, Atkinson pointed out the location of the capsized canoe. When they drew near the scene, the two swimmers were struggling in the water.

"They were both tuckered out," stated Harris. Their canoe was about 50 yards or so away and they were about 500 yards off the waterworks point. The young man seemed to be just about all in and the girl was helping him to keep afloat. We hauled them in the boat. The girl had swallowed some water but was not in serious condition, while the other was considerably worse. They both were OK after we took them ashore."

"I guess we had been in the water about half an hour after the canoe had upset," Mary Spragge said. "I don't know how it happened. I think it was when we were turning the canoe around in the waves. The next thing we knew we were in the water. We hung on to the canoe for a while and then decided to swim in to shore. We were part way in but it was rough and, tired out, we stopped and shouted for help. I saw a moto boat in the distance but didn't think it would notice us but fortunately the people in the boat saw us and came to our rescue."

Campbellford Mail Box Tampered With

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 12 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent). — Because some person or persons, presumably children, filled the keyhole of the mail collection box on the Catholic Church hill with rubbish, the collection of mail at that point was delayed twenty-four hours one day last week, and not until George Seguire, the mail collector, had forced open the padlock, was he able to pick up the mail at that point. It is understood that the local police are making a check up of this practice, which is detrimental to the general public.

Diving Competition Set For Exhibition

During his many years in the outdoor show world Capt. Lavalley has been instrumental in discovering quite an abundance of talent among local divers in the various cities in which he has appeared. Having heard of the prowess of many Peterborough young ladies as trick and fancy divers it has been decided to stage a competition to discover who is really the champion of the city.

This will also give the public an opportunity to witness and see for themselves who actually is the champion trick and fancy diver of the city

The preliminaries will take place in front of the grand stand on Thursday evening while the final will take place on Saturday evening and who knows but what a new world's champion may be discovered as a result of this interesting competition.

Three dives will be required in the competition the first two compulsory, that is to say, the entrant will do a Swan Dive and Forward Jack Dive while the third will be optional, the competitor executing the dive in which she is most proficient.

Three handsome cups will be awarded to the three most capable and, in the opinion of the judges, the best divers.

All entries should be addressed to the Sporting Editor, The Examiner, and should arrive not later than noon on Thursday. There will be no entrance fee and all competitors will be provided with a pass to enter the Exhibition grounds.

POOREST WHEAT CROP IN DECADE BEING FORECAST

Dominion Estimate of 1933 Yield Placed at 282,771,000 Bushels.

ALL GRAINS DOWN.

Potato Figures Lower — All Late-sown Crops Under Par.

OTTAWA, September 12.—A crop report issued yesterday by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics to'd how devastating had been the effect of the drought and armies of grasshoppers on Canada's wheat crop. The report estimated this year's crop for the entire Dominion at 282,771,000 bushels.

Last year the crop was 426,514,000 and the year before 321,326,000 bushels. The high record was in 1928, when, with fewer acres under wheat than this year, harvest of 566,726,000 bushels was garnered. Not since 1924 had the crop fallen below 300,000 000. The total that season was 262,007,000. Even that year, acre for acre, the yield was better than that estimated for 1933. The average yield in 1924 was 11.9 bushels to the acre. This year's estimate is 10.9. In 1928 the yield was 23.5 bushels per acre.

COOL WEATHER WILL CONTINUE

Dominion Bureau Denies Any Record Set Near 1896 Mark of 27.6.

TORONTO, Sept. 12.—No matter how chilly to-day may feel, no matter how many declare, "It's awful for this time of year," it is a fact that no record for September is being broken by the cold, according to the Dominion Meteorological Bureau.

Yesterday, for instance, when the mercury ranged between 44 and 62 degrees, it was only 7.5 degrees below normal, a long way from the record for September, which was established on the 23rd, 1896, when mercury slid down to 27.6.

It is going to continue cold today and perhaps to-morrow, the forecaster said last night. It might become even a little colder. But there are no prospects of snow in Toronto.

The coldest spot in Canada yesterday was Dawson, where mercury fell to 28 degrees. Moosonee registered a minimum of 30 and Huntsville and North Bay 32.

In Peterborough we are beginning to lose this nicety of discrimination. We have become so accustomed to mixing all sorts of ingredients together in order to get something new and different that our appreciation of what constitutes congeniality of ingredients is getting dimmed.

There can be ill-chosen mixtures which makes dishes almost unpalatable, yet which persons hesitate to say they don't' like, lest they appear to be out of tune with modern ideas of culinary art.

There is a noticeable presence of finesse in combinations of ingredients which distinguished the dishes of the famous old-time chefs.

* * * * * * *

A cultvated taste in foods, one which makes the epicure, is quite another thing from the uncultivated appetite which considers odd mixtures constitute fine menus.

* * * * * * *

There is no reason why ingredients, which do not form unwholesome chemical combinations, should not be put together in the cause of variety in dishes, as far as a digestible diet is concerned.

* * * * * * *

It is rather the knowledge of what form happy combinations of ingredients as well as wholesome ones which distinguishes the fine chef from the mediocre one of today as of yore.

* * * * * * *

One of the main tests is in the use and the combination of flavoring, seasoning, of herbs, pungent and sweet and the quantity of each needed to supply delicacy or zest to dishes.

* * * * * * *

Another test of the good cook is the sauces she makes. In these the variety of ingredients is often large and they must be congenial. The use of different sauces at different times on the same foods, lends as much variety to a dish as does combinations of ingredients in the dish itself.

* * * * * * *

A good sauce and one appropriate to the food is "the making" of many delicious dishes of very inexpensive foundations The meat used in making soup can be transformed into a main dish to satisfy an exacting appetite if a good sauce is poured over it.

* * * * * * *

Lobster or oyster sauce will supply a rather flavorless boiled fish, such as haddock or cod, with just the right taste to make it worthy to be set before guests.

* * * * * * *

Cabbage becomes a dish for an epicure when it is shredded, boiled a few minutes in many times its bulk of rapidly bubbling hot water, drained well and mixed with Hollandaise sauce.

* * * * * * *

It is worthwhile for a homemaker to study flavors, and seasonings of her own combining and to make sauces in variety if she would successfully supply a note of difference to her menus.

Ten-Month-Old Baby Is Nearly As Tall As Her Mother—May Be Seen On Midway

Ten months old and she has only a few inches to grow to be tall as her mother. That is Elsie, infant daughter of the midget Doll lady, thirty-six inches in height, to be seen in the Midway at the Exhibition this week.

A very charming trouper is the doll baby. Elsie is a normal, healthy baby to whom fair surroundings, streams of visitors and the cacophony of midway sounds have become as familiar as the daily pram ride is to the average infant. She sleeps soundly at night. In fact she has been a sleepy-time baby to most midway visitors who come in the evening and, as friendly and obliging as her mother is, like all other mothers she draws the line at waking Elsie out of her sleep.

But when Elsie does open her blue eyes and looks around, she makes an easy conquest of all visitors. She smiles a winning toothless grin, holds out her arms at the mother's word. "Come, and, after making friends, looses no time in going back to her mother.

Dolly, the babys' midget mother who is in private life Mrs. Bush, is as exacting over Elsie's routine as are most mothers. Elsie gets her regular sleep in hotels, in midway booths and anywhere she happens to be at the proper time. She is fed at just the right time and as a result she is a fine, healthy baby who might offer strong competition at any baby show.

Mrs. Bush, born in Boston, has been travelling for years in the show business. Oddly enough, her mother and father, who are now residing in Boston, are as unusually tall as she is short. Her mother measures five feet eleven and her father is six feet nine inches. Mrs. Bush has one sister who is five feet seven in height.

Mrs. Bush has covered many thousands of miles in her summer travels and spends her winters in the warmth of Miami.

Possessed of a fine singing voice whose deep tones come as a surprise to those who see the tiny lady. Dolly has regular engagements in the broadcasting studios. In her spare time reading she shows a preference for the classics.

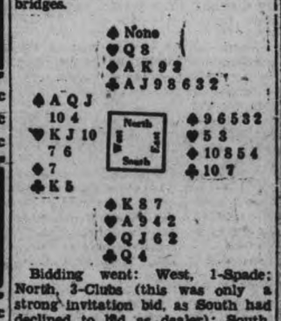
CONTRACT BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR CENTRAL PRESS

By E. V. SHEPARD

BURNING YOUR BRIDGES

If ever a leader burned all his bridges to oblige his followers to go ahead to victory, the declarer of the following hand must have been a close student of the stratagem. Certainly North burned all his bridges.



Bidding went: West, 1-Spade; North, 3-Clubs (this was only a strong invitation bid, as South had declined to bid as dealer); South, 3-No Trumps, with a single stop to spades; West, passed; North, 4-Diamonds; South, 5-Diamonds.

The opening lead was the 3 of spades, going through dummy's only possible stop to the suit. Dummy played low, although it might as well have put up the K, on the bare chance that East held that card. West played the 10. North ruffed.

Of course the declarer hoped for a 3-2 opposing division of trumps, so he led his K, followed by the 9, which dummy overtook with the J, only to see West discard the 4 of spades, showing that East held as many trumps as dummy, and one more trump than declarer, after North had ruffed once. That is the trouble with bidding 4-card suits, even when partner also holds 4. Too often for comfort one opponent holds as many or more trumps than declarer. To say the least the situation appeared awkward to the declarer. As West was a stickler for having 2½ quick tricks for an opening bid it was clear that he held the A-Q of spades, the K of hearts and the K of clubs, provided he was running true to form.

Dummy's Q of clubs was led, and would have been allowed to run had not West covered with the K. The Ace won. Then and there the declarer set fire to all his bridges. There was to be no escape for him in case things went wrong. He had to trust that things would go right.

The declarer led his Ace of diamonds—the last one which he held. He led a heart. Dummy's Ace won, and dummy's last trump was led. Upon it the declarer discarded his last heart, leaving him only 6 clubs and ruin in case that suit did not break for him. Probably he wished with all his heart that clubs were trumps.

Dummy's 4 of clubs was led. West played the 5. For an instant the declarer hesitated between finessing his 8 and playing his J. In an endeavor to drop the 10. It was a close point, as North read West for 5 spades originally, and unless he also held 5 hearts (which he had declined to bid), West held the missing 10. North put up his J of clubs, dropping the 10, then spread his hand for 13 tricks won.

RELIEF FOR HOME-OWNERS.

The announcement from Hon. J. D. Monteith that the Ontario Government has authorized relief for indigent home-owners will be received with gratification by those who will benefit by the new arrangement and probably with some misgiving by relief boards because of the increase of relief costs involved.

By reason of this decision municipalities will be authorized to credit home-owners who have been left without income as a result of the unusual economic conditions with their municipal taxes, plus 50 per cent. for repairs, etc., and with water and light rates.

Hitherto these victims of the depression have been unable to secure any measure of relief because of the fact that they owned their own homes.

It did not matter that they might be utterly without funds and unable to pay their taxes; the allowance for shelter merely took care of the indigent tenant, but made no provision for the home-owner who was equally up against it.

Municipalities have now the authority to do something for this particular class of citizen, a change that has been urged in many quarters since the effects of the depression became acute.

FRED. PERRY'S TRIUMPH.

The success of Frederick J. Perry, the English tennis star, in winning the national championship of the United States is gratifying to Britishers the world over, who have followed the career of Perry with keen admiration and have always sympathized with him in his previous ill-luck in seeking national honors.

After his brilliant showing in the Davis Cup games it would have been a cruel disappointment if his quest of the American title had been unsuccessful.

At the same time there is a feeling of regret that Perry's triumph should necessarily have to be at the expense of another Britisher, Jack Crawford, the great Australian player, who with the Australian, French and British titles safely in his possession lost a glorious opportunity to make a tennis "grand slam" by adding the American championship to his string.

Sport lovers throughout the Empire, however, have been thrilled by the fact that it was left to these two splendid British players to battle in the round for the United States title; the first time in the history of the competition that there has been an all-British final and only the second occasion in which there has been an "all-foreign" last round.

The brilliant showing of the English and Australian tennis teams during the season should be a source of encouragement to Canadian exponents of the game to keep on trying until they succeed in developing players of world championship calibre.

THE FINAL FACTOR.

It is undoubtedly true of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition that attendance is the final factor of success.

Exhibits and attractions in themselves cannot make an exhibition.

It may have the most entertaining programs, the finest of livestock and the best fruit of the soil, but unless there is box-office patronage in proportion to the merit of the exhibition success is impossible.

Peterborough people owe it to themselves to support their Exhibition; it is their own show and it offers a great deal to amuse and entertain and instruct.

This year's show is complete in every detail in keeping with the new Class A rating given the Peterborough Industrial; there is something for everybody, and Exhibition visitors are advised not to be satisfied with a cursory inspection of the exhibits, but to devote enough time to make sure that they have seen all there is to be seen.

There is more to the thing than the large midway or the exciting grandstand performance; those features are decidedly well worth while and should not be missed, but if the Exhibition consisted only of the entertainment side its prestige in the eyes of Government officials would not be nearly as high as it really is.

The agricultural side is fortunately as big and certainly more important than the amusement departments, and the exhibits of livestock are perhaps the finest ever shown here.

Make up your mind to visit Exhibition Park more than once this week; you will find much to please you on each visit.

WHAT IS INVOLVED.

There are not a few people who talk glibly about repudiating debts as a way out of Canada's economic difficulties.

A vote of thanks is due to Hon. H. H. Stevens, Minister of Trade and Commerce, for his emphatic denunciation of this doctrine in his address to the Conservative Summer School at Newmarket the other day.

It is probably the case that the individuals who advocate such a course have given little or no thought to what is involved, and for this reason the plain words used by Hon. Mr. Stevens should serve a decidedly useful purpose in exposing the utter folly of imagining that contractual obligations, whether federal, provincial, municipal or individual, can be repudiated without wrecking the whole financial structure.

"Anyone who talks, as many are talking, of the repudiation of debts as a way out of the present difficult situation should be pinned down to logical argument and be compelled to follow it through to its inevitable conclusion," declared the Minister of Trade and Commerce. "Repudiation is not only unworkable but unthinkable. With two-thirds of the debts held in Canada it means that the great insurance, loan and mortgage companies and banks, which have as the chief background of their investment Dominion Government bonds, would be forced into bankruptcy immediately on the institution of such a policy and, once bankrupt, the savings of the individual would be disastrously affected."

Those words of Mr. Stevens should be read carefully by everybody, especially by the loose thinkers who babble about repudiation of debts as a step to recovery.

COURAGE WITH PRUDENCE.

Mr. John D. Mansfield, president of the Chrysler Corporation of Canada, Limited, in a recent article takes a very optimistic view of economic conditions in Canada. "Just as there were thousands of foolish optimists," he says, "who kept repeating—'Prosperity is just around the corner'—when it was quite evident that business was travelling fast and faster down a long toboggan slide, so to-day there are thousands who are slow to realize that business is definitely better." There is a good deal of truth in this statement. While the depression was going on business executives as never before in Canada investigated their enterprises thoroughly in order to stop leaks and introduce economy wherever possible. These concerns are now in a position to take advantage of the upward trend in business. "To-day we have still many doubters and hesitators," he declares, "who are slow to believe that better business is actually here. They are probably the same people who found it difficult to believe that the apparently good old days—but really bad old days—of over-expanded organizations and over-inflated stock and commodity prices had departed."

To support his view Mr. Mansfield gives a number of tendencies on which industry in Canada depends. Wheat, the basic crop of Canada, has travelled a long way toward a profitable price level and shows signs of holding at least part of its gain in spite of organized interference with markets. The forces of nature, curtailment of acreage and improved confidence are doing their part. Wholesale commodity prices have shown a consistent tendency to rise and retail prices are beginning to follow. Seasonal trends in automobile sales have shown a striking reversal this year. Usually May has been the peak month. Last year it came in April, and this year in June. This year the July and August sales were very little behind, and those of the latter month bid fair to equal or exceed July. More cars are being sold for cash this year. A rough check up of retail sales shows the proportion of cash sales several times that of 1929. There is no denying the fact that business is slowly and steadily improving. Perhaps it is better that there should be nothing sensational about the advance. One of these days the evidences of returning prosperity will be so conclusive that even doubters and hesitators will be convinced.—Brantford Expositor.

SAYS IT'S WORSE IN MICHIGAN.

A gentleman from Detroit who spends his vacation period each year in a cottage on the shores of Lake Huron, informed the Beacon-Herald that a good many people in Detroit and other places in Michigan were not taking holidays this year. The reason is they could not afford it. This is what he said:

"I know there are not nearly as many Michigan people along the lake this year as formerly, we would not be here were it not for the fact that we own the cottage and it costs little to stay here. From what I can gather the people in Ontario are not as hard hit as those in Michigan. If I were to say that you did not know what the depression felt like you would not believe it, but there are plenty of people in Michigan who have been put down and out, and whether they will ever recover is something I do not know. My own case is typical of hundreds of others. I thought I had reached the point where the future was certain. I had been a careful investor. I had never speculated. When the pinch came I was certain I should strengthen my position by liquidating one investment in order to protect another. In order to do so I had to take a loss on the first one, but it was not too serious. Then, like any other man, I put my money in the bank so I could take care of the second, or major investment. Within two months after that the bank closed its doors and I have been able to secure very little since, and in that way my first investment, as I call it, has gone and my second one has been seriously dissipated. Right now, by actual count, 60 per cent. of what I had worked for and put away has gone. I am not an old man yet, but I realize my best working days have passed. I have quit worrying because I realize I am in a better position than many others. I believe the people in Ontario are in a better position than those in Michigan; your affairs seem to be on a more secure basis. You are more conservative in your methods of doing business, and above that you have not had any keys turned in the doors of your banks."

This gentleman knows Ontario well enough; he is a native of this province, and has had reasons to keep in touch with what is going on here. He believes that recovery will be felt in Ontario before it is in Michigan in spite of all the publicity which is being given to forcing prosperity to return across the line.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

To-night is the last chance to hear the band of the Scots Guards at the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition. Music-lovers should not miss the opportunity.

An Englishman is tennis champion of the United States for the first time in thirty years, which makes the early season tennis articles in the American papers funny reading at the present time.

To-morrow is Children's Day at the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition. Let us hope every local youngster will have a chance to attend.

Balloon racing is one sport that we are sure we never could get fond of—and one that we have no intention of trying.

The British Columbia political situation shows no sign of clarifying. This will probably be the most involved campaign in the history of the province.

American feminine tennis was made notable this year by the upset of Helen Wills Moody and the fact that some of the ladies wore shorts.—Toronto Saturday Night.

VACATION ESCAPADE

By ARTHUR SHUMWAY

CHAPTER 21.

Sally would go on the yacht party. Ted be hanged. Staying home might even be more dangerous, she told herself, for she would be alone, probably with Gus Vitelli. And at least it would be harder on her nerves. When something was going on that might be gay she felt she had to be there if only to break the combination of internal tension and external monotony that threatened to shatter her nerves in the periods between the exciting occurrences of the last few weeks. Then, too, she reasoned, she might hear or see something important to their investigation. Yes she would go and Ted could get angry if he wanted to.

So after dinner she dressed and came down in her white polo coat and beret, feeling for the moment very much the young society sportswoman.

"Thank you, Mr Proctor," Sally replied, blushing. "You look quite—dashing, yourself."

And he did, she decided, in his own polo coat, yachting togs and white cap with shining black visor. He made a little bow. "It is only fitting," he said, with a sly smile. Then his face clouded and he seemed to be thinking swiftly. "Sally," he said, "I forgot to mention this. Don't be alarmed if you see other cars that seem to be following us."

Sally looked at him questioningly, frankly puzzled.

"Just a precaution on my part," he said. "We ride in the sedan with the excellent Chandler at the wheel."

They went out the side door where the sedan, Ted at the wheel, stood waiting. Sally noticed that the light on the landing was not lit. Proctor helped her into the car and followed. "All right, Chandler," he said.

"Yes, sir," Ted replied crisply as he slipped the gears into mesh.

The big sedan moved quietly, smoothly down the drive. There seemed to be something sinister about their departure; suddenly Sally realized that there were no lights in the car or outside it, not even the dash lamp. As they moved down toward the street Sally saw the dark outline of another car move out from under the thick foliage, saw it swing quietly into the road, also without lights, and proceed in their van. She looked behind and saw what she expected—another dark, lightless car following them down the drive. When the procession moved out into the somewhat lighter street she saw that the other two machines, both touring cars, were curtained, and seemed to be riding low as if carrying heavy weights.

Gradually, but insistently, a fear began to rise in the girl's mind. They were on their way to the yacht, to a party, and the two other cars were coming for their protection; that was Fred Proctor's explanation. Yes, but suppose he knew all about their spying activities, suppose he was the unscrupulous conspirator, the murderer, that they first believed him to be; what better method could he have than this to smuggle them off somewhere together, heavily guarded and unsuspecting, to their deaths?

This fear grew as they went quietly down the dark asphalt street, a narrow, winding street lined with palms and oleanders and hidden almost by overhanging, moss-draped oaks. They were travelling north, still without lights.

At the street leading west to the southernmost bridge across the Halifax river the leading car turned west. That was one comfort at least, for that was the way they should be going to get to the boatyard. Ted followed the car and as they rounded the corner Sally saw that the rearguard was coming.

Within a few minutes they were at the boatyard, the other cars parked ahead and behind them under the huge old oaks. Ted alighted and opened the door. Sally and Fred Proctor got out. "Turn the car over to Pete," Proctor told Ted, "and come along with us."

So Ted was coming! Why, of course; wasn't he supposed to work on the boat, too? Sally felt more secure, though in a different way even more excited. Whatever happened they both would be there. This was thrilling.

Ahead, she saw the boat, a handsome houseboat much like a small steamship, she thought. It was lighted up, the first gay sight she had seen since leaving the house. As they went up the plank a man in blue and white came out of the deckhouse. When the door opened a rush of sound—of radio music and laughter—came bursting out into the oppressively silent darkness. The man saw their party and lifted his arm. "Whoopee!" he called. He turned and threw open the door. "They're here!" he shouted. "Come out and meet the host and hostess, you triflers, you. Just a bunch of triflers," he explained apologetically to Sally and Fred Proctor. "Howza boy, Fred?" He was a plump little man with a face that suggested an owl suddenly gone carefree.

From the cabin door the others poured out, men and women, laughing and shouting.

"Things have got an early start," Proctor said in Sally's ear. Then he greeted the guests and began making introductions. Sally was bewildered, but pleased. Everybody was gay and was nice to her and seemed to be intent only on having a harmless good time. A few of the guests she had seen somewhere about the town; the others were utter strangers, but very pleasant people.

They led Sally into the cabin. The luxury of the boat took her breath. If anything Fred Proctor's yacht was even more comfortable, more beautiful than his late uncle's house.

Within a few minutes Sally felt the deck begin to throb faintly under her feet. There followed a sense of motion of lightness. She looked out and saw the buildings and craft of the boatyard begin to drop behind.

As soon as she could Sally slipped out and walked about the deck looking for Ted, but could not find him. Nor did she see Fred Proctor. He had left the cabin just as the boat started.

It was chilly for Florida, a sign that the season was getting along, a night like a northern October, crisp, clear and delightful. She gave a little shiver, hunched up her shoulders and returned to the warmth and laughter of the party.

Proctor returned and the party progressed without thought of time or worry. Sally could see that there was not a girl present, married or single, who failed to play up to the young millionaire. Each gave him her best smile, her coyest glance, her frank and flirtatious admiration. It was thrilling to realize that he, who probably could have had the entire attention of any of them, preferred her. She was proud to find him always at her side, watching her comfort attentively, addressing all his remarks to her, dancing with her so often as almost to be rude to his other guests.

But at each dance he was a little more unsteady on his feet and his strong arms crushed her tighter against his body. She decided that he was becoming dangerous. Well, she might have expected it; Ted had warned her, had told her not to come on the party. As soon as she had an opportunity she rose quickly, excused herself and left the cabin. Going out onto the deck she thought she heard above the blatant music and merriment the sound of pattering feet. It seemed almost that someone had been at the door, peering in, when she approached it. How much was fancy, how much fact she had no idea.

She looked about and saw no one. Dismissing the matter, she wrapped her coat about her body and walked toward the stern with two objects in mind: one, to keep away from Proctor for a while; the other, to try to catch a glimpse of Ted. Coming to an open hatch, she decided to see what might lay below decks. Carefully, quietly she let herself down the ladder. A door was ajar. She opened it cautiously and beheld a compact but luxuriously furnished stateroom. A mirror caught her eye. She decided to straighten her hair and apply a dab of powder.

She smiled and make a little puckery face at herself as she playfully struck the tip of her nose with the powder puff. She smoothed the powder about and stood back to admire the effect when she saw something in the glass that stopped her hand as it poised by her cheek. The door was opening slowly. As Sally watched the glass, yet unable to move or speak, she saw an evil, ugly, leering face appear in the doorway little yellow eyes burning upon her body. She whirled about to face Gus Vitelli. Vitelli as quickly—though quietly—shut the door behind him and came forward as silent, as fearsome, as loathesome as a snake.

Sally's impulse was to scream. She knew that her mouth had opened and her throat was forming the sound when Vitelli sprang forward. The next she knew she knew his hairy, calloused hand was over her mouth, stifling the sound, pressing her lips cruelly against her teeth.

ALL OF US

BACK TO THE CITY.

I went for a vacation—and for the first half of it I read no newspapers. I could have read them, although I was in a far, high place, where there are no thieves, no traffic problems, no telephones, no radios, no electric lights, no street cars. . . . But I read no newspapers. Not because I wanted to get away from them—they are my job, a part of my bloodstream and the breath I draw—but because I thought I'd have a better life if I got myself away for a while from the life that is mirrored in newspapers, from all the hustle-bustle, struggle-clamor, fight-fume existence of 1933.

So there were no newspapers . . . But chipmunks darted over rocks and came boldly-timidly to take food from our hands. And streams murmured on the hillsides and the wind rushed through the pines and the water in the lake was bracingly cold and the granite hills were strong and comforting, and the sunset on the mountain was splendid, and a man had a good appetite, and if he laid a tool down by a tree and came back two days later he'd find it there still, untouched. . . . It was a fair, safe life—with no echoes in it, anywhere, from the city streets and the crowded hearts of another life.

So for a while I read no newspapers—and perhaps I was proud of my freedom.

Freedom? did I write? But that was not freedom. That was but a recess, a space for breathing, for strengthening. It was, in a way, a retreat from life. . . . And so I went back to newspapers. Went back to repeal elections, bond issues, street cars, murders, suicides, telephones, salesmen at the door, national recovery acts, automobile collisions, radio programs, crowds, red and green traffic lights, time tables, and all the fierce, feverish, passionate and pathetic pageant that is reported each day in the papers.

Did I go protesting? Did I go as the poem says, like the galley slave? Did I come down from the hills, sad and self-pitying as if the life of the city were too much for mortal to bear?

No, I did not. I came gladly, as a child comes home. I came willingly, respecting the city to which I returned. I came as I think nearly all city men come back to their towns, eager to be a part of that life again, glad to share its struggle and pain and perplexity and despair and defeat and triumph once more. Praising the hills where they had their vacation, joyously looking back to those precious days, but deeply contented to be a part of this life that you see reflected in the papers. . . . Back at work again.

The Markets

ONTARIO GRAIN

Approximate prices track shipping point—Wheat 64c to 65c; oats, 32c to 34c; barley, 40c to 43c; rye, 45c to 46c.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

Prices were generally unchanged from last week's close on the Montreal Dairy and Produce Market yesterday although butter was slightly firmer. No. 1 grade butter in carlots or less sold at 19c a pound, compared with 18¾c to 19c on Saturday. Receipts totaled 414 boxes.

Cheese brought 10¾c to 11¼c a pound for Ontario colored, with 10¾ the quotation for Ontario white. Quebec colored sold for 10½c to 10¾c a pound and Quebec white for 10¾c to 10¾c. A total of 3,504 boxes of cheese was offered for sale.

Graded shipments in carlots or less of Ontario eggs were quoted over a range of 22c to 23c a dozen for extras, 17c to 18c for firsts and 13½c to 14c for seconds. Westerns remained slightly beneath Ontario levels. Arrivals amounted to 322 cases.

Potatoes were 75c to 80c for new Quebec stock in 80-pound bags. Dealers are expecting new arrivals from the Maritimes, and demand for Quebec stock is consequently light.

CHICAGO GRAIN

In the most active speculative buying witnessed for weeks all grains kited toward the zenith yesterday, wheat up a maximum of 4½ cents a bushel.

Rumors of France going off the gold standard accompanied the upward flight of prices. Chiefly, however, traders found purchasing incentive in remarks credited to Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace, that the so-called commodity dollar appealed to Washington Administration officials as the best, if not the only means of controlled inflation, and suggesting that there might be a strong dose of inflation within the next three months.

Profit-taking led to something of a reaction in the late dealings, and wheat closed unsettled, 2¾ to 3¼ cents above Saturday's finish; corn, 1¾ to 1¾ cents up; oats, 1⅝ to 1¾ cents advance, and provisions varying from 15 cents decline to a rise of 10 cents.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, September 12. — A last-hour buying splurge, engendered by an extremely strong Chicago market, lifted wheat prices out of the rut on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange yesterday and brought about moderate trading in the December and May futures above the minimum levels. December failed to hold its advance however, and the prices closed unchanged to ¼ cent higher.

Closing quotations showed October at 70¼c, December at 71¾c and May at 76⅝c. Chicago's upturn was attributed to inflation talk and annexed to be the only market factor of the day. Export business over the week-end and yesterday was small and Liverpool prices were easier.

Due to reports of rain in the Argentine the English market closed ¾d to ⅞d lower, and Buenos Aires wheat was also easier.

World shipments for last week totalled 17,661,168 bushels, an advance of 1,750,000 over the previous week. North America shipped just over 4,000,000 bushels of this, the great bulk of which was Canadian.

Only a moderate business was transacted in the cash grains department. Further interest in rye for export to the United States was again in evidence and rye futures were boosted about 3½ cents to feature the coarse grain trading. Oats and barley stayed at pegged levels all day.

Quotations For To-Day

Yet the deepest truths are best read between the lines, and, for the most part, refuse to be written.—Amos Bronson Alcott.

ON THIS DATE

A DAY IN CANADIAN HISTORY

By Fred Williams

THE KING'S FIRST VISIT TO TORONTO.

On this date, in 1883, the present King of Britain and the Dominions paid his first visit to Toronto. He was then 18 years old and a midshipman on H.M.S. Canada. He arrived in company with the Marquess of Lorne and the Princess Louise who were paying their farewell visit to the capital city of Ontario.

The Canada of that day was often scared by Fenian threats, and when Colonel G. T. Denison, police magistrate, received word from New York that the hostile Irish-Americans might make a demonstration it was decided to take extra precautions. A large number of police in uniform and plain clothes were on duty at the station and the Queen's hotel was surrounded with a cordon worthy of war time. When the viceregal party had gone to their rooms, Colonel Sir Francis deWinton sent for the chief of police, Major Draper (no relation to the present Chief, General Draper) and told him that the government had received information from its secret service in New York that three Fenians had been sent to Toronto for the purpose of assassinating Princess Louise. This increased the alarm and precautions were doubled, but so quietly that none of the party knew of them until afterwards.

There was a great crowd at the exhibition and there were many opportunities for disaster, but none came, the visitors being evidently alarmed at the close guard kept around the governor, the princess and the royal middy. Colonel Denison afterwards said: "We had been afraid of a pistol shot or a knife thrust and were watching for either. Eight months later we heard positively from Fenian sources in New York that three men had come to Toronto, that they had no intention of shooting the princess, but that they were prepared to throw vitriol in her face. The men reported when they got back that they were unable to get near the princess because there was such a crowd of officials around her. I noticed that Prince George never left the Princess's side for one instant. I fancy Colonel deWinton had instructed him to that effect, so that we could guard both at the same time."

A month later Prince George came up from Quebec incognito to spend a couple of days at Niagara Falls and a day at Niagara town. He and his party travelled by boat to and from Toronto and were guarded by a Toronto detective in mufti. The Prince did not return to Toronto until 1901 when as Duke of Cornwall and York he came with his duchess, now Queen Mary. He had not forgotten that day at the exhibition and, with that canny memory which is characteristic of the royal family, enquired for some people he had then met but who had passed on.

Character From Handwriting

By BLANCHE A. DRAPER

A Feature Conducted by Peterborough's Leading Handwriting Analyst for the Readers of The Examiner.

Mrs. Mary A. Wellman, General Delivery, Peterborough, Ont.: The handwriting as shown on your sample for analysis tells that you belong to the type of over-energetic people. You have a rather nervous disposition and this sometimes leads you to extremes. There is imagination shown in the tall upper loops of your letters, but it is not of the type which could be made to bring you monetary recompense. The crossing of your 't' bars denotes the expression of a fair amount of willpower. No doubt you want to have your own way quite often, and find that you can not, and so become upset mentally, and the nervous strain tells on you for a long time.

Lauretta Jones, Lakefield, Ont.: The handwriting as described on your sample for analysis indicates that you are easy-going and not at all decided. You let your friends impose upon your good nature too often. You will have to learn to say 'no' and mean it, if you are to store up reserve for future use. You may look quite strong and healthy but you really are not. You appear tired out. If you fly off the handle, as I think you do once in a while, and say what you are thinking, it is a good thing, because it relieves those pent-up emotions of yours. Perhaps it would be better for you to do so more often, then you could assert yourself, and be important.

Bessie G. French, Trent River, Ont.: The handwriting on your sample for analysis reveals interesting characteristics. It depicts a desire for self-expression and shows that you should always endeavor to work alone, or act upon your own initiative. You are intuitive, intelligent and have a keen sense of the artistic. This characteristic should give you the ability to act as critic in either literature or art. You are fond of social good times and comfort, dislike commands and resent intrusion into your private affairs. You can successfully hide your feelings when necessary, and also can be a good bluffer. Your disposition is gracious and easy. You are fair-minded and generous. Rather apt to be proud of family connections. Your 'H' shows constructive ability. This trait enables you to undertake things in a big way, and to cover your tracks whenever you desire to do so. Accuracy is not your best point for on your envelope you use the correct name and address of this column and in your letter twice repeat it incorrectly. No doubt you are fairly successful, but you have not as yet reached the pinnacle, if the literary ability denoted in your writing means anything. I am sorry you told me anything at all about yourself for I prefer to analyse the writing and give my unbiased scientific opinions before knowing who people are or what they do. Your 't' bars tell me that you are combative and will argue a point any time just for the pleasure of winning and then just when people want you to talk, you close up like a clam.

Margaret Grover, George St., North, Peterborough, Ont.: The handwriting submitted on sample for analysis delineates you as a decided person. You either like things or dislike them. There seems to be no two ways about it. You are energetic and intelligent, industrious and appear to want to be always busy. As soon as you complete one task, you are eagerly looking for another and I think you are rather apt to work too diligently and too long. You are generous and lend your hand to the emergencies which present themselves from day to day as though your life depended upon your thought and care of others. Sometimes you arrive at conclusions which are hastily made and not correct, but you have intuition and keenness of perception, so can soon remedy a mistake to the advantage of all concerned. You should be able to vibrate health.

Nancy Jones, Lakefield, Ont.: The handwriting as portrayed throughout your signature on your sample for analysis represents versatility and originality. You are keen, quick and intelligent but you do not appreciate the fact that it is not always those who have a faculty of thinking fast who gain the most success. For slow, sure thinking does more to bring accurate results than swift overanxious thought ever could. Some letter formations show that you make good resolutions and that you set out all right with the best of intentions only to find out that you are back into your old stride and doing the very things which you meant not to do again. You are jolly and full of fun, but that does not bring rewards in a monetary manner, does it?

PROPOSE ALL FINANCIAL YEARS COME TO CLOSE ON DECEMBER 31

Scheme Would Bring Dominion, Provinces and Municipalities in Line.

TREASURY CONFERENCE.

OTTAWA, Sept. 12.—(CP).—The financial year for the Dominion, provinces and Canadian municipalities will all end as of Dec. 31, the close of the calendar year, if a proposal before the Dominion-Provincial Treasury Conference is made effective. The suggestion came before the meeting to-day for consideration.

At present the end of the financial year for the Dominion is March 31. In the various provinces and in the many municipalities scattered throughout the country yearly financial accounts are closed at the end of different months.

Another proposal is that items, such as subsidies received from the Dominion by the provinces, educational expenditures and like matters, should be kept under uniform headings. This is along the lines of the aim of the conference to achieve uniformity of practice in public financing as associated with the operation of three classes of government in Canada—Dominion, provincial and municipal.

Uniform legislation is now in operation by the Dominion and the nine provinces in the compilation of vital statistics. Once there were nine different provincial acts, nine different methods of compilation and nine different methods of publication. The same situation is true with regard to fisheries, mining, dairying and other industries. The conference aims to have similar uniformity enter into the keeping of public accounts.

With the exception of British Columbia and Nova Scotia, all provinces were presented at the opening parley to-day. The meeting continued for two hours this morning in camera and will sit again this afternoon. Deliberations are expected to terminate to-morrow.

Market Closing On All Exchanges

STANDARD EXCHANGE.

TORONTO, Sept. 12.—(CP.)—The trading started at the opening to-day and then through the business of the session, moved along at a steady jog and holding about half the price gains. Silver and base metal shares maintained the best tone with oil stocks firm and the gold issues barely steady.

A few of the base metal shares closed with gains while the leaders. International Nickel and Noranda finished down about 25 cents each. Base Metals Corporation advanced 6. Sherritt 3 and Falconbridge was steady. In the silver group Eldorado closed 15 higher at 4.05.

All the leading gold shares boarded moderate losses. McIntyre dropped to 33½. Dome $1 to 34.50 and Lake Shore 25 to 45.75.

TORONTO EXCHANGE.

TORONTO, September 12 (C.P.).—The strong bullish trend with which the Toronto Stock Exchange opened to-day failed to carry on till the close, price level appearing a bit ragged at the finish. The big end of the day's business was in the distillery and beer issues, and these all established their high prices in the first half-hour of trading.

Walkers Common sold up to 52 in the early session and the close at 50 was off ¾. Distillers Seagram had a net drop of ¼, Industrial Alcohol closed unchanged at 20½, and Brewers and Distillers worked down to 2.55 from 2.75 for a net drop of 10 cents. Canada Malting and Canada Bud closed with fractional gains still intact.

Metal shares finished close to their best prices, Smelters at 135 and Nickel at 21.25. Losses of narrow fractions were registered for Brazilian, Ford A, and C.P.R.

WALL STREET

NEW YORK, Sept. 12 (AP) — Stocks backed and filled irresolutely to-day. Alcohols turned irregular after an early attempt to extend their sharp advances of yesterday. Oils were steady to firm, while mining issues were in light supply. U.S. Smelting eased 2 points. Shares off major fractions to around a point included U.S. Steel, New York Central, American Telephone, Cerro de Pasco, Chrysler and American Commercial Alcohol. Equivalent advances were registered by Du Pont Amerada, Standard Oil of New Jersey and Kelvinator.

Transfers approximately 2,400,000 shares.

Dairy Notes

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 12. (By Examiner Staff Correspondent).—Cheese graded at the local station on Friday were registered from the several factories as follows: Prince of Wales 45; Brace 30; Burnley 44; New Model 25; Minie 56; Seymour West 27; Spring Valley 26; Woodlands 39; I.X.L. 25; Crow Bay 40; Glanwood 36; Trent Bridge 65; Empire 73 Kimberley 68; Brickley 34; Warkworth 97; Morganston 72; Trent Valey 76—in all a total of 858 boxes of cheese graded.

Considerable increase has been noted in the flow of milk during the past few weeks, due to the recent rain falls.

The Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association's annual meeting has been delayed two weeks, and will now be held in Napanee on December 5 and 6. This postponement is due to the fact that a poultry show is being staged at that place on the original dates set.

Mr. Frank Hearns, who for the past twenty-five years has been chief dairy instructor for Western Ontario, has suffered a break down and is now undergoing treatment in a London, Ont., hospital.

FROST RUINED FLOWERS AT 'EX'

Dave Jordan Had Part of His Exhibit Frozen Last Night.

BEAUTIFUL EXHIBIT.

Evidence of the depths to which the mercury dropped overnight was particularly felt by Dave Jordan, local florist, whose partly finished greenhouse exhibit in the show tent at the Exhibition grounds, was found frozen this morning. The coleus which was ruined by the frost was replaced to-day.

Donald Jordan was seen by The Examiner at noon with his attractive exhibit banked near the entrance to the tent, almost completed. It includes an artistic arrangement of ferns, coleus, geraniums and abuttilins. Other beautiful floral displays, and hot house plants, etc., were in the course of preparation by the numerous exhibitors and it was expected that judging would be commenced this afternoon.

All the horticulturists are hoping that the temperature through the night will remain constant, as in the event of such cold as was experienced last night, many of them stand to lose a lot of valuable specimens that have taken years to bring to their present state of perfection. This is particularly true of the begonias, rubber plants, cacti, and geraniums.

fraudulently obtained a total of $581.28 by cashing the Canadian National Express money orders which he stole on June 30 from the railway office at Lakefield, when he carried off the office safe.

Also Montgomery pleaded guilty to breaking and entering the store of Ivan Steen, Aylmer, Elgin County, and carrying off a safe containing $1,135 in cash, mortgages Imperial Oil stock and insurance.

He pleaded guilty to defrauding Roy Nicholls of Bowmanville by securing $85 for 40 shares of Imperial Oil stock, stolen from Steen's store.

He was remanded another week for sentence.

Montgomery's speedy course through Ontario early in July cashing the money orders stolen from Lakefield had police throughout the province baffled. In all his criminal activities in July must have brought him returns of close to $1,000 in cash.

But Montgomery is alleged to have admitted to police that he soon spent the large sums he received by his thefts and forgeries and that he was "broke" when he loaded his revolver and lay in wait late at night to holdup Curtis at his service station at Park Hill Road and Water streets.

Saw the Country

"Easy come, easy go" Montgomery is said to have explained coolly when asked to tell police how he had spent the money. "I stayed at the best hotels and sure saw the country."

That Montgomery did see Ontario was made certain when the list of charges were read out against him this morning. He used fictitious names in cashing all the money orders, being an expert with a pen according to police, and cashed them for the following amounts at the following places: Norval, Haultain County, $37.50; Glanworth, Middlesex County, $27.35; Aylmer, Elgin County, $31.70; New Hamburg, Waterloo County, $38.55; London, $34.57; Primrose Dufferin County, $26.55; Maxwell, Grey County, $38.43; Snelgrove, Peel County, $33.42; Shelburne, Dufferin County, $36.80; Port Alexander, Renfrew County, $27.89; Victoria Harbor, Simcoe County, $47.80; Jarvis, Haldimand County, $47.80; Lansdowne Leeds County, $30; Madoc, Hastings County, $42.10; Dundas, Wentworth County, $38.50; Gravenhurst, Muskoka district, $38.63; Huntsville, Muskoka district, $45.80.

LAKE MALARTIC

Surface exploration work on the property of Lake Malartic Gold Mines in the Malartic area of Quebec revealed seven veins. Work done to date indicates good values over favorable widths and lengths. An entirely new vein was discovered a few days ago according to official word and it is the intention to concentrate effort in this new area. The vein will be diamond drilled immediately. New financial interests recently have become identified with the company and will provide funds for underground development. Arrangements also have been completed for the installation of a small pilot mill. It is the intention to extract the high grade ore sections showing on surface.

WAYSIDE

Will continue agressive development and plans to install a mill, according to statement by Mr. Ritchie, Managing-director. Mr. Ritchie's statement follows "the Company is amply financed and will efect a mill when our consultants determine the type and capacity of mill most suitable for the ore which we are developing."

CANADIAN KIRKLAND

According to unofficial northern advice shaft sinking has been started on the property of Canadian Kirkland Gold Mines in the western section of the Kirkland Lake camp. It is stated that the management will continue the No. 2 shaft, now at 150 feet, to 250 feet, where a station will be cut and lateral work proceeded with. Canadian Kirkland recently completed a new financing deal and is said to have ample funds assured for a large program of work on its property.

BROWNLEE

Is carrying out a large program of work on its property adjoining Noranda in the Rouyn district. At present two diamond drills are operating on the claims. Six holes have been put down to depths ranging from 1,200 to 1,600 feet. J. A. Brownlee, President, stated that drill results are encouraging. With good values in gold, silver, and copper indicated. Surface finds also revealed good values. It is understood that an official statement regarding development will be issued at an early date.

Davidson-Wilson Win Mixed Doubles

Isobel Davidson and Herb. Wilson won the mixed doubles championship to conclude the local open tennis tournament here yesterday. The match was played at the Kawartha Club courts, with this pair taking two straight sets from Hazel Jackson and Walter Jackson, 6-4 and 6-4. It was a hard-fought match, but the Davidson-Wilson team proved a little steadier to come through on top. Walter Jackson's aggressive playing made it a close affair, but the others turned them back with a cautious brand of tennis and some excellent placements and returns.

Miss Davidson figured in three championships of the city this year, ladies' singles, ladies' doubles, and mixed doubles. She won the Morrow Trophy in singles, while Max Cotton captured the Dean Trophy for men's singles—it being the first time these youthful stars were successful in winning the silverware. Mrs. Dewart was on the winning doubles team with Miss Davidson, and Mr. Wilson helped her win the mixed doubles yesterday. George Scott and Walter Jackson took the men's doubles, and the junior men's singles went to Jack Cowling.

The Peterborough open tournament this year was very successful in every way. Between 80 and 90 players took part, there being 110 entries in the six events. The matches were nearly all closely contested and played in good weather on the Peterborough Club and Kawartha Club courts. Many young prospects were seen and the future of tennis in this city looks promising with so many young stars in the making. The veteran racquet-wielders again turned in fine performances, and the committee in charge is considering enlarging the tournament next year, perhaps making it open to the district.

ECONOMIZING.

MONDAY WAS certainly long shot day at Thorncliffe, not one favorite getting down in front. And did the form players take it on the chin, your telling us.* Mynheer who was scratched on Monday looks to be able to account for a purse real soon. A couple of years ago, the hide was a consistent winner of handicap events and he won his last two starts at Niagara Falls about ten days ago and seems to have recovered some of his old time form.

* * *

GLEE CLUB always seems to gather in a race at Thorncliffe and this meeting should be no exception. He is a Grade "A" plater. Bubbling Out has been running far below his usual form all summer, but may wake up any day now and when he does he will sure make no mistakes as he possesses a lot of class, being a son of the famous Bubbling Over, a former Kentucky Derby winner.

* * *

SEMESTER IS another that is more than ordinary and do not be surprised if he finds a race in the Thorncliffe book to his liking. They have one called Hogarty quartered at Woolett's plant who can run six furlongs with any of them and when he is sent in there with speed on his mind there will be fireworks. They tell us Frigid Frosty is all pepped up and one of these fine days he will make a show of his opposition in one of those Canadian bred distance events.

* * *

ED TROTTER who won the opening race on Saturday with Jay Vee has another well charged gun in his barn called Isaiah who is a real speedster. This is the first time in many years that Trotter has patronized a Canadian meeting although years ago he was very prominent in the racing circles on this side of the line. They tell us he is just as cunning as ever and any steed sporting his silks is worthy of consideration.

* * *

NEVERFADE who came here from Saratoga heralded as one of the greatest in America has failed dismally in both his efforts, although he still ranks as a top notch favorite. Spey Crest is all tuned up and ready to go places. This is the horse they took down to Baltimore last fall and he beat such outstanding nags as Quarter Deck and Kneehigh. He is trained by the well known Bill Donoghue.

CHILDREN'S DAY AT EXHIBITION

many new concessions that are exceptionally attractive.

Superintendent Here

J. A. Carroll of Toronto, Superintendent of Agricultural Societies, successor of J. Lockie Wilson, was one of this morning's visitors to the Exhibition.

"I drove down early to see the exhibits for myself rather than be shown around, Mr. Carroll told The Examiner. "Sometimes the directors show you the best exhibits. Since I was here about four years ago there has been a distinct improvement in the exhibits of horses and cattle."

Mr. Carroll hadn't been all around the Exhibition when the Examiner met him.

George Hooton, ex-Warden of Northumberland and Durham Counties, one of the directors and a breeder of horses for years, said that the exhibit of horses is the best Peterborough has every brought together, especially in the heavier classes. Some of them have come directly from Toronto.

"It is a good thing for the local breeders to have this quality of stock to compete with," Mr. Hooton said. "That's about what we had to do. It shows you the quality you ought to have, and any breeder who has ambitions, will get more encouragement and confidence if he wins against strong competition."

Frost Nips Coleus

Last night's early chill deepened into frost and stole into the flower tent, nipping all the coleus plants in Dave Jordan's big exhibit. They were replaced this morning.

Show of Pheasants

Don't miss the display of pheasants shown by Bert Wainman, local jeweller, just south of the Flower tent. Nine varieties are exhibited in a setting of cedars touched off with transplanted flowers. The varieties are: Mongolian, Golden, Black Neck, Lady Amherst, Swinhoe, Manchurian, Versicolor and Reeves.

This comprises an exceedingly interesting feature, some of these birds being of brilliant plumage, and are certainly not common in this district.

THOS. MOFAFTT ROTARY GUEST

Addresses Campbellford Club on Woods and Process Used in Cabinet Work.

Dr. H. B. Longmore Reports.

(By Examiner Staff Correspondent)

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 12. — The process of preparing cabinet wood for the making of furniture, formed the theme of an address to the Campbellford Rotary Club, delivered yesterday at the noon luncheon by Thomas Moffatt of Napanee, in which he explained the woods used in this branch of industry, and answered many questions put to him by members of the club. President Clarence Williams handled the gavel, the speaker being introduced by Rotarian A. D. Bennett.

The three chief woods used in the industry the speaker said, were oak, walnut and mahogany. The best oak comes from West Virginia and Tennessee, while walnut comes from Cuba and mahogany is procured from the Central Limestone States of the middle west. "Walnut," he said "was the wood which is chiefly used, these trees growing in clumps of two and three and sometimes as large as twelve in number. The logs, which are cut from sixteen to eighteen feet, are bought according to grades, and are shipped to the mill in trucks or by mule teams.

.It is then washed off and sawn into various thicknesses, from five eighths of an inch to three inches. It is then piled together in steam vats to take the coloring, after which it is taken out and left for seasoning. Only first growth wood is used. There was only one such mill in Canada, he said, this being located at Woodstock, where rotary cut walnut veneer is manufactured.

Kiln drying of wood was a very simple but delicate process Mr. Moffatt stated. This was done by a combination of steam and heat until a required moisture content was reached. Gibbards with which firm he was associated were the largest users of walnut in the country, and used as much as one car of this wood a week. One remarkable fact was that all English rifle butts were manufactured of walnut.

Walnut, the speaker said, grows up to thirty inches in diameter. Dealers buy the wood in lumber form, not by the log. The test of the moisture content was done by weight every day in the kiln. In all, ten days are required for it to dry.

Answering questions, Mr. Moffatt stated that the difference between rosewood and mahogany was the former was harder and closer in texture.

A vote of thanks on behalf of the club to the guest speaker was sponsored by Rotarian Carman Windrim. No definite plans have as yet been made for the forthcoming street dance, which the club will sponsor in the near future.

Dr. Bruce Longmore gave a report of the survey, made by him for the Campbellford Rotary Club, of all cases on crippled children needing attention in the County of Northumberland. The club left it with him to proceed with whatever work he felt it was necessary to undertake.

PRESS WRITER TREKS 20 MILES

were found yesterday by James Barrett, Hydro repairman, after cutting a power line in the hope it would bring assistance.

Over hill and dale, around brush heaps, across boulders, above and under fallen trees that strew the Hydro-Electric pole line far north to the Abitibi Canyon development the Canadian Press correspondent was piloted by Sydney Fairweather, veteran bushman. By the light of a flashlight he led the reporter right to the door of the little shanty where the balloonists rested.

On a large double cot, covered with a heavy grey blanket and dressed in the togs borrowed from woodmen, Van Orman and Trotter were sprawled side by side. With a week's growth of beard, they looked like lumberjacks.

When they left Chicago on Saturday, September 2, the balloonists carried in their larder seven cans of beans, four cans of fruit, six apples, six oranges, and a carton of cigarettes. Two cans of beans remained intact despite the fact both fasted three days before they were found.

"Beansd No more of them for a while, thank you," said Van Orman. Blame for a severe attack of ptomaine poisoning they placed on improper cooking of the beans. They cooked them over a fire after cutting open the tins.

Long before they were discovered by Barrett, the two had eaten all four cans of fruit, the apples and oranges. They smoked the last two cigarettes 24 hours before they were found.

Up-to-date Log.

Asked about the crash, Van Orman turned over the Goodyear XI.'s lig, written as tersely as a military despatch. It read:

"Sunday, September 3, six p.m. Used 15 bags of ballast fighting storm. Barometric pressure at the ground at the time of final landing was 29.98. Tempreature 60 degrees. Wind, west-south-west, velocity 40 miles an hour.

"Forced down by heavy squalls and severe lightning. Barograph glass broken. Hard landing."

Van Orman left it to his co-pilot to en'arge on the story.

"Vertical currents, rain hail and thunderstorms caused the crash," Trotter explained. "It was the most terrific crash I ever experienced. Van Orman readily agreed.

"The basket with its two occupants struck a tree 20 inches in radius, snapping it in two like stick of kindling wood, said Trotter. The force of the impact tossed the basket like a toy for 20 feet, and it wound itself around another tree like a top string. The big gas bag was turned inside out.

"It was a stunner" Trotter smiled. "As soon as we got our senses we shook hands. Van Orman was a brick. I never lost confidence."

Slept in Basket

They came down from an altitude of 8,000 feet and slept the first night right in the basket in the tree tops. So severe was the wind and lightning and hail that they didn't dare budge.

Casually thumbing the pages of a little black note-book, Trotter recited the events that followed.

"Monday morning at six o'clock our first move was to get the equipment, including the barograph, out of the basket along with the parachutes."

"Did you ever use the parachutes?" he was asked.

"We had them on once but we never used them. We didn't have them on at the time of the crash.

"Then we cleared brush to make a camp," Trotter resumed. "We had plenty of compasses. After we built camp, we made a tent out of a part of the balloon. It took all day. The weather was clear. At sundown we went to sleep.

"Tuesday morning we woke up to find the matches we had were wet. We carried some in a waterproof cover. They too were moist. We had to dry them out. Van took sun sights for latitude and longitude. We found ourselves 20 miles from the railway. The weather had turned nasty and it rained. We couldn't stay out in it so we stuck where we were.

"Wednesday morning we started for the railway. Brush, brush, brush."

"Nothing but brush and then some," Van Orman interjected. "Trees, cliffs, valleys, rocks, boulders, muskeg. God preserve us."

Slept Like Tops

"Yes, and five cans of beans," added Trotter, reading again from his notes. "We had eaten all the fruit. We estimated we made three and a half miles to the southwest before we made camp that night. Two canopy curtains off the balloon basket were our tents and we had a raincoat. We slept like a top that night.

"Thursday we started at 7.15. We saw moose tracks in the valley and other evidences of moose life. The insects were bad and we made camp about five and a half miles from the balloon."

"That night we were both all tuckered out, but we only got about three hours sleep, there were so many showers. The rain put out our fire and we were very cold. We had a quart of drinking water left.

"Friday we left camp at 8.20 and found a marked trail. We went three quarters of a mile the first hour. At 10.45 we found a creek and filled our water can. At 12.30 we came upon a swft stream, flowing south, southwest, 50 feet wide. We cut trees to throw across the rocks in the rapids and made two miles from the river We were about 11 miles from the balloon. Both of us were becoming a little sick from what we thought was ptomaine poisoning That was because we cooked the beans in the cans after opening them. We were in pain all night"

"Saturday we started at 8.15 and an hour later we heard a train whistle. At 10 a.m. we were about 12 miles to the southwest of the balloon. We were both retchng severely At 1.00 we spotted a big moose"

"And?"

Wounded a Moose

"We had a 12-gauge shotgun with us," said Trotter. "Van took a long shot and hit the moose on the hind quarters but only wounded him. He ran away. At 3.30 we were both quite sick and were only able to make about 500 yards at a time.

"We found a sort of road. It was running east and west and we took it to the west. At 4 p.m. we crossed an old abandoned bridge on which was left the carcass of a moose. We camped there by the bridge.

"Sunday we followed south a high tension line. But at 3 p.m. we had made only three and a half miles. We cut down a telephone pole, breaking the lines in the hope that some repairman would fine us. I left a note attached to the pole to the effect that we were continuing along the line. Van hadn't been able to eat since Friday morning; I, since Saturday.

"At 4 p.m. we heard a plane and fired a "Very"shell out of a pistol. Van alternated with a shotgun. There was no response. At 5 p.m. we found the camp at Tower 738, abandoned.

The Last "Smokes."

"We broke the lock on the bunkhouse and found two beds, five blankets, one bag of beans, one bag of salt and a camp stove. We had two cigarettes left. We sat down then in state and smoked one each —our last. It was a great celebration and we were two very happy men. We found a newspaper dated Aug. 23, 1933, and an egg crate from Capreol. We slept a long time like two dead men, after lighting a fire in the stove.

"There was a heavy frost during the night. Monday we decided to stay in two days to build up our strength. I shot a partridge. Van showed slight improvement. At 10.30 a.m. James Barret showed up. He was looking for line trouble and he had food, a lead of bread."

"And two cans of beans" Barrett put in.

"Bug did we eat like a pair of horses" said Trotter. "The bread I mean. And Barrett also had some jam."

Van Orman and Trotter expected to walk to railway steel to-day and take a train for Sudbury.

(By Examiner Staff Correspondent)

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 12—The funeral of the late Elizabeth Ruth Palliser, widow of the late Peter Shapter, was held yesterday afternoon from the Campbellford family residence, the service being conducted by the Rev. H P. L. Seymour, pastor of St. John"s United church. The pall bearer were: Fred Palliser, George Palliser, Aubrey Shapter, Howard Shapter, Russell Shapter and Orval Jackson. Interment was made in Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

The late Mrs. Shapter who was aged 81 years died late Friday night. Born in England she came to this country at an early age and for the past sixty years has resided in Campbellford. A stunch and devoted member of the United church, she was in her younger days an ardent worker in the cause.

Surviving are one daughter, Mrs Ada Shapter, at home; and one son, the Rev. C. P. Shapter of St. Claire shore, Mich.; two brothers, C. W Palliser of Campbellford and John Palliser of Hayter, Alta., also survive.

The late Mrs. Grieves who before her marriage twenty-six years ago, was Miss Jennie Philips, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. R. Philips of Campbellford.

There are left to mourn her loss her sorrowing husband, one son Everite and one brother and five sisters Alfred of Campbellford, Mrs. George Taylor of Buffalo, Mrs. J. Robertson, Campbellford, Mrs. J. Ryan and Mrs L. Tyler of Toronto and Mrs. P. Beatty Meyersburg.

The funeral which was very largely attended was held on Monday afternoon from the family residence with services conducted by Rev. H. J. Bell of Trinity United Church.

Interment was made in Trent Valley Cemetery.

NOT FOR HER, ANYWAY

A little boy was saying his prayers in a very low voice.

"I can't hear you, dear," his mother whispered.

"Wasn't talking to you," said the small one firmly.

POOREST WHEAT CROP IN DECADE

from the three Prairie Provinces. The estimate places the production in these Provinces this year at 264,000,000 bushels of spring wheat. Last year it was 408,400,000 bushels, and 301,181,000 in 1931.

Late Crops Improve.

The report explained that, generally, the wheat and rye estimate released yesterday was slightly higher than on July 31. The ripening of late and heavy northern crops on the Prairies during August had improved the prospects as compared with July 31. Oats, barley, and flax were lower. New crop wheat so far marketed graded high, the report stated.

Of the 282,771,000 estimated as the entire wheat crop this year, 268,638,000 was spring wheat and the balance fall wheat. If the figures estimated by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics turn out to be accurate, it would appear the volume this year available for export will be considerably below the 200,000,000 quota fixed in London. The domestic consumption and the wheat needed for next year's seed have to be taken out. It should enable a substantial cut in the big carryover.

Declining Estimate

Commenting on the progress of the crop the report stated: "The early expectations of prairie farmers were almost continuously lowered as the season progressed. The spring moisture supply was fairly ample for germination and first growth. In some northern districts the wet fields caused delay in land preparation and seeding, while in other districts previously visited by drought there were misgivings as to the sufficiency of subsoil moisture, and a realization that summer rains must be heavy and well distributed. These latter conditions did not materialize, except in some northern districts.

"A disastrous period of hot, dry weather began in the second week of June, centring at first in Southwestern Saskatchewan, but rapidly spreading, so that it eventually covered most of the specialized wheat-growing areas. Great damage was also caused by grasshoppers, with minor outbreaks of cutworms, wire-worms and sawflies as the season advanced. Hail and plant disease were less evident than usual, but frosts caused loss of grade and yield in Saskatchewan and Alberta.

"Most of the early frost damage was centred in the Foothill district south of Calgary, and September frost, accompanied by snow, caused general and serious damage to both the yield and the grade.

Rain Retards Harvest

In the past fortnight, rainy weather has retarded harvest operations, but previous progress had been rapid, except in some northern districts, and little concern is felt as yet. The ripening of the late and heavy northern crops during August even allowing for some loss in yield and grade has been a principal factor in the improvement of Western wheat prospects.

Markettings to date have been slightly above those of the same period last year. The grades are high, although the limited amounts becoming visible do not give a representative sample of the whole crop. The recent cold and rainy weather may cause loss of grade in the grain still to be cut or threshed.

"Estimation of the wheat crop is more hazardous than usual because of the combination of drought, insect and frost damage and the limited number of threshing returns in the districts where crops are late and heavy. Judgments of the different classes of correspondents on yields at individual points vary rather widely."

Lower Potato Crop.

The potato crop in Canada will be lower this year, according to the forecast of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics to-day. The report stated:

"Excepting beans, buckwheat, fodder corn and sugar beets, the condition of the late-sown crops declined further during the month of August. The effects of summer drought were too severe to be overcome by the moderate rainfall of the month. All the late-sown crops are much lower in condition than at the same date last year, and are about 20 per cent. below average.

"The potato crop shows a condition of 80 on August 31, compared with 94 on July 31, and 91 on Aug. 31 last year. Sugar beets did not change in prospects during the month, the figure remaining at 83, compared with 94 at the end of August last year. A further decline in pasture condition, from 77 at July 31 to 73 at August 31, resulted from further deterioration in every Province except Quebec. In Prince Edward Island, Ontario and the three Prairie Provinces, the pastures are extremely poor. Considering the whole Dominion, the condition of pastures is the lowest on the bureau records back to 1908, excepting the year 1914."

The BEST way to stop CONSTIPATION

Nothing like Fruit-a-tives

"I was in a very bad way with constipation. My stomach was all out of order and I kept having headaches and backaches. Quite frequently I had severe pains in my joints and muscles. The general effect was very depressing. Indeed, I felt so wretched that I was about to give up work. Today my health is excellent and I certainly feel that 'Fruit-a-tives' played a large part in bringing this about. They toned up my entire system."

Under the direction of H. L. Ford, hog grader at the Canada Packers, and A. D. Runions, country agricultural representative the boys were given practice in judging. Short talks on feeding and marketing problems were given by Mr. Ford and Mr. Runions.

SCOTS GUARDS BAND DELIGHTED

mental band of Lindsay, who paraded them to the grandstand. The presence of the Lindsay band was generally appreciated by the Peterborough audience, a little gesture of goodwill which may lead to broader co-operation between the two neighbouring communities during their respective fairs.

Mayor Denne, speaking through the amplifier, welcomed Lieut. Dowell and the Guards band to Peterborough, and expressed the hope that the Exhibition would be largely attended this week to enable the directors to maintain the class A standing which years of effort had accomplished.

Lieut. Dowell acknowledged Mayor Denne's reception and stated that the tour of the Guards helped to stimulate the Empire ties between the Motherland and Canada.

A Feature for To-night

The program for tonight's' concert at the Exhibition includes the grand fantasia "The Battle of Waterloo" by Eckersberg, an epic number somewhat similar in its treatment to the "1812" of last night. And after the delightful concert arranged by Lieut. Dowell in his first appearance as a conductor in Peterborough, the public can be promised more enjoyment tonight before the Guards set out on their return for the Old Land. They go back to Toronto for one concert, and then play an engagement in Ottawa, followed by another in Montreal.

The Examiner was informed last night that Peterborough is the only smaller city in Canada on the Guards' itinerary, a fact which further illustrates the enterprise of the Exhibition Board directors in engaging them for two concerts here.

Last night's program opened with the overture to Maritana including that tender melody of our grandmothers' days "Scenes that are Brightest." It was followed by the familiar "Wee MacGregor" patrol, and two cornet solos played by Bandsman W. Bowles, "Because" by d'Hardelot and "Until."

The selections from "La Traviata" were another high light of the program, invoking the operatic mood with beautiful harmony of the brass and wood winds.

The refinement of the reed section of the Scots Guards was especially noticeable in the Waldteufl waltz "The Grenadiers", and its rythym flowed with delightful grace from Lieut. Dowell's baton. A suite of Spanish dances by Desormes was another little triumph of effortless rhythm in characteristic Spanish tempi.

Divertissments in the program which might be classed as novelties presented a xylophone duet by Sergeant E. Geach and Bandsman H. Lovick a sparkling performance of Aldord's "The Two Imps" and as an encore "Mac and Mac" by the same composer; also "Post Horn Gallop" by Godfrey, played by Bandsman G. Shuler on a keyless hunting horn. Its rapid time and the fact that the notes are formed by lip pressure seemed trifles to the band and the soloist, but they illustrated the variety of the resources of the Guards as a unit and in its individual artists.

"A Hunting Scene" by Bucalossi was another popular number. The tone of the Scots Guards, almost orchestral in its texture, but broadening out to the robustness of the best regimental bands, was a beautiful medium as of a single instrument as merged under Lieut. Dowell's direction. The brass was splendid, the bounds of their shading extended by the reeds which included outstanding competence and artistry in the clarinets and oboe. And two saxaphones were also in skilful hands.

Two of the bandsmen, Sergt. Lumley-Holmes, solo piccolo player and Musician F. Daws, clarinetist were recently injured in an automobile accident and are still in Toronto.

The national aspect and element of the Scots Guards was emphasized by the five pipers who are accompanying the detachment of the band now in Canada. Their pipe music included the march "Invercauld"; strathspey "The Market of Inverness"; march "Magersfontein"; simple folk music of the Scots, the naturalness of which was further illustrated in the national dances such as the Highland reel and the sword dance to the tune "Argyle Broadsword', played by Pipe Major Alex MacDonald. There was something elemental in the dancing of the four youths in their tartan kilts as if belonging to an ancient day which lives on in the heart of Scotland. The beauty of their dancing and the implications of the pipes in their long history were impressions of last night's program that stirs up thoughts about an ancient and splendid people of robust loyalty and traditions whose fidelity to their own health and its customs survives the changes of time.

BOXING KANGAROO ONE OF MAIN ACTS

"Jo-Jo" is Sure to Delight Grandstand Audiences at "Ex."

Professor Harry Abdy, an Anglo-Australian will introduce "Jo-Joe" in front of the grandstand at Peterborough Exhibition with the opening of the regular grandstand performances to-morrow. It is an act that will meet the approval of young and old.

"Jo-Jo" a boxing Kangaroo from "down under" is a boxer of no mean calibre. A real novelty act—the boxing Kangaroo stands up to Professor Abdy in a whirlwind display of fisticuffs, sparring, feinting, and walloping with real skill and precision.

But then "Jo-Jo" isn't any ordinary animal. Recently at Atlantic City he had the nerve to stand up to Primo Carnera, just after that worthy had captured the world's heavyweight title at Madison Square Garden. He has appeared in several film productions, also including "Hell Below" featuring Jimmy Durante.

The Examiner interviewed Professor Abdy and "Jo-Jo", to-day. The former was born into the show game, and has had years of experience with Kangaroos.

If anyone doubts the enthusiasm that the Kangaroo puts into the game and the strength of the punch that he can pack into his powerful fore feet, ask the Professor. He has a dandy pair of cauliflower ears.

While proud of being a showman the Professor is equally proud of the fact that he has blue blood in his veins. "My great-grandfather" he said, "was Sir John Abdy, a goldsmith, and freeman of the City of London. He ran away with a circus girl, and ever since that day that branch of the family has been associated with the show world."

"Joe-Joe" is twelve years old, weighs 140 pounds, and is very partial to bran and oats, and all the fruits in season. With his owner he has travelled almost the entire length and breadth of the hemisphere. Before coming to America, the Professor and his sparring partner travelled the continent of Africa, including South Africa, north and south Rhodesia, East Africa and the Belgian Congo.

The Weather

Many who were out and about last night decided that winter has already arrived in the district—and not without some justice. During the night the temperature again sank below the freezing point in the low-lying sections of the city and the surrounding townships.

Early risers in the south end this morning found skims of ice on their water pails. Traces of white frost on the grass and plants were still to be seen as late as nine o'clock.

Following on the heels of Sunday night's frost, the damage done to tomato and the other vine crops in the gardens of the lower areas will be exensive.

The thermometer of Walter Peters, official weatherman, located on higher ground in the north section of the city, showed a minimum temperature of 34 degrees for last night, one degree lower than the minimum of the previous night. Mr. Peters reports that the highest point the temperature reached yesterday was 64 degrees shortly after noon.

Weather probabilities fail to promise any relief to-day from the cool spell. A warm wave is moving over the western provinces at the present, however, and may have its effect here before the end of the week.

MAYOR PLEASED WITH MIDWAY

Best Midway He Has Ever Seen Mayor Denne Declares.

GOOD CLEAN SHOW.

"The best midway I have ever seen!" This was the comment of Mayor Roland Denne, president of the Peterborough Exhibition board, after a preliminary inspection of the many midway shows and ride attractions offered by Conklin's All-Canadian Shows at the Exhibition yesterday. "I am well satisfied with everything connected with Mr. Conklin's shows and I am hearing scores of pleasing comments from other citizens regarding it."

Mayor Denne, accompanied by several other fair officials, took time out from his busy round of opening-day duties to make his tour of inspection. He made a complete turn of the rectangle around which the attractions are placed, peering into sideshows, rambling through the various booths and questioning various attendants and employees of the shows.

"Many of the exhibits are of an educational nature" commented the Mayor when he had finished. "All of them, however, are highly entertaining and I am sure that none of us saw any show on the grounds to which a man could not freely take his whole family."

"Paddy" Conklin, one of the joint proprietors of the shows, yesterday said he was glad to be back in Peterborough again this year. The shows got a fine reception from Peterborough people at the Exhibition last year and a special effort to win the approval of exhibition visitors will be made by all connected with the shows this year, he stated.

COAL DISPUTE NEARS STRIKE

Labor Union Chief Claims Re-employment Not Been What it Should.

35 HOUR WEEK NECESSARY

By SAM ROBERTSON
(C. P. Staff Writer).

NEW YORK, Sept. 12. (C.P.)—Public hearings on the controverted recovery code for the United States bituminous coal industry opened to-day with the possibility of a nation-wide strike in the soft coal fields forming a menacing backdrop.

Mine operators and union leaders started joint conciliation sessions at Washington with reports before them indicating a Pennsylvania mine strike affecting 10,000 might spread through a half dozen other states. Quick agreement on a shorter work-day and fattened pay envelope was the alternative.

A determined General Hugh Johnson, chief director of the Better Times drive, was to preside over the public hearings. He was described as confident mid-week would see a "substantial agreement" reached by the two factions, unable to see eye to eye on complete unionization of the industry, in addition to wages and other things.

Back of it all was Johnson's avowed intention of writing a charter for the industry and enforcing it as a final resort.

Meantime, the issues between capital and Labor were brought into clearer view by a threat from President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, that he will go before the country and demand shorter hours from industrial captains.

No Stability Guaranteed

Asserting that "re-employment has not been what it should have been" Green said if the U.S. enters the coming winter with "the 7,000,000 or 8,000,000 of unemployed now indicated the Labor movement cannot guarantee that stability necessary to orderly industrial recovery."

The dynamic little union leader said a 35-hour work week was necessary—not the 40 "sometimes as long as 50", now provided in some N.R.A. charters.

"To-day Washington is filled with the agents and lobbyists of great manufacturing enterprises and their Wall Street financiers." . . . I find all too little to say for the conduct of such enormous industries as steel, automobiles, coal, and we may yet have to press for recalling of the codes of some of them in order that they may be changed so as to mean more to the masses of the people."

WOMAN'S TORSO FOUND IN FIELD

Police Suspect Slayer is Student of Crime Who Planned Perfect Murder.

NO TRACE OF McCANN.

DETROIT, Sept. 12, —(AP)— Police who have not yet found the head of a slaying victim and have no traceof the suspected slayer, believed today they were coping with a student of crime who planned a "perfect murder."

Edward McCann, 50, formerly of Watford, Ont., dropped from sight on Labor Day, when he learned that arms and legs found in a field near the city limits had been identified through prints from the fingers as those of his wife, Aurore, an Ottawa girl.

Yesterday afternoon, not long after a warrant was issued charging McCann formally with murder, a woman's torso, apparently that of his wife, was found along a road in adjacent Oakland county.

The head was not found, and officers said the slayer obviously had scattered portions of the body over as wide an area as he could handily do.

Analyzed Crimes

Then it became known, from former patrons of the beer flat police said McCann operated, that the fugitive delighted in analyzing crimes that made news, discussing them at length, pointing out the mistakes made by the perpetrators and describing how he would have done it to escape detection.

The only weakness police said they had found thus far in the slaying now under investigation was that the slayer apparently overlooked the fact that Mrs. McCann's fingerprints were on record with U S. immigration officials. The woman was detained for a time when she entered this country about 10 years ago from the Canadian capital.

Those fingerprints thus far have furnished the only positive identification of the limbs as those of Mrs. McCann, whose husband said when she was not seen at their home Sept. 1 that she had gone to the World Fair in Chicago.

Watching Border

FORT ERIE, Ont., Sept. 12.—(CP)—Customs and immigration officials at Fort Erie were asked by the Superintendent of Detroit Police Frederick W. Frahm today to check closely all men entering or leaving Canada for Edward J. McCann, wanted by United States authorities for the murder of his wife Laura in Detroit, September 1.

It is believed he entered Ontario or headed towards this province in order to escape American police.

JAMES A. MAGAHEY IS TAX COLLECTOR

Telephone Report Received at Regular Meeting of Emily Council.

OMEMEE, Sept. 12 — The Emily Council met in the Farmers' Club Rooms recently with all the members present and the Reeve in the chair, when communications were read from W. R. Robinson, notifying the council that there were 260 active telephones in Emily to be charged for maintenance.

A sheep valuer's report was received from George Henderson and Paul McGuire reported that he had measured a wire fence for John Collins, 30 rods in length and recommended payment of the usual bonus on the same. An applicaton was received from James A. Magahey, for the position of collector for 1933 at a salary of $125.

A trustees order was received from S.S. 3 for $35; requisitions for school moneys being received from all the school sections except No. 16.

The secretary of the Board of Health reported that at the last meeting of the board, the Medical Health Officer had introduced the matter of having any who offered themselves inoculated against diphtheria at the public expense, who had not been so treated, pointing out that practically all the children in the township had been treated four years ago, so that there would only be those to treat now who were born since that time, with perhaps a few others, the charge to be $1 each and further reported that the Board of Health had recommended such action to the favorable consideration of the council. The matter was laid over for future consideration.

Wilfrid Nurse and Ben McCarrell addressed the council, asking permission to build on the fifth concession line near Lancaster's bridge. Harold McConnell addressed the council, asking to have it made illegal to have cattle running at large on any of the highways in the township of Emily. The following motions were passed:

That the sale of buildings on the s.w. corner of the east half of lot 2, concession 4, to William Shaw for $40, payable Dec. 15, next, be confirmed by the council.

That the township rate be fixed for 1933 at 3 mills on the dollar.

That upon receipt of the 1931 collector's roll, the treasurer be authorized to sue all parties who have 1931 taxes unpa'd, except those holding lands under the Soldier Settlement Act.

That James A. Magahey be appointed collector of rates and taxes for 1933 at a salary of $125 and that the clerk do now prepare a by-law to confirm this appointment and further that the collector's roll be delivered to the collector by the clerk when completed, on delivery by the collector of a proper bond, and that such bond be subject to the approval of the council.

That the collector be asked to give a bond for $20,000, signed by himself and two bondsmen, such bond to be subject to the approval of the Council.

That this council meet at the eastern end of the fifth concession line on Friday, Sept. 8, at 12 o'clock to look over the situation. Council divided over the question of a bonus or penalty on the 1933 taxes as follows:

A motion supported by McGuire, Endicott and Lowes carried providing that 2% be deducted from all 1933 taxes paid before Dec. 1, 1933, and that 2% be added to all unpaid 1933 taxes by the 15th day of December, 1933.

An amendment supported by Patrick and Jackson was defeated, providing that no penalty be added to the 1933 taxes by the 15th day of December, 1933.

The council also divided over a motion by Lowes and McGuire, "that the culvert be opened on the quarter line opposite Walter Moncrief's farm, and that the clerk notify Lockhart Wright to open the same and that if necessary, this action be defended in the courts."

An amendment supported by Patrick and Jackson: "That we have the culvert taken out," was declared carried by the reeve.

By-laws appointing a collector for 1933 and levying rates and taxes for 1933 were given their several readings, signed and sealed. The principal levies are general cl. $10,-943.83; county roads, $4,559.93; township levy, $4,773.80; general school, $4,770; besides all the different local schools, tel. and school debentures, tel. maintenance, statute labor, unperformed and dogs.

The council adjourned to meet on Tuesday, October 3, at one o'clock.

SPYING on SPORTS

International Cameos

"Gossip and Such"

CONNIE MACK is about as capable as they come in the way of baseball mangers—and has been for some 40 years—but the lean leader of the Philadelphia Athletics makes mistakes.

One of Connie's chief attributes as a clever pilot is his excellent judgment of men. He has picked a geat many winning ball players. But he has pulled some boners.

He pulled one when he refused to buy Babe Ruth from Baltimore at the outbreak of the World War. Babe looked like a pretty fair country ball player who could twist 'em with his left hand and, for a pitcher, not a bad batsman. But the war was here and with it a general fear for the future Babe's price was high and anyway, Connie believed the fans of Philly were fed up on all-star line-ups and champions.

* * *

SO HE DIDN'T BUY the greatest attraction baseball will ever see.

* * *

CONNIE MADE mistakes in other men. Paul Straud, for instance, and all those other bright prospects who came and went at Shibe park when Connie was rebuilding in the early '30's.

* * *

HOWEVER, FEW of Connie's mistakes must rankle him so as the one made in regard to George Earnshaw. Last winter Connie thought Earnshaw was the same pitcher he proved to be in the early days of Athletic glory. So Connie didn't sell when he could.

It is quite probable that Connie could have gotten $50,000 for the one-time Big Moose. The Chicago White Sox wanted him. The Boston Red Sox were interested. It's said that even Colonel Jake Rupert had an idea Earnshaw would look swell in a New York Yankee uniform.

* * *

BUT CONNIE wouldn't sell. Now it's doubtful if he can—for any kind of good price.

* * *

EARNSHAW'S FAILURE this year ruined the Athletic's chance to bid for the American League pennant. Had George pitched the same kind of willing, eager game that has characterized the work of Lefty Grove this year the A's and the Senators most probably would be in the midst of a pennant fight right now.

* * *

BUT GEORGE DIDN'T. He wasn't any help whatever at a time when Mack and his men needed extra help. He became overweight, and was accused of indifference and laziness. They tell a story about George being found asleep in a shady nook of the Yankee stadium during a ball game in which Connie wanted him to go in and pitch.

From the outside it appears that Mack exercised remarkable patience with George all summer. However, we do not know George's side of the story and therefore no one should criticise him. The final act in which Earnshaw was suspended for the remainder of the season was surprising in its belatedness. Perhaps easy old Connie was tying his best to prove he was right when he failed to sell George last winter.

But now Earnshaw is through with A's.

* * *

THE IMPORTANT question in resgrd to Earnshaw is where will he go?

* * *

GEORGE IS 34 but should have a lot of victories left in his arm. Too many American league teams can use his ability to expect that George will continue to do next year what he is doing this month—resting in his Swarthmoe, Pa., home.

* * *

THE TWO SOX teams may still be interested in Earnshaw. However, the Yankees are regarded as no longer in the market as a plan to rebuild that club with vigorous youth would present no place for a veteran like George.

* * *

GEORGE WILL PITCH for someone next year—that's fairly certain—but it won't be for Connie Mack.

LAST CITY SURVIVOR IS ELIMINATED FROM O.B.A.A. COMPETITION

Injury Forced Vannest Out of Game in First Inning — Replaced by Billingsley, Who Received Poor Support—Latter Touched For Seven Hits.

MOORE LEADS LOCAL HITTERS WITH 2 PHILLIPS ALLOWS 7 HITS, RETIRES 8

Cogs were eliminated from further O.B.A.A. competition by losing their second straight game yesterday in Stevenson Park to the Picton intermediates, 6 to 2, before a fair crowd. With their defeat went the hopes of local fandom of a Peterborough baseball team going through this year to the finals. Picton proved the better team in all departments, the losers looking particularly weak defensively.

Percy Vannest, local twirler, had to leave the game in the first frame when struck in the face by a fast-thrown ball which is believed to have fractured his cheek bone. Lefty Billingsley replaced him and pitched a good game but received poor support. He fanned two and was touched for seven hits. Lefty Phillips hurled fine ball for the winners, striking out eight and giving seven hits. His support was good.

Rooke, Padgett and Billingsley starred defensively for the Clubmen, the latter picking five men off first with his tricky motion to catch runners flat-footed. A Meinto-Padgett-to-Rooke double-play, and one by Billingsley to Rooke, were features. The whole Picton infield clicked smartly.

Leads Local Hitters

Moore led the local hitters with two in four times. Hudgins was the big noise offensively for the outsiders, getting a triple and single in four trips, while Mighton clouted out a double and single in four appearances.

Two walks, a steal, an error, passed ball and an out gave Picton two in the first before Billingsley started. Cogs got them back in their half on singles by Wilson, Padgett and Moore, with an out. They never threatened again except for the eighth when they got runners to second and third with two out. Phillips held them to one hit in the second, one in the fifth and two in the eighth.

Picton Takes Lead.

The fourth frame saw Picton take the lead for two runs on a hit batsman, an error, fielder's choice, an out and singles by Cole and Hudgins. They stepped out in their half of the ninth and tallied another pair of counters on two misues, Mighton's double and a three-bagger by Hudgins.

NO NEW MARKS SET THIS YEAR IN "AA" LEAGUE

Solters and Boone Only Outstanding Hitters on Circuit.

WEAVER LEADS ON MOUND.

MONTREAL, Sept. 12.—(C.P.)—No records were cracked this season in the International Baseball League an analysis of the chief features of the performances of the players shows. In most departments of the game the performances fell far short of existing marks.

Apart from Julius Solters of Baltimore and Ike Boone of Toronto, there were no outstanding hitters on the circuit. Solters topped the batting averages and Boone was a close second. But the Baltimore slugger's average of .362 at the end of the season was far below the .39- mark made by George Puccinelli of Rochester the previous year. Only six regulars finished the season with a mark better than .333 and Puccinelli himself was under the .300 mark.

Buzz Arlett's champion home run total of 29 fell a long way short of the 54 he knocked out in 1933 to head the list and of the league record of 63 established by Joe Hauser of Baltimore in 1930.

The most hits were made by Gregory Mulleavy of Buffalo who played prominent part in getting the Bisons into a play-off berth. He went to bat 609 times, more than any other player and made 207 hits. But he too, was far from the league record.

Solters led the league in runs batted in with 156 to his credit, but the record is still held by Rip Collins of Rochester who brought in 180 runs in 1930.

The champion base runner of of Buffalo, who had 36, less than the on was Fresco Thompson half of the record total set up by Miller of Newark in 1919, when he stole 87.

Jim Weaver's deceptive delivery and fork ball claimed 25 victories for Newark Bears against 11 defeats and gave him the best pitching record of the season. Harry Smythe of Baltimore had the best percentage with 21 runs against eight losses.

The pitchers came nearer setting records than the batters, as the best high of the league in pitching wins since 1916 is 26, set by Robert Moses Grove in 1921.

Weaver managed to fan 175 batters to lead in strikeouts, but this performance was not remarkable when viewed in an historical perspective as Bob Grove's record of 330 in a season was far from being in danger.

ALL STARS LOSE TO BAILIEBORO

Bailieboro Outfit Was Assisted by Several Peterborough Stars.

SCORE 7 TO 3

BAILIEBORO, Sept 12 (Examiner Correspondence)—An exhibition game of baseball was played on the local diamond on Saturday afternoon when an all star team chosen from the East Peterborough Intermediate League met the local boys in a fast baseball tilt which proved to be one of the fastest games of the season and one of the smartest exhibitions ever staged on the local ball park.

The local team strengthened by Hatton behind the bat and Hollingsworth in centre field, had the edge on the play throughout the nine innings and loyally supported Deyell on the mound, who pitched his usual classy game by striking out thirteen batters and allowing only three scattered hits, one a two-base hit by Nichols. Barry, for the All-stars, pitched a fast curve which looked good enough to fool the best of batters; but the local boys bunched five hits in the first four frames to gather five runs, two runs coming across the plate when Jay threw wild to Maudsley on first after handling the hot grounders in a professional fashion. Hollingsworth, Johnston and Barker each had a two-base hit to their credit and during the last five innings Joe Bailey twirled smart ball for the visitors to hold the locals to three safe hits and two runs.

The final score stood 7 to 3 in favor of the local boys; Peterborough scoring two of their three runs when Johnston and Deyell collected when trying to reach a high infield fly and lost the ball after catching the batter out; before it was recovered, two runners had crossed the plate.

Owing to the fact that the game was not well advertised a small crowd of spectators turned out to witness the splendid exhibition, but another game on the local diamond will be played when the boys from the Lift Lock City will play their home game here and all will have an opportunity of seeing the local team unassisted by outside players give the All-Stars another battle royal.

Ponies-New Toronto Settle Issue Here

Tomorrow afternoon (Wednesday) at three o'clock, New Toronto and Kingston meet in their third and deciding senior O.B.A.A. playoff game in Stevenson Park. Both teams have won by narrow margins and this third one promises to be a great battle between two strong senior clubs. The Ponies lost in Kingston by one run and then went to Toronto and took the second tilt by just one marker. This would indicate a close struggle here before the winner of the series is declared.

Stafford, who won in a pitchers' battle with Jamieson in the opening contest, may get the call to do the twirling for the West Toronto League championship. Ewart is also a possibility. Yammy Jamieson, Kingston's little "iron man," is liable to be sent back again, with Fournier and Godfrey also available. Both outfits will be at full strength for this crucial meeting.

The Ponies were never popular in Peterborough, but that was when they were the opponents. Now that they are the C.O.B.L. champs and meeting the title-holders of another league, the fans will likely be pulling for Joe Daley's gang of battlers. Both teams are noted money teams—playing their best ball in playoffs.

21st Straight Victory For Athletic Pitcher

Double Win Boosts Macks In to Third Place—Senators Increase Lead to 9 1-2 Games by 5-1 Victory Over Indians.

By ORLO ROBERTSON
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Connie Mack's problem of finding a right-handed pitcher to fit into the mound staff he is building for 1934 apparently has been solved by the purchase of Johnny Marcum, from Louisville of the American Association.

While New York Giants were strengthening their lead in the National League and Washington Senators were adding to their advantage in the American circuit yesterday, Marcum, making his second major league start, turned in his second shutout as Philadelphia Athletics trimmed Chicago White Sox twice in a double header.

21st Win for Grove

After Lefty Grove turned in his 21st victory of the season with a 5-3 division over Ted Lyons in the first game, young Marcum ran his big-league record to 18 scoreless innings with an 8-0 triumph. As in his debut against the Indians last Friday, Marcum held the White Sox to five hits and struck out three. None of the hits was for extra bases and he fanned Al Simmons twice.

The double victory boosted the Athletics into third place, one half game in front of Cleveland Indians who were the victims of Mote Weaver's effective pitching as Washington, the Senators winning, 5-1.

9½ games in Lead

Coupled with Detroit Tigers' 5-1 decision over the Yanees the Senators increased their lead over the world champions to 9½ games. They need only eight victories in their remaining 16 games to clinch the pennant even if the Yanks win all of their remaining 18 contests.

Giants Up 8 Games

In the National League the Giants, with their nearest rivals, the Cubs and Pirates, rained out, increased their lead over Chicago to eight games and over Pittsburgh to 8½. The half-game gain was made at the expense of the lowly Cincinnati Reds by the score of 3-1. It was the fourth straight setback handed the cellar occupants by the League leaders and the Giants' fifth straight victory.

Ten victories in their 10 games will assure the Giants of the flag.

Hubbell Saves Game

Again Manager Bill Terry called on his ace of aces Carl Hubbell, to save the game. Holding a two-run advantage but with Herman Bell showing signs of weakening, Hubbell was rushed to the rescue in the seventh after Red Lucas had led off with a single. In the last three innings, he allowed only one hit and pitched just 27 balls to 10 batters.

Boston Braves retained their mathematical chance of winning the National League pennant by defeating St. Louis Cardinals 3-0 behind the six-hit pitching of Red Brandt.

MILLBROOK BOYS DEFEAT OMEMEE

Millbrook Outfit Took Three Out of the Five Games Played.

MILLBROOK, Sept. 12.—(Examiner Correspondence).—The series of softball games between a team from the Omemee High School and the Young Men's Bible Class of St. Andrew's church, Millbrook, in which five games were played, was brought to a conclusion on Saturday when the local boys carried off the victory by a score of 19-9.

Of the five games in the series two were played on neutral ground, two were home and home games, and the fifth at Omemee; victory for the first two games perched on the Omemee banner, but the honors in the last three were taken by the Millbrook boys, the scores in these contests being: third game, 5-1; fourth, 7-2; fifth, 19-9.

The battery for the Millbrook team throughout the series was Donald and Grant Henry; Clarence Ball at first; Henry Raper, second; Alvin Widdis at third; Raymond Rowland was short stop, and in the field, Elwood Fallis, Arnold Fallis and Ed. Williams. The boys chose their own umpires, Mr. Weir of Omemee, and Rev. W. W. Jones of Millbrook, acting in that capacity. The Omemee players, though not in their correct order on the field, included: C. Stephenson, B. Reddick, C. Weir, H. Rehill, P. Jamieson, T. Pogue, W. Weir and V. Earl.

The next game will be with a team from Welcome, Tuxis boys under George Lewis, member of the Older Boys' Parliament for 1933; it will likely take place next week time and date to be announced as soon as possible.

I also understand that descriptions of the eighteen stars appearing on the Capitol screen, will be sent to the 'KNOW YOUR STAR'S VOICE' Contest Editor, Peterborough Examiner, during week of September 18th, and not before.

"BABYFACE" McLARNIN WOULD LIKE BOUT WITH BROUILLARD

Vancouverite Confident He Can Make Good Showing Against Welterweight Champion—Beaten by Lou in Last Appearance.

VANCOUVER, Sept. 12.—(C.P.)—Jimmy McLarnin, Canada's welterweight boxing champion of the world, with no competition in his own class, plans to invade the middleweight ranks and has his eye on a match with another Canadian, Lou Brouillard, recognized in New York State as the middleweight king.

For years universally recognized as "uncrowned king" of the welters, Jimmy officially made himself the titleholder this summer with a sensational one-round knockout over Young Corbett. Since that time the Irish-Canadian from Vancouver has found no opponent in the present crop of welters whom he hasn't beaten or who would draw important money.

Beaten By Lou.

McLarnin and Brouillard, French-Canadian from Quebec, met a year and a half ago when Brouillard was a welter. On a rain-soaked, loosely stretched canvas that checked his speed and spoiled his timing, Jimmy took a 10-round beating from Lou. Since then Brouillard graduated to the middleweight ranks to win the title in that division.

Five or six pounds heavier than when he entered the ring against Corbett, Jimmy is confident he can add several more pounds and meet the middleweight titleholder without giving away too much weight. Few of the half dozen battlers who have defeated Jimmy have been able to withstand his onslaught in a return match.

"That was the toughest bout I've ever had," Jimmy said of his battle with Brouillard. "I couldn't fight the way I usually do. When I stepped in to hit I couldn't get away from his counters and absorbed more punishment than in a dozen ordinary bouts.

"I'm afraid of his left hand, though, and he wouldn't have more than five pounds on me in the matter of weight. Under ideal conditions I stand a good chance to beat him, and I wouldn't be risking my welterweight title either."

John R. Kilpatrick, president of Madison Square Garden, wants to put on the bout, Jimmy said, who figures it may be their first big outdoor shot for next season.

Boston Wants Bout.

In the meantime, Boston is still angling for Jimmy to battle Addy Callahan and this show may come off within the next couple of months. Van Klavern, Utah slugger, is another prospective match and Jack Hood, English champion, has voiced a desire to meet McLarnin in America.

Jimmy left here last night en route to Hollywood where he will join up with 'Pop' Foster, his manager, and the two will turn eastward in anticipation of important ring engagements to come.

Dinty's Inn Wins Series 20 to 17

Local Aggregation Battles Cobourg to 10-10 Tie in Second Game.

A FAST STRUGGLE.

Thirty-six Penalties Dished out, Most of Them Going to Homesters.

The Junior Petes, whose league name is Dinty's Inn, won the championship of the Inter-County Lacrosse League last night in Cobourg by holding the powerful Lakeshore outfit to a 10-10 tie, winning the round by a score of 20 to 17. It was a fast, rough game played before a large crowd of rabid rooters, and brought Peterborough its first junior lacrosse championship. This team will now proceed in Junior O.A.L.A. playdowns.

Ken Sine's youngsters matched speed for speed, took the bumps handed out by the losers who were in bad humor, and kept right on battling to gain the edge on the round. They had Cobourg down 4-0 at one time and dominated the play most of the game. The Cobourg crew is a husky one composed of o'der and experienced lacrossers, but lacked the effectiveness of the locals. Thirty-six penalties were dished out, most of them going to the homesters, and several of the young Petes received nasty cuts.

Game Opens Fast.

Play opened at a furious clip with the Inn lads holding a three-goal margin from their first game in Norwood. They ran in three more in the first period while Cobourg was blanked. The Sine team got another start the second stanza, Cobourg tallied twice in a row, and then the Petes rushed home one more. The period ended with Cobourg scoring to make the count 5-3. The third was all Cobourg's, except for one marker by Cadd and one by McGregor, the frame ending with the teams deadlocked at 7-all. In the rough fourth quarter, each team tallied three times, the game ending in a whirlwind 10-10 tie.

High scorer for the game was McGregor with four well-earned counters. Cadd scored one of the niftiest on a quick backhand flip while being checked so hard by three opponents. He counted three himself, Todd, Gardner, and Routley getting the others. The whole crew starred both offensively and defensively, receiving excellent goal-minding, good defence playing, and a well-rounded attack.

No Slouches at Game.

Cobourg also played a good game, though rough with Platt in goal blocking a bunch, their defence checking hard and their forwards fighting it out all the way. Henderson led the scorers with four, Cooper got two, Hle two, and Lucas and Morphet one each. The teams:

Petes — Goal, Lefevre; defence, Cierow and Sloan; rover McGregor; wings, Routley and Cadd; centre, Gardner; subs., Hatton, Creighton, Todd, Collins, and Vitarelli.

Cobourg — Goal, Platt; defence, Spooner and Morphet; rover, Cooper; wings, Johnston and Henderson; centre, Hle; subs., Ovens, Lucas, Young, Cooper, Comrie, and Peck.

Referees — J. Creighton and V. Reynolds.

Goal umpires— H. Jones and J. Smith.

Scorer and timer—H. Tudhope.

NEW BOWLING GREEN OPENED

U. B. One Men's Club of Mark Street Church Sponsors Open Tournament.

SOCIAL IN CONNECTION.

The U. B. One Men's Bowling Club of Mark Street United Church opened their new bowling greens with an open bowling tournament and social on Wednesday, Aug. 30th.

The tournament was ably handled by F. Parsons, the energetic president of All Saints' Club. 14 rinks played 3 games of 6 ends each for valuable prizes. The green was officially opened by His Worship Mayor Denne, supported by Alderman Stocker.

To add to the attractions of the evening's entertainment a singing contest was arranged in which several of our fair city's vocal artists took part.

The Salvation Army Band rendered excellent music for part of the evening. Their several selections were much appreciated by the very large crowd who joined in this special opening event.

Booths selling ice cream, soft drinks, hot dogs, etc., were busy dispensing their lines to the eager crowd, all anxious to make the occasion a success.

The 2nd prize was a tie between a rink skiped by F. Parsons and J. Cullen, and on a draw J. Cullen's rink was declared the winner.

The singing contest was an enjoyable event. The judges were Messrs. Jack Smith, H. McCannan and W. Smith. Those taking part in the contest rendered some excellent numbers, showing careful selection and training. The winner of the 1st prize for secular music was Mrs. C. Telford. 2nd prize Mr. H. Lee.

The comic section was rather a difficult task for the judges. The two competitors, C. H. Hotston and Charles Coleman kept the audience in roars of laughter with their funny antics. Mr. Hotston won the 1st prize and Mr. Coleman 2nd.

Special mention is made of the selection by Mrs. H. Hunter which was enjoyed by the very large audience.

The prize for the highest individual score in the bowling tournament was won by Herb Tremaine. The prize was a flag donated by J. J. Turner & Sons. Mr. Tremaine later donated the flag to the club.

Valuable prizes for these events were kindly donated by the following: Richard Hall & Son, silk stockings; Charles Coleman, chocolates; Higgins Harware, electric iron; Choate's Hardware, electric toaster; Canadian Canoe Co., paddles; Campbell & Best, fishing outfit; Grant & Loucks, flashlight; Peterborough Canoe Co., paddles; J. Duffus Co., nite light; J. J. Turner & Sons, flag; A. Comstock, verandah chair; Canadian Dept. Stores, motor rug; Grafton & Co., sweater; Westclox Co., clock.

SPORTS DAY BY DAY

Baseball—Softball—Lacrosse Soccer—Wrestling, and Others

(By C. J. P.)

It's Kingston versus New Toronto here tomorrow, the champs of the two loops tangling in their deciding game of the O.B.A.A. series at three bells in Stevenson Park. Should be a great old scrap considering the fact that they both won their games on foreign ground by the odd run, and also remembering that both teams are noted for rising to new heights in playoff competition. For once we wont be ramming the Ponies, but will pull for Messrs. Compeau, Smith, Jamieson, and the gang. If anyone had predicted we'd be rooting for this crowd a few months back, we'd have just sort of humored him along while glancing anxiously around for his keeper. But that's sports for you. Should be quite a crowd at the game.

Children's Day at the Exhibition is tomorrow, and a good program of races for the young boys and girls has been lined up. It starts at two o'clock and some nifty prizes are offered. There will be races, separately, for boys and gals in these classes: 8 years and under, 9 and 10 years, 11 and 12, 13 and 14, 15 and 16, and a public and separate school gals shuttle run (6 to a team), a public and separate school boys' relay race (4 to a team, each running a quarter-mile), and bike races for boys 15 and under, and 18 and under. One prize each for the last two events, first and second prizes for the team races, and three prizes for all the other events.

Sugar Bowl and Oshawa Tuxis clash at 5.15 this e'en at Riverside, a re-play of their previous 7-7 deadlock here. The Bowlmen are a game up after taking a scorcher right down in the Motor City bailiwick—whatever a bailiwick is! It was the first loss in some forty games this year for Tuxis and they're thirsting for revenge. If they cop tonight's affair, a third one will be necessary on neutral grounds. If the Dormer clan takes this one, they advance into the next round of the O.A.S.A. Remember Sugar Bowl is our last hope for a Peterborough team to go anywhere this year, since Cogs were knocked off yesterday.

* * * * * *

Dorsey Davis' boys just cracked up—at least several of them did, and Picton hadn't a great deal of trouble toting home a 6-2 win, their second straight one over Cogs. Cuthbertson had a very off-day to boot four and Shocky Mein kicked a couple on bad heaves. And they found Phillips too tough a pitcher to break through. It wasn't a bad game at times, but the local lads didn't make it too hard for the visitors who played a smart game all around.

* * * * * *

Cogs seemed to crack from that unfortunate accident to Vannest in the first. There was a runner on third and one on first, the latter starting to steal. Wood, Cog catcher, faked a throw to second and bissed it back to the box, but Percy half-turned—thinking it was going to second. He got the ball on the side of the face, splintering a piece of his cheek-bone, and had to leave the game. Tough luck. Lefty Billingsley went in and pitched ball ordinarily good enough to win. The canny string-bean portsider played a bangup fielding game too, and his deceptive motion and snap throw to first trapped no less than five. Padgett and Rooke went very good in the field. Yeah, too bad, but another local O.B.A.A. hope bit the dust and not gold-dust, either.

* * * * * *

In this issue of The Examiner appears a rather interesting article regarding Knotty Lee as written up in the Star Weekly. While we like Knotty a lot and figure he's a smart ball coach, we must disagree with a great deal he is reported to have told the Toronto writer. In the first place we did not get a bunch of 3,000 for ball games here this year. No. 2300 was the best and the average was much lower. And Knotty had nothing to do with lifting the club out of a big deficit, a dance and draw doing that months before he arrived here. The club was not one cent in the hole when he started. Cy Whatley is a little older than 19, and while Ike Batten starred defensively this year still he didn't play 31 games. Just a few corrections.

* * * * * *

Lindsay is not yet ready to go senior, and the Cobourg-Port Hope combine in senior ranks is very uncertain. Napanee is not strong enough, either, without imports, according to Manager Gerow who says they will not bring in players. And Knotty cannot be at all sure of coaching here next summer until the new executive decides upon this point. As for his being wanted down here next February, we can't be positive on that point but hadn't heard the Petes were going to Florida or somewhere to train for next Spring. Knotty seems to have been in a talkative mood, and not too sure of a lot of facts—or else he was just kidding the Star Weekly along.

* * * * * *

We're doffing ye ancient straw chapeau—hat, to you—to Ken Sine's junior lacrossers, known as Dinty's Inn. They won the title of the Inter-County League last night by holding the powerful Cobourg crew to a 10-all count right in the Lakeshore town to win the final round by a 20-17 score. It was a fast, rough game with the local kids getting a story passage but refusing to lose their heads. They played a bangup game, and don't forget that all season this bunch of older and experienced Cobourg players never lost a tilt. Dinty's Inn, as a team, will represent Peterborough in junior O.A.L.A. competition any day now. They should go far.

BARNEY ROSS IS CONFIDENT HOLDING TITLE

NO BROADCAST OF FIGHT.

(By Herbert W. Barker, A. P. Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Sept. 12. —(AP)—Barney Ross' 49th professional fight won him the lightweight championship. His 50th takes him into the ring at the Polo Grounds tonght for a 15-round defense of the crown against the veteran he dethroned, Tony Canzoneri of New York.

Ross thus regards all traditions of the game not only by putting his title in peopardy so soocn but by giving Canzoneri the first whack at it. It's an old pugilistic custom for champions to risk their titles only when pushed to it and then only against the "safest" foe that can be located.

But though Ross will be travelling the 15-round route for the first time and will be meeting Canzoneri in the town where Tony has been a fistic idol for a half dozen years, the 22-year-old Chicagoan has shown no lack of confidence in the outcome. He thinks he will whip Canzoneri more decisively tonight than he did in Chicago a couple of months ago at 10 rounds.

Big Advance Sale

The bout has excited more interest than local fans have shown in a lightweight match since the palmy days of Benny Leonard. Promoter Tim Mara reports advance sales of $70,000 and, with fair weather, predicts a crowd of 40,000 and gross receipts of close to $150,000.

The betting odds remained just where they have been for several weeks—9 to 10 against, and take your choice. The critics concede Ross a slight edge on the score of his youth and stamina.

Tony is so confident he'll win back his title he has bet $3,000 on himself.

Both have come through the long training siege in first-rate condition. Canzoneri probably will scale about 133 pounds at weighing-in time this afternoon, Ross about a pound and a half heavier.

The main bout is scheduled for about 9 p.m., (E.S.T.) There will be no broadcast.

Scribe Interviews 'Knotty' At Home

The following, taken from the sporting supplement of Toronto Star Weekly, speaks for itself in telling of an interview with "Knotty" Lee, local senior baseball club coach by a Toronto sports writer:

" 'Knotty' Lee is back from his coaching job in Peterborough and reports that the Petes have had their most successful season in many years. The veteran local mentor states that the crowds increased from around 600 per game at the start to close to 3,000 for most of the attractions in the last part of the schedule.

When the former Leaf scout went to the Lift Lock City, he found a bunch of old-timers on the roster, but he picked up some promising youngsters, put them on the club and gave all players their choice of baseball, with the result that the Petes have a young hustling aggregation that will improve right along. He lifted the club from out of a big deficit and they finished on the right side of the ledger.

Local fans will remember "Bill" Calladine, who pitched for Peterborough juveniles against Niagara Falls at the Maple Leaf stadium for the Ontario championship. Knotty used him as a regular on the senior club, on the mound and in the outfield and infield. According to Lee, this boy is one of the best all round amateurs in the province.

He says the club has a promising catcher in "Si" Whatley, a 19-year-old, 178-pound boy. Knotty says they have two smart players in Les Burton, an outfielder and "Ike" Batten, a near veteran, who the coach used against advice, but wound up the season as the star. He made but one error in 31 games. The city has an intermediate four club league as well, the Cogs winning it. Knotty says that ball is coming back in the east, and it would not be surprising if Lindsay came into senior, and Cobourg and Port Hope uniting and moving into the major loop.

Ernie Gibbard of Napanee is seriously considering moving his intermediate team from the Bay of Quinte league into the Central Ontario senior. Peterborough is so enthused over their prospects that they want Knotty back in February to get an early start."

MONTE WEAVER

MONTE MORTON WEAVER, a Hilton, N.C., product (he was born there June 15, 1906) was the pitching sensation of the 1932 season when he won 22 games. However, he suffered a bad break when illness early this season made him ineffective. He recovered by August and has been a potent pitching factor for Washington since then.

A graduate of Emory and Henry college Monte was teaching geometry at the University of Virginia when he felt the urge to go out and play ball. So he quit his professorship and joined the Baltimore Internationals in 1930.

Weaver quickly became a star and, after the conclusion of the 1931 campaign, was sold to the Senators.

Weaver, who pitches either sidearm or overhand and has a corking curve ball, is a big fellow—six feet tall, weight 175 pounds. Though a right-hand hurler he bats left.

Riders Are Thrown London Exhibition

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 11. (CP)—Miss Ora Smith suffered a badly bruised right leg when her mount stumbled and fell in the jumping pairs at the Western Fair last night. Her father, Thomas Smith, was riding the other mount in this event. The accident occurred at the seventh jump when Miss Smith's horse cut in on the one ridden by her father.

Two other spills marred this event, the final of the evening. Miss May Cairncross was thrown to the sanbark on the fourth jump but gamely finished the ride. Jack Wilkinson was thrown over the head of his mount and landed on the opposite side of the barrier, but continued riding.

150 IS NEEDED TO QUALIFY FOR AMATEUR MATCH

45 Players Compile Total of 75 or Less in Qualifying Opener.

SOMERVILLE AT TOP.

(By James L. Renick, A.P. Sports Writer.)

KENWOOD COUNTRY CLUB, Cincinnati, September 12 (C.P.). — On the heels of the wildest scoring spree in the history of amateur golf, the 37th U.S. championship boomed into its second day with the prospect that a score of 150 would be needed to qualify.

Should two 75's or their equivalent be required to reach the charmed circle of 32 players who start match competition to-morrow, it would be the lowest qualifying score on record.

Last year at Five Farms players who shot 152 fought it out for the past position in a play-off.

45 Under 75.

Yesterday 152 players teed off in the opening 18-hole test over Kenwood's 6,780 yards, and by nightfall 101 had reported scores of less than 80 and 45, an unprecedented number, had compiled a total of 75 or less. This would indicate, if the performance is repeated, on the second 18 holes of qualifying play, that no less than a dozen shou'd go into the play-off for last position in the select group.

Opening day honors were divided between C. Ross (Sandy) Somerville, the Canadian defending champion of London, Ont., and 18-year-old Jack Mungar, Jr., Dallas, Texas, and Hill School, Pennsylvania, foremost among the youthful contenders who played so large a part in the opening onslaught.

Pair of 76's.

The two carved out sub-par rounds of 70 over the Kenwood course in the face of a stiff southwest breeze that hampered other players. While these two were the only ones to give old man par a lacing, there was a group of capable shotmakers close behind ready to step to the front the instant one of the leaders showed signs of faltering.

Lone stroke behind the leaders and even with par came George T. Dunlap, Jr., of New York, member of the 1932 Walker Cup team and former intercollegiate champion.

Other Notables Follow.

Still one stroke removed from Dunlap and tied for fourth place were no less than seven players, including such favorites as Johnny Goodman of Omaha, Neb., the U.S. open champion; Johnny Fischer, the home town pride and former collegiate titleholder; Gus Moreland of Dallas, trans-Mississippi champion; Pat Sawyer of Minneapolis; Willie Turnesa of Elmaford, N.Y.; William R. Long, Jr., of Austin, Texas; and Don. Edwards of San Jose, Calif.

St. Louis Browns Buy Jim Weaver

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 12. (AP)—James Weaver, 230-pound right handed pitcher for the Newark club of the International League, has been purchased by St. Louis Browns.

L. C. McElroy, vice-president of the Browns, declined to announce the cash which figured in the deal. Other players to figure in the transaction would be announced next Spring, he said.

SECTIONAL RALLY LARGELY ATTENDED

Hear Address by Returned Missionary From India on Customs.

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 12 (Examiner Correspondence)—A sectional rally of the W.M.S. of the United Church was held in the school room of the Lakefield United Church on Friday afternoon with Mrs. F. J. Burgess in the chair. Mrs. Burgess is one of the vice presidents of the Presbytery organization and welcomed the ladies to the meeting.

The ladies received a pleasant surprise in having Mrs. A. I. Brown president of the Presbytery organization and Mrs. Fairbrother of Peterborough present at the meeting.

Mrs. George Taylor of Warsaw read the report of the W.M.S. in that community. Mrs. W. J. Charlton, president of the Lakefield branch, told of the year's activities of the Lakefield group. Mrs. Yale gave a brief outline of the temperance side of the W.M.S. program, quoting from the late Edgar Wallace who said, "You can't say anything in favor of booze, no matter how clever you are" and concluding with a beautiful poem written by Storhard Kennedy and which had been used by Dr. Dobson in his address in Peterborough.

Mrs. Renwick read the report of the Bridgenorth Branch which had been sent by Miss Udy. Miss Margaret Richardson contributed a very appropriate solo which she sang very sweetly, "I Walk Alone with God." Mrs. Percy H. Darling gave some helpful suggestions regarding stimulating greater interest in the work.

The speaker of the afternoon was Mrs. Scott, a missionary on furlough from Rut Lain, Central India. Mrs. Scott brought a great number of interesting curios and native costumes and her informal talk was exceptionally interesting and enlightening, giving a more intimate idea of the life and customs than is usual.

In the villages and there are a countless number of villages in India, many of the children wear a costume which merely consists of a string round the waist with a charm, they enjoy covering their heads and the dirges or native tailor makes caps which are in great demand. The farmers generally live in the villages and go out to their flocks and fields.

The work of the hospitals and medical missions opens many doors which could never be reached by evangelism and there are also many delightful social contracts. The handcraft work in India is remarkable and in needlework the women do work which is nearly perfect. A piece of linen to work on gives great joy to these girls. Jewelry and ornaments are numerous and even the baby has its glass bracelets. Brass work is done in many centres especially in Benares.

The blackening of the eyelids and the coloring of the fingernails now so common in Canada, among women, have been practiced for hundreds of years by the Hindoo women of India.

A vote of thanks to Mrs. Scott was given on motion of Mrs. W. A. Payne and Mrs. P. H. Darling.

For Wednesday, September 13

The astral influences bearing rule on the affairs of this day presage much activity and commotion with events generally moving at a rather lively tempo. The mind may be pitched to a high and possibly excitable level, with all the faculties and forces under fine stimulus for "stirring things up," some probably to a degree of perturbance or even rancor. Private affairs may be lively but happy.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a lively and eventful year, with affairs keyed to high tension in many directions. The mind and forces may be inclined to the strenuous and aggressive, and properly directed may incite to much constructive and profitable effort. Private affairs are also interesting.

A child born on this day should be active, energetic, constructive and have a mind usually working under high pressure, although with a tinge of the caustic and bitter. It may be inclined to athletics and sports.

EAT BRAN OF COURSE

eat Bran that IS good!

BRAN is good for you. Eat a bran you'll relish—Post's Bran Flakes. The chances are that you (like most people) are suffering from lack of bulk in the diet. Then, by all means, eat a bran that's GOOD TO EAT.

Eat Post's Bran Flakes regularly—with milk or cream as a cereal or with berries or fruits. Each crisp, golden, toasted flake is delightfully flavoured. Makes delicious muffins, too. See recipe on the package.

Constipation due to insufficient roughage in the diet should yield to Post's Bran Flakes eaten regularly. A competent physician should be consulted for cases not corrected in this simple manner.

THEATRES

"BE MINE TO-NIGHT."

"Different" is perhaps the most descriptive word for this feature, which was originally of British origin, with a wind-up in the American studios, under presentation of Earl Laemmle.

It has a hero, Jan Krepuir, appearing as Enrico Farraro, who possesses a magnificent tenor voice. It has a dainty and engaging heroine that brings to mind the saucy charm of Renate Muller in "Sunshine Susie." It has characterizations that approximate those of the famous picture, "Rome Express," in which each actor and actress had a finished and etched production of even a minor part. It has an opera bouffe atmosphere like "Congress Dances," with a great deal of the smooth finish of that unforgettable feature, and it has marvellous and beautiful vocal music. It is, in a word, a fascinating production that holds an audience spellbound, even though the thread of the story is slender. It is the charm of that glorious voice and that winning personality that dominates "Be Mine To-night."

There are priceless bits of entertainment. Witness that farcical duett between the masquerading Kerensky and the flirtatious Mayoress with the chorus girl past; see the Mayor of Zern at his most vivacious and staccato best; listen to "Non-Stop Nora" speak her piece; mark that old-time organist break into beautiful song as she plays the accompaniments for the superb tenor, and then see the entire sedate group of ladies and gentlemen sway to the music of "Rigoletto" and "Traviata."

Besides the theme song, "Tell Me To-Night," he sings excerpts from these old operas and from "Le Boheme," and then there is "O Sole Mio" with marvellous scenery forming an appropriate setting.

"Be Mine To-night" is unique. Just as "Congress Dances" and "Rome Express," with Conrad Veidt as the stellar figure in both, had an unforgettable Teutonic touch that, little as the inference may be liked, still marks these features with an indelible impress in finish and beauty and rhythm, so this feature falls into line with the German, Carl Laemmle, at the helm. It has a curious and vivid British-German-American melange in its brewing that sets it apart.—Jeanette.

CONKLIN SHOW IS BEST MIDWAY TOURING CANADA

Cleanest Record of Any Carnival Which Tours Canada.

FREAK ANIMALS.

Several Brand New Features Added to Show This Year By Paddy Conklin.

The merry men of the amusement committee of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition Board, are being congratulated on all sides on having again secured for this year's Fair a return of Conklin's All-Canadian Shows.

Almost as soon as last year's Exhibition concluded the directors signed this company for this year, to ensure having a show that has the cleanest record of any carnival touring Canada.

That the midway is above reproach is testified by the patronage it received last night. J. W. "Paddy" Conklin was not surprised at the great reception which the midway received, for it is his show and he has toured all Canada with it. He knows it is clean, entertaining and interesting, because he insists upon high standards being maintained by each of the two hundred or so hands he employs.

With its own train of twenty cars, packed to the doors with all the impediments of the show profession and exhibits, Conklin's All-Canadian Shows carries eight ride, a large and varied collection of interesting exhibits, sideshows and carnival attractions and concession booths.

Everyone from the child seeing his first exhibition, to the sophisticated follower of every amusement troupe, will find something interesting in the aggregation of features presented by Conklin's Shows, and the most moral uplifter cannot find a fault with a single show.

Children's Day

And speaking of the children. To-morrow is Children's Day at the exhibition, when special reduced rates will go into effect all round. There is to be a special gate admission and grandstand fee of five cents each, and a similar five cent rate for each of the midway attractions. The local school board has co-operated by declaring Wednesday a half holiday, so there is every reason to look for a record-beating crowd of youngsters.

Grown-ups who attended last night's concert of the Scots Guards Band, and all who will hear the band again to-night for the final repeat performance, are also reminded that to-morrow's program will give them an excellent opportunity of having a day out with their children at the "Ex" and to witness the first of the monster grand stand attractions that are to play for the balance of the week.

While it is Conklin's Show that is here again on the midway, it is only the same in so far as the general excellence of the rides and carnival shows are concerned. Otherwise there is little comparison. Greatly enlarged, the midway presents the cream of last year's varieties, with the addition of many new and novel attractions, many of which are being seen here for the first time.

Freak Animals

In the collection of "Freak Wild Animals," Dion presents the unusual in the animal world. Among the freaks are to be seen: the sheep with five legs; the monkey and baboon family; the twin three-legged chickens; "Dynamite"—the horse with eight legs; the smallest horse in the world; and the greatest happy family in the world—a unique collection of rare monkeys.

Chief among the attractions in the circus sideshow is "Ernie and Len Defort" — the double-bodied baby; the only human being with two bodies and one head. It was an outstanding attraction with the midway last year, it will be recalled, but it has added interest this year, in so much as the child has so grown that he can now walk. Despite his mere two and a quarter years, he is adept at mimicing various people in the show. He never tires now of copyng the antics of the Hollywood Clown, Bluey-Bluey, who entertains under the "white top" with all sorts of amusing and clever stunts.

The Circus Sideshow, a variety of shows in one, also features: native Hawaiians; Confucious the magician and sleight of hand wizard; Punch and Judy, a delight for the kiddies of all ages; Salvail, card expert; The White Mahatma; and Gordon the rubber man—a contortionist of uncanny ability.

The Smallest Human

Among some of the entirely new features is Kelly's Krazy Kastle, which met with popular approval last night—judging by the shrieks of laughter that emanated from its interior; Jungleland Piu Mystery—a really fine collection of rare reptiles; and not the least "Tiny Dolly" accredited as being the smallest human alive. Dolly is a mere thirty-six inches "short" and weighs but forty-eight pounds. She has a baby, which at birth weighed-in at two-and-a-half pounds.

The Monkey Circus which proved to be such a popular feature of last year's midway is back, as also is Will Wright's sensational "Guillotine Act," which baffled the thousands who visited the tent last year and who returned again and again in fruitless efforts to solve the mystery.

Stage Act

"The Old Time Dance" act featuring stage entertainers in Hill Billy songs and ballads, is another brand new feature, as also is the exhibit entitled "Male and Female." The latter exhibit for adults only, ranks not as entertainment but as a worthwhile scientific exhibit, worthy of popular patronage.

Anticipating the visit during the week of directors of the Canadian National Exhibition and directors of other large fairs, Paddy Conklin has paid special attention this year to the set up of the mid-way. The general effect of the new arrangement is entirely pleasing, and provides for more compact grouping of the various rides, etc., and better advantage for supervision.

The Merry-go-Round, Caterpillar, Lindy Loop, Tilt-a-Whirl, the Whip, and Ferris Wheel, are all grouped together in the open space that is flanked on all sides by the sideshows and concession booths; while the Chair-o-Planes are set up on the south side of the main avenue leading down to the grandstand.

BOWLING NOTES

(By Herb Martin)

By defeating H. Coleman and G. Coleman, 13-7, B. Chesler and W. Wood earned the right to represent the Peterborough club in the Central Ontario play-offs, commencing to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock.

The game was witnessed by a large crowd of interested bowlers including a good representative from the ladies' section. Right at the beginning the boys who deliver their bowls from the "port side" took a commanding lead and at no stage of the game were they threatened.

Mr. and Mrs. Coleman's two sons were not bowling as well as they were in some of the previous games and just couldn't make things click.

The final game in the singles to-night at 6.30 between George Gimblet and Joe Bennett. This game should be a dandy and I have my own opinion on the outcome; but anyway either boy will make a worthy representative.

The following games in the club doubles have been called for to-night at 7.30 p.m. and must be played or defaulted::

J. E. Smith and R. Brown vs. Dr. Mahood and N. Nesbitt.

G. Gimblett and A. Woodburn vs. G. Coleman Sr. and W. Hepburn.

J. McNabb and B. Rogow vs. W. J. Oke and J. Matthews.

J. McDonald and R. Bacon vs. Dr. Allan and L. Cann.

W. Wood and N. Killingbeck vs. H. Northrop and P. Nicholls.

J. Sedgewick and H. Prise vs. R. M. Glover and T. Lansfield.

R. Martin and A. Heckman vs. C. Cheverill and H. McEwen.

F. Dearborn and L. Dyer vs. N. Routley and L. Conway.

E. Wall and P. Black vs. A. Grant and M. Roche.

G. Sorenson and D. Clarke vs. R. Hendry and W. Williamson.

INVENTION OF JOHN E. CASTLE IS ON DISPLAY AT EXHIBITION

Native Son of Peterborough Invents Internal Combustion Engine.

PROCLAIMED BY ENGINEERS.

The Lambert-Castle motor head is here!

For the remainder of this week visitors to Peterborough Industrial Exhibition will have the opportunity of seeing demonstrated the invention of an old Peterborough boy which, according to prominent engineers, promises to revolutionize the automotive industry.

On exhibit in the main building, the Lambert-Castle motor head is being shown and demonstrated by the Lambert-Castle Motor Head Company, Limited, with head office at Windsor, Ontario. It is anticipated that it will prove to be a huge drawing card, and that it will prove to be of particular interest to engineers, especially those engaged in the automotive branch of the profession.

As inventor of the motor head, Mr. Castle, whose parents reside on Romaine street, believes that his invention is the last word in efficiency; the zenith of horse-power development; the maximum of perfection, and the most economically operated and maintained motor that it is possible to build.

"The very fact that this motor fires past dead centre," he states, "enables us to build into this engine the very highest class of workmanship, anti-friction devices and arrangements. The increase in efficiency from the elimination of friction on all moving parts will tremendously add to the greater development of horse power in this engine."

On two occasions recently the engineering fraternities of the automotive industry both in the United States and Canada have visited the Lambert Machine and Tool Company, in whose shops the invention was perfected and designed, and have inspected the working of the motor. Prominent citizens of Windsor and Detroit were well represented in the groups at the official unveiling of the invention by Mayor David A. Croll, of Windsor.

Power at Less Cost.

It is not just another motor head that will operate a car or develop power, Mr. Castle claims. "It is," he stated, "a motor head that will operate a car and develop power at less cost per horse power, whether it be in cost of operation or maintainence."

Every car now in the hands of owners can be revamped for a few dollars, Mr. Castle explained. The head will be manufactured and will be supplied to garages for installation on a customer's car merely by removing the old head from the motor and replacing it with the Lambert-Castle head. Fifteen minutes is all the time that is required to make the change, and thereafter, according to the claims of the inventor, "you have the principle of operation so important to engine efficiency, namely, complete exhaust, pure fuel intake, high compression, the firing past dead centre, and the startling gasoline and oil economy and the longer life of the motor for a very small figure."

Born in Peterborough.

Mr. Castle was born in Ashburnham on January 29, 1899. He attended Ashburnham Public School (now Immaculate Conception Separate School), and also King Edward School. Leaving public school at the age of fourteen years, he entered the service of the Canadian General Electric Company, as apprentice toolmaker.

Two years later, with the World War then in progress, Mr. Castle enlisted with the 33rd Battery. Shortly before going overseas with the 18th Battalion to which he was transferred.3 he got married. His wife was formerly Miss Minnie Reynard, of this city.

Reaching England, Mr. Castle was drafted to the 75th Battalion with which unit he saw a great deal of active service in France. Demobilized six months after the armistice was signed, Mr. Castle resumed his work at the Canadian General Electric Company, and undertook night studies at Peterborough Business College.

Early in the year 1920, or thereabout, Mr. Castle went to work in the Detroit plant of General Motors. Since that time he has worked for several different motor corporations, including the Chrysler Company at Ennisville, Kentucky and the Ford Motors at Detroit.

During his entire career, Mr. Castle has been a devoted student of engineering, according to his father, and augmented the education he received in local public schools by attending night schools and technical classes.

INSTITUTE PLAN TO BUY DISHES

Roseneath Women Are Offering Special Prize for Children at Fair.

FINE PROGRAM.

ROSENEATH, Sept. 12 (Examiner Correspondence)—The regular meeting of the Women's Institute was held in the Town Hall on Thursday afternoon, with Mrs. Lily Turner, as hostess.

The president, Mrs. Frank Nichol presided. It was decided that the Institute purchase dishes, etc. for its own use when meetings will be held in the Town Hall. Mrs. Joseph Braithwaite and Mrs. Delbert Brisbin are a committee to get an estimate and report at the next meeting.

On motion, it was decided that the Institute give a special prize to the Agricultural Fair, open to public school pupils in Alnwick township. The sum of five dollars will be divided into three prizes, $2.50, $1.50 and $1. The exhibit is to be a collection of leaves from Canadian trees in the year 1933.

Mrs. Clarence Lockhart and Miss Mary Braithwaite were responsible for the excellent program which consisted of vocal solo, "A basket of Old Fashioned Roses" by Mrs. Delbert Brisbin; piano solo, "Lazybones" Miss Joey Morrison; contest, Books and Authors, Mrs. Ednel Blodgett; roll call "My Hobby," followed by a contest conducted by Miss Mary Braithwaite on jumbled names of trees.

Mrs. Alfred Sherwin won the lucky chair prize.

In conclusion the president spoke briefly a few pleasing remarks on behalf of the members to Mrs. Ezekial Brisbin, who on Tuesday, Sept. 5, celebrated with her husband, the 50th anniversary of her wedding. Mrs. J. Braithwaite presented her with a token of remembrance, a dainty fruit dish and vase to match. Mrs. Brisbin was taken by surprise but thanked the society for the good wishes and kindness shown.

Delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. Turner and her assistants and a delightful half hour was spent in social intercourse.

The October meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Eliza Sandercock.

PRIMARY SERVICE AT THOMASBURG

Parents Attend — Great Grandmother Present for Baptism.

THOMASBURG, Sept. 12 (Examiner Correspondence)—The children of the Beginners and Primary Department of the Thomasburg United Church entertained their parents at a worship service in the Sunday School on Sunday morning, under the leadership of Mrs. H. B. Herrington and Miss Mildred Adams.

Mrs. Herrington, on behalf of the children, welcomed the parents and outlined the need of the children attending Sunday School regularly and said she expected the co-operation of the parents in helping her with the lessons she was teaching.

The program opened with three hymns and a welcome song by the children. The roll call was answered by a verse of scripture, the Ten Commandments were repeated by Lorne McTaggart and a Bible story was told by a Beginner, Merle Bateman.

A missionary story was told by Anna Morton and the service concluded with prayer by Mrs. Herrington.

Ivan Coulter Clare, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Clare, and Carl Eugene Reid, son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Reid, of Stirling, were baptized by Rev. H. B. Herrington at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Clare. Those present besides the parents were the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Clare, Mr. and Mrs. Reid, of Ivanhoe, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Coulter, of Chapman, parents, of Mrs. A. Clare and Mrs. M. Reid, and two great grandmothers, Mrs. Hugh Coulter, mother of Mrs. S. Coulter, and Mrs. Walter Carleton, mother of Mrs. S. Coulter. The great grandmothers, aged 83 years respectively, signed the baptismal certificates as witnesses.

The president of the United States is usually, and properly, spoken to as "Mr. President"; in writing to him, "My dear Mr. President" is good usage and so is "Dear Mr. President."

"NOT CONSTIPATED FOR SEVEN WEEKS"

Writes Mrs. Johnson After Using Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

Sufferers from constipation will be interested in this unsolicited letter:

"Your ALL-BRAN surely relieves constipation. I am so glad over the good it has done me that I feel I must write and tell you of it.

"For lunch I take a banana, a large one. Six tablespoons of ALL-BRAN in a sauce dish, and dip banana at each bite until all is consumed. I haven't been constipated now for seven weeks."—Mrs. Louise Johnson. (Address furnished upon request.)

Constipation often causes headaches, loss of appetite and energy, sleeplessness. This condition is usually due to lack of "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to further promote regular habits. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN has both, as well as iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that in leafy vegetables. Within the body, it forms a soft mass. Gently, it clears out the wastes.

Try ALL-BRAN in place of patent medicines—often harmful. Two tablespoonfuls daily will overcome most types of constipation. Chronic cases, with each meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Use as a cereal, or in cooking. Recipes on the red-and-green package. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

Early Closing Of Trent Canal Forced American Tourist To Leave Clear Lake

Forced to return home earlier than they had anticipated, due to the earlier closing of the Trent Canal, a party of American tourists docked their cruiser "Richardson" of Cleveland at George Street Wharf last evening.

The cruiser owned by C. H. Pratt of Cleveland carried five passengers, who have all been summering up at Crowe's Landing, since the middle of July. W. O. Roulston, one of Mr. Pratt's guests aboard the boat, told The Examiner, "We were not figuring on leaving until the first of October, but the early closing of the canal has forced us to return now." The party he said, were making their second trip through this waterway, and were favourably impressed with this section of Ontario as a holiday resort. None of them were very pleased however, at being forced to leave for home more than two weeks before their time had expired.

Another boat that docked at George Street at the same time as the "Richardson," was the cruiser "Barbara" owned by E. H. Ellis, of Toronto. It contained a party of young people, who were enroute from Lake Simcoe back to Toronto to resume studies at college. The larger boat of the two the "Barbara" was 35-feet in length.

Scotch Anthracite Coming To Canada

A most favorable indication of increasing trade between the old country and Canada are the large shipments of Genuine Scotch Anthracite Coal which are now reaching Montreal. Local coal merchants who have on order a large consignment of Genuine Scotch Anthracite inform us that this fuel is proving increasingly popular in Canada largely on the grounds of economy. For the high heating value of Scotch Anthracite makes it exceptionally economical, and Canadians find that maximum heat per dollar is delivered by this Scottish coal which is clean and easily handled, non-clinkering and with little ash. So marked are the advantages of Scotch Anthracite that this British product is gradually winning a large section of the Canadian Anthracite market from foreign competitors.

Weddings

WHITE—JUNKIN.

FENELON FALLS, Sept. 12. — (Examiner Correspondence). — A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the United Church parsonage, Fenelon Falls, on Saturday afternoon, when Olga Junkin, youngest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. Junkin, of Verulam, became the bride of Irwin White, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert White. The Rev. Mr. Graham was the officiating clergyman. The bride's gown was of brown triple sheer crepe, with brown felt hat, slippers and gloves, and carried a brown tone travel coat with fur collar.

The bridal pair were unattended and the witnesses were the Misses Carrie White and Blanche Junkin. Mr. White and his bride left immediately for a motor trip to points west, and on their return will reside in Verulam.

Mr. Irwin White was a former resident of Downeyville, having resided one mile north of the village, and all his friends will all join in wishing Mr. White and his bride many long years of wedded bliss.

O'NEILL—BISSETTE.

DOWNEYVILLE, Sept. 12.—(Examiner Correspondence). — St. Mary's Church, Lindsay, was the scene of a pretty autumn wedding Monday morning at 7.30 o'clock when Madeline, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bissette, 70 King Street, Lindsay, became the bride of Mr. Fergus O'Neill, son of Mrs. Daniel O'Neill, 116 Ridout street also of Lindsay. Rev. Monsignor McCall officiated and afterwards said the nuptial mass. The bride, who was given away by her father, was gowned in pink silk striped organdy with short frilled sleeves and long graceful skirt, with picture hat and shoes to match. She carried sweetheart roses and lily-of-the-valley. The bride was attended by Miss Marie O'Neill, of Toronto, cousin of the groom, wearing a gown of powder blue suede lace, velvet turban, shoes, gloves and hose to match, and carrying Talisman roses and sweet peas. The groom was attended by Mr. Albert Bissette, brother of the bride. Mr. James Meehan was usher. Miss Ruth Shannon presided at the organ and Mr. Norman Bissette, of Cornwall, brother of the bride, sang "Ave Maria" and "O Satulares Hostia" during the mass and at the signing of the register sang, "All Joy Be Thine."

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mrs. Bissette, mother of the bride, wearing a gown of black crepe with overlace, black satin hat and a corsage of sweet peas and lily-of-the-valley, received, assisted by Mrs. O'Neill, mother of the groom, gowned in brown ribbed crepe, matching hat and a corsage of sweet peas and ferns. Later Mr. O'Neill and bride left for New York, the bride travelling in a blue cascade ensemble, trimmed with beige and accessories to match. On their return they will reside in Lindsay.

The groom's gift to the bride was a sapphire pendant with earrings to match; to the bridesmaid, a sterling silver bracelet, and to the groomsman, a leather belt with silver buckle.

Among those out-of-town present were Mr. and Mrs. Martin Carroll and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harrington, of Downeyville; Miss Nellie Hogan, Douro; Miss M. Sanderson, Toronto; Misses Rita and Adeline Douquette, Oshawa, and Mr. Norman Bissette, of Cornwall.

YOUTH MAKING MERRY AT "EX" ON THEIR DAY

Junior Farmers From All Over District Are Competing.

MINISTER HERE.

A. Wander Company Gave Free Admissions to 1,675 Children.

Youth took possession of the Exhibition to-day, the junior farmers from all over the district arriving early for a busy and intensive round of judging, including classes in domestic science for girls, and the school children swarming through the gates in a stream that set in motion long before one o'clock.

NEW ROMAINE HOMES GUTTED

Families of George Ellis and James O'Neill Both Lose Furniture.

AUTO IS DESTROYED.

Two homes belonging to George Ellis and James O'Neill at 26 and 28 New Romaine street were completely gutted by a fire which broke out shortly after 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The blaze was thought to have started in a garage at the rear of the O'Neill home but its exact origin was not at first known. Flames leaped to the O'Neill house, blown across the space from the garage by a slight breese, and thence spread to the Ellis home. Both houses were of light clapboard construction and the conflagration swept through them before furniture and other contents could be removed.

Despite the fact that the fire was outside the city limits, the fire department answered a call for aid at 2.15 o'clock. An auxiliary gasoline fire pumper was put in service and a line of hose was laid from the nearest city hydrant on Monaghan road. The flames had already gained considerable headway when the firemen arrived and the fight to save the houses was unavailing.

An automobile in the O'Neill garage was completely destroyed by the blaze. Both houses were partially covered by insurance.

The house of Fred Stedman, across the road from the main blaze, caught fire several times during the blaze but serious damage was prevented by the fire fighters.

FERGUSON RAPS DRIVE AGAINST EMPIRE'S RULER

Shocked at Campaign to Undermine Respect for Institutions Upheld by Nation.

DAY OF WOLFE'S VICTORY.

Claims British Attitude Showing Enthusiasm to Get Closer to Canada.

HAMILTON, Ont., Sept. 13—(CP)—Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Canadian High Commissioner in London, told the Canadian club here today that he was shocked upon coming back to Ontario from London to find there seemed to be here "an insidious campaign to undermine respect for those institutions upheld by British people throughout the world."

He had attended meetings in Ontario, said the former premier, where the speakers "had the audacity to ask why there should be a king."

"Our sovereign the King is a man with the deepest knowledge of public affairs," he said. "He is also blessed with sound judgment. The privy council of his government meets with him and discusses the affairs of the nation. His views are an overpowering influence in the councils of the nation."

Mr. Ferguson recalled that today was the anniversary of the victory won by Wolfe on the plains of Abraham. He scored Canadians for not paying to heroes the tribute which was accorded them by the people of England who did more to celebrate Wolfe's victory that did Canadians.

The attitude of the British people had changed with regard to Canada, and there had never been a time in his knowledge the speaker said, when there was such enthusiasm and sympathy and desire to get closer to the Dominion.

$100,000 JEM STOLEN IN RAID

London Thief Smashes Window in Heart of Diamond Trade Area.

DAYLIGHT JOB.

LONDON, Sept. 13 (A.P.).—A rare diamond known as the Polar Star and valued at $100,000, was stolen to-day from a shop in the heart of the diamond trade district in the most amazing of a series of recent daylight "smash and grab" raids.

Shortly after a window had been decorated at the store of Samuels, Harris & Son in Hatton Garden, a young man broke the glass, twisted the protecting grill with a piece of iron, snatched the diamond, and sped away in a waiting automobile.

One of the guards who had retired inside the store after the window had been dressed, gave chase and obtained the number of the automobile license.

Police have found it difficult to cope with an increasing number of similar robberies because they are forbidden to carry firearms, and on occasions have been able only to throw their clubs in an effort to apprehend the thieves.

The diamond robber to-day was believed by authorities to be a connoisseur because he made no attempt to take other valuable jewelry in the window.

The stone was unmounted and of 32.7 carats. It was described as "a blue-white old Brazilian pure stone."

Shortly after the robbery employees of the house said the stolen diamond was the "polar star," but a member of the firm later corrected this, asserting that the "polar star," a stone of 40 carats, had been sold some time ago. The Brazilian diamond which was taken was "a very important stone," this firm member said.

IMPROVED ROADS REVOLUTIONIZED LIFE IN ONTARIO

Premier Henry Points to Rapid Increase in Construction Past 15 Years.

HIGH OUTLAY JUSTIFIED.

Touches on Competition With Railways—'Good Roads' 20th Convention.

HAMILTON, Ont, Sept. 13 (CP) —Life had been revolutionized by the establishment of improved roads, Hon. George S. Henry, Premier of Ontario told the 20th annual convention of the Canadian Good Roads Association have today.

The meeting which opened to-day is attended by representatives of all the Provinces in the Dominion and will be in session until Saturday, discussing road improvement, financing, and all problems connected with their maintenance. Hon. Leopold Macaulay, Minister of Highways, and Hon. William Finlayson, Minister of Lands and Forests, with Premier Henry welcomed the delegates.

Premier Henry, second to address the gathering, told of the rapid increase in road-building during the past 15 years and discussed the problems arising from this growth.

"Some years ago the belief arose that there was no longer any need for this association," Premier Henry said. "It was claimed the organization had completed its useful work when it impressed people with the conviction that good roads were a necessity. There is no longer any need to develop the people's interest in good roads, but road building is a progressive, developing science and must be followed in order that it may be kept up with."

The speaker said that the tremendous development in roads of the continent since the war had revolutionized life of its people.

Problem Solved

"Changed conditions have solved the road problem. Expenditures on roads would not be justified if we were living to ourselves in a small community as we were 25 years ago.

The community has been widened out and enlarged through better transportation and communication facilities.

Of the problems arising from the establishment of a large network of highways was the interference of the vehicles using them for commercial purposes with railway traffic, the Premier said. "Should our roads be developed to such a point where, through autos, buses and trucks they hit at publicly-owned and subsidized railways," he asked. He said a similar problem was probably faced and solved when trains interfered with water transportation years ago. Such problems work themselves out in the end, he said.

Premier Henry expressed gratification in, having many prominent road officials from the United States present at the convention. Canada was happy to have access to advice in road problems from the United States, made valuable through tremendously wide experience, he said.

Over Million Cars

In discussing highways organization in the Canadian provinces, legislation, administration and finance, H. M. Smith, Deputy Minister of Highways for Ontario, outlined the growth and development of highway construction in the Dominion.

With the phenomenal development of motoring—the 9,000 cars in Canada in 1915 having become 400,000 by 1920, and 1,240,000 by 1930—Canada had passed from the dirt-road to the highest type of pavements within a decade and the demand for better roads and proper maintenance was still insistent, he said.

Flying Mollisons Queen City Bound To Complete Plans

Amy Admits Wintry Weather May Call Record-Seeking Dash Off—Thinks Latest Advisable Date Is Past But Says Noted Spouse's Ideas Differ.

MOLLISON ABOARD SHIP NEARING QUEBEC WITH NEW BRITISH DE HAVILAND MOTH.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—(CP)—Amy Johnson Mollison, world's premier woman flyer, plans with her equally famous husband Jim, to hop off soon from Wasaga Beach, Ont., some 60 miles north west of Toronto on an attempted non-stop flight for the world's distance record.

"Our plans call for the start at Wasaga Beach, but this is still indefinite," she said. "Of course there is still much doubt as to whether we will be able to start on account of the close approach of winter and the hazards of ice and gales."

She leaves for Toronto tonight.

Captain Mollison, returning from England with a new plane to replace the ship in which he and Amy crashed at Bridgeport, Conn. this summer, lands at Quebec tomorrow and joins his wife in Toronto tomorrow night.

With the Seafarer, II, a De Havilland Dragon Moth powered by two Gypsy Major motors of 120 horsepower, the flying couple hope to fly from Toronto to Alleppo, French Syria, some 6,000 miles, and break the record of Maurice Rossi and Paul Codos.

"It is by no means definite that we shall go," Amy said to-day. "The Atlantic flying season is supposed to end the middle of September, but personally I think the latest flying date is past."

Different Ideas.

She laughed—it was really a giggle—and a gentle blush suffused her cheeks:

"—But you know husbands, and I think mine has different ideas."

Her listener didn't know husbands very well, but agreed on theoretical grounds.

'Jim painted the ship black—like the Seafarer, I. I'm so disappointed because I wanted it a bright color—psychological effect and all that, dont you know, like curtains and things.

"We naturally want to make the trip—" she hesitated— "well, it's pretty late in the year but we just have to be sensible. I don't feel like jumping out of a winodw just as a sportin' chance."

BANK ROBBERY NETS $46,000

$11,000 OF LOOT, CASH.

AMERY, Wis., Sept. 13 (C.P.).—A masked, armed robber quartette today held up an assistant cashier of the Union State Bank and fled with $46,000 worth of cash and negotiable securities. They are believed by Melvin Passolt, chief of the Minnesota Crime Bureau, to be the same band who robbed a railway express agency in St. Paul Monday.

The loot included between $11,000 and $12,000 in cash and $35,000 in securities, most of them negotiable. The raiders hid in the bank last night and overpowered two employees when they reported for work this morning.

BARREL OF MASH CHICKEN FEED HILLS DECLARE

MAY BE 2ND CHARGE.

Mrs. Hill and Son Claim Contents of Barrel Used to Feed Chickens.

More facts concerning the alcoholic chicken feed which Mrs. May Hill maintains two Royal Canadian Mounted Police constables foolishly mistook for corn mash for the manufacture of moonshine whiskey came to light yesterday at the trial of Russell Hill in Norwood on a charge of having the mash in his possession contrary to the Excise Act.

Constables Wood, of Lindsay and Denton, of Cobourg, both told of visiting the Hill home in Dummer Township and of finding the 30-gallon barrel of mash. They said the mash contained corn, sugar, yeast and other ingredients guaranteed to hasten its reaction in an alcoholic beverage. A governments analysist's certificate which they produced showed that the mash was 17.5 percent proof spirits.

May Hill and her eldest son, Gerald, both swore that the mash was made only of cracked corn, water and skimmed milk and that they were in the habit of feeding it to the chickens and sometimes to the pigs. Russell Hill denied any knowledge of what the barrel contained, explaining that he was occupied in working in the field and and left the feeding of the stock and fowl to his wife and children.

Judgement of Police Magistrate Langley was reserved until Saturday. However, His Worship said that since the Hill property was in the name of May Hill he could not properly see how the mash could be said to be in the possession of her husband.

Police officers said that if the husband is acquitted they will lay a similar charge against his wife.

J. A. O'Brien conducted the defence.

POLES CONTINUE BALLOON HUNT

Make Second Plane Flight Into Quebec Wilds After Giant Bag.

IN MATHIEU LAKE AREA.

QUEBEC, Sept. 13. (CP)—In the second attemp to locate their lost balloon from the air, Captain F. Hynek and Lieutenant Z. Brzynski to-day flew from Lake St. Joseph airport into the Laurentian hills. The balloon, in which they travelled about 812 miles after leaving Chicago Sept. 2 in the James Gordon Bennett balloon race, is believed to be near Lake Mathieu. The lake is about 22 miles from Lemieux where they emerged at the end of a five-day tramp through the forest after the gas beg descended.

The plane in which they made to-day's fight was piloted by H. P. Wardle, of Quebec. They were accompanied by Arthur Heber, of the Quebec Topographical Survey. Brynski flew over the area a few days ago to find the country covered with snow, but it was believed conditions would be more favorable to-day.

The Polish balloonists are unofficial winners of the Chicago balloon race.

ECONOMIST SHAW DISCARDS DEMOCRACY, DICTATORSHIPS

But Shavian Alternative is Not Forthcoming, He Declares.

DEFENDS RUSSIA

(By William Hillman, Central Press Canadian Writer.)

LONDON, Sept. 13—Democracy is now out-of-date and all wrong and so is a dictatorship. To adjust those two seemingly irreconcilable views to his liking George Bernard Shaw takes up four columns of a popular London Sunday newspaper. He says:

G. Bernard Shaw.

"Capacity to elect or be elected is the rarest thing in the world. I have always advocated a scientific test of capacity. The Home Secretary and all the cabinent ought to be scientifically examined.

"Citizens ought to be classified in grades—and if you must select cabinets and parliaments by popular vote, the voting should be limited to members of the appropriate grades.

"The successful candidate gets to Parliament, and what can he do? What can any parliament or government do in the present condition of society? It is the victim of forces which it doesn't comprehend and cannot resist. Parliamentary government has become a dreary farce.

FORD MUST JOIN NRA OR U.S. TO TAKE ACTION

NEW YORK, Sept. 13. (AP).—General Hugh S. Johnson, N.R.A. administrator said to-day that if Henry Ford "does not come in we will act."

"Ford is under the code" Johnson said in reply to an inquiry as to whether the automobile manufacturer was "recalcitrant."

"I don't know what the exact present situation is but if he does not come in we will act."

Johnson said to-day he was reluctant to use force at this time against those who violate the code. He said there were recalcitrants throughout the country, several of whom he indicated were of national importance, but said he was inclined to give them time before taking action.

FUTURE OF SOVIET DEPENDS ON SUCCESSFUL HARVESTING

Fate of Collective Farming in Balance as Record Crop Ripens.

UKRAINE IS PROBLEM

By PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

MOSCOW, Aug. 28. — This is a fateful year in the history of the Soviet Government and the month of August is the most decisive period in this year. Upon the success or failure of harvesting the crop depends the whole future development of this country. This year the peasants will swing over definitely to the Government's side or they will wreck the system by passive resistance. When I say the peasants. I mean particularly those of the Ukraine, who have been decimated by hunger and starvation in the past year.

The Ukraine on the whole is in a bad shape. The Government has had to stop nearly all the big factories in Kharkoff and Kieff in order to permit the workers to go into the wheat fields for the harvest. "Why don't the peasants do their own harvesting there?" I asked a prominent Bolshevik official, who just returned from a tour of inspection of the Ukrainian railway system.

"Many peasants have left," he said. "There was a stampede from the villages for the big cities when hunger came. They abandoned everything and they have never gone back. That is why urban workers are being mobilized to cut the grain. We are in the midst of a grave emergency. Every minute counts. A week, ten days and much of the crop may be spoiled.

Train Are Wrecked.

"In addition," he said, "we are

SEATTLE, Sept. 12.—(CP)—Nick Brace, lumber company manager, was astonished when a freight truck unloaded a black cow in his yard.

A bow tie about the cow's neck was signed "Sammy," the name of his agent at Sequim.

By investigating, he found "Sammy" had followed instructions to get rid of some of his overstocked yard by a "barter and trade" system. The cow was payment on a lumber deal."

There are going to be big doings on Highway 28 next Wednesday evening according to Highway Patrol Officer Hornick. Employees of the highway are having a corn roast at the gravel pit near Kendry Station that evening and an invitation to motorists is cordially extended to the festivities. There will be plenty of corn, a platform is being erected for old-time dancing, the place will be electrically lighted and there will be several nimble-fingered fiddlers on hand to furnish the rag-time music. GLUT OF BUTTER FRESH PROBLEM FACING CANADA

10 Million Pounds Above Domestic Needs Compared With 1932.

MAY EXPORT AT LOSS.

Plan Seen Having Aftermath of Low Prices for Milk in Spring.

OTTAWA, Sept. 13 (CP)—Canada suddenly finds itself with 10,000,000 pounds more butter than will be needed for domestic consumption this Winter. W. H. Forster of Hamilton, president of the National Dairy Council, and Allan C. Fraser, manager and secretary, with other members of the Council had conferences with Hon. H. H. Stevens, Minister of Trade and Commerce, and Hon. Robert Weir, Minister of Agriculture, yesterday, to see what can be done about it.

The impression seems to be that Canada made too much butter and not enough cheese. Canadian cheese commands a premium on the British market and the butter has to take a discount as compared with the New Zealand product. Until late in August, it appeared the balance between cheese and butter was quite satisfactory, that butter reserves were being accumulated at about the proper rate to provide for the domestic requirements this Winter. However, the storage figure on Sept. 1, showed 41,490,441 pounds of butter on hand whereas last year the total on the corresponding date was 30,605,189. Returns from the creameries were more complete this year, however, so that the actual excess is slightly under 10,000,000 pounds.

Greater by End of Month

The excess surplus will probably be greater by the end of September and is divided about equally between Ontario and the Prairie Provinces. Western Canada holders of butter are reported to be prepared to take a loss and ship this surplus butter to the United Kingdom, rather than glut the domestic market. There is a move on foot to do the same with Ontario butter. The conversations yesterday were to devise the best means of going about the task and no definite decision was reached.

Butter is selling in Montreal at 18¾ cents a pound, which is approximately world prices. The butter actually stands the creamery companies around 20 cents a pound, it is contended as they did not anticipate the high production. The farmers, they claim, have been paid some $5,000,000 more for their milk than would have been the case had the creamery companies known what the situation would be.

The proposal now suggested is understood to be that the holders of butter export 7,000,000 or 8,000,000 pounds, taking a loss on each pound and plan to recoup on the seasonal advance on the upwards of 30,000,000 pounds to be sold for domestic consumption.

The question is of great importance not only to the creamery companies but the farmers and general public as well. If the creamery companies have heavy losses they contend they will have to fix the prices for milk low next Spring, whereas if they are able to avoid a glut in the domestic market, they will be in a better position to offer good prices next season.

WAR FUND LOSS ORDERED PROBED

General Ma Charges He Received Only Million of Five Raised for Amy

TO FIGHT JAPS.

PEIPING, China, Sept. 13. — A scandal involving millions of dollars raised as a "war chest" to finance the defense of Manchuria against Japanese invasion two years ago was ordered investigated by the government authorities yesterday.

Chinese heroes who fought and bled—and ultimately fled—are wondering what happened to nearly $20,000,000 silver, the equivalent of $5,835,000 in Canadian currency.

The extent of the scandal was revealed with the return to China of General Ma Chan-shan, hero of the Nonni River battle in Manchuria, who finally was forced to flee to Soviet Russia and came back by way of Europe.

On his return, General Ma was acclaimed as a national hero and named a member of the National Military Council. He soon resigned, however, and from retirement let it be known that of the $20,000,000 Chinese currency raised by voluntary subscription to carry on the fight against Japan, he and his associates got only $1,713,000.

His revelation has set thousands of Chinese many of them hardly able to contribute cash to such a fund bitterly wondering what happened to the other $18,187,000. The investigation will seek to show where this sum went and who, if any, embezzled the money. Many of the contributors sold their belongings to help swell the fund.

Statements have been requested from various volunteer anti-Japanese forces, showing their receipts and disbursements. Organizations which collected the funds have been requested to notify the investigating committee the amounts collected and to whom the funds were delivered for transmission to the armies.

SUBORDINATES ARE UNBLAMED BY COMMISSION

Inspector Denies Chief's Statement He Recommended Withdrawal of Charge.

WARNED DRAPER.

Mayor Stewart Has Backing of Board in Stand on Case.

TORONTO, September 13. —Responsibility for the release of Rene Duranleau, withdrawal of a charge of reckless driving which had been laid against him, and return of his bail, was placed last night upon Chief Constable Denis C. Draper, unanimously, by Toronto's recently reconstituted Board of Police Commissioners, following a public investigation.

The motorcycle officer who effected the arrest (P.C. Robert Kerr), the inspector of the police division in which the arrest was made (Inspector R. A. Anderson), the station-duty sergeant who set bail (P.S. William Wash), and the inspector in charge of the motorcycle division (Inspector Charles Greenwood), were specifically exonerated. They were publicly told by the Mayor to go about their duties with a clear conscience, and "not to allow this experience to serve as a deterrent to them in enforcing the law, no matter what a man's position or influence."

Result of Arrest

The investigation arose out of the arrest nearly two weeks ago of a son of the Federal Minister of Marine and Fisheries, Rene Duranleau was taken to a police station with a party of four after having been intercepted by Constable Kerr while driving on Bloor Street at 45 miles an hour. He was charged with reckless driving and admitted to bail in his own cash bond of $25.00.

Next day he appeared at Chief Draper's office, complained of incivility on the part of the arresting officer and others at Number 5 Police Station, and Chief Draper, after calling for the inspectors and officers affected, ordered the bail refunded and the charge withdrawn.

Denies Chief's Statement.

A feature of the evidence was that of Inspector Robert Anderson, of No. 5 division, who denied Chief Draper's statement that he (Anderson) had recommended with-

GROCER'S QUICK ACTION STOPS RUNAWAY HORSE

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 13, (By Examiner Staff Correspondent). — Quick action on the part of a Campbellford grocer Samuel Clegg, prevented what might have been a serious accident, when a horse broke away from its driver and raced down Tice street yesterday morning, and was in danger of being headed off the road by passing cars into the store fronts, with the probability of causing bodily harm to passers-by as well as property damage. The horse owned by J. H. McArthur, local butcher, was being harnessed up by Fred McArthur when something scared it, and it dashed from the yard on Sebastopol street and headed for town. Mr. Clegg, who was in front of his store, saw the animal approaching and rushed into the road and after some difficulty managed to bring it to a standstill.

LARGER CROWD ON HAND TO HEAR FAMOUS BAND

Scots Guards Band Completes Its Engagement at Peterboro' Exhibition.

SOLO FEATURES.

Two Operatic Selections Were Well Received by Grandstand Audience.

The band of the Scots Guards concluded their Peterborough Exhibition engagement last night with a program of delightful variety under more agreeable weather conditions and with a much larger attendance than on Monday.

Lieutenant Dowell arranged this concluding concert with a dominant purpose of entertainment, intent on pleasing his audience with melody rather than impressing them with subjective ideas and their elaboration. And in that design his plan succeeded with charming effect, the inclusive variety of the numbers overlooking no one in the audience by their pointed appeal.

Three of them struck national notes, and these three were all arrangements by Middleton, a fantasia of Scottish airs, a similar grouping of Irish tunes under the title "Ireland Forever," and the familiar "Down South," compounded of Negro melodies.

Solo features by three of the bandsmen afforded additional evidence of the resources of the group of Guards selected for the present Canadian tour. Bandsman W. Bowles, cornetist, played "The Last Chord" and "Love's Old Sweet Song" in smooth, golden tone; Sergt. A. Randall's saxaphone number, the sprightly "La Cinquantaine", reflected distinction by his artistry upon an instrument which conductors some years ago wouldn't countenance in their tonal blending; and two songs, "My Dreams" (Tosti) and "Tell Me Tonight" (Nicholls), by Bandsman J. Goy were a delightful surprise.

Two operatic selection "Pagliacci" and Romberg's comparatively recent success, "The Desert Song," included lighter classic melodies that linger in memory; the Raymond overture and the Coppelia ballet were standard program items that lose none of their ingratiating charm. The final "Waterloo" descriptive piece, written in the manner of the "1812" overture played Monday night, was imposing enough in its breadth of treatment, but it is rather superficial,—some might regard it as patriotic fustian,—lacking the depth of fervor, inspiration and originality of ideas, in brief the genius that evoked Tschaikowsky's overture.

The pipers added to the variety and flavor of the program which flowed out to the audience with all the fine qualities and excellence of the Guards' music.

The directors of the Exhibition are to be congratulated on bringing this band to Peterborough for two concerts, and if this feature of the last three years is to be continued there should be some prospect and assurance of packing the stand to its capacity instead of seeing empty benches on the fringes.

Montreal Suburb Fires Cost $50,000

MONTREAL, September 13 (C.P.) —Two fires in Montreal suburbs late yesterday kept firefighters hopping and caused losses estimated at about $50,000. At Ste. Therese a large biscuit factory was burned to the ground and several small outbuildings around it were destroyed. Several houses were badly damaged, and barns were destroyed in a dangerous fire at Marieville.

The Ste. Therese fire was prevented from spreading by a force of volunteer firemen, but the Montreal Fire Department sent aid to Marieville, and the blaze was not brought under control until heavy streams of water from the city equipment were set pouring on the flames.

Sparks from an electric threshing outfit which set fire to a farmer's barn started the blaze and burning hay and straw was carried as far as a quarter of a mile by the high wind.

PHEASANT HUNT FEE PERMITTED SAYS MINISTER

Challies Sees Advantages in Having Sportsmen Paying Farmers.

ADVERTISING ALLOWED.

Believes Idea Would Have Tendency to Avoid Depletion of Birds.

TORONTO, Sept. 13. — In the event of an open season for pheasants being generally proclaimed this Fall, was the case last year the Department of Game and Fisheries, under the direction of Hon. George H. Challies, will have no objection to farmers making what they can out of charging sportsmen for the privilege of hunting on their property.

"I have felt for some time," declared Mr. Challies, last night, when the matter was discussed with him, "that the farmers who protect and feed pheasants should be entitled to remuneration—if they desire it—from those who come on their property after birds. They might lease their lands for the shooting period to some club, or they might charge individual hunters. In any event, as long as departmental regulations with regard to bag limit and so on are lived up to, we certainly are not opposed to the charge idea."

"How about advertising their property as shooting grounds?" Mr. Challies was asked. "That is done by farmers in various sections of the United States."

"Let the farmers advertise as much as they want to," was his reply. "We'll not object."

The Minister of Game and Fisheries was of the belief that such a policy would work to the advantage of pheasant propagation. The farmer would see to it, he felt, that the birds on his lands were not depleted, so as to have a nucleus with which to raise flocks for another year. Secondly, he would be apt to extend greater protection that he has even done in the past to the birds during the off-season.

WAINMAN'S PHEASANT EXHIBIT IS DRAWING MERITED ATTENTION

WORTH $600

An exhibit which is attracting much merited attention at the Fair this year, is an aviary of pheasants entered in non-competitive display by Bert Wainman, local jeweler.

To his many friends, possibly not to those who are more intimate, Mr. Wainman has offered something in the nature of a surprise by appearing in the role of the largest fancier in this district, of pheasants. He is not new to this branch of the poultry showworld however, having had previous experience with these birds when he resided in Ottawa district.

Mr. Wainman told The Examiner he was rearing pheasants as a hobby. He hoped that he would be able to convert it into a profitable hobby. There seems to be little reason why he should not do so. He has a remarkably fine stock of pheasants, amounting in all to about fifty birds. Only half of them are represented in the display he has housed in special pens on the north side of the poultry building, but they are attracting widespread interest and favorable comment.

There are nine varieties of pheasants on exhibit, and one pen of Japanese Silkies. The silkies are utilised by pheasant fanciers, it was explained by George Paxman, noted local poultry breeder, for hatching eggs. The plumage (from which the name Silkie was derived) resembles fur. It is snow white. The feathers being webless, render the birds unable to fly. Covered by a large crest and beard, the blue beak of the Silkie is almost invisible. The peculiarity of these birds is the color of the skin, which is leaden blue. They are of the Cochin type but larger in size.

Among the nine varieties of pheasants which Mr. Wainman has on show are: Mongolians, Goldens, Chinese Blackmecks, Lady Amherst, Swinhoe, Brown Eared Manchurian, Reeves, Versicolor and Silvers.

Of the pair of Reeves, which Mr. Wainman is showing, the male bird has been newly shipped in to replace one of the birds that broke its neck by becoming entangled in the wire netting earlier this week.

A Costly Exhibit

The pair of Manchurian Pheasants on show are valued at $200; while the trio of Swinhoes are worth $180. In all it is estimated there is an investment of $600 or over represented in the exhibit.

Mr. Wainman revealed some of the secrets of pheasant breeding, stating that the Swinhoes have to be reared in trios. If one of the two hens should die the male bird would kill the surviving female, he stated.

Another peculiarity is that some of the varieties get their plumage six months after hatching, while other varieties notably the Swinhoes, Lady Amherst and Goldens take two years to get their plumage. Manchurian Eared Pheasant eggs are nine dollars each.

Some of the birds in the show are noted for their beautiful plumage and the question is often being heard, "Which do you like the best, the Lady Amherst or the Golden pheasant." The latter is invariably the choice of the ladies, Mr Wainman stated, but it is a hard question to answer as the male of both species are very beautiful birds.

The Lady Amherst male has short dark green feathers over his head. The crest which begins at the base of the head is deep crimson, the shawl is white and black, and is certainly a thing of beauty when opened up for display to the female.

The Golden Pheasant has a massive golden crest, orange and blue-black shawl, deep crimson neck and body, brown and blue wings, golden rump, green saddle, brown and black tail with crimson feathers on each side of the base of the tail. With its gaudy plumage the Golden pheasant is popularly considered to be the most beautiful of the brightly colored birds in captivity.

DECORATION DAY HELD BY MADOC ODDFELLOWS

MADOC, Sept. 12 (Examiner Correspondence)—The annual decoration day service of the Madoc Oddfellows and Rebekahs was held on Sunday afternoon, Sept. 10. The parade was formed from the lodge room on Durham Street, and led by the Military Band of Prince Edward and Hastings Counties, went to the United Church, where Rev. G. W. Rivers preached an impressive sermon from the text, "Bear ye one another's burdens."

After the service, the procession reformed, visiting first the Cenotaph, and afterwards to the Lakeview cemetery, where the graves of deceased members were decorated and an inspiring service of remembrance was conducted by the officers and suitable music of processional hymn tunes was furnished by the band. Owing to the cool afternoon, the visiting crowd was smaller than usual. Beautiful flowers were carried by each of the members in procession and were laid upon the graves to be decorated.

EXPANSION BY LOCAL FIRM

Visualizes Improved Economic Conditions—Has Faith in Peterboro's Future.

A GROWING BUSINESS.

Established in 1906 at 374 George street, McWilliams & Company have enjoyed 26 years' unbroken record in the same premises for better grade—and in some lines, exclusive merchandise. Opening up originally as furriers, they in 1917 supplemented their fur goods with makes of hats favored by men of good taste, featuring Borsalino and Mack products, and recently they introduced the newly invented weather-resisting felt hat for men — a hat that can be worn in the rain without suffering any material damage from a drenching. Retailing fur goods was discarded in 1929.

Men's Furnishings

In the Spring of 1932, the enterprise of this substantial business house was strikingly marked by the addition of an up-to-the hour men's' furnishings department, in which is carried men's Monarch knit hose and sweaters; Forsyth shirts, pyjamas and neckwear, together with Penman's underwear—all first grade dependable merchandise much favored by men who dress well.

High Grade Clothing

And now we come to the Spring of 1933, when McWilliams & Company further expanded by installing a complete line of Shiffer-Hillman's outer clothing for men—suits for all occasions, overcoats and topcoats—all garments that are built to please the most exacting patron. In this department are also featured a wide range of odd trousers, a line of merchandise much in demand these days.

Even the boys are not forgotten by this progressive store, where attractive lines—in price as well as quality—of pants, sweaters, hose and furnishings are to be found.

More Servicing Room

These periodical expansions, however, reached a climax the other week, when the store's capacity was found to be overtaxed and not permitting of advantageous display and service. But this congestion has been overcome by taking in 20 x15 feet of floor area at the rear—used as a wash and storage room—and converting it into a men's clothing department modernly equipped for the care and servicing of garments. So here is now a bright, cheerful and admirably appointed annex, which is highly appreciated by patrons and valued for its service adaptability.

Such in brief is the history of one of Peterborough's oldest business houses, whose operators' confidence in Canada's and this city's future is unshaken by depression; and who, facing the future unafraid, make no inconsiderable investment in trade expansion and store alterations.

McWilliams & Company is controlled by Messrs Keith and Cyril Lech.

HAVELOCK HALL TO BE REROOFED

Council Also Decides to Put in New Heating System and Make Repairs.

WILL ISSUE DEBENTURES.

HAVELOCK, September 13 (Examiner Correspondence). — The regular meeting of the Village Council was held in the Council Chambers on Monday evening with all members present, and Reeve Ernest Leeson presiding.

A letter from Peck, Kerr & McElderry acknowledged cheque from the village for $46.29, being account in full to date. Cheques for $133.07, $226.20, and $208.23 were received from the Provincial Relief Board as its share of direct relief for three months last spring.

George Hubble of E. S. Hubble & Son was present and waited on the Council in connection with his tender for a new steam heating plant for the Town Hall. Mr. Fletcher of the James Morrison Brass Company was present with estimates for the new heating plant, which he said were only slightly more than the cost of a hot air heating system He described the proposed installation very thoroughly and had blue prints of the hall on hand. It was decided to leave the matter over until estimates had been received from others interested in the undertaking.

John Leask asked the Council to build a road from Ottawa Street to the road for his new scales. On motion of Seeney and Gordon the Council decided to have the road finished.

Under the heading of unfinished business, the matter of the town's liability in the matter of Shirley Hutchison's injury on the Town Hall Hill came up for discussion. The insurance comonay carrying the town's public liability insurance has ignored all letters and seem to be dodging the issue. After some time it was decided to write the Municipal World as to the village's position in the case.

On motion of Councillors Seeney and Gordon, an extensive building program will be carried out. A new heating system will be installed the furnace room altered new roof put on the hall and belfry flush closets installed and possibly a vau't constructed for the village books, etc. In all these undertakings local labor will be employed wherever possible. Debentures will be issued to take care of the expenditure. On motion it was decided to call for local tenders for supplying the material for the new asphalt roof for the Town Hall.

On motion of Seeney and Spencer, Mr. Murphy's attention was drawn to th stump fence on his property which obstructs the view at the east end of the village, near No 7 Highway.

After pondering over the large amount of uncollected taxes for a long time it was decided on motion that the clerk notify all property owners in arrears three years or more, including 1933, if not paid before September 30 next, the Reeve has been authorized to issue a warrant for the sale of same to satisfy taxes.

FUTURE OF SOVIET DEPENDS ON SUCCESSFUL HARVESTING

facing a lot of opposition in the form of sabotage. The number of railway wrecks has increased alarmingly. Every instance of accident that we investigated last month was due to the wilful destruction of the lines."

"Who is doing this?" I asked.

"Class enemies," he replied.

"What do you mean by class enemies?"

"I mean koulaks and dissatisfied peasants. The koulaks, or richer peasants, have been expropriated. They have been roughly dealt with. We transferred many of them to Archangelsk, to the timber-lands. Others were shipped off to Siberia. Many stayed behind. They did not openly combat us, but they have such a strong influence upon the mass of the poorer-peasants that the whole rural Ukraine became the scene last winter of a most bitter phase in the class struggle. There is no question but the Ukraine is the most reactionary region in the Union to-day.

"Besides the well-known causes of drought and a bad crop last year, the peasants of the Ukraine have not taken kindly to the collective farm idea. They don't understand its advantages and the whispering campaign of the koulaks in their midst has confused their minds even more. A successful harvest would bring an end both to opposition to the collective farms and to the hidden prestige of the koulaks. And that is why we are so anxious that the whole crop shall be harvested and that we have not hesitated to close the factories for a few weeks."

Farmers Are Hard Hit.

The foregoing is not an official statement, of course. It is given me in a more or less confidential manner. Yet I think it ought to be reproduced in order to show the serious difficulties confronting the regime. Stalin is a man of iron and steel, as his name implies. He has forced collectivization through in a few years time, preferring no doubt to impose it with one powerful wrench of the social life to years of adaptation and a gradual transformation. It cannot be denied that it has given rise to much hardship and suffering.

But then, say the Bolsheviks, in the end Stalin's agricultural policy will be far more successful than the old methods. His procedure is correct. The collectivization of agriculture is said to be the first step on the road to peasant participation in the classless society of the future. At the close of the Second Five-Year Plan, now in operation, the classless society will have been born, it is said. It means that there will no longer be any distinctions between peasants and industrial workers and the intelligentsia, but there will be in Stalin's own words, "a classless society of toilers." The nobles and the middle classes have been completely eliminated long ago, of course.

Ukraine Still Opposes.

To this end the comforts of modern life are to be brought to the rural regions, not merely the little amenities of life such as radio and telephone and newspaper, but all the institutions of culture and art and learning, which the Russian cities already possess in so abundant a measure and which they are constantly widening and enlarging. On the whole the peasant masses have seen the point of collectivization, as is shown by the fact that 70 per cent. of the total agricultural domain in the Soviet Union is operating under the new system. "It is one of the greatest things accomplished in this century," an English agronomical expert told me upon his return to Moscow from a two months' study of the collective farms.

The Ukraine is an exception and so is the North Caucasus. It is curious to note that in both these regions the civil war lasted longest, by which I mean to say that a broad majority of the rural population was least inclined to abandon its hostility to the Soviet Government. It is obvious that prosperity will finally break down this sullen opposition. That is why the present period, with the fate of the harvest hanging in the balance, is so decisive and of such vital importance to the Soviet Union as a whole.

SUBORDINATES NOT BLAMED

drawal of the charge. A feature was the specific corroboration by Inspector Greenwood, in charge of motorcycle men, of Anderson's evidence. Anderson told and Greenwood corroborated, that he had not only not recommended withdrawal of the charge, but had expressly warned Chief Draper that 'this man is a prisoner, on bail; and none but a magistrate can dispose of the case.' He attested that Chief Draper's reply was, "Give back the bail and withdraw the charge."

Inspector Anderson also testified taht three times on Monday and once yesterday before the probe took place, he had been called to Chief Draper's office to confer on the matter, and that on Monday the chief had sought to lay the onus on him by saying, "It is too bad you recommended to me withdrawal of that charge." He had replied, he said: "That is not so; be fair."

MAIN BUILDING AT EXHIBITION HAS BIG DISPLAY

Lambert Castle Motor Head One of Big Features in This Building.

LADIES' WORK.

"Heal all" seems like a strange name for a pestiferous weed. But, along with "tumbling mustard" and "stinking mayweed" and "Lady's thumb," and their ilk, it has a place in the group of noxious weeds that are displayed in the Main Building at the Exhibition grounds. At least, their seeds are displayed, in little neat glass phials, and, on the wall behind are colored charts showing just how deceptively nice these bad plants can look, all the time they are conspiring to destroy a man's crop and drive out the beneficent growths.

This display, highly educational and instructive, is in charge of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, and has a title poster that says: "Destroy weeds when it is hot and dry." There are weed bulletins to be had here and the charts show pictures of such well-known pests as the sow thistle or "Yellow peril", chicory, water hemlock, wild carrot, milkweed, and the "king devil."

Against the wall which harbors this display, in the lower section of the Main Building, are its companions. One is the demonstration of the Lambert-Castle motor head, a product of the inventine genius of J. Everett Castle, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Henry Castle of 572 Romaine street.

This demonstration, because of the widespread interest taken in the invention and the manner in which it has received enthusiastic acclaim both in Canada and the United States, is extremely interesting. The section is equipped with a pully, belt and electric motor, and the demonstration is gathering crowds at all hours.

Beside it is a new idea in electrical elements, in which the King-an Hardware Company shows elements of different sizes to fit any stove, also electric heaters for bath-room and garage use.

'Sighted' Hands

A display of the pathetically care-ful and extraordinarily well-done work of the people of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, has a place here also. There are pretty reed baskets in bronze, green and rose, flower-holders and waste-paper baskets and jardiniere stands, also work aprons done on an electric sewing-machine by these sightless workers with their 'seeing' hands, and an exhibit of little novelties; leather cushions and billfolds and pen wipers and coin purses.

L. Warren, local dealer for the Master oil burner, demonstrates the benefits to householders of this device, which has a blue flame to its outer sleeve, thus giving, it is claimed, twenty-five per cent more heat to the water front and oven.

The Singer Sewing Machine Company's exhibit is attractively displayed in a living-room setting. Here a lady demonstrates the newest idea in sewing-machine genius; the Singercraft work, by which it is possible to work on these machines such things as mats and cushion tops and apron edgings.

Oil burning equipment, which is attracting so much attention just now, is displayed in the section taken by the Robert Simpson Company, where "Silent Glow" equipment of this type is on view, as well as "Serenader" radios and "Easy" washing-machines. The washer and oil-burner take the sting out of the wash day for Mrs. Jones and out of the furnace work for the Mister, while the radio serenades them for their foresight.

The Beatty Washer Store shows the new vacuum cleaner which is making its bow to Peterborough after an initial appearance at the Toronto Exhibition, also an electric ironer for which it is claimed that it work four times as rapidly as the ordinary hand-iron. A combined polisher and waxer is another item in this booth.

A couple of enterprising young men sell a perfume called "wild verbena or sand flower," and a third deals in novelties at a tiny stand.

An overflow from the competitive exhibits of the Fair is on view on this floor, where preserved fruits and vegetables make a delicious-looking display.

The Busy Bee

And another notable display is that of honey entered for competition. The four grades into which the product is divided in these days when that beautiful basswood honey of old is no longer recognised as a standard, are white, golden, amber and dark (the last is the color of maple syrup), and they are grouped together in the new long standard clear glasses used for display purposes.

Then there are combs and bees displaying their prowess. The great Bonaparte, it is said, took the bee as his emblem and caused his Imperial robes of state to be heavily embroidered with the golden emblem. One wonders why he chose these foolish things, which work so hard for men to profit by their despoilment. Perhaps the other legend is more truthful, the one that declares Napoleon admired the bee symbol because it was the emblem of a great Florentine family of mediaval splendor.

Billy Webb of Water street has a small but interesting corner showing of wood-turning. Carefully and finely constructed and finished are these smoothly-surfaced chairs and little tables and kitchen cabinets with nice little glass knob and pretty painted exteriors.

Feminine Work

In the upper floor of the Main Building is the Women's section, always a popular center, its patrons including many a 'mere' man, who appears to gravitate usually to the baking section. Yesterday, there was more than one little boy who looked in at the pies and cakes and said they made him 'hungry,' with a real and enthusiastic emphasis that was much more flattering than the smoother adjectives of the ladies who viewed them.

'Y' posters decorate the stairs going up to this room, where feminine handicraft, both useful and ornamental, is on view. Miss Mary Elliott and Miss E. Higgins are in charge, and say this year's showing has a much greater quantity of fancy work and cooking, with excellence in all departments.

The section devoted to the work of ladies over seventy-five years of age, is notable, and eight of the schools of the city, under auspices of their Home and School Associations, have work on view which it is hoped to enter into competition next year.

The quilts, in particular, are outstanding items in the handiwork displayed. There is a new Yo-yo quilt, named after the children's toy for no perceptible reason It has a fancy work, cutout effect that led one elderly male onlooker to remark that "it wouldn't even keep the mosquitoes out." But, nevertheless, it represents a great deal of work and is highly ornamental. Then there is the old reliable "Rising Sun" with black and gold and crimson rays. And the "Fan" pattern, with fan shapes in colored pieces applied on a white ground.

There are rugs in braided, hooked and crocheted designs, some brilliantly colored and others of demure, Quaker effect in cool greens and greys.

Dainty Wares

There are lovely spreads with embroidered and appliqued and filet-lace embellishings, and one, of mauve rayon silk, has an elaborate adornment in a basket of beautifully-colored silk flowers.

Embroidered bed and table linens are another item in the display, with aprons and little house dresses and novelties like beaded bags and silk slumber pillows and hassocks with grospoint flowers.

An exquisite thing, too nice to think of wearing, is a crocheted bed jacket in white wool circles with edging of rose pink circles and rose pink ribbons.

There are dainty babies' things in soft wools and useful woollen socks for men; there are luncheon and tea sets in pure white linen, with Madeira and cutwork embroideries One beautiful set of pillow cases in white linen has edges outlined in pink roses and green leaves.

Special displays, for special prizes, include ornamental things such as taffeta boudoir cushions, exquisitely worked lace d'oyles, and novelties like a fan-shaped cushion, its top entirely covered with fan-stick sections in brightly colored wools.

Tied and dyed work, examples of crewel work and lovely bits of tatting, are on view in these special displays, also a number of gay cushions, one developed in taffeta, its top covered with whorls of alternate rose and soft green, and another, round and fat, made of crocheted wool in spectrum rays of green, orange and yellow.

The work done by ladies of seventy-five years and over is exceptionally good, with the above-mentioned pretty cushions in this section, also softly-worked and colored embroideries, woollen things, and pieced quilts.

As the painting was not in place, it was impossible to see much of it, but the upper specimens in the piles of pictures appeared to be fully up to the standard of other seasons.

Junior Work

The showing of work done by pupils of the Manual Training classes illustrated some new things which exhibited a more useful type of article than the somewhat ornamental woodwork displayed in years past. There were stands and little tables of many types, sewing cabinets, baskets, ash trays, a miniature hope chest and a very convenient little stand with a checker board top. There were quite a few aeroplanes, a little ash tray balanced on the angry curved tail of an infuriated black cat, and several interesting shields with fleur-de-lis and maple leave emblems.

There was one unique little showing of block printing with potato and some very gaily colored and finely-executed art work by pupils of the various schools.

The cooking, as remarked, was delicious-looking in the extreme, with a great quantity on view of the product of housewifely hands. In the old Saxon, it seems, "lady" meant "she who cuts the loaf," so many ladies helped to make this interesting and worth-while display. There were iced and plain cakes, biscuits and muffins and tarts and cookies and loaves of crusty bread.

A TANGLED SITUATION.

The political situation in British Columbia, already sufficiently involved, has been further complicated by the announcement that Mr. Bowser, who has been in the field as the leader of a new independent party, has decided to resign that position, although he will run as an independent candidate.

That leaves the Bowserites, as they have been called, without a Bowser, while Premier Tolmie is appealing to the people as a Unionist without having any real coalition behind him. Conservative candidates as such are conspicuous by their absence. The C.C.F. is strongly represented, but from this faraway observation post it is difficult to estimate their real strength, while the entrance into the fight of United Front candidates who represent the extreme left adds further to the confusion.

At this stage in the campaign the Liberal party would seem to have a royal chance to sweep the province.

The Liberals are excellently organized, with 41 candidates already nominated, and they have been fortunate in the calibre of the standard-bearers they have placed in the field.

It beings to look as if the British Columbia electors, if they want stability in their next Government, will have to place their faith in the Liberal party, which is apparently the only division in the campaign with a definite organization and a definite program.

SHOULD MAKE THE BEST OF IT.

Commenting on reports from all parts of the province of record-breaking enrollments in secondary schools, the Brockville Recorder and Times aptly points out that the young people of this period are passing through most difficult trials, and that if the schools are congested because they cannot find work they are not to blame for conditions over which they have no control.

That is obviously true—and it is equally clear that it is better for boys and girls who because of present conditions cannot be absorbed by industry or business to remain at school and broaden their education than it is to walk the streets in idleness.

They are most certainly more usefully employed at studying than loafing, and while the congestion may mean a heavier burden upon municipalities, it should be accepted as inevitable under the circumstances, and the cost of keeping these young people at school should be regarded as an essential part of the general relief program.

At the same time these young people owe it to themselves not to take advantage of the situation, and not to attempt to make capital out of the fact that they are at school merely because there are no jobs available.

If they merely idle through the school term and make no real effort to take advantage of the educational opportunities before them, the whole benefit will be lost and the additional expense involved by the increased numbers in attendance at secondary schools will represent wasted money.

Those who endeavor to increase their knowledge and their ability to think clearly are preparing themselves for the good jobs that sooner or later will be seeking qualified applicants.

THE COUNTY'S PURE-BRED LIVESTOCK.

The number of pure-bred horses was comparatively small, only 86 farms in the whole county reporting the ownership of such animals, and the total number being 189.

As regards pure-bred cattle, there was naturally a better showing, 333 farms reporting pure-bred cows and heifers and 415 pure-bred bulls and calves. Altogether the county had in June, 1931, a total of 2,949 thoroughbred cattle.

Only 47 farmers of the county had pure-bred sheep, they owning a total of 561 animals, while 54 farms in the county reported a total of 157 pure-bred swine.

The figures for the whole country are interesting.

They show that in 1930 there were 2,242,241 calves raised on Canadian farms. As against this 2,066,429 cattle, all classes, were sold or slaughtered during the census year, which means that there was a net gain of 195,813 animals in Canadian farms. The number of sheep also increased by approximately ten per cent., and the same conditions were reported as to swine and poultry, indicating that the animals sold or slaughtered were more than replaced by the young animals raised.

QUEBEC'S DEFICIT.

Lean times have fallen even upon the Quebec Government, long held up as an example of an administration capable of efficiently carrying out the public business and at the same time of making revenues more than match expenditures.

The fact that huge surpluses from the sale of liquor and the refusal of the Quebec Government to follow the lead of other provinces in social service legislation was responsible to a great degree for the surplus reported each year, was never very strongly emphasized.

However, even these things are powerless now to avert a provincial deficit, and the financial statement of the Treasurer for the fiscal year ending June 30 shows that revenues were over six million dollars less than expenditures.

The depression is naturally given as the cause for this large deficit, unusual demands have been made upon the Government, and at the same time nearly all revenues have sharply declined.

The Liquor Commission handed over $2,700,000 less than the previous year, and other revenue-producing departments nearly all report a falling off.

"Additional calls were made upon the treasury," the statement says, "by the insufficiency of the regular vote to meet such items as bonuses to colonists for the clearing of land, for grants in assisting drainage of land, for the supply of seed grain to colonists, together with the usual liberal grants for the advancement of agriculture, for the needs of education, for the support of provincial institutions, none of which could be curtailed in view of the peculiar needs arising from the depression."

It is unusual for a Quebec Treasurer to have to remain on the defensive in regard to the province's financial situation, and no doubt the opposition in Quebec will seize upon the deficit with as much avidity as Mr. Hepburn shows in pouncing upon the failure of the Henry Government to make its expenditures and revenues meet.

THINGS CANADA HAS DONE.

The following partial list of Canadian achievements is given by the News Letter of Canadian Events:

"Canada built and demonstrated the first railway sleeping cars. Built and sent the first steamboat across the Atlantic. Gave to the world the idea of the all-electric radio. Originated the idea of making paper from pulpwood. First isolated helium gas in commercial quantities. Originated the idea of electric-heating. Built the world's first electric stove. Originated Marquis and other more recent wheat, which helped to build up the commerce of the West, both in Canada and the United States. The idea of the telephone originated in Canada and the first long-distance trials of the instruments were made in Ontario between Paris, Ont., and Brantford. Canada pioneered in the field of electro-chemistry with the discovery of calcium carbide by Tom Wilson, of Hamilton. Canada originated the idea of standard time, which has since been adopted by every civilized country in the world. Canada built and demonstrated the first submarine telegraph in the history of the world. A Canadian physician, Dr. F. G. Banting, of Toronto, discovered insulin, a serum for the treatment of diabetes. Canada built and demonstrated the first compound steam engine in the history of the world. The effect of this invention was the doom of the sailing ship as a factor in ocean commerce."

SAVING US FROM OURSELVES.

Speaking before one of the round table groups of the Liberal Summer School at Port Hope, Mr. J. C. McRuer, of Toronto, said that despite the experiences of 1929 there are no adequate measures for the public's protection against repetition of stock manipulation. He advocated Government inspection of the books of licensed brokers.

This looks like one of those suggestions that most of us think we believe in, but don't.

We are not so sure that certain fairly competent measures don't exist to safeguard the public against stock frauds. There is, for example, the Security Frauds Prevention Act. But, assuming the position to be as Mr. McRuer represents it, and that we aren't protected, do we really want to be protected?

One answer is what took place a month or two back.

We had all vowed, three years ago, that never, never again would we "get caught" in the stock market. Wisdom had come to us. We had been taught by bitter adversity that, buying stocks, and especially on margin, the "little fellow" didn't have a chance, that what with one thing and another influencing stocks this way and that, a man might just as well go out and put his money on a horse race.

Yet what happened.

What happened was that as soon as the stock market showed signs of coming back a good many of us couldn't get to a broker's office fast enough to start buying stocks again, and on margin. We hadn't learned anything at all.

Either that, or the human propensity to "take one more chance," to buy hope, proved stronger than our wisdom. Actually, we didn't want anybody to be protecting us, or to be telling us that such-and-such a stock couldn't justify its price, or that we'd be wiser to buy a bond. If we had felt that way, we should have gone to some banker, or to some conservative investor. But we preferred to gamble.

The truth is that this is how most of us feel about the majority of the proposals concerned with keeping us safe. Down in our hearts we don't like the idea of a lot of laws and bureaucrats keeping us on the straight and narrow path. We prefer to live a bit dangerously, to have an occasional "fling," so to speak, to depend somewhat on luck. It's like a man who tries to pitch over a tree for a birdie when he might have a sure par by playing out safely on the fairway.

Regarding Mr. McRuer's particular proposal, we doubt very much whether it is the task of a Government to make itself responsible for investors, to have armies of inspectors going about looking at brokers' books. That sort of thing, trying to make life fool-proof, can grow to be terribly expensive, also a terrible nuisance.

Some day, in a perfect world, with society orderly in everything, we may have armies of guardians, and grow to like them. With things as they are, and most of us wanting to be let alone to humor our whims, protection is the last thing we look for. —Ottawa Journal.

VACATION ESCAPADE

By ARTHUR SHUMWAY

CHAPTER 22.

It was when he stepped up to the engine room hatch to get a little fresh air that Ted Chandler heard Sally's voice. What he heard was an agonized scream that rose above the throb of the engine room, the wail of the jazz music and the laughter of the party. It was not a loud scream, but it was piercing and desperate, and unmistakably the voice was Sally's. Without stopping to think, Ted started up the ladder. But even as he sprang forward he checked himself. He jumped down, looked quickly in all directions, snatched up a heavy wrench and gripped it tightly in his hand as he started again.

The scream seemed to have come from nowhere in particular. Locating its source would be especially hard, he realized, because of the confusion of noises on the boat and because of the fact that another attempt to scream might be stifled. Ted raced from one end of the boat to the other, looked into the cabin as he went by, but saw no sign of Sally. Then he began a frantic, but methodical search below decks. It was then that he came to the stateroom. At its door he stopped to listen. There was a sound of scuffling. Ted clenched his teeth and gripped the wrench as he threw open the door.

The door struck something solid that gave momentary resistance, then relaxed, and Ted stumbled headlong into the little compartment and fell to his knees. He looked up dazedly in time to catch a glimpse of Sally's dress and Sally's heels as she darted through the door. Then he saw Gus Vitelli. Instinctively, Ted knew what had happened. The door had struck them when he threw it open, breaking Vitelli's hold and giving Sally a chance to escape.

Ted jumped up and faced Vitelli. The ugly little man was smiling, a smile in which there was no mirth but a combination of idiocy and viciousness. Ted drew back his right arm to send the wrench crashing into that old gargoyle face. He lunged forward, bringing the wrench down in a vicious blow. That blow never landed. Vitelli's leg swung up with bewildering speed and his foot caught Ted in the pit of the stomach. The next Ted knew he was writhing on the floor, gasping for breath. Bracing himself on one arm, he looked up. Vitelli was gone.

With a desperate effort Ted managed to stand. He lurched across the compartment, steadied himself on the first object that came to his hand, a chair, and struggled to overcome the gone, nauseous feeling in his body. He stood there perhaps 30 seconds, then plunged forward and listened. There was no sound except the engine's. Goading himself to action, and gasping hard for his last strength, he started up the ladder without stopping for the fallen wrench.

On deck, he looked quickly forward, then aft, and caught a glimpse of struggling figures. He raced toward the stern. Vitelli saw him coming. As Ted drew near he saw that the old gangster had Sally in his arms. Guessing about to meet the young man's furious rush, Vitelli flung Sally to one side. Ted's right fist, sweeping forward in a vicious arc, came up and caught Vitelli on the cheek, crushing him back against the rail. The impact served merely as propulsion for Vitelli. He came flying forward as if catapulted and his foot rose again, this time catching Ted a sickening blow on the hip bone. Ted fell back upon the deck, Vitelli with him.

Ted was the first to get to his feet. He shook his head to clear away the numbing fog of the shock, then poised himself on his toes ready to smash Vitelli back to the deck if the man rose. But Vitelli did not rise. Ted looked down upon him and saw a sight that turned his knees to soft dough. Blood trickling from the corner of his leering mouth, Vitelli was smiling again, his yellow teeth stained with red. In his right hand, pointed at Ted's stomach was a revolver.

"Stand still!" Vitelli ordered in his grating voice. "You asked for it. I'm going to give you a couple in the guts. So you'll have a couple of days to think about me before you kick off." He made a little noise, half snarl, half laugh.

Ted knew there was only one thing to do—to throw himself onto Vitelli and pray the bullet would miss. He was tensed for the lunge.

"Drop that rod!"

Vitelli's head darted quickly like a snake's. It was Ted's chance. He shot forward and crashed upon the snarled little man, one hand on the gun, the other on Vitelli's throat. Vitelli struggled with an amazing strength. The gun barked and Ted felt a scalding heat on his left cheek. But he tightened his hold on the kicking, squirming Vitelli's throat. The gun barked again, then dropped dully to the deck. Ted rose, bringing Vitelli with him by the throat. He looked up to see Fred Proctor standing above them, smiling, but only with his thin mouth and razor-edge blue-black line of mustache.

"Got you, Chandler?" he asked in a surprisingly casual voice.

"Took the hide off my cheek, I guess," panted Ted.

"Give him here," Proctor said with deadly pleasantness.

Ted shoved Vitelli toward Proctor. He noticed then that in Proctor's hand was another pistol, blunt, menacing, as steady and sure as if held by a vise.

Proctor shifted the gun to his left hand, keeping it trained on Vitelli.

"Well . . . Gus," he said. With staggering suddenness his right hand swept up into Vitelli's unprotected face. The blow sent the man to the deck. Proctor stepped over him, paused, looked up at Ted with that cruel smile and said, "What seemed to be the trouble, Chandler?"

"I heard a scream," Ted replied. "I knew it was Sally. And then I found this rat with her down below. She got away when I broke the door open and he kicked me one in the stomach. I chased after them and found him here ——" Ted's voice took on a bitter edge, "pawing her." He turned for corroboration from Sally.

As Ted turned, Proctor chuckled. "So you knew it was Sally?" he said.

"Good Lord!" Ted exclaimed.

"Matter, Chandler?"

Ted pointed toward the rail. Sally was gone. And a strip of her dress fluttered plaintively, futilely, in the chilly night air as the boat moved steadily southward over the black water of the river channel. Ted looked over the stern at the swift, boiling white water of the wake, phosphorescent in the moonlight. What if she had been caught in the propeller, he thought, and shuddered inwardly.

Proctor, dragging Gus Vitelli by the collar, was at his side. His casualness was gone now; in its place was a crisp, cold air of command.

"She's overboard," he barked.

Ted nodded. He whirled toward Vitelli. "This rat pushed her," he gritted. "He pushed her when he saw me coming. She must have hit the rail and fallen over." Ted lost control. He lunged at Vitelli, but Proctor swung the man aside out of his reach.

"I'll take care of this fellow, Chandler," Proctor said. He raised his fist and sent it in a short, jabbing blow, not six inches in length, to Vitelli's blood-smeared jaw. Ted blinked at the surprising force of the blow. It snapped Vitelli's head back as if it had broken his neck. Proctor threw the unconscious man to the deck, kicked him toward the hatch and out from under foot as he might have kicked a sack of rags.

Without a word Proctor ran forward. Ted, giving one more despairing look at the churning white water, clenched his hands into fists and followed him. "Put about," Proctor ordered the pilot. The pilot reached for the little brass lever and almost instantly Ted felt the boat slow down, throb, then swing to starboard.

Proctor clambered up to the large searchlight and trained it over the bow. He threw the switch and the white beam flashed the darkness like a bolt of lightning. As the yacht turned about and headed back over its course Proctor swept the light back and forth over the water.

Ted felt thick, strong fingers tighten on his heart, hard fists clench in his chest. He looked up at Proctor. "If she's drowned ——" he said. He did not finish the sentence; he merely clamped his teeth together and drew a deep breath.

"Take a boat and a flashlight," Proctor commanded. "Get one of the sailors to row you."

Ted raced off without a word, gritting his teeth and clenching his sweaty hands until the nails drew blood from the palms.

He got Whitey Williams, the tough little sailor who had been a prize fighter, and together they lowered a boat and set out. Ted in the bow sweeping the water with the ship, powerful beam of his flashlight.

He reflected bitterly that the others, the guests in the cabin, were wildly laughing and shouting perhaps in the penumbra of death.

Ted felt like killing himself. But as the thought seared through his mind he realized that it was Vitelli he wanted to kill, ugly, lecherous, murderous old Vitelli who had pawed at the girl, clasped her in his filthy arms, and had pushed her, flung her, sent her stumbling overboard into the river, probably to her death.

ALL OF US

YOU DON'T HAVE TO LIKE IT!

You don't need to like everything. You don't even need to pretend that you do. . . Some things you can dislike heartily. Other things you can be indifferent about. Some things leave you cold. You can't get excited about everything in life—and why should you? . . . I'm quite well acquainted with one fellow who is indifferent to:

Getting up early in the morning. (Between a cold dawn and a warm bed there's practically no choice.)

Smoking a pipe. (Some men enjoy it, but why should I?)

Any admiration for anybody's collection of first editions of books. (I like a book you can replace when you lose it, or when somebody borrows it and doesn't bring it back.)

That superstition about eating cherries and drinking milk.

Making a speech. (Or listening to nearly any speech.)

Wrong phone numbers in the middle of the night or at any other time. (From people who don't apologize.)

Watermelon . . . Fish . . . Tea.

Having anything read aloud to me.

Grand opera. (Just a low-brow, that's all.)

Gushing women, irascible men.

Long, hard hikes to the tops of high, stony mountains. (Looking up is just as much fun as looking down.)

Being asked to admire other people's gardens.

The clear piping song of one mosquito in the darkness. (Only worse thing I know is a night-raiding bomber flying overhead, and you trying to sleep beneath an automobile, wondering when he is going to release those bombs and why doesn't he and have it over with?)

Hot weather.

Getting used to the routine again after you've been on a vacation. (But after a day or so you get used to even that.)

A Thought

AN ENDLESS BELT

"Life insurance is an endless belt, moving in the same direction you are going. Each year you put your premium on this belt and see it moving away from you. But because it is an endless belt, it comes right back to you and catches up with you at the moment you need it most—just when you need the money more than you ever needed money in your life. Paying for life insurance isn't spending money. It's putting money on an endless belt to come back to you again."

ON THIS DATE

A DAY IN CANADIAN HISTORY

By Fred Williams

THE VICTOR OF QUEBEC.

On this date in 1759, the destiny of Canada was decided by British arms on the Plains of Abraham. There is no need to tell the details of the battle; it is in your histories; but I venture to recall that incidents about James Wolfe, the victor who died on the field. The legend that Wolfe recited a verse or two from Gray's "Elegey" on the battle morn (long since discounted, but still believed by many) has a companion in the tradition that the night before the battle Wolf sang at the regimental mess the song, "How Stands the Glass Around," one verse of which runs:

Think of renown,
Before you go to fight, my boys,
Think of renown;
Likewise the British Crown;
That you may go down to your graves, my boys,
In the cold ground.
So never frown
But take a glass, a smiling glass
Of good liquor around.

According to Dr. J. Clarence Webster's "Wolfiana" (a most fascinating collection of facts and gossip about the victor of Quebec) both words and music are of older date; in fact, on the authority of Sir Henry Bishop, the words appeared in print in 1710, years before Wolfe was born. The music so closely resembles the tune of an early 18th century song, "Why, Soldiers, Why," that it was probable that the latter air was merely altered to suit the metre of the other composition.

That Wolfe sang the song the night before the battle is doubted by Dr. Webster. Certainly during the evening he was engaged in making preparation for the battle and arranging his private affairs making a codicil to his will and giving to John Jervis his treasured miniature of Miss Lowther (his much beloved) with instructions to deliver it to her in the event of his death. Yet Dr. Webster has in his collection a musical work published in London soon after the battle entitled "Siege of Quebec," a sonata for the harpsichord or pianoforte with accompaniments for violin, violoncello and tymphane ad libitum; composed by W. B. Krifft; "Dedicated to the Officers, Etc., engaged in that glorious service, September 13, 1759."

The first item of this is the music of "How Stands the Glass Around," which is stated to be a favorite song of General Wolfe and "sung the evening before the engagement in which he was killed." Then follows a description in music of the various stages of the battle. It is, therefore, quite certain that the association of Wolfe with the song was believed very soon after his death. It is, of course, possible that he may have taken part in the singing at the mess before "arranging his affairs."

One of the most remarkable tributes to Wolfe from his contemporaries was published in the Newcastle Courant on October 27, 1759:

Hoc ultimum opus virtutis edens in victoria coesus.

To the highest military merit undoubtedly belongs the highest applause, but setting aside the froth of panegyrick,

Who formed the 20th Regiment of Foot, exemplary on the field of Minden, by practising what was familiar to them?

Who at Rochefort offered to make a good landing, not asking how many were the French, but "Where are they?"

Who, second in command, was second to none in those laborious dangers which reduced Louisbourg?

Who wrote like Caesar from before Quebec?

Who, like Epaminondas, died in Victory?

Who never gave his country cause of complaint, except by his death?

Who bequeathed Canada as a triumphant legacy?

Proclaim, 'twas Wolfe!

Wolfe had a broad vision of Canada. Writing to his mother just after the capture of Louisbourg, he said:

"North America will some time hence be a vast empire—the seat of power and learning. There will grow a people out of our little spot, England, that will fill this vast space and divide this great portion of the globe with the Spaniard, who is possessed of the other half.

Character From Handwriting

By BLANCHE A. DRAPER

A Feature Conducted by Peterborough's Leading Handwriting Analyist for the Readers of The Examiner.

D. C. Wellman, General Delivery, Peterborough, Ontario: The handwriting as outlined on your sample for analysis describes you as a most genial person. You are fond of fun, yet energetic and persevering, giving the best of your mental and physical powers to any project worthy of the undertaking. Your imagination is exceptionally keen, and should assist you in a material way by permitting you to create new ideas for the betterment of business. Your capital letters suggest an artistic tendency. The long expressive crossing of your 't' bars is a sign of well developed will-power and should be of much benefit to you in the career which you have chosen. Your disposition is fairly even but you are quite likely to 'fly off the handle' if things in general do not materialize in the manner in which you expect them to. You are generous and sympathetic but know where to draw the line in order not to let your friends 'play' upon your sympathy. The general outline of your writing reflects a talent towards something in an advertising line.

Isobel C. Mackay, 540 Downie St., Peterborough, Ontario: The handwriting on your card for analysis shows that you are fair-minded, and do not judge people too harshly. You prefer to give people the benefit of the doubt at all times rather than incur displeasure or cause strife. You carry yourself with an air of individuality. You move quickly as though you only had just so much time at your disposal in which to arrive. You think rather too quickly some times and so have to retract in order to arrive at a more correct and definite conclusion. You are a diligent worker, and have many brilliant ideas, but you appear to be a little afraid to express yourself sometimes. At present you have the outlines of one who could impart knowledge in a designing field, or take up a career in the nursing profession or teaching in a general sense. Your capitals show intuition and artistic ability. Your loops and flourishes indicate that you are susceptible to flattery and desire to receive a certain amount of praise. The long loops above and below the line suggest imagination and leadership.

Emily Sadler, 220 Dublin Street, Peterborough, Ontario: Your handwriting as delineated on sample for analysis shows that you are willing to learn as much as you possibly can, but that you are quite undecided and need encouragement and assistance if you are to do the things which you really desire to do. You have courage and determination, but I think that you are rather inclined to put off doing the things you should do because of a natural reticence or shyness. You can overcome this characteristic if you just set your mind to it, but constant study and by knowing in your heart that you have the knowledge required for the undertaking in view. Knowing one has the necessary knowledge is the biggest asset in a successful career.

M. S., Fraserville, Ontario:

The handwriting as delineated on your sample for analysis shows that you are temperamental and nervous. You rush headlong into propositions without first stopping to think over every side of the situation, then you often have occasion to be sorry for your haste. Your capital letters denote generosity, and this characteristic also leads you astray, because you overdo it, to your own detriment. The manner in which your letters seem to fall unevenly forward reflects your versatile nature. Your feelings are easily hurt and you readily lose patience. However, the real you is excitable, loving and kindhearted. You are jolly, humorous, sypathetic, diligent and accomplish much in a day to make others happy.

S. F., Fraserville, Ontario:

The handwriting as delineated on your sample for analysis reveals many worth-while characteristics. It shows that as you become more mature, you will be able to act on your own initiative, and use good common sense and judgment. Your will-power will develop to a normal extent as you become decided in your ambitions. At present you seem to be at loose ends. Unsettled and wondering what to do next. The best possible thing for you to do is 'study.' You have a leaning for chemistry. Make the most of it.

W. R., Water Street, City:

The handwriting as delineated on this sample for analysis depicts an individual with most decided characteristics. You have the brain of a thinker, and should be able to manage an executive position with circumspectness and thorough perceptions. The blunt, thick terminals show a little temper and stubbornness. This, however, is rather essential to one of your type because it gives you the necessary ability to command attention in the business world. Some of the letter formations at the terminal are hooked, this tells of a persistent tenacious characteristic, and should assist you in a material manner if handling large sums of money; incidentally, the handling of money is most gratifying to you and it stimulates your mental capacity. You have plenty of will-power and seem to like to have much authority, because you are keen, exacting and serious. Your writing, which runs very close to the line and is neat and compact, shows that your mind is usually preoccupied with material thoughts. So I take this opportunity to suggest that you take up work requiring deep thought and the ability for figures.

WAINMAN'S PHEASANT EXHIBIT IS DRAWING MERITED ATTENTION

WORTH $600

An exhibit which is attracting much merited attention at the Fair this year, is an aviary of pheasants entered in non-competitive display by Bert Wainman, local jeweler.

To his many friends, possibly not to those who are more intimate, Mr. Wainman has offered something in the nature of a surprise by appearing in the role of the largest fancier in this district, of pheasants. He is not new to this branch of the poultry showworld however, having had previous experience with these birds when he resided in Ottawa district.

Mr. Wainman told The Examiner he was rearing pheasants as a hobby. He hoped that he would be able to convert it into a profitable hobby. There seems to be little reason why he should not do so. He has a remarkably fine stock of pheasants, amounting in all to about fifty birds. Only half of them are represented in the display he has housed in special pens on the north side of the poultry building, but they are attracting widespread interest and favorable comment.

There are nine varieties of pheasants on exhibit, and one pen of Japanese Silkies. The silkies are utilized by pheasant fanciers, it was explained by George Paxman, noted local poultry breeder, for hatching eggs. The plumage (from which the name Silkie was derived) resembles fur. It is snow white. The feathers being webless, render the birds unable to fly. Covered by a large crest and beard, the blue beak of the Silkie is almost invisible. The peculiarity of these birds is the color of the skin, which is leaden blue. They are of the Cochin type but larger in size.

Among the nine varieties of pheasants which Mr. Wainman has on show are: Mongolians, Goldens, Chinese Blacknecks, Lady Amherst, Swinhoe, Brown Eared Manchurian, Reeves, Versicolor and Silvers.

Of the pair of Reeves, which Mr. Wainman is showing, the male bird has been newly shipped in to replace one of the birds that broke its neck by becoming entangled in the wire netting earlier this week.

A Costly Exhibit

The pair of Manchurian Pheasants on show are valued at $300; while the trio of Swinhoes are worth $150. In all it is estimated there is an investment of $600 or over represented in the exhibit.

Mr. Wainman revealed some of the secrets of pheasant breeding, stating that the Swinhoes have to be reared in trios. If one of the two hens should die the male bird would kill the surviving female, he stated.

Another peculiarity is that some of the varieties get their plumage six months after hatching, while other varieties notably the Swinhoes, Lady Amherst and Goldens take two years to get their plumage. Manchurian Eared Pheasant eggs are nine dollars each.

Some of the birds in the show are noted for their beautiful plumage and the question is often being heard, "Which do you like the best, the Lady Amherst or the Golden pheasant." The latter is invariably the choice of the ladies, Mr Wainman stated, but it is a hard question to answer as the male of both species are very beautiful birds.

The Lady Amherst male has short dark green feathers over his head. The crest which begins at the base of the head is deep crimson, the shawl is white and black, and is certainly a thing of beauty when opened up for display to the female.

The Golden Pheasant has a massive golden crest, orange and blue-black shawl, deep crimson neck and body, brown and blue wings, golden rump, green saddle, brown and black tail with crimson feathers on each side of the base of the tail. With its gaudy plumage the Golden pheasant is popularly considered to be the most beautiful of the brightly colored birds in captivity.

DECORATION DAY HELD BY MADOC ODDFELLOWS

MADOC, Sept. 12 (Examiner Correspondence)—The annual decoration day service of the Madoc Oddfellows and Rebekahs was held on Sunday afternoon, Sept. 10. The parade was formed from the lodge room on Durham Street, and led by the Military Band of Prince Edward and Hastings Counties, went to the United Church, where Rev. G. W. Rivers preached an impressive sermon from the text, "Bear ye one another's burdens."

After the service, the procession reformed, visiting first the Cenotaph, and afterwards to the Lakeview cemetery, where the graves of deceased members were decorated and an inspiring service of remembrance was conducted by the officers and suitable music of processional hymn tunes was furnished by the band. Owing to the cool afternoon, the visiting crowd was smaller than usual. Beautiful flowers were carried by each of the members in procession and were laid upon the graves to be decorated.

EXPANSION BY LOCAL FIRM

Visualizes Improved Economic Conditions—Has Faith in Peterboro's Future.

A GROWING BUSINESS.

Established in 1908 at 374 George street, McWilliams & Company have enjoyed 25 years' unbroken record in the same premises for better grade—and in some lines, exclusive merchandise. Opening up originally as furriers, they in 1917 supplemented their fur goods with makes of hats favored by men of good taste, featuring Borsalino and Mack products, and recently they introduced the newly invented weather-resisting felt hat for men — a hat that can be worn in the rain without suffering any material damage from a drenching. Retailing fur goods was discarded in 1929.

Men's Furnishings

In the Spring of 1932, the enterprise of this substantial business house was strikingly marked by the addition of an up-to-the hour men's' furnishings department, in which is carried men's Monarch knit hose and sweaters; Forsyth shirts, pyjamas and neckwear, together with Penman's underwear—all first grade dependable merchandise much favored by men who dress well.

High Grade Clothing

And now we come to the Spring of 1933, when McWilliams & Company further expanded by installing a complete line of Shifter-Hillman's outer clothing for men—suits for all occasions, overcoats and topcoats—all garments that are built to please the most exacting patron. In this department are also featured a wide range of odd trousers, a line of merchandise much in demand these days.

Even the boys are not forgotten by this progressive store, where attractive lines—in price as well as quality—of pants, sweaters, hose and furnishings are to be found.

More Servicing Room

These periodical expansions, however, reached a climax the other week, when the store's capacity was found to be overtaxed and not permitting of advantageous display and service. But this congestion has been overcome by taking in 20 x15 feet of floor area at the rear—used as a wash and storage room—and converting it into a men's clothing department modernly equipped for the care and servicing of garments. So here is now a bright, cheerful and admirably appointed annex, which is highly appreciated by patrons and valued for its service adaptability.

Such in brief is the history of one of Peterborough's oldest business houses, whose operators' confidence in Canada's and this city's future is unshaken by depression; and who, facing the future unafraid, make no inconsiderable investment in trade expansion and store alterations.

McWilliams & Company is controlled by Messrs Keith and Cyril Lech.

HYDRO HAS PROTEST.

LINDSAY, Sept. 13.—(Examiner Correspondence.) — Reports from Haliburton and the northern part of Victoria County are to the effect that Monday night's severe frost in that district completely destroyed the potato crop. Milk in cans froze to the thickness of an eighth of an inch near Minden. Further reports from the district around Lindsay state that the buckwheat in the flats also suffered severely.

Whether to give needy local people relief or provide municipal work for them to do is a problem which the town council will grapple with at a special session this week

Forced into the ditch on No. 7 highway, west of the town on Monday, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Grylls, of Toronto, sustained a severe shock together with body bruises. The car turned completely over and was badly damaged.

HAVELOCK HALL TO BE REROOFED

Council Also Decides to Put in New Heating System and Make Repairs.

WILL ISSUE DEBENTURES.

HAVELOCK, September 13 (Examiner Correspondence). — The regular meeting of the Village Council was held in the Council Chambers on Monday evening with all members present, and Reeve Ernest Leeson presiding.

A letter from Peck, Kerr & McElderry acknowledged cheque from the village for $46.20, being account in full to date. Cheques for $133.07, $295.30, and $308.23 were received from the Provincial Relief Board as its share of direct relief for three months last spring.

George Hubble of E. S. Hubble & Son was present and waited on the Council in connection with his tender for a new steam heating plant for the Town Hall. Mr. Fletcher of the James Morrison Brass Company was present with estimates for the new heating plant, which he said were only slightly more than the cost of a hot air heating system. He described the proposed installation very thoroughly and had blue prints of the hall on hand. It was decided to leave the matter over until estimates had been received from others interested in the undertaking.

John Leask asked the Council to build a road from Ottawa Street to the road for his new scales. On motion of Seeney and Gordon the Council decided to have the road finished.

Under the heading of unfinished business, the matter of the town's liability in the matter of Shirley Hutchison's injury on the Town Hall Hill came up for discussion. The insurance company carrying the town's public liability insurance has ignored all letters and seem to be dodging the issue. After some time it was decided to write the Municipal World as to the village's position in the case.

On motion of Councillors Seeney and Gordon, an extensive building program will be carried out. A new heating system will be installed the furnace room altered new roof put on the hall and belfry flush closets installed and possibly a vau't constructed for the village books, etc. In all these undertakings local labor will be employed wherever possible. Debentures will be issued to take care of the expenditure. On motion it was decided to call for local tenders for supplying the material for the new asphalt roof for the Town Hall.

On motion of Seeney and Spencer, Mr. Murphy's attention was drawn to th stump fence on his property which obstructs the view at the east end of the village, near No 7 Highway.

After pondering over the large amount of uncollected taxes for a long time it was decided on motion that the clerk notify all property owners in arrears three years or more, including 1933, if not paid before September 30 next, the Reeve has been authorized to issue a warrant for the sale of same to satisfy taxes.

FUTURE OF SOVIET DEPENDS ON SUCCESSFUL HARVESTING

facing a lot of opposition in the form of sabotage. The number of railway wrecks has increased alarmingly. Every instance of accident that we investigated last month was due to the wilful destruction of the lines."

"Who is doing this?" I asked.

"Class enemies," he replied.

"What do you mean by class enemies?"

"I mean koulaks and dissatisfied peasants. The koulaks, or richar peasants, have been expropriated. They have been roughly dealt with. We transferred many of them to Archangelsk, to the timber-lands. Others were shipped off to Siberia. Many stayed behind. They did not openly combat us, but they have such a strong influence upon the mass of the poorer-peasants that the whole rural Ukraine became the scene last winter of a most bitter phase in the class struggle. There is no question but the Ukraine is the most reactionary region in the Union to-day.

"Besides the well-known causes of drought and a bad crop last year, the peasants of the Ukraine have not taken kindly to the collective farm idea. They don't understand its advantages and the whispering campaign of the koulaks in their midst has confused their minds even more. A successful harvest would bring an end both to opposition to the collective farms and to the hidden prestige of the koulaks. And that is why we are so anxious that the whole crop shall be harvested and that we have not hesitated to close the factories for a few weeks."

Farmers Are Hard Hit.

The foregoing is not an official statement, of course. It is given me in a more or less confidential manner. Yet I think it ought to be reproduced in order to show the serious difficulties confronting the regime. Stalin is a man of iron and steel, as his name implies. He has forced collectivization through in a few years time, preferring no doubt to impose it with one powerful wrench of the social life to years of adaptation and a gradual transformation. It cannot be denied that it has given rise to much hardship and suffering.

But then, say the Bolsheviks, in the end Stalin's agricultural policy will be far more successful than the old methods. His procedure is correct. The collectivization of agriculture is said to be the first step on the road to peasant participation in the classless society of the future. At the close of the Second Five-Year Plan, now in operation, the classless society will have been born, it is said. It means that there will no longer be any distinctions between peasants and industrial workers and the intelligentsia, but there will be in Stalin's own words, "a classless society of toilers." The nobles and the middle classes have been completely eliminated long ago, of course.

Ukraine Still Opposes.

To this end the comforts of modern life are to be brought to the rural regions, not merely the little amenities of life such as radio and telephone and newspaper, but all the institutions of culture and art and learning, which the Russian cities already possess in so abundant a measure and which they are constantly widening and enlarging. On the whole the peasant masses have seen the point of collectivization, as is shown by the fact that 70 per cent. of the total agricultural domain in the Soviet Union is operating under the new system. "It is one of the greatest things accomplished in this century," an English agronomical expert told me upon his return to Moscow from a two months' study of the collective farms.

The Ukraine is an exception and so is the North Caucasus. It is curious to note that in both these regions the civil war lasted longest, by which I mean to say that a broad majority of the rural population was least inclined to abandon its hostility to the Soviet Government. It is obvious that prosperity will finally break down this sullen opposition. That is why the present period, with the fate of the harvest hanging in the balance, is so decisive and of such vital importance to the Soviet Union as a whole.

drawal of the charge. A feature was the specific corroboration by Inspector Greenwood, in charge of motorcycle men, of Anderson's evidence. Anderson told and Greenwood corroborated, that he had not only not recommended withdrawal of the charge, but had expressly warned Chief Draper that 'this man is a prisoner, on bail; and none but a magistrate can dispose of the case.' He attested that Chief Draper's reply was, "Give back the bail and withdraw the charge."

MAIN BUILDING AT EXHIBITION HAS BIG DISPLAY

Lambert Castle Motor Head One of Big Features in This Building.

LADIES' WORK.

"Heal all" seems like a strange name for a pestiferous weed. But, along with "tumbling mustard" and "stinking mayweed" and "Lady's thumb," and their ilk, it has a place in the group of noxious weeds that are displayed in the Main Building at the Exhibition grounds. At least, their seeds are displayed, in little neat glass phials, and, on the wall behind are colored charts showing just how deceptively nice these bad plants can look, all the time they are conspiring to destroy a man's crop and drive out the beneficent growths.

This display, highly educational and instructive, is in charge of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, and has a title poster that says: "Destroy weeds when it is hot and dry." There are weed bulletins to be had here and the charts show pictures of such well-known pests as the sow thistle or "Yellow peril", chicory, water hemlock, wild carrot, milkweed, and the "king devil."

Against the wall which harbors this display, in the lower section of the Main Building, are its companions. One is the demonstration of the Lambert-Castle motor head, a product of the inventine genius of J. Everett Castle, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Henry Castle of 572 Romaine street.

This demonstration, because of the widespread interest taken in the invention and the manner in which it has received enthusiastic acclaim both in Canada and the United States, is extremely interesting. The section is equipped with a pully, belt and electric motor, and the demonstration is gathering crowds at all hours.

Beside it is a new idea in electrical elements, in which the Kingan Hardware Company shows elements of different sizes to fit any stove, also electric heaters for bath-room and garage use.

'Sighted' Hands

A display of the pathetically care-ful and extraordinarily well-done work of the people of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, has a place here also. There are pretty reed baskets in bronze, green and rose, flower-holders and waste-paper baskets and jardiniere stands, also work aprons done on an electric sewing-machine by these sightless workers with their 'seeing' hands, and an exhibit of little novelties; leather cushions and billfolds and pen wipers and coin purses.

L. Warren, local dealer for the Master oil burner, demonstrates the benefits to householders of this device, which has a blue flame to its outer sleeve, thus giving, it is claimed, twenty-five per cent more heat to the water front and oven.

The Singer Sewing Machine Company's exhibit is attractively displayed in a living-room setting. Here a lady demonstrates the newest idea in sewing-machine genius; the Singercraft work, by which it is possible to work on these machines such things as mats and cushion tops and apron edgings.

Oil burning equipment, which is attracting so much attention just now, is displayed in the section taken by the Robert Simpson Company, where "Silent Glow" equipment of this type is on view, as well as "Serenader" radios and "Easy" washing-machines. The washer and oil-burner take the sting out of the wash day for Mrs. Jones and out of the furnace work for the Mister, while the radio serenades them for their foresight.

The Beatty Washer Store shows the new vacuum cleaner which is making its bow to Peterborough after an initial appearance at the Toronto Exhibition, also an electric ironer for which it is claimed that it work four times as rapidly as the ordinary hand-iron. A combined polisher and waxer is another item in this booth.

A couple of enterprising young men sell a perfume called "wild verbena or sand flower," and a third deals in novelties at a tiny stand.

An overflow from the competitive exhibits of the Fair is on view on this floor, where preserved fruits and vegetables make a delicious-looking display.

The Busy Bee

And another notable display is that of honey entered for competition. The four grades into which the product is divided in these days when that beautiful basswood honey of old is no longer recognised as a standard, are white, golden, amber and dark (the last is the color of maple syrup), and they are grouped together in the new long standard clear glasses used for display purposes.

Then there are combs and bees splaying their prowess. The great Bonaparte, it is said, took the bee as his emblem and caused his Imperial robes of state to be heavily embroidered with the golden emblem. One wonders why he chose these foolish things, which work so hard for men to profit by their despoilment. Perhaps the other legend is more truthful, the one that declares Napoleon admired the bee symbol because it was the emblem of a great Florentine family of mediaval splendor.

Billy Webb of Water street has a small but interesting corner showing of wood-turning. Carefully and finely constructed and finished are these smoothly-surfaced chairs and little tables and kitchen cabinets with nice little glass knob and pretty painted exteriors.

Feminine Work

In the upper floor of the Main Building is the Women's section, always a popular center, its patrons including many a 'mere' man, who appears to gravitate usually to the baking section. Yesterday, there was more than one little boy who looked in at the pies and cakes and said they made him 'hungry,' with a real and enthusiastic emphasis that was much more flattering than the smoother adjectives of the ladies who viewed them.

'Y' posters decorate the stairs going up to this room, where feminine handicraft, both useful and ornamental, is on view. Miss Mary Elliott and Miss E. Higgins are in charge, and say this year's showing has a much greater quantity of fancy work and cooking, with excellence in all departments.

The section devoted to the work of ladies over seventy-five years of age, is notable, and eight of the schools of the city, under auspices of their Home and School Associations, have work on view which it is hoped to enter into competition next year.

The quilts, in particular, are outstanding items in the handiwork displayed. There is a new Yo-yo quilt, named after the children's toy for no perceptible reason It has a fancy work, cutout effect that led one elderly male onlooker to remark that "it wouldn't even keep the mosquitoes out." But, nevertheless, it represents a great deal of work and is highly ornamental. Then there is the old reliable "Rising Sun" with black and gold and crimson rays. And the "Fan" pattern, with fan shapes in colored pieces applied on a white ground.

There are rugs in braided, hooked and crocheted designs, some brilliantly colored and others of demure, Quaker effect in cool greens and greys.

Dainty Wares

There are lovely spreads with embroidered and appliqued and filet-lace embellishings, and one, of mauve rayon silk, has an elaborate adornment in a basket of beautifully-colored silk flowers.

Embroidered bed and table linens are another item in the display, with aprons and little house dresses and novelties like beaded bags and silk slumber pillows and hassocks with grospoint flowers.

An exquisite thing, too nice to think of wearing, is a crocheted bed jacket in white wool circles with edging of rose pink circles and rose pink ribbons.

There are dainty babies' things in soft wools and useful woollen socks for men; there are luncheon and tea sets in pure white linen, with Madeira and cutwork embroideries. One beautiful set of pillow cases in white linen has edges outlined in pink roses and green leaves.

Special displays, for special prizes, include ornamental things such as taffeta boudoir cushions, exquisitely worked lace d'oylies, and novelties like a fan-shaped cushion, its top entirely covered with fan-stick sections in brightly colored wools.

Tied and dyed work, examples of crewel work and lovely bits of tatting, are on view in these special displays, also a number of gay cushions, one developed in taffeta, its top covered with whorls of alternate rose and soft green, and another, round and fat, made of crocheted wool in spectrum rays of green, orange and yellow.

The work done by ladies of seventy-five years and over is exceptionally good, with the above-mentioned pretty cushions in this section, also softly-worked and colored embroideries, woollen things, and pieced quilts.

As the painting was not in place, it was impossible to see much of it, but the upper specimens in the piles of pictures appeared to be fully up to the standard of other seasons.

Junior Work

The showing of work done by pupils of the Manual Training classes illustrated some new things which exhibited a more useful type of article than the somewhat ornamental woodwork displayed in years past. There were stands and little tables of many types, sewing cabinets, baskets, ash trays, a miniature hope chest and a very convenient little stand with a checker board top. There were quite a few aeroplanes, a little ash tray balanced on the angry curved tail of an infuriated black cat, and several interesting shields with fleur-de-lis and maple leave emblems.

There was one unique little showing of block printing with potato and some very gaily colored and finely-executed art work by pupils of the various schools.

The cooking, as remarked, was delicious-looking in the extreme, with a great quantity on view of the product of housewifely hands. In the old Saxon, it seems, "lady" meant "she who cuts the loaf," so many ladies helped to make this interesting and worth-while display. There were iced and plain cakes, biscuits and muffins and tarts and cookies and loaves of crusty bread.

Market Closing On All Exchanges

TORONTO EXCHANGE

TORONTO, Sept. 13 (CP)—Canada Bud Breweries was taken in large blocks at advancing prices, and the whole list of beverage shares closed higher on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. Interest in the distillery stocks eased up when New York closed at noon, but buying continued heavy in the beer shares. The general tone was good at the close.

TECK HUGHES

Interesting developments again are unofficially reported from the north in connection with deep mining operations at Teck Hughes Mines in the Kirkland Lake Camp. A wire received yesterday stated that work on the 42nd level has opened up good ore conditions which compare favorably with those on the 41st level. While no assay figures accompanied the statement, interests recently returned from the field state that sections running $12 to $30 per ton are being opened up on the bottom workings. The south shaft extension has stopped at the 450th level, from which point a cross cut will be run to intercept the ore, expected to be picked up within about 300 feet. It is understood that the management will proceed to open up the new levels from the 40th to the 450th before taking the shaft deeper.

MACASSA

In pushing work on it's 200 ton mill which is expected to be completed and ready to turn over by the end of next month. According to word from Kirkland Lake most of the equipment is on the ground and no time will be lost in getting it in place. Mining operations also are proceeding satisfactorily on the various levels under development and it is stated that a large tonnage of ore, averaging about $18 per ton at current gold prices will be available as soon as the mill is ready for production. In addition to the large tonnage of ore opened up averaging around $12 per ton with gold at $20.67 per ounce, there are a number of sections running upwards of $25 per ton, and officials feel sure there will be no difficulty in maintaining mill heads at a level that will return a good margin of profit.

CHURCHILL

Reports high assays from surface finds on its holdings in the west Shining Tree district. Company officials state that grab sample taken from the No. 1 vein returned assays ranging from $5.60 to $1,300 in gold per ton. It is stated that six parallel veins are within a width of 225 feet on the property. Latest work on the claims revealed a quartz-porphyry mineral zone over a width of 50 feet from which free gold has been panned.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

NEW STOCK ISSUE WALKERVILLE FIRM

Walkerville Brewery Limited Placing 50,000 Shares of No Par Common Stock on Market.

Ontario investors will be interested in the announcement that the Walkerville Brewery, Limited, Walkerville, is placing 50,000 shares of no par value common stock on the market. The price quoted is $3.25 a share and sales will be made direct to purchasers without the intervention of brokers.

For the nine year period ending December 31st, 1932, the Walkerville Brewery, Limited, has paid in excess of nine per cent average dividends to its stockholders on the basis of the offering price of the current issue. During that same period, the earnings of the Company averaged in excess of 12 per cent on the offering price of the present issue after making provision for depreciation, provincial and federal taxes, and all non-recurring charges.

At this time, the Company is not on a dividend basis; but in the expectation of improving business conditions, early resumption of dividend payments is confidently anticipated.

Economic Move

That the Liquor Control Act of Ontario will be amended in the near future to permit licensed hotels and restaurants to serve beer by the glass is considered only a matter of time. The issue has lately become an economic one in view of the vital importance of Canada's tourist traffic to the Province of Ontario. It is freely predicted that unless visitors from the United States are soon allowed to purchase beer on the same terms as they are now permitted to purchase it in their own country, revenue from the tourist traffic in the Province will be reduced by many millions of dollars annually.

The Walkerville Brewery, Limited, occupies a commercially strategic position in a district which, with the restrictions on the sale of beer relaxed somewhat, is expected to benefit to a very large extent owing to its proximity to one of the most densely populated areas of the United States.

In an issue of stock such as the Walkerville Brewery, Limited, is now making investors know that the impo.derable asset of good will plays a decisive role in determination of value.

The good will of the Walkerville Brewery, Limited, is founded on its famous brands, which for over 40 years have been esteemed as the names of Canadian beverages which enjoy international popularity.

The founder of the brewery, E. Chandler Walker, selected the names of the four senior brands, namely: "Superior Lager", "Bob Roy Ale", "Pure Malt Stout" and "XXX Porter." The brand "John Bull Ale" was originated three years ago and has already won wide acceptance.

FAVORSTANDARD TRAFFIC LAWS

Ontario Registrar Also Urges Dominion-wide System of Signals, Signs.

RAPS REVENUE DRIVES.

HAMILTON, Ont., Sep. 12. (CP) Provincial legislation requiring conformity of municipal traffic by-laws with provincial regulations, and a standard method of law enforcement making safety and the prevention of accidents—not revenue or the penalising of offenders after accidents—the primary consideration, were outstanding suggestions made by J. P. Bickell, registrar of motor vehicles for Ontario, in an address to-day before the Canadian Good Roads convention.

Development of a Dominion-wide system of signals and signs, including specifications as to size, color, form of symbols or wording, and location, also was suggested. The need of uniformity was obvious Mr. Bickell said. Laws, of which the motorist was ignorant were worse than no laws, he declared.

Differences between urban and rural regulations, he contended, were in greater need of adjustment than the differences between provinces, because of the great diversity due to local conditions and opinions in city and town municipalities, producing regulations which "are inconsistent with provincial regulations and good driving practice, and many of which are now obsolete or impracticable."

Mr. Bickell deprecated what he called the practice of some municipalities of making infractions of the motor law a means of raising revenue, "rather than of promoting safety." It engendered a disrespect for the law and a distrust of police officers, he said, as well as creating resentment against such municipalities themselves.

go over and see what we can sell them. You must go there if you want to make the most of your opportunities—study the needs of the market and you will make a success of your undertakings."

The head of a great English tobacco company had told him that the tobacco grown in this part of Ontario was the finest in the world. He found fault with the way in which it was packed, however.

"Remember that Canada has a reputation for quality and integrity and do not spoil that by careless shipments," Mr. Ferguson warned.

"With the tide of confidence rising it will not be long before Canada feels more definitely the quickening pulse of business activity and prosperity. Hamilton with all its industries will richly reap the benefits of it," Mr. Ferguson concluded.

The veteran Chic Evans, after qualifying in the play-off, played the defending champion, Ross Somerville, London, Ont., all even for the first four holes on par. Chick was unusually steady on the greens, getting down good-sized putts on the first and third, while "Sandy" was straight all the way.

Marston Is 3 Up.

Marston, playing par golf, was three up on Krayenbuhl at the turn. The Kentuckian was wild with his approach shots on a half dozen holes, but settled down after a bad start.

Somerville squared his match with Evans at the ninth. The champion's iron shots were beginning to give him an edge as Chick repeatedly was forced to use the wood for his seconds. "Sandy," on the edge with his fine approach, got down to two putts, while Evans, after slicing to the left of the green, chipped 12 feet short and took two putts for a 5.

Evans—Out .. .. 435 425 445—36
Somerville—Out .. 435 446 344—37

Meanwhile Somerville won the 10th to assume the lead for the first time, Evans taking three putts from 30 feet, while the champion got his par.

Chick squared it up again on the 11th with a birdie three. His approach stopped within a foot of the cup, and Somerville conceded after missing his try from 25 feet.

Evans regained the lead with a par three on the short 12th, where "Sandy" missed the green and failed to recover.

After being trapped on the 12th Somerville hooked into deep grass on the 444 yard 13th hole, but made a great recovery, reaching the green and saving a half in fours with Evans. Chick was still one up and the big gallery gave him a great cheer.

Goodman Eliminated

Egan made a remarkable finish in eliminating Goodman by negotiating a birdie three on the home hole to win by 2 up. Johnny was straight all the way and only 14 feet from the pin with his approach. He missed the putt, however, and Egan then rolled his in from 12 feet while a big crowd gave him an ovation.

Evans and Somerville halved the 14th in par fours. Chick fired an iron within nine feet of the cup and missed the try for a birdie by only three inches. Sandy also was on the edge of the hole from 10 feet.

The champion squared on the 15th with an orthodox four while Evans three-putted. Chick missed from barely two feet.

They halved the 244 yard sixteenth with par threes.

Both Evans and Somerville were well on the long 17th with three blows, Chick to the right by 30 feet and Sandy 30 feet beyond the hole. Both rolled up close for their fives.

Close Call For Somerville

Evans had to sink a tough six-footer to get his half on the 20th, then lost the match on the 562-yard 21st hole by missing a four-foot putt.

Somerville was well on with his third about 10 feet from the cup, while Evans was barely on the edge with his third. He putted short and missed the short one after Sandy ran his putt dead for a winning five.

Extra holes:
Evans—Out—436.
Somerville—Out—435.
(Somerville won, 1 up, 21 holes).

THE COMPANY Walkerville Brewery Limited was incorporated during October 1933, by letters patent under the Companies' Act of the Dominion of Canada, and as at December 31, 1932, took over the assets and businesses of its predecessor company, having the same name, but incorporated under the Companies Act of the Province of Ontario. The company is the direct outgrowth of one of the oldest industries of the town of Walkerville, Ontario, and was so named after the town in which its properties are located, by its founder, the late E. Chandler Walker, son of the late Hiram Walker who founded the town.

PROPERTIES The plant is located at Walkerville, Ontario, in the heart of its industrial district, and has excellent transportation facilities, having access to all the railroads serving the town as well as being located on a main thoroughfare. The plant includes a modern and up-to-date brewery in every respect, having an annual brewing capacity in excess of 125,000 barrels, or the equivalent of 1,750,000 cases. During the last eight years large sums of money have been spent on plant and equipment, from the earnings of the company, so that the present condition of the properties is such as to require no large capital expenditures for some time.

EARNINGS During the nine year period ended December 31, 1932, the average yearly earnings of the company were in excess of 12% of the offering price of this issue after provision for depreciation, provincial and federal taxes and all non-recurring charges. During the nine year period since the present management has had control, the company in every year has operated at a profit.

DIVIDENDS During the nine year period ended December 31, 1932, the average yearly dividends paid to shareholders were in excess of 9% on the basis of the offering price of this issue. The company at this time is not on a dividend basis, but it is expected that with a moderate improvement in general business conditions, dividends will be resumed.

FINANCIAL The company is in an excellent financial position, having no obligations ranking ahead of its capital stock other than current trade accounts payable. After completion of the present offering of stock, which is the first ever made to the public by this company, its current assets ratio to current liabilities will be approximately 14 to 1, of which cash alone will represent an approximate ratio of 8 to 1.

MANAGEMENT The management of the company will be in the hands of those responsible for its past success.

GENERAL The future of the domestic market for the company's products holds promise, and should any change be made in the Liquor Control Act of the Province of Ontario in the near future, permitting the sale of the company's products in hotels, clubs and recognized restaurants, the position of the company would be materially improved.

PURPOSE OF OFFERING The company is making this offering, with the feeling that customers' ownership is desirable, and also with a view to permit those valued customers who for so many years have been loyal to the popular products of the company, sold under the trade names of "SUPERIOR LAGER," "ROB ROY ALE" "JOHN BULL ALE" "PURE MALT STOUT," and "XXX PORTER," to participate in the earnings of the company.

The company reserves the right to refuse either all or in part or to limit the amount of stock to be allotted to any application or subscription.

Millbrook

A pleasant surprise was prepared for Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Byam on Thursday evening when over sixty guests arrived at their home, Bank street, to honor Mr. and Mrs. Jack Byam who have been spending the second week of their honeymoon with his parents here, and with relatives at Lindsay, Port Perry and other points, and to give tangible expression to the esteem in which this former Millbrook boy and his bride are held.

A warm greeting was extended by the surprised host and hostess and the members of their family, to the 'invading throng,' and when all had gathered the guests of honor were centrally seated, Joe Thompson read an appreciative address, and the dinner wagon heaped with gifts was drawn in by Ernest Powell, and brought to a standstill immediately before the bride and groom.

Goofy Stories From Chemong

Harry Forler, our worthy dance pavilion proprietor, had occasion to engage an orchestra from Toronto. It seems that they arrived at Chemong after dark, and were escorted to the usual cottage on the lake shore which is provided by Mr. Forler as sleeping quarters for his orchestra.

The next morning when the orchestra boys awoke a mist hung low over the water and hid from view the structure of the floating bridge. One of the boys looked, squinted, shook his head and looked again, for he saw an automobile coming from the opposite shore. Dumbfounded, he watched it drive right "onto" the lake. Did it sink, as he expected it would? No! It meandered right on and never so much as made a splash. It continued its course as though upheld by wires or "space." Now, this young man had heard of the parting of the Red Sea, but this lake didn't even part. He dashed into the cottage and hollered at the rest of his party. "Eh, boys, come on out here, and if you see what I see guess we'll have to change our 'brand,' for this appalling apparition is as bad, if not worse than pink elephants." Just then the sun came out, the mist rose, and the floating bridge came into view.

Yesterday a strange party of young men came from points east and west of here, and learning of the beauties of our lake-shore scenery, decided to feast their eyes upon the waters of Chemong. Not satisfied with just scenic beauty, they decided to plunge into this lake of sparkling water. Now, the diving board, which during the holiday season is anchored out in deep water, was tied up near the beach, yet to the stranger looked perfectly all right, for many other lakes have deep shore lines in their own district. One of them plunged in from the diving board and nearly killed himself. He bashed his head on the bottom of the lake and the crash which he encountered made him bite his tongue, so no matter what the poor fellow thought of diving boards being parked near the shore he was powerless to say, till much later when the blow had somewhat lessened. However, his bruised forehead speaks for itself.

A certain insurance agent who resides at Chemong in the summer took a week-end off to visit at the rectory in St. Andrew's East, Que., and while there the rector's wife brought in an immense vegetable marrow, which she said had grown unaided on a grave in the old cemetery at the back of the church. She said it must have derived sustenence from the marrow of dead men's bones, for it was not planted there. The salesman, ever on the lookout for new slogans for business, replied, "What a good advertisement that will be for my work. How does it sound, 'Here to day and gone ter marrer'?"

LOCAL FACTORIES AND STORES MANY WELCOMING FEATURES IN EXHIBITS AT THE EXHIBITION

Manufacturers' Building Is Filled With Various Products.

TIMELY GARMENTS

Canadian Department Stores Have Two Sections in Building.

"Look, kids, a fine mask of Minnie or Me" promises Mickey Mouse, his red tongue and his enquiring ears as natural as life, as he bobs gaily up and down in cardboard in the big booth of the Quaker Oats Company, in the Manufacturers' Building at the Exhibition.

Mickey isn't the only welcoming feature in the building, which is filled with products of Peterborough's factories and stores. Anything from a fruit cake to a Royal Sarouk rug may be seen in the busy plants of the city and here you get the very best of them.

The little pigs that provide the tasty things in the blue and yellow and white booth of the Canada Packers, Limited, would be surprised if they could look back from wherever little pigs go to when they die and see how nice they appear when all dressed up in cellophane, that magical covering that makes even a sausage look artistocratic.

Here, in the blue and yellow and white color scheme that is repeated in all the wrappings and the natty jackets of the gentlemen in charge, are bacons and hams and tomato juice cocktails—in bottles — and pickles and olives. A trim young lady serves samples of Maple Leaf sausages and breakfast bacon.

Purity Bakers

Next door is a bevy of white-frocked ladies in a white section labelled "Purity Bakeries, Limited." Here is Roman Meal bread and white and brown and whole wheat bread and cakes of many types, with a specialty in the new "fresh fruit" cake, and a display-case centerpiece of a huge simulated wedding cake in the conventional pink and white that surrounds brides.

Next door is the DeLaval Company's section, with its smart, up-to-date modernistic treatment in black and silver, its glistening silver panels flanked by triangular crystalline wall-brackets. In this glorified atmosphere, everyone is tempted to stop and mark the excellence of the latest models in separators and milkers and shipping cans.

A "Hot" Exhibit

Messrs. Scollard and Leonard have a small section devoted to a display of the oil-burners that are exciting so much interest just now are on view the only electrically-lighted type, the Bunsen oil-burner. Here too, giving a cosy warmth to the section and the surrounding atmosphere, is the green and white enamel Findlay stove that is built especially for this burner.

The Canadian Department Stores have two sections. A very effective combination of black and white makes an attractive setting for pure white enamelled electric Bestes refrigerators with the new Servador for vegetables; for the new Estonia cream and green electric washing-machine, with its nickle-plated fittings, and the several good-looking radios of DeForest Crossley and Victor make. A novelty is the handsome little Duncan Phyfe table fitted with a radio.

The same company's other booth is devoted to a snappy display of "Eaton tailored-to-measure suits for men," this legend appearing in a grey semi-circle with a black border. Here too are accessories for the well-dressed man, as well as bolts of material for his suits.

Another feature is the Marshall mattress which forms the nucleus of a guessing contest. Guess its exact or approximate weight and you get the mattress, which looks very comfortable.

In a bright little living-room and kitchen suite, carried out respectively in soft sand and brown and in blue tiled wall effect, the Heintzman people show some of their splendid instruments and electric house fittings. In the living room is a lovely Baby Grand piano of the Colonial style and the new apartment-size walnut piano with its 'highlight' finish.

Something unique here is the combination radio and Victor, which enables one to make records, with the aid of a microphone.

Timely Garments

The hint of Autumn in the air makes the fur exhibits especially interesting. Hamilton's, Furriers, have a corner in black and silver, with rugs and flower standards. Here are the latest models in fur garments, with mink-trimmed caracauls and squirrel-trimmed broadtails, as well as the gay little "trotteurs" of white lapin. And here too, are displays of sportswear for the well-dressed woman.

In a patriotic setting of red, white and blue come the new Ford 75 horse-power V-8 engines with their aluminum cylinder heads, hill-climbing powers and speedy pick up, as well as a display of Firestone gum-dipped balloon tires, all from the showrooms of Hood and Cumming Motors, Limited.

In decided contrast to these mechanical affairs is the unique and quite outstanding display contrived by Stock's Bread Limited, who impart a cosmopolitan touch to their showing by using the simulated front of a tiny and dainty bakeshop, with a central semi-arch under which is placed a gorgeous four-tiered bride's cake and an equally toothsome-looking birthday cake, iced in pink and white.

In the two tiny windows, complete with glass fronts and overhead fringed awnings, are on view samples of the bakery's goodies; cakes and biscuits and cookies and bread including an elongated loaf that resembles a telegraph bean.

Quite appropriately flanking th's delicate display is the booth taken by Silverwood's Peterborough Dairy, where real ice cream and Ovaltine may be bought, and where the merits of both are extolled in bright wall posters. One shows a healthy lad on the scales proudly displaying his chest measure to a respectful and emulative younger brother and pointing to Ovaltine as the cause of this physical fitness.

Another Warm Spot

A bright and dazzling fire from a Bunsen burner playing on fireproof Gypsoc wallboard is a demonstration in the section taken by the Peterborough Lumber Company, where there is also a very interesting display of Insulex, a material that is designed to keep houses warm in winter and cool in summer, and that is supposed to be placed between the joists of the building.

The lady of the mode is not the only one who squares her shoulders just now. The well-dressed man is going in for these geometric effects also, as illustrated in the nobby garments for men's wear on display in the entrance booth of the Grafton Company. Here are custom-made suits and overcoats with reddish browns and blues prominent in the color line-ups. And here are the warm-looking winter hats for men, made of the new brushed wool fabric.

Old Omar himself squatting on a prayer rug—Damascus and the bazaars of the rug merchants—Persia and the rich art of the Orient—even the untravelled one may be pardoned a glimpse of other, older lands when beautiful rugs are on view. The Brinton Carpet Company has a large display of its notable products with their soft velvet pile and jewel-like colorings. In these noble Sarouks and Axminsters are blended gracefully the soft blues and browns, the roses and yellows of a lovely old tapestry, and there is a mild and gentle aspect to the equally soft tints—in tans and taupe and mild green—of the plain, unornamented plain rugs with deeper banded borders. Something different too, is the large central rug of Peterdale spool Axminster type, with cubic sections of dim rainbow tints.

Brides and Silver

One of the outstanding and most beautiful of the exhibits is the fur display from Lech's Store, contrived against a glittering background that simulates an Arctic night. Against a sable drapery looms the serrated outline of a dazzling white iceberg edged with glistening silver and tricles drip from the upper border of the backdrop. Here are beautiful coats of Persian lamb and seal, trimmed with silver fox, and long scarfs of fox, in the variations of black, silver, white, amber and platinum. And here is the big black bear that is the sign of the Lech Store.

The Miller-Powell Company displays Westinghouse electric appliances, in stoves and wringers and refrigerators and washers, in a black and orange setting, and an interesting display in conjunction with this is of Premier Vacuum Cleaners, for which they are agents. These are good-looking affairs dressed up in shaded blue plaid, as to the bags and nickle as to the metal parts. They come in Junior Duplex and Grand lines, with a handy small "Spic and Span" model that is guaranteed to kill moths along with its dust-laying activities.

WHIPPING CASE INQUIRY OPENS

200 MARINES ON JOB.

PALAPYE, Bechuanaland, Africa, Sept. 13. (A.P.)—Fifteen thousand natives assembled quietly here today as a British special commission began an inquiry into the alleged flogging of a European resident by the native court of Chief Tshekdi of the Bamangwato tribe.

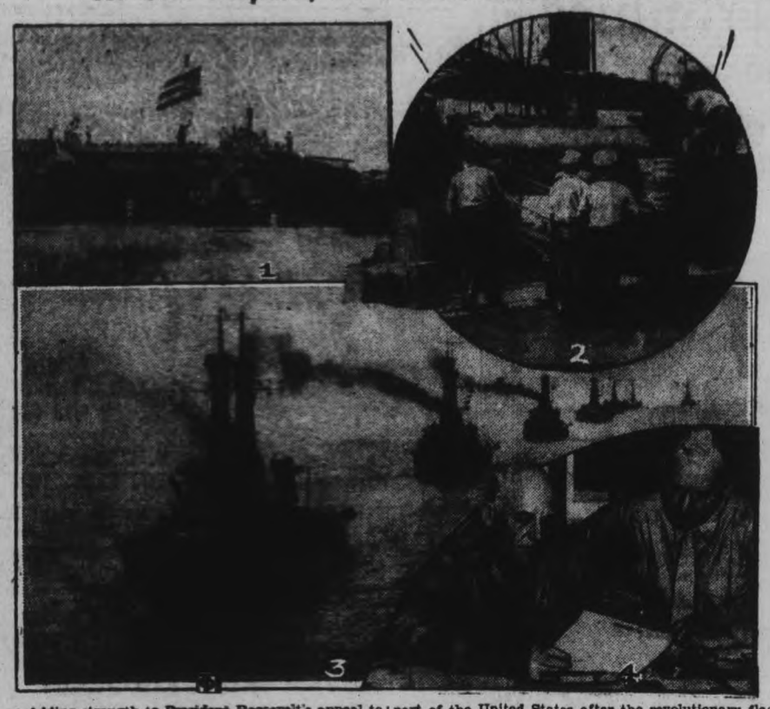
The possibility of native resistance was considered unlikely, but some white men sent their families to places of safety.

The case centers about P. W. Mackintosh, who, it was said, was summoned to Tshewdi's court on charges of living with a native woman. He appeared at the court voluntarily. He said he desired to take no action against those who thrashed him.

Two hundred marines were sent here by special train. Their equipment included three Howitzers. Vice Admiral Evans, acting high commissioner of the Bechuanaland protectorate, planned to arrive this evening. Colonel C. F. Rey, resident Commissioner, was in charge of the investigation.

Clad in pink-stripped pajamas, the Chief Tshekdi, who was educated in Europe, was closeted almost until dawn to-day with his lawyers, and later appeared in court in European dress.

As U.S. Prepares To Prevent Bloodshed In Cuba



Adding strength to President Roosevelt's appeal to Cuban revolutionary leaders to set up a government capable of maintaining order the entire Atlantic coast fleet either is heading for the island republic or standing by ready to leave on a moment's notice while a marine regiment likewise is marking time awaiting departure orders. The layout shows the action on the part of the United States after the revolutionary flag (1) was raised over the La Punta naval station in Havana. Provisions are taken aboard the U.S.S. Ellis (2) as the destroyer is prepared for a journey to Cuban waters as part of the Atlantic fleet (3). The task of mobilizing the marines for possible action in Cuba is in charge of Col. Richard P. Williams (4) and Col. John R. Henley right.

Love, Says Pastor, Spoils All Chances Of World Ever Having an "Ideal Boy"

HALIFAX, Sept. 13.—(CP)—Efforts by parents to create and educate an "ideal boy" always have proved futile and the only way it ever will be accomplished, in the opinion of Rev. W. T. Ross Flemington, principal of Mount Allison Academy, is to "call in the aid of eugenics."

Speaking to members of a service club here Dr. Flemington said just as "long as the tail chases the short, the strong the weak and vice versa; as long as ladies are beautiful so we can love them; and dumb so they can love us, the boy will continue to be natural and not ideal."

The formula for producing an "ideal boy", said the principal would be:

"If we chose our wives because their physical excellence and intelligence and our own were equally high, if we paid close attention to the physical wants of the child, if we submitted it to a wise and rich home training followed by a period of travel, how subtle would be the final product—the ideal boy."

"But love," he said, "spoils all this, right from the beginning" so all that could be done about it would be for his listeners to do their part in providing the proper environment and influence for the youth today.

ECONOMIST SHAW DISCARDS DEMOCRACY, DICTATORSHIPS

society has collapsed. There is only the empty shell. The politicians pretend it is still there, if they are intelligent. As to the unintelligent—they pretend society exists like they pretend money exists. Money as the politicians understand it has no reality.

"What is this money?

"A man has an 'income' of $25 a year. He is said to be worth $500. That is say, someone on one of their exchanges may give him $500 for his right to the $25 a year if he asks for it.

"But suppose everybody with the right to $25 a year went to the joint government of the world simultaneously and asked for it. The thing reduces itself to its own absurdity.

"That is why the World Economic Conference collapsed. Of course it was doomed to failure. The conferring States had all made a mess of their individual affairs and they thought or pretended to think—that the mess wouldn't be intensified if they all got togeher and had a tea-party.

"It is not a matter of age or youth. The young men cannot blame the old men any more than the old men can blame a young man like me. It is a matter of alertness and perception and capacity. Einstein is a super-mathematician. I am a superplaywright. I am my servant's master when it comes to writing play, but put me or Einstein into a garage and we are useless.

"Don't talk to me about dictators. Commonly, they are foolish men. There are always dictators. Put two soldiers on a duty. One will very quickly begin to dictate to the other or he himself will be dictated to.

"We don't want dictators. We want people with the capacity to govern.

"Russia is the main witness to the world-collapse. And the Russians have faced reality. Of course they proceeded by the method of trial and error. That was all they could do.

"There have been errors. Lenin took too much from Marx perhaps, and Stalin too much from Lenin. But in eight weeks Lenin could have told any of the apostles of Marxism that the least of his office clerks knew more than they about the job of government.

"But inevitably the best man is being thrown up under the Soviet system. The thing is automatic.

"In the workman's councils a man is thrown up into higher grade by virtue of the respect heh as won from his comrades. They know him. He might be a student of Marx or have some peculiar sign of merit. The point is that his comrades know him. They are aware of his merits and his defects. Out of that lowly college men are elected higher and higher and ultimately to the Supreme Council of State.

"In Moscow I asked Litvinoff why it was that Russian Ministers always held conferences and made important appointments at dead of night. The thing was sinister.

"'We are so busy all day long,' said Litvinoff. 'This is the only time we have to think.'

"'Great God,' I said, 'are there really statesmen who think?'

"In our own society events may not occur like they did in Russia.

"There you had a preponderatingly agricultural country. The population was made up of millions and millions of moujiks. The revolutionary task was comparatively easy. You can tell a man to seize the little piece of land on which he works. At least he will make something of it.

"But tell the workers to seize factories and the railways. You will get only unholy chaos.

"I don't know what form the next step in Western economic development will take. I know that the structure we once knew no longer exists.

"And that capacity must be the only test in civilization. Also that equality of income must be attained. Without that iron test of equality eminence will not emerge.

"It is upon eminence in the individual—the capacity to rule—that the future depends."

CITIZENS OF U.S. FEARING STRIKE FLEE SANTIAGO

Situation Grows Tense— Arrival of American Warships Awaited.

HIGHWAYS PICKETED.

Three Training Camps Set Up for Students, Many in Their 'Teens.

By JOHN P. McKNIGHT

(Cpyright, 1933, by The A. P.)

HAVANA, Sept. 13.—Many persons in Cuba prepared for emergencies to-day as they watched with growing concern new threats of strikers, a move to train boys as soldiers, and the failure of 500 officers to make peace with the new government.

At least a score of Americans were under military protection in Cristo after labor troubles at American-owned Manganese mines had endangered their lives.

Soldiers had found them barricaded in their homes, fearing an attack by workers.

Across the bay from Santiago de Cuba, in the small Cape Rente sentlement, a number of Americans gathered for safety after leaving their homes in interior Oriente Province because of unsettled labor conditions.

Santiago awaited the arrival of American warships as strikes that have tied up sugar mills became more intense.

In Cardenas on the north coast, American residents packed their baggage so they could board a coast guard ship if violence should result from unrest among negroes, who were reported angered because they had not been given help along with other storm victims.

Striking employes of the Consolidated Railways at Camaguey, in mid-Cuba, their demands that 1930 wage levels be restored having been refused, picketed highways to prevent company officials, including two Americans, from leaving the city.

30 Ships On Guard.

The United States Navy destroyer J. Fred Talbott entered Santiago Harbor from Manzanillo to relieve the Sturtevant, which went to Caimanera to refuel. The American flotilla near Cuba, sent to protect Americans and their property, numbers about 30 ships.

Three training camps have been established to train 2,000 students, many in their 'teens.

A spokesman, who explained that the boys felt kindly toward the American people for "their assistance" in overthrowing President Gerardo Machado a month ago, said regarding the purpose of the camps:

"We are going to train these students so that the things that happened to them under the Machado regime cannot happen again. We want them to know military tactics and be trained to protect themselves."

Strikes at many points harrassed the administration and the National Confederation of Labor was said to be considering another general strike, like the one that precipitated Machado's downfall.

American Ambassador Sumner Welles left the National Hotel, in which armed officers, deposed when an enlisted men's coup d'etat put a junta in power, were surrounded by soldiers.

The Ambassador said he moved because there was no food there and "there was a threat that water and lights might be cut off."

FLOWER TENT IS WELL FILLED AT EXHIBITION

Largest Exhibit of Flowers in History of Fair, Director in Charge Says.

JUDGING COMPLETED.

Reflecting the resplendent glory of late summer, ten thousand gay blossoms welcome visitors to the horticultural display at the Exhibition this week. Despite a dry summer which has been particularly hard on gladioli, dahlias and roses, the exhibit is the best in the history of the exhibition in the opinion of the members of the horticultural committee.

With the largest number of exhibits on record the space in the horticultural tent which has usually sufficed is filled to capacity this week. Extra tables have been required to provide extra accommodation. If the show continues to grow as it has this year a larger tent will ne necessary in future exhibitions, W. H. Young, chairman of the committee, said to-day.

As in most floral exhibits at this season of the year, the display of gladioli is the feature of the show. Occupying almost the entire south side of the tent, a profusion of the blooms in beautiful colors and shades greet the eye. Al Spencely's entries from Al's Pastime Gardens in this city and the exhibits of W. W. Lane and Son from the Kenilworth Gardens in Valentia, Ontario, are outstanding.

Popular Class

The house foliage and flowering plants class has drawn a particular large number of exhibits this year, promising to take a place among the leading class in future shows. The display of asters is the largest in a number of years past and, although finer quality blooms have been shown in years when conditions were more propitious, the exhibit is extremely attractive and a credit to the competing gardeners. Displays of cosmos, sunflowers, coxcomb and dahlias are among the other sections of the show which go to make a visit to the tent well worth while.

In the open section a beautiful wreath composed of asters, roses and lily of the valley entered by the Jordan floral shop is a feature. It was awarded first prize in the class, second being taken by a wreath composed mainly of gladioli entered by W. W. Lane and Son. An unusual display of roses by David Jordan took first award in one of the floral basket classes with a basket of blue and gold delphiniums and chrysanthemums exhibited by Lane and Son in beautiful array taking second.

Tom Brown

N. E. Crowe'n prize-winning basket of garden grown roses is of note. Worthy of mention also is the winning of two first prizes in the show by Tom Brown, first vice-president of the Exhibition. A rubber plant and a partridge-tail cactus which won the two prizes are the first exhibits Mr. Brown has ever entered in the horticultural show.

Two fine decorative displays by the Peterborough Floral Company and Jordan's near the entrance to the tent contribute in no little way to the beauty of show display as a whole. The displays consist chiefly of ferns, coleus, canne plants, begonias and palms arranged in attractive mounds.

The number of exhibits entered by children of the city in the junior horticultural display sponsored by the Peterborough Horticultural Society is not as large as in other years. Considering the quality of the exhibits, however, the judges were well satisfied with the gardening endeavours of the youngsters. Flowers exhibited in the classes for the juniors are asters, African marigolds, pinks, zinnias, calendula, annual phlox, sweet peas and cosmos.

Mr. Young is this year ably assisted in his direction of the horticultural show by David Jordan, N. E. Crowe and Smith Milburn. Judges were Harry Carter, gladioli, and Frank Wise, plants and other cut flowers.

BILL MORAN IS FATHER INTERNATIONAL DANCER

Bill Moran of Moran and Wiser, the famous New York comedy team, who are presenting their vaudeville act in complete make-up before the grandstand at Peterborough Exhibition, is the father of Rosie Moran, international star dancer.

Miss Moran starred in Joe Cook's show entitled "Rain or Shine" on Broadway for a period of a year and a half. She also played six months at the London Hippodrome in the production "Sons of Guns" and at the Empire in gay Paree. For the past two years, Miss Moran has been starring with a production in South America, which is presented in Spanish. At present she is in Buenos Aires.

Her daddy, who appears with his partner Wiser in a remarkable exhibit of comedy hat and Indian club juggling that is just different, is a real old trouper. The act of Moran and Wiser is clever and full of clean wholesome comedy.

29 STATES JOIN REPEAL COLUMN REQUIRE 7 MORE

Maryland, Minnesota and Colorado Are Latest Wet Recruits.

ALL WIDE MARGINS.

Ten More Vote Before November 7—Drys Fighting Hard.

WASHINGTON, September 13 (C. P.) — Twenty-nine States to-day marched the repeal path only seven more need follow to end U.S. prohibition.

Maryland, Minnesota, and Colorado were the latest recruits. All voted yesterday to abolish the 18th Amendment and left the score in 1933's balloting: For repeal 29, against 0.

If the seven States now needed to supply the three-quarters of the Union required for repeal are among the 10 voting before November 8, the repeal amendment will be ratified formal'y December 6—date of the 36th Convention.

The wets carried Maryland overwhelmingly. Past mounting figures put the repeal majority at nearly five to one.

The margins were smaller, but substantial in Colorado and Minnesota, home of Andrew J. Volstead, who sponsored the prohibition enforcement law. Late counts listed both in the two-to-one class.

Continue Fight.

Next week, on Tuesday, Idaho and New Mexico vote on repeal. Two weeks later—October 3—Virginia votes, and a week later—October 10—Florida.

These four end the balloting until November 7, when six more vote: Kentucky, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, and Utah.

The list of 29 States which have voted to ratify the 21st or Repeal Amendment to-day read:

Michigan, Wisconsin, Rhode Island, Wyoming, New Jersey, New York, Delaware, Nevada, Illinois, Indiana, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Iowa, West Virginia, California, Alabama, Arkansas, Tennessee, Oregon, Arizona, Missouri, Texas, Washington, Vermont, Maine, Maryland, Minnesota, and Colorado.

Maryland also elected 24 delegates to the State Convention to be held at Annapolis on October 18 to vote solidly for the proposed 21st Amendment.

With 68 scattered precincts in the counties still missing, the anti-prohibitionists of the State rolled up a plurality of 132,678 votes over the drys, and those who were to have gone to the convention without being pledged.

HERRIOT JEERED.

PARIS.—Hoots and jeers from extreme right-wing demonstrators greeted former Premier Edouard Herriot to-day on his return from a tour of Russia, where he had been received by Soviet authorities.

Five demonstrators, believed by officials to be young Royalists, were arrested. Supporters of Herriot staged a counter-demonstration.

NEW MODERATOR.

OTTAWA.—Rev. A. J. Beck, of Hawkesbury, Ont., to-day stood elected Moderator of the Ottawa Presbyterian Presbytery. He succeeds Rev. Dr. George R. Ross, of Erskin Church, Ottawa.

TORONTO GETS TOBACCO FIRM

H. R. Gerrie Launches Company With $500,000 Capitalization.

START THIS MONTH

TORONTO, Sept. 13—Early this month a new industry will be introduced to the business life of Toronto when the H. R. Gerrie Tobacco Co., Limited, a new and independent unit operating under a Dominion charter with a capitalization of $500,000, will begin the manufacture of cigarettes and cut tobacco in their modern factory at the corner of Dufferin and Van Horne streets. Space in the new factory allows for a capacity production of 35,0000,000 cigarettes and 150,000 lbs. of cut tobacco per month.

The new enterprise is sponsored by Toronto interests. H. R. Gerrie of Toronto is president and managing director; W. B. Reid of Toronto is general sales manager.

All officers and executives of the new company have had long experience in the tobacco industry, and are thoroughly familiar with every phase of its operation. Mr. Harry Gerrie, president, is the second generation of his family in the industry. His father was one of the proprietors of the original D. Ritchie Company which later became the Imperial Tobacco Company of Canada. Mr. Gerrie himself has been associated with the tobacco business for over 35 years. He just recently retired from the Imperial Tobacco Company to head this new concern.

Control Relinquished

Mr. Reid, vice-president and director, came to Canada as a boy from Scotland, and was soon identified with the old Empire Tobacco Company as a salesman. Within a year he became a very important factor in the affairs of that company and was instrumental in negotiating the sale of the Empire Tobacco Company to the American Tobacco Company. He then started his own jobbing business, the W. B. Reid Company, and became one of the largest wholesale tobacconists in Canada. In 1904, he founded the United Cigar Stores, a coast to coast chain of retail stores, and became that company's first president. He then acquired Vallens & Co., Limited, cigar manufacturers, of London, Ont., and Breners & Co., Limited, cigar manufacturers, Farnham, P.Q. Shortly afterwards he added to his holdings the Tamblyn Drug Stores.

Mr. Reid relinquished control of Vallens and Co., Limited, and Breners & Co., Limited, through a deal whereby ownership of these companies passed to the Imperial Tobacco Company, the two former companies becoming the General Cigar Company. In 1924, he sold the United Cigar Stores to the Imperial Tobacco Co. Limited, of Canada, and severed his association with the tobacco industry. Mr. Reid's activities up to this time were in a large measure responsible for the development of the tobacco industry in Canada from the most meagre beginnings to one of the largest industries. As vice-president and director of the H. R. Gerrie Tobacco Co., Limited, Mr. Reid will take an active part in the management and will once more become identified with the industry in the growth of which he was so important a factor.

Grown Up In Industry

L. W. Fraser, sales manager, has grown up with the industry in Canada. As a boy he was associated with the W. B. Reid Company, being respectively office boy, warehouseman and shipper. He left the tobacco business for a time and worked at civil engineering, only to return to the W. B. Reid Company, this time as a salesman in the company's main store at the corner of King and Yonge Streets Toronto, where the Royal Bank now stands. When the W. B. Reid Company formed the United Cigar Stores as a chain, he became vice-president in charge of sales. With the H. R. Gerrie Company, Ltd., he will concern himself wholly with the sales and distribution ends.

Most of the new company's machinery has been purchased in England. It is the most up-to-date machinery of its kind, and, it is claimed, is responsible for some vast improvements in cigarette manufacture, as well as in the preparation of cut tobacco. Everything is now in readiness for a large staff of employes to begin operations at the Dufferin and Van Horne plant in a few weeks' time.

Glacier Priest Defies Death Wind In Mountain Climb

Father Bernard Hubbard, S.J., scientist and explorer, at the base of Mount Shishaldin's icy cone, taking a brief rest before attempting the last stage of the assault. BRITAIN FACES VITAL PROBLEM IN JUVENILE UNEMPLOYMENT

Over 100,000 Young People Between Ages of 14 and 18 Are Jobless.

EDUCATION NECESSARY.

LEICESTER, Eng., Sept. 12. (C. P. Cable).—Juvenile unemployment is one of the most vital problems confronting Great Britain with more than 100,000 young people between the ages of 14 and 18 jobless, according to the latest statistics, J. L. Holland, noted educationist, told the British Association for the advancement of science to-day.

"The national conscience is troubled about the problem of adult unemployment but the nation is not yet fully alive to the magnitude of juvenile unemployment and its terrible consequences" he said. "Is there any worse example of social waste than that the growing boy and girl should be carefully nurtured for good citizenship and then plunged, without warning, into a world in which they find they are not wanted; in which the instinct to be independent is thwarted, and the opportunity of honest, useful work is denied them Could they have any experience more destructive of mental and moral fibre—in a word, more decivilizing? Yet this is daily experience of thousands of them."

Mr. Holland reviewed in detail the development of the national system of education in Britain, comparing its advance with that of the systems prevailing on the continent. In Soviet Russia, he said, it was reported, that one purpose of education was to create active workers for construction of a socialistic state. Of Germany, much the same could be said, and free individual development had been discarded there. This principle implied the child must be reared for complete absorption and subservience to the corporate state.

Education First.

"Whatever else we may think of it this concentration on a single aim undoubtedly simplifies and speeds up the work of educational construction or reconstruction," Mr. Holland declared. "But for us such an immense simplification is out of the question. Our system of education has to meet, and if it may to adjust, many differing demands; the demands of the parent, of the community of industry of the State, demands which are not quite the same to-day and will not be constant to-morrow. And all these demands have to be reconciled with the demand that the child shall be assisted freely to develop his individual character and ability."

Every educationist, Mr. Holland said, was vividly aware of the fact that he is serving a society that is disturbed by great private and public anxiety. The causes were world-wide. "We see the foundations of social order and well being shaken in country after country and we wonder how long our own land will be spared."

Education could not dispose of present emergencies over night, he said. It took a generation for its policies to come into full bearing. "It is, therefore, no mere theory, but the soundest possible practise that we should develop the powers of youth that they may face emergencies, the nature of which we cannot predict, with moral courage, adaptability and resourcefulness."

Mr. Holland stressed the need for the closest association between the industrialist and educationist in the business of technical instruction. The method officially favored to bring this about, he said, was establishment of advisory committees of manufacturers and employees.

HOLLYWOOD

Sense and Nonsense

It seems like the old days. Gloria Swanson has introduced a hairdress that has the whole town talking.

Gloria Swanson

Gasps and excited comments followed the glamorous marquise as she entered the forecourt of Grauman's Chinese Theatre and later walked down the aisle to take her seat among Hollywood's elite gathered for the premiere of "Dinner At Eight."

The fact that Gloria and the handsome Michael Farmer were accompanied by Carole Lombard and Bill Powell was sensation number one.

• • •

But the unique and startling hair-dress worn by the star was what set the gossips really buzzing. It was like turning back a page in Hollywood's history to the time when Gloria's coiffures in DeMille pictures used to start thousands of girls into a fury of imitation.

The new Swanson hair-dress—and this is authentic because I called Gloria up and she described it to me—consists of a part down the center to the napeof the neck—four curls on either side of the forehead and a similar number on each side at the back.

• • •

You'll be interested in the origin. "When I was in Europe," Gloria explained, "Suzanne Talbot designed a pork-pie hat for me. She urged me to dress my hair something like this. But I really got the idea from a picture of an aunt of mine taken around 1900. She was wearing a mass of curls at the forehead. This wasn't exactly what I wanted. I got a French girl who used to work on my hair in pictures and we devised this coiffure with the four curls on either side."

• • •

With the start of her picture only a week away, Clara Bow and Rex Bell suddenly packed up and went to their ranch. They even forgot to notify some invited guests who showed up to go swimming and found a deserted house. Fox insists there is no trouble over the picture and close friends of Clara's bear them out. The lowdown, they say, is that the red-head always gets in a terrific state of nerves before the start of a picture. She had been in bed for three days, and the studio naturally was sending people out to talk to her. Clara's solution was a disappearance act. But everyone says she'll be back.

• • •

Latest report is that Marlene Dietrich will return from Europe minus not only her masculine clothes but her daughter, Maria, as well. The star is said to be considering putting the child in school in Europe, just as Gloria Swanson has done with her two youngsters.

• • •

Is this irony? Jack Miller, who served five years in a Georgia chain gang and who recently has played parts in "I Am a Fugitive" and in Mae West's picture, "I'm No Angel", is leaving Hollywood for Florida, where he'll become credit manager in a modiste shop.

• • •

Carole Lombard has found that small home she was looking for. It's a New Orleans style colonial house with four bedrooms and three baths. Carole will share the place with her mother. . . . You have to sympathize with Margaret Sullavan. Fourteen weeks in Hollywood, she's had one afternoon off from work and on that afternoon she was arrested for throwing a cigarette into the brush in Laurel Canyon. She spent four hours in the hoosegow. . . . Adrienne Ames is up from a light case of flu and she and Bruce Cabot were dancing at the Miramar the other evening. . . . Boots Mallory and Dick Powell (here's a new combination) at the same place. . . . You'll see the famous Cocoanut Grove in Jean Harlow's picture, "Bombshell." The troupe moved in lights, sound equipment and all— and shot scenes for an entire day.

• • •

Maybe you haven't heard it. Bernie Bernard's story of the vaudeville actor who stood in such terror of getting the sack that he hated to open his mail. One day, a long envelope arrived for him. Watching furtively, his fellow performers saw him turn pale. With shaking fingers he slit the envelope, took out the sheet of paper. Came a sigh of relief. He exclaimed:

"My brother is dead."

Jean Harlow and Clark Gable are teamed again in "Hold Your Man," which opens Wednesday at the Capitol Theatre, following in the wake of their smashing success in "Red Dust," which brough a popular demand for the present reunion.

In a story calculated to afford the co-stars opportunity for performances fitting their individual talents and personalities, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer offers a production both intensely dramatic and romantic. An original by Anita Loos, the story concerns a rowdy love affair that begins as a sketchy interlude but winds up as a vividly human romance.

On February 6, 1933, the action was tried before the Honorable Mr. Justice Sedgewick at Peterborough to set aside the conveyance James B. Brown made of his property at 307 Pearl avenue, Peterborough to his two daughters. According to the evidence he promised to convey this property to them a considerable time before and what was alleged by Mr. Paquette's counsel that the conveyance was a fraudulent transaction to defraud him and other creditors, in favor of the daughters, of his judgment of $3,300.00 which he had against Mr. James B. Brown.

Mr. F. D. Kerr, K.C., and Mr. J. W. Stevenson, Peterborough for Mr. Brown and his daughters in the appeal and the Hon. G. N. Gordon, K. C. appeared for Mr. Paquette.

Weddings

WICKETT—ROBERTSON

Kawartha Park Stoney Lake, with autumn tints already beginning to color its foliage, was the scene nearing the sunset hour yesterday of a lovely wedding, when Helen Joan Robertson, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Robertson of 171 Aylmer street, was married to Mr. Robert Hume Wickett, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Wickett of Port Hope, at the summer home of her parents, Lower Kawartha, Stoney Lake.

The charming rooms were lovely with a profusion of flowers; gladioli, asters, gypsophila, and adiantum fern. The ceremony took place in the pretty living-room, in front of the large fireplace which was banked high with cedar boughs. The Rev. J. E. J. Millyard was the officiating clergyman.

The bride wore an exquisite frock which had been her mother's marriage gown, and was made of cream point d'esprit and Battenberg lace posed over white satin. Fashioned on long, graceful lines, the front of the skirt was finely tucked and the waistline showed five tiny taffeta bows at the back. The jacket was of the lace, which also trimmed the sleeves, puffed above the elbow.

White satin slippers with flesh-colored hose and short white kid gloves, were worn, also a string of pearls, and the bride carried a bouquet of Joanna Hill roses and lily of the valley.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Norman Moffat, sister of the bride, wore a beautiful gown of aquamarine blue-green chiffon trimmed with amethyst velvet. Her velvet turban, slippers and gloves were also in amethyst tones and she wore a shoulderette of orchids and lily of the valley.

Mr. Edmund Cohu of Port Hope was best man.

After the ceremony, a reception was held, only the members of the immediate families and a few friends being present.

Mrs. Robertson, mother of the bride, was in beige lace over satin, with a large hat of brown satin, beige slippers and gloves and corsage bouquet of Talisman roses.

Mrs. Wickett mother of the bridegroom, wore white crepe with three-quarter length coat, a large white hat, white slippers and gloves, and corsage bouquet of Talisman roses.

Refreshments were served at small tables decorated with silver bud vases filled with roses. Messrs. Hooper and Sons catered. The bride's table, centered with the cake was done with a cloth of Venetian lace, green candles in silver holders and a bowl of roses.

Later, Mr. Wickett and his bride left by motor for Ottawa, Montreal and Quebec, and will live in Port Hope on their return. The bride travelled in a dress of brown wool with long matching coat, brown hat and accessories.

It was a beauty, thick around the girth and solid all through.

HELD DINNER AT "EX."

Members of the local Y's Men's Club were entertained on Monday evening at the Exhibition by Vivian Milburn, this year's manager of the big fair. Dinner was served to nearly a full turnout of the club members at the St. Janies' Church tent. The meeting consisted of completing plans for the club to operate two games on the fair grounds, and Roy Lewis will call another meeting soon when the club will commence its fall activities.

RIVER BLOCKADE BRINGS POLICE

French Towpath Boatmen Make Stubborn Fight Against Motorized Craft.

3,000 JOBS INVOLVED.

CONFLANS - STE. HONDRINE, France, Sept. 13 (A.P.). — Police forces with mobile guns and rifles over their shoulders line the banks at the confluence of the Seine and Oise Rivers to-day, ready to break up a new blockade of barges thrown up by 100 towpath boatmen disgruntled over competition with motorized boats.

Three rows of a dozen barges each stopped traffic to Paris and scores of craft were massed behind.

The angry boatmen, repeating similar acts in August, called the strike at a meeting in a cafe after a lock-keeper had given precedence to a motorized barge laden with barley.

River and canal navigation, an important factor in the transportation of France, has been virtually at a standstill for more than two weeks while 3,000 boatmen dependent on the towpath have waged a stubborn fight against the faster motorized vessels.

The Junior Farmers

It may be repetitious to refer to the junior farmer work which the Peterborough Exhibition has developed, but it is of far more importance than the general public realizes, and is highly appreciated by the Ontario Department of Agriculture as an extremely valuable contribution to the agricultural community of this district.

Some of the exhibitors this year in the main classes of livestock and farm products are young men who have graduated from the junior farmer department, and the directors are convinced that the future of the Exhibition and the gradual improvement of agriculture in this part of the province will continue to receive increasing stimulus from this branch of the Exhibition. Its result may seem slow in materializing, but the cumulative results are already becoming manifest.

Hon. Mr. Kennedy Coming

The fact that Hon. Mr. Kennedy, Ontario's Minister of Agriculture, has chosen Junior Farmer Day for his visit to the Exhibition is an evidence of official recognition of the importance of this feature and also of a desire to meet and mingle with the young farmers who have the spirit and enterprise to participate in this effort.

J. B. Nelson, the late Wm. Knox, and others laid the foundation of this series of instruction and competition, assisted by Gordon S. Mathews of Canada Packers Limited; Don MacKinnon of Toronto, and others who have already been well rewarded by the response of the young people from many farms in Peterborough and surrounding counties.

Hon. Mr. Kennedy will speak at to-night's dinner given by Mr. Matthews to the junior farmers, and also find time during his visit to survey the Exhibition.

Thursday's Program

1.30 p.m.—Judging of swine.
2 p.m.—Judging of carriage, roadster and saddle horses begins.
Afternoon grand stand attractions, including high class vaudeville program and two horses races, featuring the 2-17 pace stake for purse of $600 starts promptly at 2 p.m.
3 p.m.—Judging of heavy draft horses.
8 p.m.—Complete night vaudeville program and music.

Heavy Entry.

Far in excess of those of last year entries in the Junior Farmers' Section, exclusive of the girls' and showmanship classes, numbers 444, according to J. E. Whitelock, assistant director of Provincial agricultural representatives, under whose jurisdiction the event is conducted.

Mr. Whitelock, whose duties with the Department take him all over the Province in the course of a year, commented on the steady growth of junior farmer activities throughout Ontario, and expressed himself as being particularly pleased with the big strides that were being made from year to year in the district competitions in this all-important branch of the annual exhibition here.

"The importance of the work among the junior farmers, and the far-reaching effect that was already beginning to display itself, was a thing which Mr. Whitelock felt it was impossible to estimate.

J. B. Nelson was down for a day's visit to the Fair and was seen renewing many old friendships and acquaintances among the farmers around the cattle barns He expressed keen pleasure at the increased interest that is being shown in the junior farmer classes this year, and was particuuar'y gratified to learn that a poultry section had been added.

His successor as local agricultural representative, A. D. Runions, told The Examiner he had sixteen boys showing in the Shorthorn Calf Club, all representative of Peterborough County. The general quality of the stock he considered to be good.

The Shorthorn Calf Club, he explained, is a second-year project, and the young exhibitors are showing yearlings and calves. The Calf Club boys do not commence their judging work until to-morrow. The object of the club is identical with the primary object of the junior farmer activities under the auspices of the Provincial Department of Agriculture, namely to induce the young farmers to take active interest in the handling and breeding of good live stock.

Mr. Runions advanced the theory that the first results of the junior farmer live stock work in the County of Peterborough were being made manifest now by the increased interest that was noted from year to year in the live stock exhibits as a whole. Many of the senior exhibitors owed their success as exhibitors to-day to the work they performed as members of junior farmer clubs, just a few years ago.

The boys commenced live stock judging this morning in beef cattle, dairy cattle, and poultry classes; and continued this afternoon with the judging of heavy horses, sheep, and swine. The competitions are being keenly contested by entrants from Peterborough, Ontario, Durham, Victoria, Northumberland, Hastings, and Prince Edward Counties, and prize-winners will be announced at to-night's big banquet that is being tendered to the junior farmers by Canada Packers Ltd.

Peterborough County has the strongest representation in the beef cattle class, with 36 entries; dairy cattle take second place with the Peterborough junior farmers, with swine a good third. In the new poultry section Peterborough has eleven exhibitors in competition with four exhibitors from Durham and two from Victoria.

Beef cattle—C. F. McKenzie, of the Dominion Live Stock Branch, Woodstock; John Baker, Hampton. Dairy Cattle—Harry Seymour, Ida; J. Y. Kellough, Port Hope. Poultry—Clarence Mann, Bridgenorth; R. R. Dixon Peterborough. Swine—L. W. Pearsall, Dominion Live Stock Branch, Toronto; H. L. Ford, Dominion Live Stock Branch, Peterborough. Sheep—R. H. Graham, Provincial Live Stock Branch Toronto; J. G. Lefebre, Dominion Live Stock Branch, Brighton. Heavy Horses—R. J. Rogers, Newmarket; Elton Armstrong, Armitage.

The group consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Bush, Mr. and Mrs. Heddor, Mr. and Mrs. E. May, Mr. and Mrs. Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. Paterson. They secured thirty-two bass, one lunge weighing twenty-four pounds and three smaller lunge, ranging in weight from four to ten pounds.

FASHION SERVICE

The original was in blue worsted crepe with white pique collar.

The dress shows smart idea in contrast in vivid-red worsted crepe overplaided in blue.

And it's so easy to make it. And nothing could be simpler than the coat itself—just a boxy type that is put together in a jiffy. Cleverness and chic, however, lurk in the collar, which gives much cachet to this model.

Style No. 2882 is designed for sizes 8, 10, 12 and 14 years.

MANNISH TOUCH ADDS CHIC TO HAT

Hint of Masculinity Gives Sort of "Devil-May-Care" Air Very Dear to Feminine Heart

Left felt cloche; right, red antelope toque.

By MME. LISBETH

"One touch of nature makes the whole word kin," says one, William Shakespeare. Possibly one touch of mannishness in the feminine wardrobe may not be according to nature, but again it may. For women, whatever they may say to the contrary, do admire the lordly male, and like to ape his prerogatives and often his attire.

In any case, certain it is that a headdress often gives a smart touch—a sort of devil-may-care to it—that is very fascinating and therefore dear to the female heart.

The mannish felt cloche, pictured left above is individualized by a crown so manipulated as to give the effect of two padded rolls running from front to back. It thus acquires that popular peaked effect.

To the right is a toque of red antelope built on the lines of the fatigue cap. It also is reminiscent of that charming Barrie character, Peter Pan.

Both are excellent choices for the college or business girl for everyday wear.

Household Hints

MENU HINTS

Little Porcupines — Green Beans
Cabbage and Green Pepper Salad
Pecan Pudding — Tea

The little porcupines may intrigue your fancy—and your taste. Try them.

To-day's Recipes.

Little Porcupines.—One and one-fourth pounds ground lean beef, one-fourth pound sausage in bulk, one-fourth pound rice, uncooked; one large or two small eggs, one can tomatoes. Season beef, then mix it with sausage. Through this mix the rice, which has been washed and drained. Add the egg and mix thoroughly. Make in shapes about three inches long and as thick as a large shelled walnut. Grease the roaster with butter, place the little "porcupines" in and cover with the tomatoes. Cook in slow oven two and one-half hours to give the rice time to cook; it will come through and stand out like quills; fine and very solid if care is taken in shaping and pressing.

Pecan Pudding.One cup soft breadcrumbs, two cups scalded milk, one tablespoon shortening, one cup pecans, one cup chopped, seeded raisins; one-half teaspoon salt, two egg yolks, three-fourths cup sugar, one cup lemon (juice and grated rind), two stiffly beaten egg whites. Mix breadcrumbs, milk, shortening, nuts, salt, egg yolks, sugar, juice and rind of lemon. When well blended, add raisins. Mix thoroughly; then fold in whites of eggs. Pour into buttered individual molds, bake 20 to 30 minutes. Serve hot with cream.

FACTS AND FANCIES

Caraway Seed.

Caraway seed, much utilized in cookery and in making confectionery and liqueurs, are in reality not seeds at all, but the dried fruits of the caraway plant, whose earliest use is attributed to the ancient Arabs. Caraway was highly popular in Shakespeare's time, and the custom of serving roast apples with a saucerful of caraway is still kept up at Trinity college, Cambridge, and elsewhere in England, just as it was in the great dramatist's day.

Australia has been settled for 150 years only.

JUST AMONG US GIRLS

Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors conducted by Anne Wilcox

One of the most disagreeable tasks which falls to the lot of every housewife at one time or another, is the cleaning of some pot or kettle in which food has been burned

* * * * * * *

It is often the fact that this task is necessary which makes the woman regretful over the catastrophe, instead of the loss of the food, when it is of little value.

* * * * * * *

I am sure that these ideas which will simplify the work of burned kettle cleaning will be welcome.

* * * * * * *

Remove all food which has not come in contact with scorched portions at bottom and perhaps sides of the utensil. It frequently happens that these portions are not spoiled, unless the contents have been badly burned.

* * * * * * *

Then the scorched flavor will have permeated through the contents with the steam and smoke. If the food can be washed, plunge it into water, and return these good portions to the fire in a different kettle, and continue cooking as long as needed.

* * * * *

Or reheat and serve, if already done. A sauce of onions fried in butter then a tablespoon of flour browned in the butter and a cup of tomato juice gradually stirred in the mixture over the fire is recommended to put over meat so served.

* * * * * *

With a metal kitchen spoon, scrape away as much of the burned contents as can be removed easily. Then fill the kettle with hot water. Cover it tightly and let it stand over night or several hours at least.

* * * * * *

Pour off the water. With the spoon scrape whatever comes off easily. Put enough warm water into the kettle to cover the scorched part. Cover kettle and set it into a smaller kettle partly filled with cold water. This makes a double boiler effect.

* * * * * *

Put the improvised double boiler over the fire. Let the water in the lower part come to a boil and continue boiling for an hour or so longer.

* * * * * *

Remove the top kettle. Drain off the water. The steam will have softened the burned particles so that they can be removed with no trouble. All the disagreeable scraping and scouring are eliminated.

* * * * * *

Not only is this labor saving, but it preserves the good condition of the kettle, the surface of which might be impaired if scraped hard. The process of steaming the kettle is responsible for the simplicity of the method.

Oakville High School Adds Hour With View to Ending Homework

OAKVILLE, Ont., Sept. 13.—(CP)—The virtual end of home work and detentions for high school students, with more work done in less actual studying time, will mark a new educational plan to be introduced into Oakville High School by Principal R. H. Archibald.

The school board last night gave unanimous consent to a trial of the plan outlined by Mr. Archibald. An hour will be added to the school day, but practically no home work will be called for from lower and middle classes, while upper school home work will be cut in half.

The new schedule provides that classes start at 8:30 instead of 9 a.m., continuing until 12.15 instead of noon. Afternoon classes start at 1.30 as usual but continue until 4.15, 15 minutes later than before. Teaching will occupy half the periods, with supervised study for the balance of the period taking the place of homework.

Your Health

by DR LOGAN CLENDENING

Dr. Clendenina

"Acute disease is an act of God: of chronic disease the patient himself is the author."

So wrote Thomas Sydenham, the greatest of all English physicians—called the English Hippocrates. He himself described those acute diseases most completely, and separated them from each other so that since his day we have recognized them as distinct entities measles, scarlet fever, smallpox and the fevers.

But Sydenham lived nearly 300 years ago, and the pronouncement I have put at the top of this article no longer is the view of modern medicine.

If by "an act of God" is meant that acute disease is inevitable, a matter of chance, the origin of which is unknown and the result of caprice on the part of the Ruler of the Universe, that it cannot be prevented, why then modern medicine answers very decisively that acute diseases are none of these things.

In general, the acute diseases are fevers. And fevers are infections, due to the entrance of germs, or bacteria, into the body. Now while we do not know the exact germs which cause all fevers, nor the exact way to prevent every one of them, we know all about preventing many of the worst of them, and that knowledge leads us to believe that before long we will have methods which are applicable to the entire group. Certainly we know the general principles of the mode of transmission of the contagious fevers.

There are two facts that are true of all these acute infections. First, they occur most often in childhood, and, second, they occur as a result of human contacts. While there may be some exceptions to those statements — of course adults frequently are laid low with fevers, and there are other methods of the entrance of germs into the body—through water and food, by insect transmission, etc.—for all practical purposes they are true.

Note, then, how directly applicable those conditions are to the opening of the schools. It is children who go to school, and the conditions of school life increase a thousandfold the human contacts.

If you have a youngster entering school for the first time this fall, conside most earnestly the advantages of preventive inoculation against these infections. True, we have no method of inoculating your youngster against all of them. But against the worst and deadliest—diphtheria, typhoid fever and smallpox—we have adequate and successful methods.

Indeed, with only the smallest decimal of reservation we can reverse the saying of Sydenham, and state that if your child dies of diphtheria to-day it is your own fault.

How these preventive measures are carried out and the scientific basis of their value will be discussed in other articles this week.

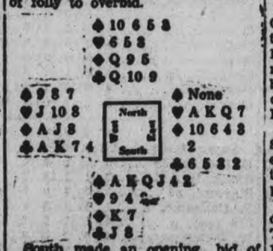
CONTRACT BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR CENTRAL PRESS

By E. V. SHEPARD

UNWISE BUT LUCKY

The great element of luck in bridge crops out all the time. Sometimes to an unusual extent, as was the case with the following deal. North and South were 70 on rubber game. East and West had not scored. When the score reaches that desperate condition the best condition the best course usually is to try to lose a cheap rubber, as the odds are too greatly in favor of the vulnerable side winning the rubber to pay opponents to venture going down more than a trick. If the vulnerable side can be defeated a trick or two, it is the height of folly to overbid.



South made an opening bid of 1-Spade. Not wanting to allow opponents to run away with a rubber on so low a bid, West doubled, for East to declare his best call. East responded with 2-Hearts, ignoring his longer diamond suit. Of course South had a legitimate rebid of spades, and he made it. West bid 3-Hearts, where all bidding should have ceased; North made an unwise bid of 3-Spades, which might have proved expensive for his side; East took a long chance and bid 4-Hearts, ending bidding. Note how perfectly East played the hand. Such a player can afford to bid higher than one less skilled.

The opening lead was the K of spades. In order not to block his trumps, the declarer ruffed with his Q. To go game the trumps and diamonds had to work well. There is no sense in leading the 10 up to the A-J, with both K and Q missing. East led his lowest diamond. The J lost to North's Q. That player was mean enough to ruff the declarer by leading a spade. East ruffed with his K. Then he led another low diamond. South had to play the K, as East knew he must do on that lead or the next, as South could not have held his two and one-half quick tricks without holding a side K. Only the first and second trick winners count as quick tricks in the most modern game.

Dummy's Ace captured South's K of diamonds, and its lowest trump was led. The odds were 2 to 1 that the six missing trumps would not be divided 3-3, but the declarer had to play his luck, and he did it well. Declarer's Ace won the first lead of trumps. Dummy's J and 10 won the last two leads of trumps, dropping all opposing hearts. West's last diamond was led. The declarer's 10 dropped the opposing 9. Then he ran off two long diamonds. Upon these dummy dropped a club and a spade. Either a spade or a club still had to be given opponents, but the declarer made 5-odd.

GOLF FACTS NOT THEORIES

By ALEX. J. MORRISON

Number 92

ALEX MORRISON says:

"Uncocking of the wrists," is an expression used to cover the action of the wrists during the downswing.

It's one of the most popular phrases used in present day instruction—and one that does much to handicap the player in making his swing.

The wrists should unbend during the downswing, but any conscious effort on your part to make them unbend will only upset your swing as a whole.

Bend your wrists properly in the backswing and if you keep your chin back, you'll get the proper wrist action in your downswing.

ALEX MORRISON says:

Clothes don't make the golfer but the way he wears his clothes does affect his game.

Shoes laced too tight will make the feet uncomfortable.

A belt drawn tightly about the waist cramps the midsection.

A shirt, sweater or jacket of any kind that is too narrow across the back handicaps the action of the shoulders.

Likewise, a tight collar or necktie limits the freedom of the whole body.

Number 93

NUMBER 93.

ALEX. MORRISON says:

A simple way to properly balance the action of both arms and hands is to keep one arm in the right relation to the other during the backswing.

With a right-handed player the right arm rolls over the left during the downswing. However, this roll over, should not take place until well after the ball has been hit.

Throughout the entire backswing and downswing the right arm should remain lower than the left arm.

Candymen In Third Round

Sturgeon's Double With Two on in Eighth Gives Homesters a Close Win.

MEET TRENTON THURSDAY.

Playford in Centre and Calladine at Short Are Locals' Fielding Stars.

Sugar Bowl rubbed Oshawa Tuxis out of the O.A.S.A. picture last evening in Stevenson Park by a 6-4 score, and advanced into the third round playdowns against Trenton. It was a great battle before more than five hundred fans, and the Bowlmen earned the victory. It was their second win out of three with Tuxis, the other being a tie. They play in Trenton Thursday and back here Saturday.

Sturgeon's two-bagger with two on in the eighth gave the homesters the close win. Lefty pitched a good game, despite streaks of wildness, giving nine hits as he fanned three and walked six. Garrard on the other mound struck out five, was touched for eight bingles and issued two walks. Both received fine support from their teammates.

Fielding Stars

Playford in centre and Bill Calladine at short were the locals' fielding stars, though all went good. Playford featured with a great running catch in deep centre to start the ninth, the robbed hit being a big break for the Dormer crew. Goodall at second and Chappell at third for the visitors turned in fine fielding performances, with the whole team playing errorless ball.

The Calladine brothers led the winners at bat, each clouting out two safeties in four times. Sturgeon hit a double, and Dormer, Smith and Playford got singles. Jo-Jo Graboski topped Tuxis at bat with three in five, one a triple. Branton was next with a double and single, while Garrard, Chappell, Chamberlain and Dalton got a single apiece.

How They Scored

Three hits in the first by Chamberlain, Branton and Graboski gave the visitors one run. Neither side could break through then till the Bowlmen scored three in the fourth on three bunting singles by Dormer, Smith and Playford and a clean bingle to right by Pat Calladine. Oshawa tied the score 3-all in the fifth on an error, wild pitch, Dalton's single and an out. Branton's double came too late in this frame.

Tuxis threatened hard getting runners on second and third in the next two, but snappy fielding held them back. Then the Sugar Bowl team stepped out and tallied three big markers in the last of the eighth. With one out, Smith walked but was forced by Playford. The latter went to third on P. Calladine's single, Pat taking second on the throw. Sturgeon came through with a clean double to centre to score two and raced home shortly after on Bill Calladine's single to left. In the ninth, Oshawa got one and threatened to even it up. One was out and then Branton walked. He scored on Graboski's mighty triple to right, but the next two went out in order on a strikeout and in infield roller.

Salute This Senator!

LUKE SEWELL.

JAMES LUTHER SEWELL, born Jan. 15, 1901, in Titus, Ala., missed his first world series by a few months. But he won't miss this one—for Luke will be in there in October snapping 'em up for the Senators.

Luke was an infielder, like his brother, Joe, for the University of Alabama baseball team when, one day, the coach, feeling the need of another catcher, had Luke don mask, mitt and protector.

Luke has caught ever since.

Sewell was signed by the Cleveland Indians late in 1920, just after they had won the world title from Brooklyn. After warming the bench for several seasons while Steve O'Neill, the great Tribe receiver, completed his career, Luke became first string catcher and remained that for 10 seasons.

On Jan. 7, this year, the Indians traded Luke for Roy Spencer, also a catcher, and now Luke knows it was the greatest break of his career. Sewell, weighing 170 pounds, throws, bats right handed and is 5 feet 9½ inches tall.

CUBS MUST WIN ALL SIX GAMES TO GAIN BERTH

Rained Out New York Game at Cincinnati Yesterday Strengthens Giants' Chances.

DOUBLE WIN FOR PIRATES.

Cubs Take 50th Victory in 60 Home Games by Trimming Phillies 2-0.

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr., A.P. Sports Writer)

Chicago Cubs marched into the National League pennant picture to-day to start a six-game series with New York Giants that was labelled as a "last ditch" affair. Starting from a second place tie, 7½ games behind the league-leading Giants, the Cubs were rated as about the only team that had much chance of beating out the New Yorkers and a decisive victory in this series was needed to give them much of a chance.

Game Rained Out

New York's closing game at Cincinnati was wiped out by threatening weather yesterday, and it is unlikely it will be played unless it is necessary to decide the championship. With that and another game gone where they can't be added to the Giants' losing column, the Cubs were faced with the necessity of winning all six games or at the worst five out of six, to get into a threatening position.

Even in that event they wouldn't be sure as the Giants now need to win only half their remaining 18 games to clinch the flag regardless of what the other teams do.

50th Win at Home.

As a tune-up for the critical series, the Cubs hung a neat 2-0 trimming on the Phillies yesterday for their 50th victory in 66 home games this season. Lonnie Warneke kept the Phils in complete subjection, giving up only six hits and never allowing a runner to touch third. Young Adolph Camilli, fresh from the Pacific Coast League, did the rest. He walloped a triple with Frank Demaree on base and scored on Gabby Hartnett's fly to account for both Chicago runs.

Pirates move up

Pittsburgh's Pirates moved back into a second place tie by taking two shutout decisions from Brooklyn Dodgers. Heinie Meine and Waite Hoyt were in great form and between them they held the Dodgers to nine hits to win a pair of mound duels, 1-0 and 2-0. Hollis Thurston and Rookie Emil Leonard were the losers. Boston and St. Louis Nationals had an open date.

Pie Traynor, Pirates—Batted in a run in each game as Pirates beat Dodgers, 1-0 and 2-0.

Gerald Walker Tigers—Drove in all Detroit's runs against Yankees, hitting triple, double and single.

Professional Hockey Will Lose Greatest "Money" Goalie In Game If Chabot Quits

TORONTO, Sept. 13,—(CP)—Loss of Lorne Chabot, veteran goal tender of Toronto Maple Leafs in the National Hockey League, is keenly felt by Dick Irvin, Leafs' coach.

"If Lorne retires, professional hockey will lose its greatest 'money' goalie," said Irvin in commenting on Chabot's announced retirement. Other goalies might outshine the former Allan Cup star during the season but when it came to important games and title play Chabot was the best of them all," said Irvin. "But Chabot may not retire. I remember some talk of him retiring last year, but nothing happened."

Irvin believed Benny Grant, who guarded the nets for Syracuse Stars in the International League last season, might be a worthy successor to Chabot.

RALLY IN 8TH WINS FOR BEARS

Rochester's Early Lead Fades Under Stiff Batting Attack.

BISONS BEAT ORIOLES.

NEWARK, N.J. Sept. 13.—Coming from behind with a brilliant batting rally in the closing innings, Newark Bears overpowered Rochester's Red Wings, 6-3, here yesterday, in the opening game of the International League playoffs. About 4,500 attended.

After two errors by Tommie Carey, Red Wing shortstop, gave the Bears three unearned runs which tied the score at the end of the seventh, the Bears went on a hitting splurge in the eighth that chased the 36-year-old "Sheriff" Fred Blake. A home run over the 350-foot wall by George Puccinelli, ex-Rochester batting star, now with Newark, put the clamp on the contest. Jack Saltzgaver, was on base at the time after his single scored eighth.

Jim Weaver, who started the pitching for the Bears, was removed for a pinch-hitter during the seventh inning uprising that tied the score and Johnnie Murphy, his successor, was credited with the triumph.

A home run by Estel Crabtree, with two on in the fifth, was the only scoring gesture by the Wings and their only real threat in the contest. Blake yielded only three hits until the seventh when Barton's double with two out was followed by Charlie Hargreaves' tap to Carey who threw the ball wild to first, scoring Barton and sending Hargreaves to second. Pinch-hitter Watwood followed with a single that scored the tying run.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 13.—(AP)—Buffalo's hustling Bisons took a 5-3 decision from Baltimore as the International League play-offs were set into thrilling motion under the arclights last night. The Bisons had to travel eleven innings before squeezing out the victory.

YANKEES CLIP SENATOR LEAD

BROWNS WIN 4-1.

New York Yankees again clipped a game off Washington's American League lead without frightening the Senators badly. The Yanks downed Detroit Tigers 5-3 as the ex-Detroiter, George Uhle, stopped all the Tigers except Gerald Walker, who knocked in all three runs. Another walker, Dixie of the Yanks, provided the winning tallies with his 13th homer.

Cleveland and young Monte Pearson got the better of Washington and "General" Al Crowder by a 3-1 count. Pearson gave only four hits, while Crowder granted five, including a homer by Odell Hall.

St. Louis Browns continued their efforts to get out of the cellar by trimming the seventh place Boston Red Sox for the third straight time, 4-1, behind the six-hit flinging of Dick Coffman. Sam West provided the punch in the St. Louis attack, making two hits, scoring two runs, and driving in a third.

Chicago White Sox and Philadelphia Athletics were rained out.

40,000 HOWLING FANS SEE CANZONERI BEATEN FOR THE SECOND TIME

Vote of Third Man in Ring is Required to Reach Decision—Ross Deals Out Terrific Body Punishment in Last Six or Seven Rounds.

CROWD PAYS GROSS OF $1 14,000 TO SEE GRUELLING BATTLE IN NEW YORK GARDEN

(By Gale Talbot, A.P. Sports Writer.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 13 (AP)—The Big Town, the toughest in the world to convince, was ready to-day to admit Barney Ross of Chicago to the ranks of the world's ring champions.

Out of one of the most savage, gruelling fights ever seen in a local ring, the Jewish battler from the Middle West emerged with his second victory over the veteran Tony Canzoneri, from whom he won the lightweight title less than three months ago.

With 40,000 howling fans looking on at the Polo Grounds last night, most of them pulling fervently for Canzoneri to turn the tables on the former amateur champion and reclaim his crown, Ross withstood Tony's early rushes, caught up with him midway of the fight and beat him all over the ring before it was over.

Referee Casts Vote

As in their first scrap at Chicago, it was so close it required the vote of the referee to reach a decision. Arthur Donovan, who was in there with them for the torrid 15 rounds, cast his ballot for Ross after the judges had split.

Harold Barnes, one of the arbiters, gave the Chicago boy nine rounds; Canzoneri two, and called four even. The other judge, George Kelly, awarded Canzoneri eight and Ross, seven. Donovan gave Ross eight rounds, Canzoneri four and adjudged three even.

"My money goes on Tony any time he fights anybody else," said Ross in the dressing room. "But I'll give him another fight any time, anywhere, either in his home town or mine. I thought I was ahead all the way, just as I did in our first fight."

Canzoneri Downhearted

Canzoneri, who had been so confident of regaining his title that he bet several thousand dollars on himself, was the most downhearted man in New York.

"I thought I was out in front," he declared. "I felt strong all the way, but toward the last I couldn't seem to get untracked. I thought I was winning."

The big crowd, which paid a gross of $114,000 to watch the two great little fellows pour gloves into each other, received the verdict with mixed emotions. Boos and cheers were almost equally mingled.

TONY CANZONERI

Tony's flashier style evidently made him look like the winner to the thousands of patrons clustered in the outer stands, but those closer to the ringside could appreciate the terrific body punishment dealt out by Ross in the last six or seven rounds.

Ross admitted he was dizzy for a moment in the ninth and eleventh rounds, when Tony caught him flush on the jaw with left hooks, but he recovered quickly and from there on evaded the Italian boy's left like poison.

ERROR COSTLY FOR MACHINISTS

Engineers Take 6-4 Victory to Tie C.G.E. League Playoffs.

15 SAFETIES IN ALL

An error in the outfield which put two on followed by a clean two-base hit gave the Engineers the two runs necessary to win the second game of the play-off series for the championship of the C.G.E. Inter-department Softball League last night at King Edward Park when they pulled out a 6-4 victory from the Machinists thus tying the series and making a third game necessary.

Alf Nobbs on the rubber for the winners had the "Indian Sign" on most of the opposition sending seven out swinging in seven frames. He allowed five hits and walked three. Opposing him Ernie Reynolds allowed ten hits, fanned three and passed one, but was let down by his teammates who mussed up five chances.

George Gore and Brown led the Engineers with the willow while Prest, Lawrence and Smith of the same team each secured a double.

The teams:

Engineers—Price, lf; Gore, c; Nobbs, p; Brown 3b; Munro, p; Jones, 1b; Lawrence, ss; Prest, cf; Smith, rf; Tracy, lf.

Machine Shop—Parsons, ss; Reynolds, p; Calladine, cf; Muir, 1b; Broadley, 3b; Clarke, c; Pearson, 2b; Kearns, lf; Darling, rf.

Score by innings:

BENGALS GAIN O.A.L.A. FINALS

Tigers Defeat Orillia Terriers 1-5 Last Night to Win Round.

MEET MOUNT DENNIS.

HAMILTON'S hopes for a senior amateur lacrosse title had rebounded to a new height to-day, after being in the depth since Saturday. Facing a five-goal deficit from the first game of the semi-final series, the Tigers ripped their way through to a 16-5 victory over an astounded Orillia Terrier squad at Orillia last night and advanced into the finals against Mount Dennis.

A different team from the one that absorbed a 14-9 lacing on their home floor faced Terriers at Orillia last night. Right from the opening whistle the barraging Bengals, using their extra avoirdupois to advantage crashed their way through for goals at random.

Beat St. Catharines 17-5

Mount Dennis, the other finalist, also overwhelmed their opposition after dropping the first game. At Toronto last night they defeated S. Catharines, 17-5, to avenge a 13-10 loss suffered at St. Kitts on Saturday.

An injury to Young, alternate goalkeeper of St. Catharines, marred the fixture. Young was taken to hospital after receiving a head wound when checked by Graham.

A feature of the Hamilton and Mount Dennis teams is the plentitude of brothers on their respective lineups. Hamilton, managed by Ernie Rohmer, has four other Rohmer brothers in regular positions. The three Graham brothers are a potent factor in the Mount Dennis attack while on the defence they have F. and T. Hatton.

FISCHER'S 141 MAKES NEW ALL-TIME RECORD FOR U. S. COMPETITION

Somerville Loses Chance To Tie Or Beat Medal Winner When He Three-Putted At The 16th—Pat Sawyer Beaten By Stroke.

FIRST ROUND TO-DAY.

Three Former Champions Among 12 Contenders Who Barely Made Score of 150.

(By James L. Renick, A. P. Sports Writer)

KENWOOD COUNTRY CLUB, Cincinnati, Sept. 13.—(AP)— The Canadian and American survivors of a record-breaking qualifying test squared away in the gruelling struggle for the United States Amateur Golf championship today—only 34 holding undisputed places in the first 18-hole round of match play, and a dozen others vying for the remaining eight positions.

Grouped in Sandy Somerville the surviving field which scored so furiously that an unprecedented score of 150 was necessary to escape elimination in the 36-hole qualifier were some of the most prominent names in amateur golf, including C. Ross Somerville, of London, Ont., the defending title holder; Johnny Goodman of Omaha, U. S. Open champion, and Johnny Fischer, the home-town idol who blazed his way to medalist total of 141.

Barely Made Grade

Three former champions were among the 12 contenders who barely made the score of 150 necessary to keep them in the race for the last eight positions in match play. It was the lowest qualifying limit in the amateur's 37-year-history and the number dead-locked at 150 also was a new record.

Trailed by a large gallery of home town supporters, Fischer captured the low scoring honors for the second consecutive year. His 141 is the lowest qualifying score ever marked up in the amateur championship. A record of 143 was set in 1924 by D. Clarke Corkran of Baltimore. It was equalled by Bobby Jones in 1927 and in 1930, and by Fischer himself just a year ago at Five Farms, Baltimore.

Fischer won the medal honors in a brilliant performance under heavy pressure. His closing 69, two under par and equalling the new competitive record for Kenwood, nosed out a collegiate rival, Pat Swayer of Minneapolis and the University of Minnesota, by one stroke.

Even when Fischer had brought in his 141 for the 36 holes there still was a chance Somerville would beat or tie the mark.

The Canadian lost his chance when he three-putted from eight feet away at the 16th. Had he canned that first putt a tie would have been a certainty and it was quite probable the brilliant Londoner would have grabbed the new record for himself with 140.

Gambled and Lost

However, Somerville gambled and lost. He stabbed for his 2, missed, rolled the ball out of the dead zone and missed again on the return putt, a 5 at the seventeenth, where Fischer himself had accomplished some successful gambling, put Somerville out of the race definitely. The Canadian now had to hole his approach to tie.

He hit a ball from the tee that was close to 300 yards, but his pitch to the pin was short. The best he could get was a par 4, and so far the second year in succession Fischer had captured the qualifying medal and Sandy had to be content with third honors with 143.

In the first round of match play to-day Fischer was paired against Eugene Homans of Englewood, N.J., a former Princeton player. Another first round match promising plenty of fireworks was between Charley Seaver of Los Angeles, Calif., and Charles Yates of Atlanta, Ga.

Fair Drew "Byes"

Goodman and Somerville drew "byes" pairing them with players who were in the borderline fight. Match play to-day consisted of two 18-hole rounds over Kenwood's 6,760 yards. Beginning to-morrow a single round of 36 holes will be played each day.

The three surviving former champions in the borderline battle were Chick Evans of Chicago; H. Chandler Egan of Del Monte, Calif., and Max Marston of Philadelphia.

Along with them were two Walker Cup stars, Maurice McCarthy, Jr., of Cleveland, and George T. Dunlap, Jr., of New York. The others were R. M. Grant of Hartford, Conn.; Chris. Brinke of Philadelphia; Nicol Thompson, Jr., of Toronto; Eddie Held of Jamesburg, N.J.; Spencer Overton of Baltimore; Will Gunn, Jr., of Wallingford, Pa., and Ira Couch of Chicago.

Several Stars Out

Several names well known in golfing circles were missing from the list of those who qualified. Among those conquered by Kenwood's carefully guarded par were Jess Sweetser of New York; Jesse Guilford, Boston, another ex-champion; Frank Dolp of Portland, Ore., and George Dawson of Chicago.

Three Hockey Players Debarred From Clubs

TORONTO, Sept. 13 (C.P.)—Suspension of Ross Galloway, St. Thomas fighter, was in the hands of the registration committee of the Ontario branch Amateur Athletic Union of Canada to-day. The case was referred to the registration committee, following a meeting of the executive last night. A recommendation for favorable consideration was attached to the reference. Galloway was involved in an incident at a Kitchener boxing show last Spring.

Following receipt of official notification from the Ontario Hockey Association of the expulsion from the O.H.A. of W. F. Christie, Douglas Smith and W. G. Campbell, former officers of Marlboro Hockey Club, it was decided to notify all affiliated organization the three named are not eligible to hold office in any amater association or club.

The annual meeting of the branch will be held in Toronto, Thursday, Oct. 12. Nominations for the various offices are to be in the hands of the branch secretary, W. M. Gladish, Toronto, before Sept. 28.

SPORTS DAY BY DAY

Baseball—Softball—Lacrosse Soccer—Wrestling, and Others

(By C. J. P.)

Lovers of the harness horse races get a break at the Ex. tomorrow when this sport makes its 36 bow to local fandom. Two races will be run Thursday, Friday and Saturday afternoons, and a fine entry list has been filled out. They race in the 2.17, 2.22 and 3-year-olds' paces, all stake trots with purses raised this year to total five hundred smackers. A large crowd always camps in the grandstand to watch the trotters and pacers, and quite a bunch of amateurs at the game are likely to mosey down and give the bronos the once-over this yyear. They are, of course, entertained between heats by the acts put on before the grandstand. Should buy a program and follow the hosses in each heat.

Sugar Bowl softballers knocked Oshawa Tuxis off here last e'en, 6 to 4, and advance into the third round of the O.A.S.A. playdowns 'gainst Trenton. They'll play in Trenton Thursday at five, and back here at Stevenson Park Saturday at three bells. This last series has been a dandy between well-matched and classy squads. The Bowlmen proved a trifle better and had to be at their best to win. A fine crowd sat through the chilly hour and a quarter and was more than tickled.

• • • • • • •

Lefty Sturgeon, besides pitching good ball, smacked out a double that was worth a lot of dough in the eighth to break up a 3-3 tie. His battery-mate, Pat Calladine, also hit in the pinches, and young Bill hit well and flashed some smart fielding. Jack Playford once again starred in the outfield—we wouldn't say in centre, as he's all over the park. The others played smartly, too, and the whole squad earned the victory. Oshawa didn't like it, losing twice now to the Bowl for their only two defeats this year, but they congratulated the boys and hoped they'd go far. Two Lindsay men officiated and more or less suited both sides.

• • • • • • •

A good turnout of hockey players attended a business meeting of the club last night, and they decided definitely to run a dance to raise dough on September 21st, a week from tomorrow, at the Brock. One thousand tickets are out for sale, the seller getting one ticket or two bits in coin, for every ten he sells. Manager Eddie Wright has also offered a permanent wave to the girl selling the most in the next week, and anyone wishing to sell may secure tickets from him. They should get a big crowd and get off on the right foot financially.

Millbrook is holding a lacrosse tournament the 21st of this month, and the junior Petes—new champs of the Inter-County League—have been entered. Another outfit expected in is the strong Oshawa Juniors who were nosed out of their O.A.L.A. group by the odd goal recently The merchants of the village have donated a fine cup for the winner, and we hope they have a big entry of teams. Lacrosse is far from dead in this district, even if we haven't an intermediate squad. Places like Norwood and Millbrook have a lot to do with keeping the gutted stick game alive, and who knows but maybe next year, the boxed game will again sweep back into prominence. We hope it does, locally, even more so than it has the past couple of seasons.

• • • • • •

We'd like to hand out a bouquet to Isobel Davidson—of course, just figuratively, times being what they are—for her great work in the recent Open Tennis Tournament. This young racquet-wielder came through to figure in three championships, all she could possibly make. She copped the ladies' singles, won the ladies' doubles with Mrs. Dewart, and took the mixed doubles with Herb Wilson. A mighty classy tennis player. Max Cotton fought through to gain the men's singles, George Scott and Walter Jackson are the doubles' champions, and young Jack Cowling took the junior men's singles. A big entry, some classy play seen, and a fine start in this line of sport for next year.

• • • • • • •

Coach Ernie Legon had fifty prospective gridders out for the first P.C.I. rugby practise yesterday at Stevenson Park. The boys went through a light workout, running up and down with the ball, tossing and receiving, and booting the lopsided sphere around. That chill in the air spoke of real football weather and the young fellows were rarin' to go. While the first team lost a number of last year's stars, the nucleus of a good squad remains, plus some promising rugbyists who may make the grade.

• • • • • • •

The team this year will not be heavy, but promises to be fast and tricky. Sedgewick and Parnell, insides last year, may be the middles this season, and Marsh may be shifted from quarter to snap. Jopling and Westbye will doubtless be on the half-line, with Ascott, on last Fall's second squad, probably middle winger with the firsts this year. Glover, D'Arcy and Archibald shape up well again. Then, there are Young Kingdon, of the second team, and Dunkley of the third, who ought to make the grade with the Garnet and Gray first-string outfit shortly. It's still a bit early to have much line on prospects but another week of training ought to see the Collegians rounding into a team.

• • • • • • •

Up and down Sports" Rialto: Entries in the ladies' diving competition, starting at the Ex. Thursday e'en, should be in to the Sports Dept. of this paper by noon tomorrow . . . . Competitors get free tickets into the grounds and a chance at some fine prizes—but the details appear in a story elsewhere in today's Examiner . . . . Local teams, softball and juvenile, put two Oshawa outfits out of the running this year, and then Toronto put two of our squads out, bantam and juvenile . . . . All we have left in Ontario competition are Sugar Bowl in the O.A.S.A. and the Junior Petes in the O.A.L.A. . . . . Wonder if Norwood is going in the O.A.L.A. playdowns, with several Peterborough players on the team . . . . The city will extend the gals' grandstand a little further at the Bowl so as to close the gap between the present end of it and the new steps they're building down—making a real smart job of the whole thing.

League Asks Scots To Reconsider Game

In spite of other attractions last evening there was a good attendance at the meeting of the P. and D.F.A. William Anderson occupied the chair.

Deloro was represented by Jack Hart, Sr., who made a request that the Caledonians travel to Deloro to play them in a league game. "We always look forward to having the Scots because they are one of our main attractions, and I would like the Scots' executive to reconsider their decision from a sportsman's point of view," concluded Mr. Hart.

The matter was letf with the president to consult the Caledonian executive and report back to the Board.

The games for the next two weeks were arranged as follows:

Saturday, September 16—Packers vs. Caledonians in a league game, King Edward Park, A. Prick, referee. Canadian General travel to Lindsay in search of league points, W. Harrington, referee.

Saturday, September 23 — Deloro vs. Packers in a league game, A. Prick, referee. This game will be played in Deloro. On King Edward Park, Peak Cup semi-final replay—Canadian General vs. Caledonians, A. McKinley, referee.

Fine Ball Events For Seymour Fair

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 13, (By Examiner Staff Correspondent). — A fine program of events in the sports line has been arranged by the sports committee, of which T. J. Horkins is chairman, for the annual Campbellford Fall Fair to be held on September 26 and 27. Besides the fine track races already arranged for there will be two softball games of note and one baseball clash.

In the girls' games, the Keene hitters will try their hand at overcoming a Belleville aggregation, noted players in their own loop. A men's team from Belleville will also clash with the winners of the Glover Cup, which will be either the Campbellford Clerks or Petherick's, the two teams now in the play-offs for this trophy. In the realm of baseball Hastings will clash with Campbellford. These two outfits are both in the East Northumberland Baseball League and have put up good games during the season.

TWO CANADIANS WIN FORTUNES

Quebec Residents Hold Payoff Tickets In Army Sweepstakes.

HYPERION LEADS FIELD.

MONTREAL, Sept. 13 (CP)—Two Canadians and one American reaped small fortunes to-day as a result of the running of the St. Leger Stakes at Doncaster, England.

Adrien Vanier, 54, of Montreal, held an Army and Navy Veterans' Sweepstakes ticket on Hyperio, the winning horse, and will receive $54,000. A ticket on Felicitation, the second horse, is held by A. Labelle, of Quebec City, who receives $36,000. William A. Hasse, Calumet City, Ill., held a ticket on Scarlet Tiger, in third position. Hasse wins $18,000.

When he heard the good news today, Vanier promptly quit his job as a clerk in a shoe store. "I have worked since I was six years of age," said Vanier, "and have never earned more than $15 a week. Now I am going to take it easy." He grabbed his hat, tossed a buttonhook on the counter and dashed out of the store to celebrate.

PARADISE LOST

To The Editor of The Examiner,

Dear Sir,—Let us acquaint ourselves with the pilgrims of the eighth, ninth and tenth centuries when tales were told of the Pilgrimage to the Holy Land.

During this period the pious and impious alike flocked to Jerusalem, the one class to feast their sight on the scenes hallowed by the life and suffering of their Lord, and others, their opinion generally being that such a pilgrimage was sufficient to rub off the long score of sin. To these Pilgrims every object was precious. Relics were eagerly sought after. Flagons of water from Jordan, panniers of mould from the Hill of the Crucifixion were sold to Churches and Monasteries. More apocryphal relics such as the wood of the cross, the tears of the Virgin Mary, hems of her garments; toe nails and hair of the Apostles being brought to Europe at great cost and care.

A grove of a hundred oaks would not furnish all the wood sold in little morsels as remnants of the tree cross, and the tears of Mary, if collected as sold would have filled a cistern.

Then a tax was imposed of a lezant for each pilgrim to enter Jerusalem, and the pilgrims who had legged their weary way across and arrived without coin were not admitted. All this wealth went into the hands of the Moslem governors of Palestine. At the end of the eleventh century a strange idea had taken the people: it was universally believed the end of the world had come that the thousand years of the apocalypse were near completion and that Jesus Christ would descend upon Jerusalem to judge mankind.

The Pilgrims flocked to Jerusalem to await the coming of Christ, but on their arrival they found the Turks of the race of Seljook of Bagdad had taken possession and would not admit the pilgrims. This led to hardships, persecution, plundering and WAR. The Princes and Kings of Europe seeing a policy encouraged the pilgrims, as it would be a great advantage to kill off the restless peoples. The Kings and Clergy sent skilful instructors to lead the Pilgrims to their fate.

This was in the eleventh century, and greed was the cause of the unrest. We are in the nineteenth century and yet I fail to see where we have progressed. We have gained some science and art, also we have lost some and greed in churches and homes alike are in the nature of the ninth century.

Ernest Bradbury.

SIDETRACKING REAL ISSUE

To The Editor of The Examiner,

Dear Sir,—In The Examiner recently there appeared a conglomeration of something which seemed to be intended as a list of questions but whether wise or otherwise, everybody can decide for themselves.

However, it was meant for something, but not for the information the answers to these questions might give, rather to sidetrack the real issue—the challenge I gave to Holland and Childs to come out in the open and show some manhood at least and name the parties (political aspirant according to their letter) I am supposed to be in league with to injure the cause of the U.W.F. Now I challenge them again.

Such statements are too serious to be allowed to pass unnoticed and both these gentlemen know that this statement is absolutely false in every respect. They know they had not the slightest ground for making it, except for revenge, because I made Holland toe the line several times and each time in the interests of the U.W.F. On one occasion he tried to stake the funds which were for rent and light for his own private dispute. Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., stopped him at my request This was too much of an indignity so he had to have revenge. He framed a charge against me in conjunction with Mr. Childs. Mr. Holland again never could stand criticism either constructive or destructive. It was a case of "everybody's off the step but our Johnnie." He could never make a 'cat's paw' or a 'yes man' out of me or the other 90 per cent who left the U.W.F.

I fully intended to give him a "broadside" in this letter but as I am giving some extracts from the "Worker" a paper printed in the interests of the working man, perhaps that comment will be enough for now. I wonder if he has yet realized that he has made an awful blunder or is he capable of just such a realization. Experience of the past seems to have made no impression on him. It is regrettable that a working man's paper should have to expose a U.W.F. leader the way the Worker was compelled to expose Mr. Holland.

I quote from the Worker as follows:

"Careerist peddles scabby lines of anti-working class politics. Peterborough faker uses Unemployed to gain his own ends. Peterborough, Ont. The history of Mr. Charles Holland, president of the Unemployed Workers Fraternity here is that of a labor faker of the worst type. Mr. Holland proceeded to prohibit any militant talk at the meetings and assured the Relief Board many times that the U.W.F. wanted to co-operate with the Relief Board, that they would give the Board the names of those who were getting relief that they should not be getting? and in return the Board should give them all suspicious names for investigation.

"When the membership started to go away quicker than they came, Holland started to organize a C.C.F. Club. He made the following offer to a City Alderman. After the Southern and Eastern conference, this Alderman was to come to the U.W.F., make a favorable speech and Holland would resign his presidency in favor of this Alderman. In return for this Holland was to get the nomination as C.C.F. candidate in the coming election. The Alderman, fearing for his reputation refused, so Mr. Holland who had been refused the Presidency of the C.C.F. Club has now turned against the C.C.F. too....it is no wonder that the workers are keeping away from Mr. Holland."

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for the space in your valuable paper,

Yours sincerely,
Wm. Smyth.

PRESBYTERY MEETS PORT HOPE CHURCH

Peterborough Presbytery of Presbyterian Church Holds Meeting.

The Presbytery of Peterborough of the Presbyterian Church met in St. Paul's Church, Port Hope, yesterday. Moderator Rev. J. C. Robinson of Campbellford presided.

An application of the Presbytery of Red Deer, Alberta, of the reception of Rev. A. D. Pringle from the United Church of Canada was read Rev. J. C. Reeves of Norwood protested that inasmuch as there were great numbers of ministers unemployed at present, that the petition should not be approved Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr, Peterborough, pointed out that many of these ministers would not care to go West, and that since Mr. Pringle had been an efficient minister in the church in the West no obstacle should be put in his way. The application was passed by Presbytery.

In the report on evangelism Rev. Dr. Barr pointed out that a recommendation made by Assembly's committee with regard to Sabbath observance, family religion, temperance, etc., needed to be made practical. Organizations like a Bible society and Lord's Day Alliance were seeking to have opportunities to present their plans to individual congregations. Too often this meant the people refrained from attending the service. Dr Barr therefore moved that the clerk be instructed to ask Assembly's committee to appoint special days throughout the year when ministers in each congregation would present these matters themselves. This was agreed to by the Presbytery.

The Budget for coming year was presented by the convenor, Rev. J. C. Robinson Mr Robinson pointed out by means of adjustments in expenditures a reduction of 15 per cent. in requirements had been made . This meant to Presbytery of Peterborough that every congregation would have Budget allocation reduced accordingly. After the allocation had been accepted James Dutton made a strong appeal that every congregation raise its allotment in full. This was enthusiastically endorsed.

Andrew Fairburn and R. J. Burton of Lakefield were present to ask Presbytery to endorse plans being made for dedication of the new Presbyterian church in Lakefield.

A resolution of appreciation of the work of Mr. Burton was unanimously passed and a committee named, consisting of Rev. H. R. Williams of Millbrook, Rev. Dr. Barr, James Dutton, and Rev. G. R. Duncan of Warkworth to co-operate with the Lakefield congregation. The dedication services are to commence on Friday, October 13, with Dr. A. S. Grant of Toronto presiding.

Keen Interest Taken In New Motor Head

Since Monday forenoon. a steady stream of interested people have been visiting the Lambert-Castle Motor Head Company's scientific and mechanical exhibit in the Main Building.

Invented and patented by John Everett Castle, native son of Peterborough, the motor head, for which amazing claims are made, is mounted for display purposes on a 1925 Hudson engine block. A section of the engine head is cut away so that the working parts of the invention, the motive power for which is supplied by an electric motor, may be seen working.

Mr. Castle explained that he could not run the engine inside the building under its own power, because of the danger of fire. After the Exhibition is over, however, he plans to give further demonstrations under actual working conditions. For the purpose of these demonstrations, he would like to secure the loan for a few days of a 1926 Hudson car. Then by merely substituting the Lambert-Castle head for the standard motor head on the Hudson engine, he will drive the car about the city and will test his invention under actual working conditions.

Mr. Castle wishes to acknowledge the co-operation he has received from all quarters in bringing his exhibit to his own city from the Canadian National Exhibition. He is particularly grateful to the Fair Board for the donation of space for the exhibit in the Main Building; the Peterborough Machine and Lubricating Company, for the loan of pulleys and belts; to the Abbott Electrical Motor Repair Company for the use of an electric motor; and the Peterborough Utilities Commission, and Peterborough Examiner.

EXHIBITS IN POULTRY SECTION LARGEST IN HISTORY OF FAIR

George Paxman, Committee Chairman, Stresses Need of Increased Accomodation.

"ARD TASK FACES JUDGE

Entries in the poultry section at Peterborough Exhibition continue to get bigger each year. Present entries in this section, in common with livestock exhibits in other sections are the largest in the history of the fair, and exceed the thousand mark.

George Paxman, energetic chairman of the Poultry Committee had one of the hardest tasks in his forty-two years' experience of poultry, in finding accommodation for the numerous pens of feathered stock that was entered this year. Despite increased space that was provided by the larger tent for the waterfowl exhibits, late entries had to be crammed into odd corners, wherever spare room could be made.

Mr. Paxman emphasized that the time had arrived when the Fair Board would have to give serious consideration to the enlargement of the poultry building. Remarking upon the general quality of the exhibits, he stated, "they are class A, in keeping with our new rating as a class A fair."

Keen Opposition

R. H. Crosby, the poultry judge, remarked that he considered it an exceptionally fine show both as regards quality and number of entries. He was at the Canadian National Exhibition he said and was of the opinion that the local poultry show was of higher standard than that at Toronto. "There is keen opposition in all classes here," he stated, "and I can see I am going to have my work cut out in placing the birds."

A judge of long experience, Mr. Crosby was at the Winter Poultry Show here last year, and his work as judge was so satisfactory that he was engaged for the present exhibition. He hails from Markham.

Adjacent to the poultry building, there is an unusual non-competitive display of pheasants, which are being shown by Bert Wainman. The pheasants, are caged in specially constructed pens, artisticaly set off with a setting of cedars and transplanted flowers. Some of the birds are of brilliant plumage and are decidedly uncommon to this district.

A feature in the waterfowl tent, where various varieties of ducks and geese proudly disport themselves before the gaze of the spectators is a neatly constructed water tank enclosed with netting, for a special non-competitive exhibit of wild ducks. Of all varieties there are 107 ducks entered in the waterfowl section, as compared with a total of 160 ducks at the Canadian National Exhibition, according to show officials.

A Poultry Enthusiast

Mr. Paxman, who organised the Poultry Association in Peterborough twenty-five years ago, and who is probably one of the keenest enthusiasts locally, found time to show The Examiner around the various exhibits. He never tires of talking poultry, and several times in the course of a tour of the building he paused to answer questions or to point out the features of certain pens in the show.

One of the visitors to the fair, questioned Mr Paxman who took some birds from their pens to point out the difference between production and show birds.

Mr. Paxman explained that there were few new exhibitors this year, except in the production classes. Increased interest was being shown in the production class, he said, by the farmers of this district. Turkey entries were smaller this year, but of prime quality. The fancy classes he he remarked, were up to the usual high standard, and there was a particularly fine showing of the smaller varieties.

From Rabbits to Geese

Among some of the outstanding exhibitors of former years who were noticed at the show, were: Morgan Brown of Peterborough, who has over two hundred entries ranging from rabbits to geese, and pretty nearly everything else in between; Harry Lush of this city, represented in all the fancy classes, with a specially fine showing of bantams; R. D. Robson with his fine Black Minorcas; Sam Long of Ashburnham with White Leghorns and Rabbits; W. J. Outram of Edinburgh Street with Buff Orpingtons and Blue Andalusions; and Cecil Armstrong with a wonderful display of pigeons and rabbits.

From out in the district, such well-known poultry fanciers and breeders as the following are again back with strong classes; C. T. Throop of Port Hope, who paid Peterborough Ex a first visit last year, with bantams and pigeons; C. H. Curtis and George Hutchinson and Sons, Warkworth, with a fine display of waterfowl of all classes throughout the show; J. T. Weir of Agincourt, who has "a little of everything" to use his own words, which means to say that he has about seventy entries of prime stock; Robert Hope of Indian River, an old exhibitor showing in the production classes; Harry VanAllen of North Monaghan with several pens of good entries in the production classes; Edgar Simmons of Peterborough, with Rhode Island Reds; George "Scotty" Smith of Toronto, with a nice group of poultry many of which were C.N.E. winners; and Gillespie Stewart of North Monaghan with some very fine White Wyandottes.

Besides being represented in the production classes, Harry VanAllen has an entry of modern game birds in the fancy section. A feature of the modern game birds is the enormous length of their legs in proportion to the rest of their bodies. The birds stand about eighteen inches long.

In the fancy section among numerous other varieties of fine birds, there are some pit game birds; a pen of Black Sumatras; and a nice group of Japanese Silkies as well as "polka-dotted" Guinea Fowl.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE REVIEWS

ONTARIO GRAIN

Approximate prices track shipping point—Wheat, 64c to 65c; oats, 32c to 34c; barley, 40c to 43c; rye, 45c to 46c.

CHICAGO GRAIN

Despite a fresh advance of 1¼c a bushel yesterday wheat finished at a loss.

Profit-taking in the late dealings more than offset continued notice of inflation possibilities and of needed rain for Northern Argentina. A handicap to bulls was that figures, although confirming major losses in all cereals, were not as low as trade expectations.

Wheat closed unsettled, ⅛c to 1⅛c under Monday's finish; corn, 1c to 1⅛c down; oats, ⅝c to ⅞c off, and provisions varying from 5c decline to a rise of 7c.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

No price changes occurred on the Montreal Dairy and Produce Market during yesterday's rather dull trading, all lines holding firm. Stocks in storage in the Dominion as of Sept. 1 were announced Monday with substantial increases over last week being shown by butter, cheese and storage eggs, while fresh eggs showed a decrease. It is expected by local dealers that from now on there will be good export shipments of butter, cheese and eggs, which will reduce the stocks to some extent. Cheese demanded of late has been better, and butter exports have also started up, with weekly shipments looked for. It is understood that the West, where butter stocks are showing general increases has sold some good blocks of stock for shipment before the end of the year.

On the butter market yesterday No. 1 grade, in carlots or less, sold for 19 cents a pound, unchanged from Monday, with offerings totalling 801 boxes. Graded shipments in carlots or less of Ontario eggs continue at 22 to 23 cents a dozen for extras, 17 to 18 cents for firsts, and 13½ to 14 cents for seconds, with Westerns slightly less. Arrivals were 2,097 cases. Cheese held at 10¾ to 11¼ cents a pound for Ontario, and half a cent less for Quebec. Receipts were 7,021 boxes. New Quebec potatoes in 80-pound bags remained at 75 to 80 cents.

At the weekly butter and cheese auction to be held here to-day about 800 boxes of Quebec butter will be offered, as well as between 1,000 and 1,000 boxes of cheese.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, September 12. — Interest waned on the Grain Exchange yesterday as Chicago turned erratic in the late trade and wheat prices, boosted above pegged levels by moderate early purchases, reacted from the high points to close unchanged to ⅜c under the previous finish.

All futures closed at the minimum levels as operations slipped back into the lethargic course they followed a day or so ago. Final quotations left October delivery, on which neither high nor low was marked up at 70¼c, December at 71⅝c, and May at 76⅜c.

Opening is Active.

Trading was fairly active in the first half of the session. Chicago traders made moderate purchases of May wheat, while the balance of operations consisted of spreading by local interests between the October and December and October and May options.

Deferred months rose fractionally from the minimum leve's, but, though a fair trade was made in the October, it never left the pegged price. As interest died later in the day the December and May receded to the minimum price again.

Export business was confined to small lots and was not a market factor. Outside markets were firm. Chicago, a little erratic, held slight gain most of the day, and Liverpool, reflecting strength in North American on Monday closed ⅝d higher. Buenos Aires market also advanced. Indicated rains in the Argentine did not come up to expectations.

Tidy Sum Realized In Summer Sales

WARSAW, Sept. 13.—(Examiner Correspondence). — The Anglican Ladies' Guild held its first meeting of the season on Wednesday, Sept. 6, in the church. Mrs. Carl Cooper presided. After the usual devotions and routine, reports of the summer sales were given. Instead of the bazaar once planned, the ladies held several sales at McCracken's Landing in the piazza in front of the Choate store where they were kindly given full permission to hold them.

Home-made cooking, fancy and useful articles of all kinds were sold, some made by the members and a good number of articles were donated.

When they came to straighten up the finances the ladies found they had done exceedingly well and are much pleased and thankful.

CAR OCCUPANTS UNHURT IN CRASH NEAR WARSAW

WARSAW, Sept. 13.—(Examiner Correspondence).—On Sunday afternoon a car driven by a young man, who was accompanied by two young girls and an older woman, was overturned near Gordon Crowe's gate. The road was dusty and there was another car ahead which had passed two cars when this one tried to do so. All cars were running south. This one had passed one car, and in endeavoring to pass the second, went too far off the roadbed where long grass hid the shoulder and tipped. Fortunately the ditch was narrow and there were bushes growing, so it just tipped on its side. However, the occupants were unable to get out and had to be pulled out by the occupants of the other two cars. No one was hurt and no material damage was done to the car, so they were able to continue on their way to Peterborough.

LEAGUE SPONSORS APPLE PIE SUPPER

Annual Event Held in Basement of Grace Presbyterian Church, Millbrook.

MILLBROOK Sept. 13. (Examiner Correspondence)—The basement of Grace Presbyterian Church was quite attractive on Saturday afternoon for the "apple pie supper" sponsored by the Women's League, the two long tables being arranged angle-wise and having a color scheme of gold and white carried out with vases of seasonal fall blossoms and other details.

The President, Mrs. C. Thorndyke, had a general oversight of the whole event, with a number of willing assistants Mrs. Mervan Kinsman acting as cashier and serving the guests, Misses Thelma Armstrong, Lillie and Jean Syer, Mrs. O. Lord and Mrs. T. C. Ingram. The making of the tea was in charge of Mrs. R. McMahon and Mrs. E. Weatherup the menu ending up with apple pie topped with whipped cream and beginning with cold meats, salads, brown bread and butter, and biscuits.

The minister Rev. H. R. Williams B.A., was on hand to assist in receiving the guests and the Women's League, which is a very active and successful organization, will probably have as its next undertaking the annual fowl supper served sometime in October or the following month.

MURDOCK FIRED BY BROTHERHOOD OF RAILROADERS

Canadian Vice-President Held Responsible for Rail Wage Dispute.

IMMEDIATE DISMISSAL.

President Whitney Upheld in Counter Charges—Murdock Lays Eleven.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 14.—(CP)—The office of Canadian Vice-President of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen which Senator James Murdock first held in 1925, is his for only another 24 hours. A removal order, to take effect Friday, was announced last night by the executive board of the Brotherhood, an outgrowth of charges the Senator made against President A. F. Whitney of the organization, and counter charges levelled at the veteran Canadian union figure.

In all, Senator Murdock made 11 charges against Whitney. He appeared before the board a few weeks ago and among other things accused the president of "vindictive and ruthless oppression and retaliation." The board did not sustain him in any of the charges.

In turn Mr. Whitney made nine charges against the Canadian vice-president. One was an allegation that Senator Murdock failed in his duties as an officer in handling the now pending railway wage dispute in the Dominion.

Whitney said last night that "Murdock's whole attitude in the wage situation in Canada was found by the board to be ludicrous. Wages there now are 17% percent lower than they are in the United States."

Murdock's Conduct

The charges made by Whitney touched on Senator Murdock's conduct in the Upper Chamber of Parliament. This particular count read:

"That as a Senator, on May 11, 1933, Murdock advised the Canadian Senate on legislation dealing with cooperation between the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National, and argued that the proviso for negotiations with the representatives of the employes affected in a bill dealing with the apportionment of work was unnecessary, but that it should be left in the bill "to see what comes of it."

On this particular charge the board did not sustain the brotherhood president. But it did sustain him on six other allegations.

Senator Murdock, who was Mackenzie King's Minister of Labor in the late Liberal government, took over the Canadian vice-presidency of the Brotherhood after 15 years of service as a C.P.R. trainman.

BLAZING SHIP IS ABANDONED

Oyster Boat Rescues Crew Off Virginia Coast—Flames Seen Ashore.

EXPLOSION HEARD.

NORFOLK, Va., September 14 (C.P.). — A two-masted schooner of the bugeye type, apparently loaded with gasoline, was burning to-day off Buckroe Beach.

Captain Aubrey W. Weaver, commanding the Hampton Roads naval air base, saw the fire from his quarters, and went out in a plane to investigate. A navy crash boat was sent out to give any assistance possible. The schooner was in flames and could not be identified.

The crew was reported to have been taken off by the oyster boat Kecoughtan from Hampton.

Persons along the beach here said an explosion was heard aboard the schooner apparently a tanker, as she passed off Bay Shore, and that additional explosions followed frequently as she drifted up the bay. Naval planes soared overhead.

The tanker was in command of a Captain Foster, of the Mathews-Gloucester section of Virginia.

CREW LANDED.

BUCKROE BEACH, Va., September 14 (C.P.). — The crew of the Benjamin P Barnes, small schooner afire in Chesapeake Bay, was rescued from the vessel and brought to Old Point Comfort to-day by the oyster boat Kecoughtan, of Hampton.

No Trespassing

KEMPTON, N.S., Sept. 14.—(C.P.)—This moose didn't like automobiles, and when he saw the car coming along the road he just stepped out of the woods, emitted a lusty bellow, and charged. He won, all right, for the car had to be towed to a garage and the passengers continued their trip from Halifax to Cape Breton by train.

FURNITURE FIRM WALK-OUT HITS STRATFORD CITY

Over 600 Down Tools, Tying Up Five Leading Factories.

PARADE DOWN STREETS.

Claim Employers Failed to Grant More Wages, Better Working Conditions.

STRATFORD, Ont., Sept. 14 (CP) More than 600 workers in Stratford furniture factories laid down their tools to-day and walked out on strike.

Action of the factory employees is said to have resulted from failure on the part of the employees to accede to their demands for higher wages and improved working conditions. Five of the largest factories in the city are affected.

None of the five firms to which demands were made by the recently organized Chesterfield and Furniture Workers' Union, had replied when the time limit expired last night it stated. A meeting of the shop committees and the central council of the union was called and it was decided to declare a strike this morning.

While no accurate check on the number of strikers was available immediately, it was believed close to 90 percent of the workers had staged a "walk-out", bringing the industry here to a temporary stand-still.

The companies affected are the Kroehler Manufacturing Company, the McLagan Furniture Company, Preston-Mecklling Limited, Stratford Chair Company and Farquharson-Gifford Company.

As the workers walked out of the Kroehler Company a notice was tacked up saying the plant would be closed until further notice.

Following the strike, employees formed a parade and marched through the town led by two organizers of the Workers' Unity League, who have been in the city for some time organizing the furniture workers.

IRISH TRAIN IS HELD UP BRITISH BEER DESTROYED

DUNDALK, Irish Free State, Sept. 14 (CP)—A dozen men carrying arms held up the staff of the Dundalk Junction Railway station to-day and, when a freight train from Dublin arrived, broke the seals of several cars and destroyed a number of barrels of English ale.

The barrels were smashed with hammers and the tracks were deluged with the bubbling brew. The train crew stood by helpless, part of the raiders menacing them with revolvers.

The attackers did not touch the Irish beer aboard the train. There have been numerous instances recently of the destruction of English beer as part of the anti-British campaign in the Free State.

EXTRA GUARDS ON HOTEL DUTY OVER MACHADO

ATTACK FEARED.

Cuba's Ex-President Sticks Close to His Apartment, Seeing Very Few.

MONTREAL, Sept. 14 (CP)—Extra guards were posted about the hotel suite of Gerardo Machado, deposed Cuban President living in retirement here, when it became known to-day members of the A.B.C., the Cuban secret society, were in Montreal. The A.B.C. is one of the organizations responsible for the overturn of the Machado regime.

Members of Montreal's small Cuban colony who were fearful of having their own names known were responsible for the statement A.B.C. representatives had been seen in the neighborhood of Machado's hotel. The colony was seething with rumors an attempt would be made on the person of the deposed president. Some Cubans said, however, the A.B.C. was merely keeping watch for fear Machado would attempt to return to his native land.

Officials of the hotel where Machado is staying were unable to say whether members of the A.B.C. were staying there. "We should not recognize them if they did come," was their comment.

Stays Close to Room

Machado has been living here since September 3 when he came to Canada by steamship from Nassau, Bahamas. He had fled to Nassau after the revolt broke out in Cuba. He has become less and less communicative since he reached Montreal and during the past few days has received almost no one.

Yesterday Dr. Eugenio Molinet, former Cuban Secretary of Agriculture, came to Montreal to visit his former leader. What significance attaches to the visit has not been made known, but it was assumed it was merely a friendly meeting of former colleagues. Molinet was Machado's personal physician, but there was nothing to indicate Machado was ill. The deposed president has suffered minor kidney complaint, but it has not been considered serious.

NEW DISSENSION IN CUBAN ARMY

President Martin Prepares for Iron Hand Policies to Keep Order.

STRIKES SPREAD.

(By John P. McKnight).

HAVANA, Sept. 14 (C.P.).—Scholarly President Grau San Martin worked to-day on a manifesto in which his confidants expected him to demand dictatorial powers for combatting disorders.

Opposed by veteran Cuban leaders, plagued by Labor troubles, and unable to pacify 500 officers who insist his predecessor be reinstated, the executive was said in palace circles to be ready to cite high state reasons for iron hand policies.

Rumors circulated that the army faces dissension in its ranks. Two soldiers died violent deaths in the last 24 hours, one a suicide and the other the victim, as he was on guard duty near here, of unidentified machine gunners.

Several unidentified persons attacked the ninth police station and gravely wounded a student on duty there.

Those who believed the executive will establish a dictatorship pointed out that his revolutionary Cabinet included nobody who participated in earlier mediation efforts and, backed by students, had embarked on an intensely nationalist course.

Posters throughout Havana today attacked American policies and "Yankee Imperialism."

Hundreds of students, meanwhile, drilled at three Havana camps with 16 machine guns and rifles, with the announced purpose of learning "to defend students and their ideals."

In the National Hotel, whose employees quit after receiving threats of harm, the officers continued sweeping floors, making beds, operating elevators, and otherwise serving themselves while, held virtual prisoners by soldiers, they held out against Grau San Martin and the return of De Cespedes.

AFRICAN CHIEF LOSES POWER

Deposed For Flogging White —Had Frequently Flouted Administration.

HARD TOWN TO INVADE.

BEROWE, Bechuana'and, September 14 (C.P.). — Chief Tshekedi, who ordered the flogging of a British subject in violation of laws prohibiting native court trials of any Europeans, was deposed as ruler of the Bamangwato tribe to-day by order of Vice-Admiral E. R. G. R. Evans of the British Navy, Acting High Commissioner for the Protectorate.

After an investigation yesterday at Palapye by a special British Commission, the native court was summoned here to be informed of the decision regarding the young chieftain.

Tshekedi presided over a court which some time ago sentenced Phineas Mackintosh to flogging. The chief contended that Mackintosh had been "living like a native with a native woman," and that therefore the native court had jurisdiction.

Tschekedi was ordered to live in the Tati district. In pronouncing sentence, Admiral Evans said the chief frequently had flouted the administration.

Eleven lorries carried marines, bluejackets, and machine guns 35 miles across the parched belt to this town of 35,000 inhabitants, starting soon after dawn. Six-wheelers towing three howitzers became stuck in the thick sand, and were lost to the rest of the column.

One lorry loaded with marines also was stuck and abandoned.

Admiral Evans, who left Palapye after the column had started, was delayed by traffic difficulties. It was noted that the automobile in which Tschekedi rode was labelled No. 13.

About 300 silent natives converged in the meeting-place, where Admiral Evans addressed the native court.

The Canadian sea armed forces were estimated at 2,661, and the air armed forces at 2,200. These figures were communicated to the League by Dr. W. A. Riddell, Canadian delegate.

MILK OUTPUT REDUCED

ST. THOMAS, Ont.—Milk output in the East Elgin dairying district is approximately 50 per cent below normal, according to prominent canners, who believe a milk shortage is likely in the event canners receive unexpectedly large orders within the next few weeks. Prices to farmers for milk are much lower than normal.

SOMERVILLE IS 2 STROKES DOWN HALF WAY MARK

Defending Champion Outplayed at Own Game by William Little.

IN QUARTER-FINALS.

Silent Sandy Unable to Match Opponent's Recoveries on Back Stretch.

Kenwood Country Club, Cincinnati, Sept. 14. (CP).—Fighting another desperate battle against elimination, G. R. ((Sandy') Somerville, doughty Canadian titleholder of London, Ont., was two down to William Lawson Little, Jr., 22-year-old San Franciscan to-day after the first 18 holes of their 36-hole quarter final match in the United States amateur championship.

Sandy, rated by the Great Bobby Jones as the peer of Ironmasters on the North American continent, was constantly out-played at his own game to-day.

Somerville managed to hold little all even for the first nine, but the defending champion was unable to match the western youth's super golf and spectacular recoveries on the back stretch. Little negotiated the last nine in 34, one under par and carded a 72. His most amazing recovery was on the 16th where after driving into a ditch and taking a penalty stroke, he reached the green with a 150 yard mashie iron wallop and hurdled a stymie with a niblick, holing the ball from 15 feet for a half in fours.

Lacks Usual Accuracy

Somerville appeared somewhat tired after his two marathon matches yesterday and lacked his usual accuracy with his irons, although he carded a 74.

The youthful western golfer proved deadly with his irons and putted with unerring skill despite the soggy greens.

After being two down during the Track fans should turn to this race story and be convinced of the high class of light harness horses that have come to Peterborough for this year's Exhibition, including "Bedford Grattan," recent winner of the Canadian Futurity at the Toronto Exhibition.

Don't Forget the Midway.

Conklin's midway did more business yesterday than on the corresponding day a year ago, with all the rides and sideshows thronged with the younger generation of the city and district.

Among the visitors who called on Paddy Conklin were C. W. Ross, director of amusements, and Dr Waters, manager of the Toronto Exhibition. Mr. Conklin has hopes of securing the midway concession for the 1934 Toronto Exhibition, and laid out his show here for the special purpose of gaining a favorable impression from the visit of Dr. Waters and Cully Ross.

The exhibits buildings are well worth a visit, and the display of livestock, flowers, grain and vegetables should have a wide appeal.

Pickets Try to Halt Gang Entering Pits And Melee Follows

Scores Are Stoned And Beaten As Deputy-Sheriffs Join Fray With Tear Gas And Later Open Fire Reportedly On Mine Superintendent's Order.

ROOSEVELT HURRIEDLY CALLS OFFICIALS; ANNOUNCEMENT ON CODE EXPECTED TO-DAY.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 14. —(CP)— Fourteen men were shot and more than a score beaten and stoned today as rioting at three mines signalized the official start of a mining "holiday" in the southwestern Pennsylvania soft coal field.

The trouble flared at the gates, Edenborn and Footedale mines, all owned by the H. C. Frick Coke Company, as pickets tried to prevent men from entering the pits.

The most serious clash was at the Gates mine. It was there that all 14 were shot.

Pickets were reported to have stoned miners going to work. Deputy Sheriffs, heavily armed, got into an argument with Louis Kromer and one of them pushed him.

As other pickets advanced the deputies threw tear gas bombs and the pickets hurled them back. Fighting broke out, clubs fell and stones were thrown. Then the deputies opened fire.

After the outbreak, the ground was strewn with wounded. Ambulances sped to the scene and the casualties were brought to a hospital.

Casualties Mount.

At Edenborn, John Garrow, 40, suffered a broken arm and a fractured skull during a two-hour riot. Mike Savagae, 46, has a broken arm and lacerated head. A score of others were injured less seriously at Edenborn.

John Cocran, 35, and several other pickets were clubbed and stoned at Footedale.

After the excitement at gates quieted down. Thomas Vidovich, John Brusik and Ed. Rusky, three pickets who were in the thick of the melee, said the deputies began firing after Mike Donovan, mine superintendent, shouted:

"Let' em have it!"

"Then guns began blazing all around us," Vidovich said. "They threw tear gas bombs into the crowd as they ran down the railroad tracks near the mine entrance and fired into us. One of the wounded men fell on the track. A freight train was coming and we

NO PRICE REDUCTIONS.

CHICAGO, September 14 (C.P.). —The World's Series of 1933 will open on Tuesday, October 3 in the city winning the National League championship, presumably New York.

This was decided to-day at a meeting presided over by Kenesaw Mountain Landis, Commissioner of Baseball.

If the Giants win the National League flag, games will be played at the Polo Grounds, New York, on October 3 and 4, with the teams playing in Washington, the prpbable American League pennant winner, October 5, 6, and 7. HUMAN TORCH DIVING 84 FEET IS FEATURE ACT

Excellent Vaudeville Program is Being Presented in Front of Grandstand.

SHORT, SNAPPY ACTS.

Variety of Entertainment in Program That Thrills, Pleases, Educates and Amuses.

Converting himself into a human torch and diving from a height of eighty-four feet to extinguish his gasoline-soaked clothing in a tank containing less than four and one-half feet of water, Captan Lavalley, one of the high lights (in more ways than one) of this year's Exhibition grand stand program, thrilled his audience last night in a spectacular and flaming finale to a very entertaining performance.

And then there was the baby elephant who stood on the sidelines all evening waiting impatiently for his turn to come, getting all fussed up when 'Curly' Gibson sang "Somewhere a Voice is Calling", and getting a great hand when he had the chance to do his turn and prove just how skilful a jolly little grey elephant can be.

And Danny Simmons one of the "native sons" enlivened the evening with some characteristic stories and fancy stepping.

The acts are brief and snappy and there are plenty of them, with a great variety of entertainment in the line-up of a diverting program that pleases thrills, educates and amuses.

Movie audiences who saw that novelty, a boxing kangaroo, in a recent News Reel depicting a bout beween a native 'Australian' and Primo Carnera and also saw one of these strange animals perform in the feature "Hell Below" will be entertained vastly by "Jo-Jo."

"Jo-Jo" has a tail that acts as a sort of balancer when he boxes. It seems that this tail, like the heel of Achilles, is his weak point, because, when propelled by it, he is powerless to do much hitting out but it doesn't look at all weak when he uses it to keep him steady on his pins. He may not box according to Marquess of Queensbury rules but he sure packs a nasty wallop from those powerful short arms of his. And then just see him give his antagonist "the

C.N.E. Officials Visit Peterborough Fair

Enthusiastic praise of the entire Peterborough Exhibition was voiced by Dr. H. W. Watters, manager of the Canadian National Exhibition, during a visit to the fair grounds yesterday. He was accompanied to the city by Charles Ross, amusements' manager of the C.N.E.

The visitors were shown around the Exhibition as the guests of President Roland Denne. They showed particular interest in the industrial exhibits and declared that the exhibition as a whole is living up in full to its new Class A rating. Making a tour of the Midway with the possibility of securing it for the Toronto Exhibit next year in view, they evinced complete satisfaction with the grade of sideshows and rides offered.

YOUNG FARMERS GIVEN BANQUET AFTER CONTEST

No Fair in Province Doing More for Farmer Hon. T. L. Kennedy Says.

PRIZE WINNERS.

The Hon. Thomas Kennedy, Provincial Minister of Agriculture, last evening spoke of Peterborough Industrial Exhibition in glowing terms praising it as a fair that was outstanding for the class of its agricultural and educational exhibits. "There is no fair in the Province that does more for the farmer than the fair at Peterborough," he stated.

His words of commendation were uttered during the course of an address which he delivered at the Empress Hotel, as guest speaker at the banquet tendered by Canada Packers Limited to the junior farmers.

Gordon Matthews, manager of Canada Packers Limited, presided very ably. Besides the Minister of Agriculture, he was accompanied at the head table by His Worship Mayor Roland Denne, president of the Exhibition Board; Vivian Milburn, managing director of the Exhibition Board; J. F. Strickland, K.C., M.P.P., and by officials of the Dominion Live Stock and the Provincial Live Stock Branches, including A. D. Runions, local agricultural representative, and J. B Nelson, his predecessor, now with the Dairy Branch at Toronto.

Prize-winners Announced

J. E. Whitelock, assistant director of Provincial agricultural representatives, made announcement of the winners in the various junior farm activities that had taken place throughout the day. There were approximately one hundred and twenty young farmers present at the banquet, representative not only of Peterborough County, but of a wide section of Central Ontario. Besides listening to an inspiring address by the Hon. Mr. Kennedy, the boys also enjoyed a program of entertainment provided by Mose Yokom's Orchestra, and Danny Simons cartoon comedian—the original Jiggs of George McManus' famous comedy.

Called upon by Mr. Matthews at the outset of the program, Mayor Denne gave the young farmers a warm welcome to the city, and thanked them for their co-operation with the Fair Board. He urged the boys to remember the responsibilities that were facing them and stressed the advantages that were to be obtained from their part cipa-

$56,000,000 TAX ON CAR OWNERS OVER DOMINION

$50 For Every Registered Vehicle in Canada, Excluding Fines.

11,114,503 ON LIST.

Fees in Ontario Despite Boost Remain Lowest of Provinces.

OTTAWA, Sept. 14. (CP)—Motor vehicles operated in Canada ran their owners into a tax bill of $56,700,000 last year according to an estimate released last night by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. That meant over $50 for every registered motor vehicle—to say nohing of fines.

The provinces collected $21,126,271 for registration fees on vehicles and operators and another $27,083,316 in gasoline taxes. The Dominion took in $4,508,471 on import duties and excise taxes. In addition there was the sales tax on cars sold, estimates at $2,500,000, and the import duty on gasoline estimated at $1,500,000.

Motor vehicle registrations in Canada for 1932 amounted to 811,114,503, including 945,564 passenger automobiles, 1,530 motor buses, 157,990 trucks and other commercial vehicles and 9,419 motorcycles. This was a decrease from the 1931 registrations of 86,404 motor vehicles, or 7.2 per cent. The greatest decrease was in New Brunswick where total registrations decreased by 16.6 per cent. and passenger cars by 17.8 per cent., and Saskatchewan followed with a decrease of 15.5 per cent. in total registrations.

Car for Every Nine

Canada, with one motor vehicle to every 9.4 persons, ranked fourth in density, the United States leading with a density of one motor vehicle to every 5.1 persons, and Hawaii and New Zealand ranking second and third. Ontario, with 6.5 persons per motor vehicle, had the greatest density in Canada, British Columbia was second with 7.7 persons per motor vehicle.

Revenues collected by the provinces from registrations of motor vehicles, operators, etc., for 1932, amounted to $21,126,271, as against $19,684,908 for 4931. Ontario and Alberta made increases of 30.36 and 22.20 per cent., respectfully, by increasing the rates. All the other provinces collected smaller revenues, ranging from 4.41 per cent. for New Brunswick to 9.76 per cent. for Prince Edward Island.

Although Ontario raised the average passenger rate by 50 per cent., at $9.48 per vehicle, it is still the lowest of all the provinces. There is a greater range in sizes and fees for trucks than for passenger cars and consequently, the average rates are directly comparable only when weight is given to the relative number of large and small trucks in each province. Quebec had the highest average of $46.61 per registered truck, and Manitoba had the lowest with an average of $12.49.

Junta Seizes Power As Cuban President Quits

Control of the Cuban government has been seized by a revolutionary junta representing army non-commissioned officers and radical students following resignation of Provisional President Carlos Manuel de Cespedes, left, who had been in office only 22 days. Leadership has been turned over to a commission of five, one of whom is Dr. Ramon Grau San Martin, inset. Scenes of hilarity, similar to that shown at the top occurred as the army troops, pictured in centre, seized power. The capitol building at Havana, scene of the new revolution, is shown below.

COBOURG HEADS ARE ACQUITTED

Court Finds No Evidence of Conspiracy on Part of Mayor and Councillors.

DISPUTE OVER SEWER.

COBOURG, Sept. 14.—Charges of conspiring to defraud, on which Mayor Jack Delaney and Councillors Archie Russell, William Jennings, William J. Maher and Reuben Jackson appeared in police court yesterday, were dismissed by Magistrate J. H. Davidson when Col. F. D. Boggs, K.C., Crown Attorney, announced that he had no evidence to offer. A. Cochrane, K.C., and T. F. Hall, K.C., appeared for the defendants.

The charges were the outcome of a sewer dispute in which the complainant, Harry Allan, and the Council were the participants. Several months ago, two citizens on Ann Street asked permission of Mr. Allan to connect their homes to his private sewer. When they couldn't agree on a price, the citizens took the matter up with the Town Council. The Council made Mr. Allan an offer for his sewer, which was refused. An engineer's survey later revealed that Allan's sewer was not at the required level to meet with the requirements of the people who were asking for a sewer on that street. A separate one was built, and later Mr. Allan laid charges of conspiring to defraud against the mentioned municipal councillors, on the ground that they had conspired to defraud him of the commercial value of his private sewer by building another one.

Mr. Cochrane stated that it was deplorable that the Mayor and four councillors should have been subjected to such an indignity.

He then practiced for two years in Fort William, eventually becoming medical health officer of that city.

Later Dr. Wodehouse was appointed District Medical Health Officer, Ontario, a position which he held when the war broke out. He served in France and England from 1914 to 1919. On this return to Canada he resumed his work in the Provincial Health Department, and also took another year at Toronto University. He was appointed secretary of the Canadian Tuberculosis Association in 1921.

Bull Fighting

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Sept. 14.—(C.P.)— Betty Birch, who lives on a farm near Dwaarkill, has her own ideas about bull fighting.

When she saw an angry bull attacking her 12 year old brother in a nearby field yesterday, she rushed to the barn, took out a truck and drove to where the bull was pawing the boy.

Stepping on the gas she hit the bull broadside and knocked him down. She got out and helped her brother into the truck as the bull charged into the side of the machine. The boy will recover.

The ladies compete in tests on Nutrition and Clothing and also in a demonstration of Flower arrangement which supplants this year the competition in setting the table for supper on the farm, which was instituted last year and for which R. J. Goring of the Fair Store offered a silver cup. This same cup was awarded to winners of first place in the Flower arrangement demonstation, this year, and went to Peterborough County, to a team composed of Miss Irene Frankish of R.R. APART 25 YEARS SISTERS UNITED

Mrs. E. Reddick, Corbyville, Had Been Believed Dead by Rest of Family.

MEETING IN HASTINGS

HASTINGS, Sept. 14 (Examiner Correspondence) — Mr. and Mrs. Earl Clark had as their guests on Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Ed Reddick and little son Allan, also Mr. and Mrs. Hodgins all of Corbyville. Mrs. Reddick is a sister of Mrs. Clark, whom she has not seen since she was 2 years of age and Mrs. Reddick then six months. In over twenty-five years they have had no recollection of each other living, and yet have lived such a short distance apart. In fact only last week did Mrs. Reddick learn that she had sisters and a brother at all. With such a surprise and a keen anxiety awaiting her, she endeavored to locate them, so took Sunday, her first opportunity to call upon Mrs. Clark and two of her other sisters.

As both parents died when the children were all small they were separated, the youngest child (now Mrs. Reddick) being adopted. Strange did it seem that all the children except the youngest were united and often have visited together and recalled the days of their childhood, yet always believing their baby sister must have died in infancy. It surely was a happy reunion when they met. Other members of the family are Mrs. Archie Kemp of Keene, Mrs. William Rice of Dunsford, Mrs. W. J. Downer of Haliburton and one brother Maxwell in Saskatchewan.

PRICES OF FOOD CONTINUE CLIMB

Fuel, Bread, Potatoes, Bacon Among List Showing Advances.

START MADE IN APRIL.

OTTAWA, Sept. 14 (CP)—An increase of more than one point was shown in the index number of retail prices, and costs of services in August last, when the figures stood at 78.6, as against 77.2 in the previous month, says a report issued yesterday by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The increase was mainly due to higher prices of foods, and to a lesser degree for fuel.

An index for retail prices alone, says the report, advanced from 69.4 to 71.7. When foods were removed from this index it increased only one-tenth of a point over the same period, from 75.3 to 75.4.

For 46 food items the index moved up from 63.2 to 67.3 continuing a steady rise since April, 1932. For the first time in several months, beef, mutton and veal prices registered slight declines. Fresh and salt pork, bacon and cooked ham continued to advance moderately. Fresh eggs rose from 21.1 to 23.3c per dozen, while cooking and storage eggs were 17.1 and 19.5c respectively, for July and August.

Flour moved higher from 3.0 to 3.3c per pound. Bread, reflecting the higher flour prices, rose from 5.7 to 5.8c per pound. Potatoes advanced sharply from 22.2 to 41.0c per peck.

The fuel and lighting index rose from 86.2 to 86.5, mainly on account of slightly higher quotations for coal and coke. The coal sub-index changed from 86.2 in July to 86.8 in August, while advances in coke prices in two or three centres caused the index for this fuel to move up from 79.8 to 79.9.

Balloonists Find Bag 9 Miles From Town

MONTREAL, Sept. 14 — Nine miles from where the aeronauts emerged last Saturday after five days of wandering through the bush, the missing Gordon Bennett balloon piloted by Captain Hynek and Lt. Durzinski was located yesterday by the airmen themselves.

It was in a dense forest near the village of Lemieux, and there is little doubt but that the pair wandered aimlessly in a circle with their pocket compass affected by minerals, for they only struck railroad tracks at Lemieux on Saturday last and believed they had trekked 90 miles.

The big bag was sighted by the balloonists yesterday while they were on their second search for it. They made one flight on Monday afternoon but were hampered by snow. It will probably be brought out by a team of horses after the necessary trees have been felled.

STRIKE CALLED FRIDAY NIGHT 'PEG RAILWAY

Threatens Complete Tie-up of City Transportation System —1,000 Men Involved.

MAYOR STILL HOPEFUL.

Company Advertises For Workers to Fill Strike Vacancies.

WINNIPEG, September 14 (C.P.) —The Winnipeg Electric Company to-day was calling for 1,000 workers to operate street cars as a challenge to its employees who late last night gave notice a strike would be called at midnight on Friday.

Born in wage disputes and failure of negotiations to effect an amicable settlement, the strike notice served by the employees was the second in 10 days. It called for the laying down of tools by track, traffic and mechanical department workers, and threatened a complete tie-up of the city's transportation system.

Shortly after the strike notice was given the company officials, the management began advertising for men to replace their present employees who join the strike. Notices were placed in the car barns informing all workers their places would be filled if they quit work. Employees who remain in the service, the notices said, would retain their relative positions on the seniority list.

First Trouble Since 1919.

First major labor disturbance since the general strike of 1919 was threatened. Protracted negotiations between the men's union and the company, as well as a representative of the Federal Department of Labor, failed to bring settlement of the wage differences resulting from company proposals to reduce rates of pay. A Board of Conciliation recommended reductions, but the union refused to accept the ruling.

Mayor Ralph Webb was still hopeful a last minute truce and the eventual settlement of differences could be achieved before the men quit work. He was credited with having averted the walk-out of the employees when the first strike notice was given 10 days ago. The Mayor declared he was still hopeful the strike would be averted.

Bear Tears Tail Off Cow In Soo Pasture

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Sept. 14.—George Juricki's cow had no tail last night. A bear was believed to have torn it off as the animal browsed in Tarentorus Township fields.

Farmers of the district reported also bears had killed six sheep and caused considerable damage to orchards. Mrs. W. Perrin, who is afraid of bears, walked three miles to give one a wide berth after it had shown signs of becoming annoyed at her.

CLERKS SNATCH FIRST CUP GAME

Trim Pethericks 8-3 In First Game of Glover Cup Series.

NEXT GAME SATURDAY.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 14 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent). — Clashing in the first of the series for the Glover Cup, the Clerks, winners of the Campbellford Town League, snatched the initial victory from Petherick's, Seymour champs, by an 8-3 count last evening, after the country boys had got away to a good start and looked like holding down the game.

Going to bat first, Petherick's registered their three counts in the first two frames of the game, the Clerks, through several errors, enabling them to get away with the lead. And it was some time before the townsmen got used to Grant Kerr's pitching, although Hendy, on the mound for the Clerks registered six strike-outs to Kerr's one, and pitched the steadier game. For the last five frames of the game Pethericks failed to tally while the Clerks steadily increased their count to eight. Only one homer was made, Reynolds for the town team circling the bases in the fourth.

The best three out of five games will count in this series, the trophy being given by the Berger Tailoring Company through their local agent, L. B. Glover, for the championship of Seymour township and Campbellford. A. G. Thompson, president of the town association, explained this to the fans before the start of the game, also displaying the cup which will be competed for annually. The teams:

Petherick's.—Ken Oddie, 2b; Don Watson, 3b; A. Petherick, c; Don Barnum, 1b; Lindsay Anderson 3b; Roy Fry, cf; Don Kerr, lf; Fred Fry, rf; Grant Kerr, p.

Umpires—Plate, H. Tinney; bases, G. H. Free and Clarence Massie.

Score by innings:

HUMAN TORCH DIVING 84 FEET IS FEATURE ACT

boot" whenever he gets a chance to use his long hind feet.

An Odd Trio

The animal trio is delightful in Max Gruber's Jungle Oddities. There is a little elephant; a zebra striped as perfectly as these painted-looking things always appear in school-books and a big dog. And they are evidently the best of pals and seem to get a lot of fun out of their act.

The elephant grinds out a little tune on a hand-organ while tapping out the rhythm on a drum and he bowls expertly knocking down the pins and then hastening to a blackboard to chalk up his score. (When he fails to knock them all down he makes his way quietly to the end of the alley and almost unobserved flicks the upright pins into a satisfactory horizontal position in a manner that gets him plenty of pleased applause). He rides a bicycle dances to hornpipe music shimmies realistically while playing a mouth organ and then gets tipsy and cavorts about while the band plays "We Won't Go Home Until Morning."

Just to gain an idea of the intelligence of these powerful jungle beasts watch the extraordinary care with which that little elephant as if realising the tonnage in his own frame and the delicacy of the human organism beneath him settles himself quietly down on his trainer, lying prone on the track.

And the bright little zebra goes through his drill with a real stunt in a skipping-rope episode.

The main feature of the dog's act, apparently, is providing a nice and enthusiastic audience for his pals.

The thrill of the evening, of course, is in the daring performance of Captain Lavalley, whose daredevil stunt on the top of the slender long pole holds the attention of his watchers. Dousing the lights of the platform, that slight figure, flaming with ignited gasoline, plunges thrillingly into the far-below tank and the audience releases a collective, relieved breath.

With Capain Lavalley is a daring feminine performer, Miss Pauline Black of Victoria, B.C., Canada's West Coast aquatic champion, who also does some skilful and intricate diving, with a final artistic swan dive from fifty feet up the ladder.

A relief to the tension in this act is afforded by the jolly clowning of the two other divers, as performed by the third member of the group, Johnny Bannana.

The Three Willies

The Three Willies, as they call themselves, outstanding in their act. The lady of the trio appears to be double or triple-jointed. She does just about everything but tie herself in a knot. The 'split' is nothing at all to this rubber-jointed little person, whose muscular poise and skill is memorable. As contortionists and acrobats, they are very fine, and get a big hand for their skilful work. Just as an instance of their ability, one pose shows the lady, twined in snake fashion about the strong man's shoulders, while he negligently supports the other man on his head.

Another pair of clever acrobats in a comedy act, is Christopher and Columbus. They do a lot of swift and difficult stuff on the horizontal bars, with giant aerial swings blended with knockabout comedy falls and cut up antics.

Moran and Wiser are another pair of cut ups whose fun obscures to a certain extent the real skill demonstrated in their work. They are so good in their hat and club juggling that the audience gets excited and wants to take a hand in the game by throwing out hats that are caught expertly on the performers' heads. They do a boomerang curve effect with the hats that brings them back as if jerked by strings, and their club juggling is another peppy and clever feature.

They also bring Old Mother Goose up to date by relating a modern version of Little Red Riding Hood over the microphone as a bedtime story for the children, who don't want to go to bed at all but would like to stay there all night, getting their thrills and laughs served up to them in rapid time.

Home Talent

There is plenty of jollity and fun on the program. Danny Simons the general favorite with his friends and well-wishers of his own home town comes out in a semi-Jiggs get up to relate a few good stories in his own inimitable manner and do some fancy stepping that brings the house down and gets him plenty of repeated applause. He is appearing through the courtesy of the Canadian Packing Company.

Then there is the Phunny Phord, featuring "Lizz'e of the Sawdust," with Ernie Wells, feature Barnum and Bailey clown, and Gay Purdee, Kaystone Komedy Kop. Lizzie is a carefree machine and her antics are amusing and quite surprising. She can run herself perfectly without the erratic hand of her driver at the helm, she spits firecrackers and fountain jets, with great impartiality and generosity, and she has no respect for the law, manifesting a keen desire to run over the Kop who gets in her way.

This bunch also does a 'Humpty Dumpty' act in a clowning bit of foolery hat adds to the entertainmen of the evening.

A feaure of the musical program of the evening was the singing of two enthusiastically - applauded songs: "The Sunshine of Your Smile" and "Somewhere a Voice is Calling", by 'Curly' Gibson, who is a member of Mose Yokom's band

The band of the Peterborough Rangers, directed by Captain Peryer, provided excellent music, in opening selections and as accompaniment for several of the acts.

YOUNG FARMERS GIVEN BANQUET

tion in anything that would tend to improve the general standard of agriculture in this section of Ontario.

Introduced by J. F. Strickland, K.C., M.P.P., the Hon. Mr. Kennedy remarked that he was always pleased to visit Peterborough Fair. "There is no fair in the Province, he believed, that does more for the farmer than Peterborough Fair." He spoke of the educational and agricultural exhibits at the local Fair as being outstanding, and referred to Mayor Denne as "the keystone of the Board of Directors,' and a man to whom the Fair owed a great deal of its present rating in Class A."

Reminding the junior farmers of the fact that they belonged to a new generation, he pointed out the privileges that were theirs as compared with many of the difficulties under which their parents had worked.

He spoke of hte great and rapid advances that had been made in the field of agricultural science, and of the consequent over-production of agricultural commodities that had resulted. So great was the over-production, he stated, that all over the world the various nations were devising different means of providing a remedy.

The speaker briefly reviewed some of the remedies that were being applied, and referred to the operation of the N.R.A. in the United States under which destruction of surplus farm crops had been advocated.

"Ontario," he remarked, "does not intend to adopt any of these balloon or inflation schemes, but it intends to follow the wiser course of seeking to produce better farm products more cheaply."

Tribute to Ontario Farms.

The Hon. Mr. Kennedy was of the firm opinion that the character and integrity of the Ontario farmer was such that he would not fail the nation. Their was the spirit he said, that was going to carry the Province over her present troubles and back again into a new period of prosperity and plenty.

Speaking more particularly of the value of junior farmer work, the speaker remarked that Ontario farmers had recently sold to New York and Pennsylvania States eight and a half million dollars worth of dairy cattle. The cattle had been brought from Ontario because it was the only place from which they could get a grade of tuberculin-tested dairy cattle to meet their needs. Many of the high standards he said, had been built up through junior farmer activities.

After Mr. Whitelock had announced the prize-winners John Dryden of Brooklin tendered a vote of thanks on behalf of the junior farmers to Mr. Matthews of Canada Packers Limited, and remarked that the attendance in the junior farmer section at the Fair this year, gave striking evidence of the importance which the junior farmer placed upon such work. Hugh Davidson of Oakwood seconded the motion.

In extending thanks to Mr. Matthews, Mr. Whitelock coupled with the motion the name of Vivian Milburn, managing director of the Fair Board. He paid tribute to both Mr. Matthews and Mr. Milburn for their keen and enthusiasic interest in all junior farmer activities, and also paid tribute to the work of the local agricultural representative.

It's a wonderful formula — this combination of essential oils with camphor and other antiseptics so marvellous that thousands of bottles are sold annually for reducing varicose or swollen veins.

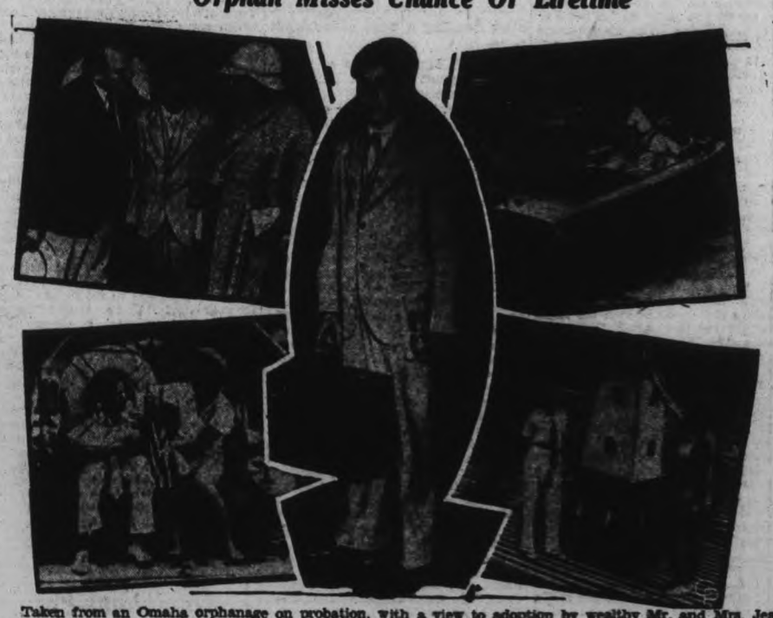
Orphan Misses Chance Of Lifetime



Taken from an Omaha orphanage on probation, with a view to adoption by wealthy Mr. and Mrs. Jean Streng of Paterson, N.J., 14-year-old Peter Christopolus, who reminded the Strengs of their dead son, Henry failed to qualify and has been returned to the orphanage. He is shown (TOP, LEFT), with Mr. and Mrs. Streng and in the other three panels with the Streng's daughter, Jean, who treated him as a brother, swimming with him, taking him out in the family motorboat on Lake Hopatcong, N.J., and doing her best to make him feel he was one of the family. But the publicity attendant upon Peter's transition from humble orphan to adopted son of a wealthy family turned the boy's head, and in CENTRE he is pictured as he started back—the chance of a lifetime thrown away.

No More Piles

You Can End Your Awful Misery Quick Without Cutting or Salves.

Thousands of Pile sufferers do not know that the cause of Piles is internal—bad circulation of blood in the lower bowel.

That is the scientific truth about Piles—the real reason why salves and suppositories do not give permanent relief, why cutting does not remove the cause.

Your itching, bleeding or protruding Piles will only go when you actually remove the cause—and not one minute before. External treatments can't do this—an internal medicine should be used. HEM-ROID, the prescription of Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, sold by good druggists everywhere, succeeds because it stimulates the circulation, drives out congested blood, heals and restores the almost dead parts.

Dr. Leonhardt's HEM-ROID has an almost unbelievable record of success right in this city. So why waste time on external remedies or worry about an operation when McDermid & Jury and Bond's Drug Store invites every Pile sufferer to try HEM-ROID with guarantee of money-back if it does not end their Piles, no matter how stubborn the case?

DISPUTE OVER TROPHY WINNER AT TOURNAMENT

Recreation Club Cup Officials Refuse to Award Honors to Fosters.

PROTEST AGAINST SCRIVER

Final Game Called on Account of Darkness With Locals Leading 4-0.

HASTINGS, Sept. 14 (Examiner Correspondence).—A small riot saw the close of the annual baseball tournament for the C.P.R. Recreation Club cup played in Warkworth on Wednesday afternoon before a large crowd.

Four teams entered: Fosters of Peterborough, Hastings, Havelock and Warkworth, holders of the cup last year. Havelock lodged a protest before the first draw was made against "Spook" Scriver being used by Hastings. Hastings refused to enter without their star moundsman. Havelock's claim that the "Spook" was not released from Peterborough club was denied by the Hastings management, who claim he was released in July. In the draw Fosters got the bye. Havelock won from Warkworth, 5 to 1. Showing themselves to be real sportsmen, Fosters agreed to play Hastings, and the trustees finally consented. Fosters won 7 to 1.

The third game between Havelock and Fosters had gone three and a half innings when Umpire Holmes called it on account of darkness. At this time Fosters were leading 4 to 0, and had won the cup in the minds of those present. However, the trustees advised that there was no game, and the Peterborough entry would not get the trophy. That started the fireworks, and only that cooler heads stepped in a real fight would have started. Fosters put up a real argument, and were entitled to the cup on the same grounds as it was awarded to Hastings in 1931 at Havelock the first year it was put up. At that time Hastings and Fosters played off and the game was called at the end of three and a half innings on account of darkness, the cup being awarded to Hastings, who were in the lead at that time.

Good Mound Work.

Harry Sexsmith, on the mound for Havelock, held Warkworth to two hits, and was backed up by good support. The veteran, Archie Zufelt, threw them over for Warkworth and should have held the winners to a smaller score if his team-mates had given him any kind of support. Inability to run after fly balls which they would have taken in with a little exertion cost them the game.

"Spook" Scriver pitched the last three innings and held the winners to one run and fanned five. Bailey for the winners tightened up in the pinches and sent shown out via the strike out route.

OLD COUNTRY SHIELD WON BY SERGT. R. J. McGREGOR

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 14 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent). — Bringing into closer contact two famous regiments, one in the Imperial forces and the other in Canada, a shield is on display in the window of P. Tweedie, Campbellford jeweler, presented by the sergeants' mess of the 1st Battalion Northumberland Fusiliers, England, to the serbeants' mess of the Northumberland Regiment, Canada. This trophy is given each year for the best shot among the sergeants of the Northumberland Regiment, and the first and only man so far to win it is Sergeant R. J. McGregor of "C" Company, Campbellford, who won in the sergeants' shooting match at the annual camp this summer at Presqu'ile Point. Although the shield was presented in 1931, this is the first year it has been up for competition. The trophy itself is a fine piece of work, comprising a large shield and eight small ones, all sterling silver, on an oak base.

TOMORROW'S GREAT PROGRAM.

With every department of the Exhibition open and with a complete program scheduled for tomorrow the attendance should be the largest registered so far this week especially in view of the fact that the horse race card contains an event that is attracting attention among horsemen in all parts of the country, namely the $500 stake event for three years olds.

Some of Canada's finest horses—undoubtedly the speediest field that has ever performed here have been attracted to Peterborough by the three stake events included in the card and it is safe to say that the result of tomorrow's race for three year olds will be awaited with interest by harness horse enthusiasts everywhere.

This particular race is mentioned in this way because we imagine that few people in this district realize the calibre of the horses entered at the Peterborough Industrial this year or have any idea of the treat that is in store for them.

The grandstand program, of course, includes many other fine features in addition to the races and the vaudeville performance is a show in itself.

When you add to this a wonderful array of exhibits and a large and up-to-the-minute midway you have an Exhibition that deserves record patronage.

Tomorrow and Saturday should see mammoth crowds in recognition of the all around merit of the Peterborough Industrial.

THE QUESTION OF RIGHTS.

"One cannot travel many blocks," says the Ottawa Journal, "without seeing motorists who ought to be in jail, pedestrians who would be quite safe in nothing more limited than a ten-acre field."

That condition, of course, is not peculiar to Ottawa; it can be duplicated here and doubtless everywhere else in Canada, and because it exists there is a heavy accident list and innumerable narrow escapes.

As the Journal points out, the streets belong to all the people and there can be no restrictions on their use except such as are inspired by common sense, the public safety and a decent regard for the rights of the other fellow. They must be used by those who drive motor cars and by those who walk and there should be no conflict of interest because the pedestrian of today is the motorist of tomorrow and there is no motorist who is not also a pedestrian on occasion.

There is this to remember, however, that the pedestrian cannot harm the driver of the motor car; the motorist is safe from personal injury so far as the careless walker is concerned, but the pedestrian is in peril of serious injury or death from the reckless driver.

That being the case it is clear that as the weaker factor in the traffic situation the pedestrian is entitled to and should have protection, although there are some motorists who drive as if those on foot had no right to be on the street, who drive too fast, turn corners too recklessly, dash across intersections and in general show a criminal disregard for the safety of others.

THE GRAND JURY GONE.

Canadian advocates of the grand jury as an essential feature of this country's judicial system and who are accustomed to point to British methods of justice as something to be religiously followed will be nonplussed by the disappearance of the grand jury in the United Kingdom.

We are told by the Manchester Guardian that with the exception of the Grand Jury for Middlesex, which may still be summoned in special cases, the last jury to attend assizes or quarter session in England has now been called.

"There need be few regrets over the final disappearance of this once important part of our legal system," says the English paper. "The weight of evidence and opinion in the controversy over its merits has long swayed against it, and its condemnation in March by the Lord Chancellor's committee on law reform finally turned the scale. The juries were supposed to be a safeguard against vexatious prosecutions by reducing the number of cases which were sent for trial but this work can be performed as effectively and more cheaply by other parts of the legal system."

The grand jury is already abolished in a number of Canadian provinces and it is to be hoped that Ontario will not be long in following their example and that set by the Mother Country.

As one contemporary puts it, the time is past when the grand jury was an essential bulwark of the individual's rights. In these days it is little more than a fifth wheel on the coach of justice.

AN OBSOLETE COMPETITION.

The narrow escape of several pairs of balloonists entered in the Bennett race and the hardships experienced by them before being rescued have convinced nearly everybody that it is time to abandon this competition.

As a matter of fact a balloon race in these days of rapid air transportation, is as obsolete as would be a race between covered wagons.

The sport—if it can be called that—is merely a gamble against death; the balloonists once they take off are at the mercy of the winds and where they will land depends entirely upon chance.

Nothing is contributed in the way of aeronautical discoveries to compensate for the risks that are run by the competitors; if the balloons were set adrift without pilots there would be as much learned from the race as there can be under the present conditions.

Those in charge of the Bennett race would be well advised to consider dropping the competition or changing its form so that it might do some good in aeronautical development; certainly the present race with its dangers for those who participate and its failure to serve anything that resembles a useful purpose is out of joint with the times and public opinion, as expressed in the press and elsewhere, is unanimously in favor of sending balloon racing to the limbo of forgotten things.

DANGER IN IDLENESS.

It is rather disturbing to read that nineteen-year-old boys top the lists of arrests for serious offenses in the United States during the first six months of the present year and that next in line come the eighteen-year-olds. This presents a problem which should attract the interest and the serious thought of all interested in growing youth and future generations.

Undoubtedly the scarcity of work contributes to this condition; which places all the more emphasis upon the necessity for solving the problem of unemployment.

This year, for instance, we have turned out of our schools and universities countless numbers of young men who are now ready to start their life-work. Only those who are lucky or whose parents have influence have any chance of being placed in jobs. The rest must remain idle, and it is as true today as it ever was that "Satan finds some mischief still for idle hands to do." No matter how strong the character a young man may possess idleness provides an influence which is deteriorating. Youth is the time for formulating opinions and habits which stick for life, and when a young man finds himself stranded on the very threshold of life his opinion of things in general is not apt to be a healthy one, especially if he is ambitious and anxious to succeed. This constitutes one of the greatest problems before the world to-day.—Chatham Daily News.

NATIONS STILL ARE NEIGHBORS.

Never have so many efforts been made as in the last few years to make the world conscious of its interdependence. And never, perhaps, have there been so many forces at work to strengthen the consciousness of separatism. Internationalism has been preached in every country; and in every country nationalism has become more apparent.

The contrast is extremely interesting. Many persons find it disappointing. There is a sense of disillusionment among those who were convinced that the modern tendency was toward larger and larger units, and greater and greater interlocking. They cannot understand what has happened. How is it that when everybody has paid lip service to the idea of universality—nay, when everybody has been genuinely persuaded of the need of solidarity—there should be failure after failure of the attempts to bring practice into conformity with precept? It is time to take our bearings again, and not to allow ourselves to repeat the phrases of yesterday without examining their validity to-day.

Looking at the external world with unprejudiced eyes, it is evident that the rulers and the masses, despite the prevalent ideology which they had accepted almost unanimously, still think chiefly in national terms. Scarcely anybody since the war has ventured to oppose the theory that commerce, finance, policy, communication, travel, machinery, morals, and a number of other manifestations of human activity, should be placed on a broader basis. Geographically, the globe would appear to have shrunk; airplanes link continent with continent, the voice of London is clearly heard in New York, the pictures of Hollywood are seen in France and China. In trade the products of America are exchanged for the products of Europe, while those of Asia and Africa are familiar in remote lands.

Nevertheless, there has been an apparent breakdown of the international machinery. Conferences have revealed the general desire for concerted action; but they have likewise revealed an astonishing recalcitrancy on the part of the individual nations. In comparatively restricted regions, such as the basin of the Danube for example, where an interchange of goods is vital to ordinary standards of living, there has been shown a reluctance to abandon the most noxious national prejudices. In a broader way, while disarmament by agreement has been recognised to be necessary, nationalist prides and fears have prevented any substantial accord. Opinion everywhere has condemned the erection of barriers to international exchanges, whether of tariffs or of money; yet when the matter is put to the proof, nations incline to withdraw within themselves and to proclaim a new autocracy.

Altogether, we have produced the amazing paradox of a conviction of international unity on one side, with the assertion of national independence on the other side. The contrast has recently become more glaring. There is open reaction against the experience and teaching of preceding years. Nationalism is in plain revolt against internationalism. Each country is bidden to look after itself, because the methods employed to reach an understanding among countries have not been successful.

That is the curious picture which is presented. Yet it is folly to oscillate from one extreme to the other. We should try to ascertain the reason for the failure of the methods hitherto employed—for the breakdown is assuredly merely a breakdown of method. We should not relinquish our consciousness of world interdependence; we should remain assured that, despite setbacks, the real tendency must be, and is, to the abolition of barriers, the pooling of our material resources, the spreading of a common culture—toward a state of affairs in which the distinction between that which is national and that which is foreign will be obliterated in that which is human.—Christian Science Monitor.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Put the Peterborough Industrial over the top. The two big days that are left should see record attendances registered.

Premier Henry is reported as flirting with relaxed liquor laws. Does that mean that the Government would rather face the electorate on that issue, than on its record?

Those who think that the horse is passing out of the picture should visit the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition. In every class there are superb entries.

It looks as if Mr. Ferguson was following the script closely when he intimated that it was time to do something about Ontario's liquor laws.

Peterborough people owe it to themselves to visit the Exhibition where they will find a host of entertaining and educative features.

Now is the time that the boys and girls of school age are "brought to book."—Toronto Star.

CHAPTER 23.

When Ted had burst open the door of the stateroom Sally had no idea what was happening. All that she knew was that something had struck her violently in the back, pitching her forward and with her Gus Vitelli. Then she realized that the pressure of his taut arms had relaxed and that he was lying on the floor under her. She leaped to her feet, stepped back, bumped against the door, knew then that it was open, and whirled and darted through it as if from a cage of tigers. She scrambled desperately up the ladder, barking her shins and tearing the flesh of her hands, darted toward the stern, stopped quickly, then raced back toward the cabin where there was light, where there were people and sanctuary. But as she ran she tripped over something and fell flat forward to the deck. For a moment she was stunned by the shock and the dull pain. When she tried to struggle to her feet Vitelli was approaching. He laughed, reached down and gathered her in his arms as if she were a mere rag doll.

Vitelli stumbled aft with her, clasping his rough, tobacco-smelling hand over her mouth, searching for a place of concealment. He set her down on her feet, still clamping his right hand over her mouth, and encircled her with his left arm in a vicious embrace of cruel, animal passion. She lost her breath and felt her body weaken against his. For a moment she thought she was losing consciousness. Then the hand left her mouth and in its place came Vitelli's loose, wet, hungry lips, exposing the yellow fangs. She writhed and managed to wriggle her head aside, swaying to his furious breathing. Suddenly the pressure of his arms relaxed; she felt a terrific push and went spinning away, backwards, stumbling, weak, breathless, scarcely conscious.

She struck the rail with her hip and lost her balance. She felt herself going over, as if pried by a strong lever. In her fright she clutched for the rail, felt it slip through her fingers, felt something tug violently at her dress, and the next she knew she felt the shock of the chilly water.

She went under in a rush and whirl of blackness and foam. Suffocatingly, the river closed over her for what seemed an interminable time and she fought for breath and struggled to reach the surface. When at last she felt the welcome air she looked about, treading water, and saw the stern of the yacht many yards down the river, rapidly leaving her behind. She was too weak to scream. Somehow she had sense enough to realize that she would have to save her strength; so she kicked off her shoes and ripped her dress from her body.

Her weight lightened, her mind somewhat clearer from the shock of the water, she looked about before trying to strike out and swim. On one side there was blackness broken only by an occasional light that seemed at least a mile away; on the other she could make out, closer, the tops of trees in the moonlight. Gradually her eyes became more accustomed to the darkness and she saw that on that side lay a maze of islands, heavily wooded, from which tall palms arched up into the air and were etched against the lighter background of the eastern sky. She kicked her feet to the surface and summoned her remaining strength for the swim. Hitting a rhythmic, steady crawl, she headed for the nearest island.

At first the distance had not seemed great but as Sally struggled on, lifting one weary arm, then the other, doggedly, she knew that she might not reach the shore. Still she swam. Until, finally, she let her arms drop, swung over on her back with what strength she had left, and tried to float. Her numb, heavy legs dropped down into the water and refused to help her. It was over. She could swim no more and she could not float. She closed her eyes, caught her breath, and prepared to sink. A little prayer flashed into her mind and her lips moved instinctively. There was a shock. Sally could not believe what had happened. But it had happened; her feet were on the bottom, a soggy, treacherous bottom, but the bottom nevertheless.

Courage and strength returned and she made a last effort to stumble up to the shore of the island. She took a few painful steps, fell, struck out and tried to swim a few strokes, found her feet again, stumbled on and at last fell forward upon the shore.

For nearly half an hour Sally lay there cold, wet, exhausted, sick at her stomach. She heard nothing, saw nothing, knew only that she was alive and on land and had no care whether she was asleep or awake. Finally, with a great effort, she sat up and looked about. It was then that she realized she was shaking with cold, clad only in her torn silk stockings, her soaking step-ins and lacy brassiere, her hair plastered upon her head. She could not remain there. There was but one thing to do, to move, to get her blood into circulation. After that she could prowl about. Perhaps she would find a shelter, a fire with which to warm and dry herself.

Sally rose and walked up and down the beach, waving her arms and clasping her slender, softly curved body. It occurred to her that it might be warmer in the thick jungle behind her, menacing as it looked. She turned and made her way forward slowly, carefully, to avoid the saw palmettos which cut at her bare legs and threatened to tear her filmy undergarments into shreds. She dodged palmettos, clambered over fallen tree trunks, left in the wake of the last vicious windstorm, the big blow to 1928, and gradually succeeded in penetrating the woods.

She walked until she felt her legs would drop away. Then she sat down on a log and rested, still cold, but by no means as weak and sick as she had felt when she first reached the shore. She rose and plunged on, sat again, rose again, and so it went for an hour at least, and still she saw nothing but trees, vines, palmettos, patches of white sand. How long it took her she had no idea, but at last the bitter realization forced its way stunningly into her mind, the realization that she was hopelessly lost on that island which at first had seemed small but now appeared as large as the world itself.

Sally felt sick inside again when she realized that she could have remained on the beach and awaited whatever assistance the yacht might have sent her when they noticed her disappearance. Perhaps they had noticed it instantly; perhaps they had seen her fall. It was well enough to think of these things now, but two or three hours ago in her desperation she had had only one thing in her mind and that was to find a place on solid ground where she could breathe free, clean, life-giving air.

Still she stumbled on, a strange, wild-looking creature, nearly naked, her arms and legs lined with the cruel red tracery of scratches, her yellow hair matted against her head and neck, a wild-looking, but a beautiful creature, hopelessly lost in a patternless chain of jungle islands.

After she had become numb, and again near to complete exhaustion, she came to a clearing. That is, at first it seemed to be a clearing, but then Sally knew that she must have crossed the island, at least must have reached another of its sides, for there before her lay a little stretch of water and beyond was another, smaller island. It did not take her long to make up her mind to try to wade across. The moon seemed to tell her that she was heading east. That meant that eventually, if she could cross these many islands and stretches of water she would reach the long peninsula on which the famous beach lay and might then have a chance to be picked up by some late motorist heading back toward Daytona Beach, some young chap out with his girl.

She plunged into the water, numb now to its chill, and began to wade. Fortunately it seemed shallow. She crossed carefully, a few steps at a time, reaching out then with one foot gingerly finding the bottom ascertaining that there were no deep holes. Each time she stopped she listened. Once she heard the curt, eerie cry of a seabird that swooped over her head. Later she heard a splash that made her draw back in fear. The thought entered her mind that it might have been an alligator, or a barracuda or shark. She had no idea what vicious water creatures the dark, tropical river might harbor.

At last, though, she reached the shore of the other island safely, the water never having been deeper than her waist, and again she plunged on through the brush and the trees.

This time she kept the moon always in sight and tried to steer her course by it so that she would travel due east and thus toward her goal, the beach. She hoped desperately that it was not far away, for by now her feet pained unbearably. She scarcely dared examine them for fear she might find them cut and bruised to the point of uselessness.

Sally sat for a while on a log and clutched her bosom and sides in her arms to retain what warmth was left in her aching, tortured body. There was no sound now in the woods, not even the rustling of a palm. So that when the sound did come Sally heard it with amazing clarity; it was a human voice; it seemed to come from the east. Who could have spoken? What sort o men would one find on these islands? Ted had told her that liquor runners were supposed to make some of these inlets their hiding places. Perhaps she would come upon such a band, tough, unscrupulous men, worse even than Vitelli.

With this fear in mind she worked her way cautiously forward until she came to another clearing and beheld in the river a low, dark boat that rode deep in the water as if heavily loaded. There was but one light, a faint, yellowish one, that came from one of the portholes. Sally crouched behind a clump of palmetto and listened, trembling. Again she heard the voice, guttural, foreign—and then another and a third. She listened carefully for what seemed to be hours, catching bits of profane conversation. Gradually she realized what sort of a boat this was. The scraps of talk she was hearing had told her. It was a liquor boat, lying in hiding.

She could not lie there, shivering, forever. Slowly, on her hands and knees, she started to creep forward toward the water well behind the boat. She could wade across this narrow inlet, swim if necessary, and then push on toward the beach. It could not be far. Inch by inch she crept forward. Suddenly there was a crashing in the brush.

"Hold on!" a voice shouted. Heavy footsteps came rapidly toward her. She sat back and looked up. A tall man was coming forward, covering her with a rifle.

ALL OF US

By MARSHALL MARLIN

A LOOK ON A WOMAN'S FACE.

Somehow every woman—as far as my observation has gone—looks upon almost every man as a child.

She may not say so. She's not likely to tell him that this is her opinion of him. But in her heart she feels that she is as old as the race of woman—that in her is the inherited wisdom of all the women who have ever lived—and that the experience of all mothers, all wives, all sweethearts, has come down to her.

But that a man, poor child, knows only what he has discovered and been told in this little life and cannot be expected to know very much; no matter how talented, how learned, how imposing, how perceptive, how dear and intelligent he may be.

How do I know all this?

Did any woman tell me?

Did I read it in a book?

No, I have read it on women's faces.

I have seen it in a certain way they look at men. (I have had that look turned on ME, too—and I know what it means, and it cannot mean anything else but this, that any woman feels wiser than any man.)

It's not a sneering look. It is not contemptuous, nor combative. It may be gentle and tender and serene. But, when a man once sees it on a woman's face, the battle is over, the argument is finished, there's nothing more to be said. Man's prestige is down, the woman's flag of victory is flying. Suddenly she sees him as a child, a stumbling, faltering, charming but limited child who knows little of life and can never—for all his vaunted powers of perception and analysis, know a tenth what a woman knows when she is born into this world.

(Do I agree that this is true? That has nothing to do with these paragraphs. I'm writing, merely, about a look I have seen on women's faces—and this is the end of the article.)

Strength is essential to him who would conquer life's difficulties, but it is the strength that comes to the man who, knowing his own weakness, calls on God's strength to support the deficiency.

ON THIS DATE

A DAY IN CANADIAN HISTORY

By Fred Williams

THE FOUNDER OF FORT GARRY.

On this date, in 1821, Nicholas Garry sailed from York Factory for London after having concluded peace between the Hudson's Bay and the North West Companies. He had crossed to New York in the 380-ton sailing ship Amity, the passage costing him 45 guineas for himself and £20 for his servant. He was met at New York by Simon McGillvray, one of the leaders of the N.W.C. (and, incidentally, afterwards one of the directors of the Canada Company, which colonized Wellington and Waterloo counties in Upper Canada). The rivals met with ceremony, but ere they had completed their long journey to the Red River they had become really friendly.

It was "some" journey. By one of the new fangled steamboats from New York to Albany, thence by stage and horse to Montreal, then by the old fur traders' route up the Ottawa and across the great lakes to Fort William, thence to the Red River. When they reached Bas de la Riviere (now Fort Alexander) the two envoys separated. Garry, not wishing, in view of the settlers' feeling toward the North West Company, to arrive in company with McGillivray, went on by himself, passing around the southern shore of Lake Winnipeg. On the way, he met "a chief called Cut Nose, from having lost part of his nose in a fight," who proved to be Pigewis, the chief of the Saulteaux tribe. This chief was quite an intelligent chap. He showed Garry a testimonial as to his character and friendliness towards the settlers given him by Lord Selkirk and pleased Garry greatly by denouncing the North Westers in strong language and praising the H.B.C., as the protectors of the Indians. One thing which he told Garry, and which is recorded in the latter's diary, was that Selkirk let his nails grow to a great length and used them to take down in shorthand "the conversations which he had with people, and which he did unobserved."

Garry made his headquarters at the Hudson's Bay house, situated between Fort Douglas, the fort of the Selkirk colony, and Fort Gibraltar, on the banks of the Assiniboine, the outpost of the N.W.C. A month was spent in negotiation and investigation. At the Hay Farm (afterwards Deer Lodge, occupied years later by Donald A. Smith) he records having found tamed buffalo, as to which he wrote: There were two female buffaloes and a young bull, which is an interesting fact in natural history," and one not believed in England, though the hybrid was later sent to London, via York Factory, to convince the sceptics to be placed in the London, and to 'die of the cold'."

The selection of Fort Garry is told of: "The North West fort at the Red River, being in a better position than the Hudson's Bay House (it being at the confluence or forks of the Assiniboine and Red Rivers) and there being the framework of an excellent house, I had asked Mr. Burd, the gentleman in charge, to change the house, but, fearing the changing of the Hudson's Bay fort to the North West might have a bad effect on the Indians, I requested Mr. Burd to remain in the Hudson's Bay house." It is quite evident that the Hudson's Bay fort did not receive the name of Fort Garry until after Garry's departure, as to which he makes the quaint remark: "I stopped at Fort Douglas and was nearly thrown from my horse by the firing of cannon in honor of my departure, so true it is that honors sometimes make us lose our balance."

The entire voyage from the Red river to York factory is described by Garry in detail, together with many conversations he had en route. He makes mention of Rev. John West, the first Anglican missionary "who had married many couples and baptized their children," but "who in his preaching mistakes his point, fancying that by touching severely and pointedly on the weaknesses of people he will produce repentance." But, despite that criticism, when he was asked to subscribe towards the formation of an auxiliary Bible society he did so, and it was formed on the spot, no less than £120 being paid in by those present in the H.B. post.

It was November 1st before he reached London and reported to his directors that peace with honor had been arranged in the Great West. A a reward he was made deputy governor of the company and held that office until 1835.

Character From Handwriting

By BLANCHE A. DRAPER

A Feature Conducted by Peterborough's Leading Handwriting Analyst for the Readers of The Examiner.

Jean Dawson, Baliieboro, Ontario: A friendly disposition is emphasized in this sample of handwriting for analysis. You are progressive and industrious, but you often leave your actions open to discussion. That is to say: Other people do not always understand the 'why and wherefore' of things as you do them and, your nature being secretive and sincere, you will not divulge your motive. You seem to say to yourself, "All right, let them think what they like, I know what I am doing." One thing that you are, and that is genuine. You are also talented and intelligent, your mind is keen and instructive. You are intuitive and enthusiastic, quick in your actions and do not like anyone who dawdles about a task. You want to get at your work and put your best into it before you become mentally and physically tired. Therefore, you find that quite often in the course of events, you are tired to such an extent that sleep which is restful will not come to you, and your dreams are fantastic and frightful. Work where the use of shears for cutting purposes should appeal to one of your type. There are too many lines in which you could apply your talent in this manner to enumerate.

Mrs. Wesley Chamberlain, R. R. No. 3, Hastings, Ontario: The handwriting as distinguished on your sample for analysis shows that you like to act on your own initiative. It also reveals the fact that you are gifted with keen insight and intuition. Your disposition is changeable according to circumstances and people, but is usually otherwise the same from day to day. When you 'flare up' you soon get over it, and do not continually harp upon the misdeeds of others. Your general character is excellent and you merit a position of trust.

Ruth Dawson, Baliieboro, Ontario: The handwriting as described on your sample for analysis delineates you as a person who is trying to be methodical. You put a lot of energy into any project which you undertake, but you do not always get the results that you had anticipated. This is in part due to the pressure under which you subject your nervous system. The subconscious mind refuses to obey the command urged upon it by undue restrictions. However, you have not yet reached the top of the ladder, and there is sufficient time in which to choose your life-work. At present I might suggest work where you could use your ability to figure rapidly, for that characteristic is predominant in the main outline and formation of your writing. You have a rather lovable disposition and you are sensitive to hurt. You would not willingly hurt the feelings of another. Yet you find that many times people seem to thank you little for your efforts. You are most sensitive about your personal clothing, and want to dress as you think best. Your taste is good, but a little advice on the subject would assist you greatly many times when your choice of color might otherwise ruin the whole aspect of a new gown. Colors should be chosen to suit your personality for some time to come, especially if you are to enjoy the society of the right kind of people.

Miss Marcella Doherty, R. R. No. 1, Indian River, Ontario: Your handwriting shows that just now you do not seem at all decided what to do for your life-work. I might suggest the care of small children or else work in a department store. Your capital letters suggest an artistic talent but this would necessitate long hours of study in order to bring you any real helpful monetary consideration, and as I do not think you are cut out for a career of any nature in the business world, I would say that you might make more of this talent as a hobby. Your disposition is so changeable that you are not the type to stick to one line of endeavor for long at a time, that is unless you are still under eighteen years of age. For if you are, then your writing will change to one of more definite purpose within the next few years. However, you are fond of fun, and seem to have a very good spirit of humor. This is in itself an asset and should assist you greatly in any work, no matter where you are.

Jean B. Davis, Charles Street, E., Toronto, Ontario: The handwriting as delineated on your sample for analysis shows that you are gifted with a persistent nature, and if you set about to undertake anything you usually manage to accomplish it. You are perhaps a little inclined to want your own way and to be stubborn about it, but if success is to come to you, it will have to be through this very characteristic. So do not be discouraged. You have a lot of determination and I feel sure that you will eventually reach your goal. Your disposition is usually about the same, but there are times when you want to be alone in order to think things out for yourself. However, that is not detrimental to your general good character and solitude is beneficial to all of us at some time or other. You are quite humorous and fun-loving, rather a good sport, and enjoy the friendship of others who are about your own age and who are as mentally keen as you are.

Market Closing On All Exchanges

WINNIPEG EXCHANGE.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 14 (C.P.). — Minimum price restrictions, that have covered trade on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange since August 15, were swept aside at an emergency meeting of the exchange membership to-day and wheat values, though dipping lower immediately after the announcement, maintained a very favorable appearance. At mid-session values were ½ to ⅝ cent lower, with October future the only option below the former "pegged" level.

The nearby option sagged more than a cent and then recovered to stand ½ cent down at 69¾ cents, December was ¼ lower at 71⅝, and May at 76⅞, was off ⅛ cent.

Export business in Canadian wheat overnight was good, and further export purchases were made in the pit to-day. No figure was placed on sales, but this buying was a distinctively bullish factor.

CHICAGO EXCHANGE.

CHICAGO, Sept. 14.— (C.P.) — Bounding vigorously upward in active dealings, grain prices scored decided new gains early to-day. Advances went hand in hand with assertions in some quarters that agriculture was on the way to preeminently higher prices.

A violent temporary setback, however, followed news that the artificial fixed minimum on wheat prices at Winnipeg had been removed.

Opening ⅞-2¼ cents higher, wheat later lost most of the gain, and then rallied. Corn started at 1½ cents advance and subsequently reacted somewhat.

WALL STREET.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14 (C.P.).—Inflationary fires flamed anew to-day and a brisk forenoon demand for stocks carried prices 1 to more than 3 points higher. Advances were paired in the afternoon, but trading turned dull on the selling. Alcohols and gold mining shares were the most buoyant divisions. Utilities were a trifle irregular. Consolidated Gas lost a point. U.S. Steel ruled about unchanged. Homestake was up 19 points. National Distillers and U.S. Smelting registered gains of about 5 each. Chrysler, Cerro de Pasco, American Telephone and Case were up 2 or more. Transfers approximated 2,800,000 shares.

THOMPSON EXCHANGE.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 14.—(C.P.) — Bereft of their supporting "peg," which was removed to-day by unanimous vote of exchange members, wheat prices dropped sharply on the Winnipeg grain exchange and closed 3¼ to 7⅛ below yesterday's final qquotations

Largest Canadian export business in some time, estimated at more than 1,000,000 bushels was insufficient to stem the downturn, as heavy selling from elevator interests against country deliveries swept the market.

All options closed well below the previous minimum quotations. October wheat dropped to 66⅞, December finished at 78¾ and May delivery wound up at 74½ cents.

The session was the most active in several days. Only a moderate business was done in cash grains and coarse grains slipped off in sympathy with wheat futures and under pressure of accumulated "hedges."

MONTREAL EXCHANGE.

MONTREAL, September 14 (C. P.).— Prices on the Montreal Stock Exchange exhibited a stronger tone to-day with the close finding the majority of leaders holding small gains. Sales volume was of substantial proportions.

The liquors were weak with Canadian Industrial Alcohol at 21¾ and the B at 19¼, both losing ¼. National Breweries eased ⅛ at 27½. International Nickel was up 50c at 21.90, while Canadian Pacific Railway and Brazilian Traction were each ⅛ higher. Montreal Power lost ⅝ at 36⅝.

STANDARD EXCHANGE

TORONTO, Sept 14 (CP)—A new barrage of inflation reports from Washington started heavy buying in the base metal and silver shares to-day on the Standard Mining Market, while some of the senior gold shares were under accumulation The whole market moved into higher ground and held the big end of the gains despite profit-selling in the late afternoon

In heavy trading International Nickel advanced to $22 and closed at 21.95 for a gain of 70 cents.

Noranda chalked up a gain of 50 cents and the other base metal shares held firm.

TORONTO EXCHANGE

TORONTO, Sept. 14 (CP)—Industrial stocks rolled along to a higher close to-day on the Toronto Stock Exchange, although it was slowed down at intervals by waves of profit-selling. Distillery shares were market leaders, but wide trading interest was shown also in metal and food shares, due to expectation of new steps at Washington of an inflationary nature.

International Nickel swept up to $22, up 75 cents. Brazilian, C.P.R. and Ford of Canada had narrow fractions to the good at the close.

Trading was heavy in the distillery shares and most of them closed unchanged. Walkers Common weakened from 53¼ to close unchanged at 52½. Distillers Seagram at 32, and Industrial Alcohol at 22 were steady, and Brewers and Distillers dropped about 15 cents.

New Slogans Out Palmolive Flakes

"Use Palmolive Princess Soap Flakes and don't have red hands" is the slogan adopted for the new Princess Flakes which are guaranteed by the Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Company, Limited, to make wash day a pleasure and the clothes whiter than ever.

Then there are the new Super Suds. "beads of soap," described as "four times as thin as chips or flakes," with iridiscent, colored soap bubbles advertising their excellences.

"Instant, lasting suds for faster, easier dish-washing' is one of the claims for these pearls of soap.

They all come in the gay paper cartons that blossom out in yellow, blue and red, with a pencilling of white.

A Relic

CHATHAM, Ont., Sept. 14 (CP)—The old fire bell which rang our alarms from the hall here for more than 40 years is now for sale. But there was some diffesence of opinion as to whether the old bell should be sold.

Alderman Eastman said he would hate to see it go for $600 less than it cost. "Perhaps Mr. Eastman is thinking of that museum we might have some day, and in which the bell could be placed," suggested Mayor Davis.

"Eactly what I am thinking," was the reply, and the price was set at $150.

High Strung

NORWICH, Ont., September 14 (C.P.). — Because the noise of rifle fire was claimed to have seriously affected the laying tendencies of pullets on a poultry farm here, Cadets at the High School near the farm must seek a new location for their rifle practice. Complaint was made to the School Board and it was agreed to seek a range for target practice.

SPORT OF KINGS
By ART MURRAY
(Special to Examiner.)

COMMON IS in great shape at the present time and his connections like him awfully well. He is not blessed with any too much staying power but has a lot of early speed, and if he gets away winging will be a tough one to catch. Zegora was made the medium of a large play on Monday but got away last and closed an immense gap to finish fourth, going fastest of all at the finish. He will be well meant his next start.

EXHIBITION IS due for a winning effort and Dude Foden will be in the pilot' house. This is one of Conny Smythe's ace two-year-olds. Don't forget that Federal Reserve still has a few good efforts left in him and a little mud under his feet helps him a lot. Bushman has been running far below form lately but any day he runs his true race there are not many platers on the Canadian circuit that can run him down.

* * *

ANOTHER ONE of Conny Smythe's is Carydon. He has been kidding the troops lately and is just waiting until everything is set. Frigid Frosty is back again fresh from a successful campaign at Montreal and Ottawa tracks. This one will hold his own in any Canadian bred distance event. We look for George E. Miller to perform in winning form from now on. This westerner is in tip top condition and is all ready for the question. Old Mr Gaiety has lost a lot of his old time zip but we still think there are a few wins left in his aged legs. He is as fit at present as human hands can make him.

SLYAT WAS the best claim of the Canadian racing season. Newmarck, his present owner took him this spring for $2000 and today he could not be bought for several times that amount. On Saturday last he beat such good horses as Khorasan, Neverfade and several other topnotchers.

Home at Last

BRANTFORD, Ont., Sept. 14 (C.P.).—A gold watch, lost by its owner 18 years ago, was found to-day about 100 yards from where it had been dropped.

The old timepiece was lost by Myrtle Aitchison, then 16, while she was skating on the Grand River near Slingsbys Mills. It had been given to her as a Christmas present not long before. To-day the owner, now Mrs. William Edwards, again has the watch in her possession.

OMEMEE HYDRO BOARD MEETS

Dr. Moir is Guest Speaker as Men's Association Holds Opening Session.

'WIDE AWAKES' ACTIVE.

OMEMEE, Sept. 14 (Examiner Correspondence)—All the members of the Hydro Commission with the exception of the chairman, Mr. T. C. Ivory who is confined to his bed through sickness, met in the council chambers Monday evening. Reeve James Magee took Mr. Ivory's place as chairman. A number of bills were ordered to be paid and Mr. Morcombe the supervisor of the system was authorized to buy some needed supplies.

Discussion then took place on the wisdom of changing some of the steel wires on the system to copper wires but a decision was left until a later date. The commission then adjourned until the first Wednesday in October. Those present were Reeve James Magee, Mr. S. Mills, Mr. A. Stinson, Mr. L. Morcombe, Mr. C. Mills and Dr. W. H. McPhee.

The opening meeting of the Wide Awake Mission Band was held in the basement of Trinity United Church on Monday afternoon, with the president Jean Laidley in charge.

Following a few items of business Mrs. Reddick introduced the study book for this term which was followed by the memory verse.

Miss Doreen Morcombe contributed a much appreciated vocal number as also did the Misses Deyell.

The story of the "Chinese Kite Flyer" was told to the children by Mrs. McPhee after which a number of Chinese curiosities were shown them.

The leaders of the four groups then lined up their groups and each one repeated their slogan.

The meeting closed by repeating the benediction.

A splendid crowd was on hand for the opening meeting of the Men's Association which took the form of an open meeting held in Trinity United Church Sunday evening.

Mr. Sandy, who is the president, introduced the guest speaker, Dr. Moir of Peterborough, who delivered a very inspiring address on the "Ills of to-day and how to remedy them."

The male quartet from Cambray was present and gave two vocal selections "When Mother Prayed" and "Say Brother, What More Could He Do."

Presentations Made At Farewell Party

EAST EMILY, Sept. 14 (Examiner Correspondence)—On Friday evening, September 8th about sixty friends and neighbors of Mrs. R. J. Tulley and family gathered at their home on the Peterborough-Lindsay highway to bid them farewell before they leave for their new home, Mrs. Tulley having sold her farm to a party from Toronto.

Mr. Wilfred Howden read a very fitting address of regret at losing them from the Lakevale Presbyterian Church and neighborhood. While Mrs. Tulley was presented with an arm chair and foot rest and Bertha and Mrs. Kelly (Grace) silver salt and peppers and Jean and Kay with leather purses, after which Miss Jean Tulley in a few well chosen words thanked all present for their kindness.

Then all joined in singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows."

Rev. Mr. McNeal gave a short speech and the rest of the evening was spent in games and contests, refreshments being served at midnight.

Red Leather Belt

By LISBETH

One usually thinks of a belt as a modest accessory to a dress, but the red patent leather belt of this black crepe frock worn by Jean Muir, screen player, insists on being the most striking part of the frock. Wide belts are good style just now.

The fichu collar, which adds a youthful note, is tucked chiffon.

KEENER INTEREST BEING TAKEN IN HORSE EXHIBITS AT THE 'EX'

Big List of Entries From Breeders In The District.

LIST OF BREEDERS

Emphasis on the breeding of better horses in this district has been a consistent policy of the Peterborough Exhibition Board, and while there have been recent years when the machine seemed to be encroaching everywhere in the equine domain, pushing horses down to a subordinate position, the directors never lost faith in their cause.

This year their plans have been rewarded with a big list of entries from breeders of the district, with two notable displays by Gilbert E. Arnold of Grenville, and R. Duff and Son of Myrtle, who are showing at Peterborough for the first time after successfully competing in Toronto.

Breeders of Durham County, particularly from Cavan Township, are again prominent in this department of the Fair; South Monaghan is well represented, and Peterborough farmers have accepted the challenge that seems to be keener than ever this year.

T. H. Graham is chairman of this committee, assisted by the following directors: W. Rosborough, R. T. Lillico, C. Hanbridge, Tom Brown, Geo. Hooton and D. B. Falkner.

C.C.F. PLATFORM—POLICY No. 2
SOCIALIZATION OF FINANCE

To The Editor of The Examiner,

Dear Sir,—An aroused public opinion assures eventual reorganization of our industrial economic system, to promote the well being of the whole of the peole, and not the interests of a selfish few industrial and financial magnates.

These latter gain power only in dividing the people, by rousing their fears, killing faith and preventing decision. We stand for a square deal for everyone, and no favors, and know those who would rouse fears, and incite distrust, to be the enemies of justice, or tied and gagged by tradition and prejudice to a system whose law is the law of the jungle only.

Remember, science and invention are moving inexorably on. Sociology and economics must advance also, or the machine, instead of serving, will destroy this civilization as previous ones, because of selfish greed and helpless fear. Which class do each of us stand with—the greedy—the helpless—or those who believe in a new age and will work for it? Socialization of banking, currency, credit and insurance to make possible the effective control of currency, credit and prices and the supplying of new productive equipment for socially desirable purposes.

Planning the social state will require the control of finance and of all those vital industries and services which if they remain in private hands can be used to thwart or corrupt the will of the people. Control of finance is the first step. Chartered banks must be removed from the control of private, profit-seeking interests. The national banking system thus established, must have at its head a Central Bank to control the flow of credit and general price level, and to regulate foreign exchange operations. A National Investment Board must also be set up, working in co-operation with the banking system, to mobilize and direct the unused surpluses of production for desirable purposes as determined by the Planning Commission.

Insurance companies, one of our main channels for investment of individual savings, which [illegible] present competitive organizations charge needlessly high premiums for the social service they render, must also be socialized.

Our policy therefore is socialization of the whole fabric from finance up.

Premier Bennett agrees as far as natural resources are concerned—"I believe there is no government in Canada that does not regret to-day that it has parted with natural resources for considerations wholly inadequate and on terms that do not reflect the principle under which the crown holds natural resources in trust for all the people." Again, "I cannot think any government would be warranted in leaving the air to private exploitation and not for development for use of all the people."

Royal Bank letter says, "National planning—an idea developed in a rapid and spectacular form by the Russians, but of necessity forcing itself upon all of us? Individualism in the old sense is no longer possible, and laissez faire and the invisible hand are outdated, when we are compelled to acknowledge that co-operation on a base even as broad as the national one, is inadequate."

Stuart Chase, well known economist says, "Certain leading citizens regard government credit as private property to be doled out to bankers and railroad bondholders. The very mention of letting the people benefit by their own credit throws some of these prominent citizens into a paroxysm. Better, I heard one banker say, universal bankrupty than one dollar of inflation. These brave boys on burning bridges may stand a moment too long."

Sir William Beveridge, London School of Economics—"This is essentially a money crisis. There is a breakdown in the machinery of exchange. What we have is a fall of prices, representing deflation of money."

Sir Basil Blackett, Bank of England director: "In view of what we have done with currency and currency has done with us in the last twenty years, we are all of us fit for the lunatic asylum. If many currency experts go mad, it is the natural result of their coming face to face with the insanity of the monetary systems with which man has tortured himself ever since he passed from barter to money. Money was meant to be a yardstick with which to measure the value to be put on commodities and services in process of being exchanged for each other but throughout the ages mankind has never been able to devise a monetary yardstick which did not at one time measure an inch and at another a hundred inches.

"In the forefront of the reforms which the planned twentieth century demands is a stable money whose purchasing power will remain constant. It is to our failure to seize this primary necessity of any rational monetary system that our present distress is preeminently to be attributed to."

Joseph S. Bell,
203 Hunter St. W.

Charm In a Troubled Moment

IRENE DUNN

Few persons are able to look charming when they have something weighing heavily on their minds. As an exception, take a squint at Irene Dunn, who appears quite troubled over something, but still retains her charm. This trouble moment, as a matter of fact is not her own, being merely a part of her portrayal of the character, "Ann Vickers," in the screen version of the novel by the same name.

GOLF CLUB FIRE COSTS $65,000

Main Building of Montreal Suburban Course is Mass of Ruins.

EQUIPMENT DESTROYED.

MONTREAL, Sept. 14. —(CP)—Blackened ruins flanked by the women's and the professional wings were all that remain today of the club house of the Montreal Country club.

Damage estimated at more than $65,000 was caused yesterday when the main part of the club house was destroyed by fire, probably as a result of defective furnace apparatus. The main hall, dining room, committee room, men's locker room, the quarters of the staff and the spacious verandah were a mass of wind-fanned flames when firemen arrived from the nearby town of St. Lambert. They concentrated on saving the wings which suffered only minor damage from smoke and water.

Destruction of members' equipment in the men's locker room may considerable increase early estimates of the damage, it was said. The building itself was completely covered by insurance.

One of the oldest organizations of its kind in this district, the Montreal Country Club was widely known. It was among the first to building a golf course.

EUROPE'S FIRST PEACE ARMY SCOTS CALL DEFENCE FORCE

Being Raised to Resist Conscription, to Uphold Tentative Neutrality

'FREE SCOTS" RALLY

Edinburgh.—What has been described by its leaders as the first "peace army" in the world, is being organized and trained in Scotland.

This defence force is being mobilized by the Democratic Scottish Self-Government Organization, officials of which state they already have over 45,000 recruits and adherents.

The purpose of the defence force, they declare, is to resist conscription, if and when Britain is involved in war, and to declare Scotland's neutrality until the Scottish people have decided for themselves their attitude to the war.

Drill is already in progress and, when companies are properly organised, they will probably be equipped with uniforms, kilted, if possible.

It is expected by the leaders that the formation of this force will bring to a head certain aspects of the Self-Government Organization's policy, and any questions of illegality will be fought. In fact, a test case will be welcomed.

Want No More Wars

Raonnull Douglas, one of the leaders, pointed out that the Scottish Defence Force was no new idea and plans to develop such an army had been considered for nearly three years.

At present, the movement finds its chief strength in Edinburgh, Glasgow and Fife.

Mr. Douglas and his associates believe that in the event of another European war, Britain (or England, as he was careful to describe it) must of necessity take an active part, no matter what the cause—this as a result of the Locarno pact.

The imminence of war, he said, was increasingly obvious. Trouble might break out in a few months or in a few years: the danger was ever-present these days.

They believed that Scotland was not under any obligation to take part in England's wars, nor that the Scottish people wanted to. In the event of conscription, however Scots would be called up. It was their intention not to be dragged through another war.

"Scotland, by so declaring her neutrality," said Mr. Douglas, "will automatically regain her freedom and autonomy."

Not Communist or Fascist

The organization of a trained force, which could not have arms at present, was their immediate aim.

Recently recruits were called for at a public meeting at the Mound, Edinburgh, and a large body thereupon marched along Princes St. to the music of bagpipes, a body which they claimed to be the first free Scots to march through Edinburgh in military formation since Prince Charles Edward's Highlanders entered in 1745.

Another parade was held in Glasgow.

The right of membership, continued Mr. Douglas, was open to every physically fit Scotsman between the age of 18 and 45, who took the necessary oath. Women, of course, were precluded from joining the force.

"We are not Communist and we are not Fascist, and as far as we are aware, there is nothing to stop any Scot from joining us," he said in conclusion.

MOCK STILETTO DUEL CAUSES BOY'S DEATH

Stabbed Himself Accidentally, Says Coroner's Jury Exonerating Italian Girl

Herne Bay.—Arthur Pearson, aged 15, was fatally wounded here at a charity fete while playing with an Italian girl of 19, Louise Fasciotti, who is in England to learn the language.

The girl offered her blood for a transfusion. When told the boy had died she fainted.

Testifying at the inquest Leslie Plowright said Pearson took two stilettos from his pocket and handed one to Miss Fasciotti. They began to fence with them. Pearson suddenly stumbled towards the girl and screamed. The girl said, in French: "What have I done?"

Afterwards the girl told him she thought the stiletto was a theatrical weapon, the blade of which disappeared into the handle upon contact.

Miss Fasciotti, giving evidence, said she had been with the boy and his sister and a friend at a cabin on the beach and they threw stilettos at a wall like Red Indians. She met Pearson casually at the fete in the evening.

He gave her a stiletto and took up the attitude of a swordsman. "I took up the same attitude," she continued, "and we crossed stilettos. We only played about in the air.

"I think it is impossible that my stiletto struck him because I did not feel any resistance against it. He moved his foot and lunged forward and then ran away."

Dr. F. C. Cozens said the wound pointed to Pearson having accidentally stabbed himself.

A verdict that the boy accidentally stabbed himself and died from misadventure was returned. Miss Fasciotti was exonerated.

CROWD OF 500 CHASE MAN

But "Double-Murder" Found to Have Been Merely Wordy Dispute

Manchester.—A crowd of 500 chased a man to sanctuary in the Willert St. police station here when a rumor, which originally said he had beaten up his wife, grew in passing from mouth to mouth until the crowd believed he had slain his mother-in-law and was suspected of murdering his grandmother. When the police checked up, they discovered the whole thing lifted down to nothing more than some heated words exchanged at a house in Miles Platting.

BULL FIGHTING PROFITABLE

Madrid.—There are 1,300 well-patronized bull rings in Spain, Portugal, France, Mexico and South America, some of which pay their best fighters as much as $1,750 a performance.

KING SMILES AT CRY 'BLESS THE OLD MAN'

"Just Homely English Couple" Is Leeds' Verdict

Leeds—"Just a homely English couple, that's what they are," said a working man on the edge of the crowd, his face alight with admiration as the King and Queen stepped from their open carriage.

That man spoke the inarticulate thoughts of the thousands who thronged the streets to catch a glimpse of the King and Queen with an escort of Life Guards on their way to open the new civic hall.

"God bless the old man," shouted a man in the front row of the crowd. The King heard it, and his smile was not the smile of ceremony.

LACKS THREE FINGERS IS GIFTED ORGANIST

Balked as Surgeon, Artilleryman Wins Law Degrees, Gets A.R.C.O.

London. — When Reginald Silby Lewis presented himself to try for the Associateship of the Royal College of Organists and when he sat at the console to render two difficult test pieces, to play from a vocal score in four parts, and to transpose a hymn-tune at sight, the six examiners concealed behind a screen had no knowledge that this particular candidate had three fingers missing from his right hand.

No concession was made to him, but he reached the high standard demanded and he passed with flying colors.

In August, 1914, Mr. Lewis was a keen amateur musician and a medical student. Four years later as an artillery officer at Ypres his right hand was shattered.

After months in hospital and a dozen operations he came back to civilian life with nothing left of his right hand but the thumb and index finger. That was the end of his prospects as a surgeon and it seemed to him even more decidedly the end of his music.

He decided to turn his attention to the law, went up to Cambridge to study economics and law, and came back with the degrees M.A. and LL.B. But he lacks the funds to take examinations for the bar and so he took such appointments as he could get. In due course he found himself in the ranks of unemployed.

With time on his hands his mind went back to his music. Why not set himself the A.R.C.O. as an objective? All manner of problems were involved. Many of the parts in organ music written to be played with the right hand obviously could not be played by his right hand. He redistributed the parts, assigning to the left hand some of the notes intended for the right, and to the pedals some of the notes intended for the left hand.

WRECKING PEER'S HOME

London.—Alderley Park, Cheshire, the ancestral home of Lord Stanley of Alderley, is in the hands of housebreakers.

Last year almost 10,000 trees were auctioned for future felling. Already large piles of felled timber lie on the estate awaiting removal.

Lord Stanley succeeded to the title in 1931, and found that death duties and other taxes made it impossible to maintain the large mansion.

OLD BILL NOW GETS HIS FISH AUTOMATICALLY

The automatic machine that throws fish into the seal pond in the Zoo has wrought a wonderful change in the sea lion, Old Bill, and his companions. Instead of roaring at intervals and hoping that the keeper will soften his heart and bring a snack between meals, they now study the box into which kind people insert their sixpences to operate the machine. A coin brings forth three fishes and the sea lions know just where the fish will drop when catapulted out. The picture shows Old Bill with a pathetic look on his face encouraging the crowd to put sixpences in the new machine

LADDER FALL KILLS BULLET-DEFYING V.C.

Sergeant Ripley Was Pride of Kitchener's Army

St. Andrews.—Sergeant John Ripley, the first man in Kitchener's army to win the V.C., died here—through failing from an 18-foot ladder while examining water pipes.

At Rue de Bois on May 9, 1915, Ripley was the first man of his battalion to ascend the enemy's parapet in an assault on the German line.

He and seven or eight men established themselves in a position which he defended after all his comrades had fallen. He was wounded in the head.

Sergeant Ripley had nearly 30 years' service in the army.

VOTER MUST STAY DEAD

Revision Court Cannot Replace Him Although He Survived Illness

Kettering.—A man was refused the vote here on the ground that he was officially dead.

Some time ago the men, who lives at Burton Latimer, near Kettering, became ill, and doctors thought he was going to die. Local officials had so much faith in the doctors that they struck the man off the list as dead.

But the patient refused to die. He recovered and demanded his vote, but the revision court claimed it couldn't "resurrect" him.

CIRCUS GIRL, 50 FEET IN AIR FAINTS ON TINY PLATFORM

Thunder Shakes Tent as Ladders Rushed to Her Rescue

Bristol.—While heavy peals of thunder shook the circus tent, one of the girl trapeze artists in a circus here fainted on a small platform 50 feet above the ground.

She was one of the Great Wallendas, trapeze artists and wire walkers, who had just completed a daring trick in which she balanced on her hands on the shoulders of a man sitting in a chair, which was in turn supported by two other artists standing on the slack wire.

The men had just slid down ropes to the ground, expecting the girl to follow them, when it was noticed that she had fainted.

While the audience was still excitedly applauding the act, it was noticed that the girl had collapsed. The clapping quickly changed to gasps of apprehension and horror as the audience realized that one little move on the part of the unconscious girl meant almost certain death.

Under the direction of the ringmaster, circus hands ran into the ring with ladders and clambered up to the girl.

High up in the tent the rescuers revived the girl sufficiently for her to be guided down the ladder to safety.

When she had been taken to her dressing tent and the audience reassured that she was none the worse for her experience, there were loud cheers and applause.

MAKE SCOT RECORDS IN ANCIENT CASTLE

Earl of Lauderdale's Compositions Among Featured Music

Glasgow.—A centuries-old Scottish castle has become the scene of a modern industry, and the laird, scion of an ancient Highland family, is engaged in directing the venture.

Gramophone records are now being made in a building at the Megginch Castle, Perthshire, by means of a recording plant perfected by the owner of the estate, John Drummond.

Scottish performers and Scottish songs and music are featured throughout on the records.

Among modern dance numbers recorded are two played by an Edinburgh orchestra and composed by the Earl of Lauderdale, a Scottish peer who has acquired a reputation for his songs and dance music.

SEAGULL IS CRONY OF WHITBY SKIPPER

Feeds From Hand, Roosts on Boat, Knows Name

Whitby.—Here is the story of a strange friendship—of Skipper Eglon of Pierlme, who spends his spare time with seagulls.

All seagulls are welcomed by Skipper Eglon, but there is one favorite. No matter what time Mr. Eglon puts his boat to sea, he is always sure of one faithful follower—a well-grown gull which Mr. Eglon has christened "Billy."

When the boat leaves the harbor, "Billy" swoops gracefully down, takes a morsel from Skipper Eglon's hand, and then goes to the bow of the boat, anxiously awaiting the time when the lines will be shot for their fish harvest and he will be rewarded by a feed of fish.

The most remarkable feature of this strange friendship is that "Billy" knows his name.

LOSES FORTUNE BY WEDDING

Maidstone.—Although heir to a trust fund of £20,000 bequeathed to her by the late John Samuel Newlyn, a 74-year-old company director, on condition that she did not marry, Miss Marjorie Joyce Clementson, daughter of the late rector of Staplehurst, Kent, was married here to Bernard Thorpe of Alderley Edge, Cheshire.

THREE BATTLESHIPS OF AIR HAVE TORPEDO-FIRING GEAR

RANGE 1,500 MILES

Brough. — Three flying battleships which will surpass any armored flying boats in existence are being built behind closed doors for the British government at the naval construction works here in East Yorkshire.

These fighting monsters are for use by the Royal Air Force in co-operation with the navy.

There has been the utmost secrecy during the early stages of construction. Only now that the seaplanes are taking shape is their full importance to the science of flying and aircraft construction being realized, even by those actually engaged upon them.

An official said: "These giant flying boats would not have been built yet, probably, if it were not for the fact that three huge flying boats built for the Royal Air Force within the last two or three years have sunk.

"One sank at its moorings at Felixstowe and two others went down at Mount Batten. The reasons for their sinking had nothing to do with their construction. They were all of the Iris class.

"The three now under construction are all of the Iris six class, but are larger than their predecessors and embody later inventions and improvements, and will be more formidable from the military point of view."

The largest previous military flying boat weighed thirteen tons. When the latest flying battleships take off from the Humber sixteen tons of flying metal will go whizzing through the air.

The metal used for previous military flying boats has been duralumin. The three latest air wonders are being built of a new metal called alclad, said to be as light as aluminum and as strong as the heaviest metal known.

Remarkable progress has been made since the first Irish flying boat was launched here in the presence of representatives of every recognised government in the world. It was built of wood and fabric.

The three machines of the Iris six class now under construction will have engines capable of developing 2,400 horse power, and covering a range with one gasoline supply of 1,500 miles.

They will carry a crew and machine-gun fighting complement of five, and will be capable of transporting machine gun crews to isolated key positions, while they will also be equipped with torpedo shooting and bomb dropping gear.

AIR VICTIM'S WIDOW IS FOUND IN CANAL

Manchester. — Mrs. Albert Voss, widow of the Manchester dentist who perished in April with fourteen other victims in the crash of the air liner City of Liverpool, in Belgium, was found dead in the Rochdale canal the other day with fourpence in her possession.

Since her husband's death ill-luck has dogged her. Her home was in danger of being broken up, and then came what she felt to be the crowning humiliation when she had to accept relief.

Proposals of marriage, gifts of money, and offers of work and assistance were later received by Miss Stella Voss (or Cohen), aged 22, who with her sister, Winnifred, aged 12, has been left an orphan by the death.

BROKEN GLASS GAVE BOY-BOOKIE START

Nabbed Red-Handed Taking Bets on Greyhound Races

St. Helens.—Two boy bookmakers—each 13 years old—were nabbed behind a fence near a greyhound racing track here in Lancashire.

A bobby, chancing to hear a treble voice piping, "I lay two to one on the field," hurdled the fence and got the lads red-handed. The clerk had a ruled school exercise book which showed that bets ranging from ½d. to 5d. had been placed. There were 57 bets in all. In his pocket, the bookie had 2s. 3½d.

In court the bookmaker said he got capital to establish himself in "the profession" by picking up broken glass and selling it. The other lad had no source of income, so had to be only a clerk.

They were fined 20 shillings each.

NUDITY VOGUE UPHELD BY CANTERBURY DEAN

Adds He Won't Barr Pyjama-Clad Women From Cathedral

London.—All is not yet quiet on the seaside fronts. The war over dress—or undress — continues. Costumes are becoming more daring every day. More and more girls are wearing tiny shorts and a brassiere or a handkerchief.

The dean of Canterbury has joined in the fray as peacemaker. He pleads for a wider tolerance, and declares that women in beach pyjamas will not be barred from Canterbury cathedral.

"I shall not ban any costume unless it is indecent,' said the dean. 'Women in pyjamas are not indecent. They are sometimes inelegant, but that criticism can be levelled at many dresses.

"I prefer the word 'inappropriate' to the word 'indecent.' It would be inappropriate for a woman to attend Matins in bathing dress, she would attract too much attention. Such a woman would be quietly requested to leave the cathedral.

"But there should be a general flexibility of attire for holiday services. Men in open-necked shirts and shorts, and women in beach pyjamas are more likely to slip into church on a warm Sunday than if they had to change into stiff collars and top hats, or gloves and laces.

"As for this vogue of nudity, it is like any other vogue—only it is healthy. I thought women were sensible when they wore short skirts.

"Boys and girls should wear shorts everywhere, I think, right through the summer. Men and women should only wear them on the beach, unless the shorts are so well cut and fitted that their wearer can pass in town unnoticed.

"I would sooner see a loincloth any day than shorts cut too short.

"Women never went bare-legged in their best clothes till they found that the mode made them appear more elephant than if they wore stockings. It's all a question of aesthetics.

"Men and women now lie bare-backed on the beaches where, when I was a boy, they were not allowed to enter the water together, even though they risked drowning by wearing the most voluminous costumes."

MAN OF 63 RESCUES SEVEN IN HALF HOUR

Foiled Hungry Waves Last Time When Fully Dressed

Bournemouth.—In half an hour one man rescued seven bathers who had got into difficulties in a rough sea here.

He is O. C. Porter, aged 63, a Bournemouth hotel proprietor.

While he was in bathing costume on the sea front he saw a young man and woman in difficulties near a groyne. He went in and brought them out.

Five minutes later he fetched out a boy who had got into difficulties, and a few minutes after that another boy, aged 12, who had lost his hold of a motor tire and got into a swirl near the groyne.

Then a young woman called for help. Her man companion went in for her, and both got into difficulties but were brought ashore by Mr. Porter.

His last rescue was that of a young woman visitor, Miss Bridget Crumin, who either fainted or was knocked over by a wave.

Mr. Porter was then fully dressed, but he went in for her. She was brought ashore unconscious, but afterwards recovered.

FOUR HOLD UP TAXI USE KNIFE, GET $250

Slash Purse From Woman's Grasp While Crowd Gapes

Stratford—Within 100 yards of a patrolling policeman and in full view of crowds in the streets motor car robbers carried out a raid here the other night.

Leaping from their car four men stopped a taxicab, and while two attacked the driver, one nearly strangling him, the others wrenched open the door and out from the wrist of a woman passenger, Mrs. Hudson of Leyton, her handbag, which contained £50 in bank notes.

TOO CLOSE TO SAFETY

Worcester, Mass.—Harry Cowden, 14, remembered all the "safety don'ts" he had heard in school, so when he sought to cross the street he made certain to cross behind a passing truck instead of in front of it. But just as he reached the rear of the truck, a chain on the tailboard became loose, whipped around and knocked him down.

HEALER ABSORBS ILLNESS "CURES" PATIENTS FREE

British Scientists Will Test French Woman's Strange Power

Paris.—The woman healer whose cures are the talk of Britain is going to Britain to have her powers tested by scientific experts. She is Madame Anna Desbordes, who lives in a little country town near Limoges.

Her method is said to be simple. She invites her patients to come in and then she "absorbs their ailments," very much as a blotting pad soaks up ink spots. Then she throws the ailments off.

One explanation of Madame Desbordes' remarkable power is put forward by French spiritualists, who declare that she is guided by the spirit of the late Emil Coue, the famous French auto-suggestion healer.

All day long Madame Desbordes deals with sufferers. When the last patient has gone she shakes herself free from the accumulated bunch of ills.

She is reputed to have healed more people than any other healer, and no highly-paid medical specialist has so many patients as this uneducated peasant woman of France. Yet Madame Desbordes never asks for money, prescribes no medicine, and never seeks patients.

She lives in a large farmhouse and there is always a long string of motor-cars in front of the building. She is an intelligent looking young woman with very bright eyes, but a pale face and a very tired expression.

She treats all diseases. The details of her method are a secret which she will not reveal to anyone. It is not something she learned from anybody. It came to her one day like a religious revelation. She just knew that she could heal.

TO CURB TRAIN SMOKERS

London.—The L. M. and S. Railway have decided that in future all passenger coaches on their line shall bear a distinctive label "smoking" or "non smoking." When the new labels are affixed no one will be allowed to smoke in a non-smoking compartment, even if other passengers say they have no objection.

BIBLE DISTRIBUTION GAINS IN DEPRESSION

Budapest.—Depression seems to increase religious sensibility, or at least the circulation of the Bible.

According to recent statistics, 75,000 copies of the Good Book were circulated last year in Hungary, against only 60,000 in 1929. In Czechoslovakia over 48,000 were counted, as compared with 42,000 in 1929, and in Austria 35,000 as compared with 27,000 four years ago, when the depression began.

To be sure, a considerable number of the newly issued Bibles were presented free of charge or at greatly reduced prices by the various Bible societies.

HUNDRED CONVICTS FLEE ISLE IN YEAR

Brave Shark-Infested Sea to Escape French Penal Colony

Paris.—The startling news that 100 convicts have escaped from the dreaded penal settlement on Devil's Island, off the coast of French Guiana, within the past year is officially revealed here.

The convicts on the island are all murderers—some convicted of double murders—but they are allowed a relative freedom in the settlement if they behave themselves.

But their one thought is to escape, and their guardians are so few that it is difficult to keep a constant watch on them.

Should they try to swim to the mainland they have to face a shark-infested sea, but some of them contrive to build or obtain skiffs in which they often travel long distances.

CARPENTIER DEFENDS WOMEN FROM INSULTS

Knocks Down Man Who Made Remarks About Companions

Cannes.—George Carpentier, boxing idol of France, has just fought the fight of his career.

The scene was the fashionable casino here.

The honor of two English women was at stake.

And this, according to Carpentier, is what happened:

"An English friend, an army officer, and myself were about to leave a night club with two English ladies.

"As I walked out to fetch the car my friend engaged in a scrap with a hefty Argentine who had insulted one of our ladies and my friend had taken exception. The Argentine replied by hitting him in the face.

"I jumped in, and the big boy, taking a dive, got an extra bump and fell chin and nose first on the floor I think there was some blood spilt. The whole thing was a matter of seconds."

Phillips Oppenheim, the novelist, said: "Shortly after the Carpentier party left we were all startled by revolver shots. We all tried to rush out, but I was stopped by a gendarme and the casino watchman. A gendarme told me Carpentier was in trouble and someone was taking a pot shot at him."

Carpentier strongly denied that any shots had been fired.

Among those who were at the casino were Princess Marie-Jose, the crown princess of Italy, Princess Mafalda of Hesse, her sister-in-law, Calvi di Bergolo, husband of Princess Yolanda of Italy and Prince Rene of Bourbon-Parme.

BEE CAUSES CRASH

Clyde Park, Mont.—When a bee flew into his automobile, Jimmy Young became more interested for a moment in the uninvited guest than in the road. His automobile crashed head-on into another driven by Adrian Zadra. Both cars were damaged. Both drivers were cut and bruised. The bee buzzed on, uninjured.

FOREIGNERS FLOCK INTO MANCHOUKUO

Americans Head List, With British Second

Hsinching. — Americans and Europeans are entering Manchoukuo at the rate of nearly a thousand a month, according to the first figures of the newly established passport visa bureau. Not all of them remain, however, since the numbers include the tourists en route to Europe over the Trans-Siberian railway.

Curiously enough, Americans head the list, for 40 men and 42 women from the United States passed through the passport department records. British came second with 34, Russian next with 32 and Greeks and French next in order.

In all, there are 21 different nationalities whose citizens received visas from Manchoukuo. Mystery is added to the statistics by the 238 persons carried as "non-nationality."

NEW DISH CHEAPER THAN WASHING OLD

Juan-les-Pins.—A restaurant just opened here is named "New Poor," for while the food is excellent the price fits small pocketbooks.

At the end of each course the customer is requested to throw his crockery into a waste basket. The management claims it is cheaper to use new dishes than to maintain a force to wash the dirty ones.

NEW BRITISH GAS MASK IS A WORRY TO FRANCE

Spies Seek Secret of Chemical That Foils Deadliest Fumes

OWN MASKS FUTILE

Paris.—The latest fashion in French "nerves" is the British secret gas mask. German, French, English and Dutch chemists have been working day and night in the dim and secret recesses of their laboratories to discover a mask that would protect the wearer against a newly invented gas, which penetrated all the masks so far constructed. As this deadly gas is in the form of pulverized red pepper, it is called "Pepper Poison."

It appears that the best French mask immunizes the wearer against "Pepper Poison" for only three minutes. The French claim that the British pattern gives protection against the deadliest of the war poisons for a whole hour.

"Englishmen in the next war will outlive Frenchmen by 57 minutes."

In France, as in Germany, Italy and other middle European countries, the instruction of the civilian population on how to behave in case of an aeroplane gas raid has become quite common. When war breaks out the civilian population are trained to keep themselves in doors and shut the windows tight. Those who, of urgent necessity, must perform duties out of doors are to be provided with gas masks.

Should an enemy aeroplane go over London and drop a few tons of "Pepper Poison," Englishmen would be immune if there were enough of the newly discovered gas masks to go round, because it is very probable that the poison would lose its deadly effect at least in half an hour.

France has assigned scores of her clever secret service agents—in times of peace they are secret service agents, in times of war they are spies—to leave no stone unturned until they find the secret formula of the new British gas mask.

The London Herald admits that, terrified by the nature of the new deadly poison just introduced by French, German and English chemists, and realizing that the British civil population might be exposed to destruction, the British government experts set to work to perfect a mask that would act as a protection against this potential horror. After many abortive attempts the successful mask was at last produced.

HITLER HAS MOTORED OVER 832,500 MILES

Berlin.—Chancellor Adolph Hitler knows the roads of his country better than any living German.

Within the last fourteen years, while he was striving for power in Germany, he covered 832,500 miles motoring on German roads east and west, north and south, thus theoretically spanning the globe 33 times during that period.

This was stated to be an "official figure" by Dr. Todt, inspector-general of German roads, during a speech at Frankfort recently.

$5,000,000 LOTTERY OPENED IN FRANCE

Tickets to Be Out Soon in Great National Gamble

Paris.—Tickets for the new $5,000,000 French national lottery, the proceeds of which are to go largely to the aid of agriculture, are expected to be issued within a few days.

The tickets will be available from tax-collectors, post-offices, tobacconists, banks, and farmers' and recognized ex-service men's associations.

Some people are expected to try to smuggle tickets into foreign countries, but the police will keep a close watch on the lottery-ticket gangs, most of whose members are known.

Forgeries also are likely to be liberally offered, and tickets sent abroad should be regarded with suspicion.

WHITE COLLAR MAY RECEIVE BRITISH DOLE

But Politicians Ducking New Bill Which Must Pass Soon.

WILL EFFECT MANY

Loss is Often So Tragic When Unemployment Comes.

By THOMAS C. WATSON
Central Press Canadian Writer

LONDON, Sept. 14.—The British government is working on a new dole system.

It is proposed that the "white collar" worker may have to come under a scheme of national health and unemployment insurance, and many government members are funking the issue.

It is the government's new unemployment insurance bill which will vitally affect millions of the people of Great Britain. Within the next few weeks the cabinet will have to register its final decisions.

The bill must become law by next March to take the place of the present measure. It is possible that parliament will be called together ten days or a fortnight earlier than the date fixed for reassembly—November 7—in order to make progress with the measure.

One important question on which agreement has already been reached is that:

The minister of labor shall administer all unemployment relief, whether inside or outside the scheme—thus removing the "poor law taint."

Even Boys to Get Dole

The "white collar worker," whose lot has often been so tragic when unemployment comes on him, is to be catered for. He, with many others who are at present outside the scope of any relief except the Poor Law, will receive "unemployment assistance."

Hundreds of thousands of unemployed "white collar workers" will get relief under the new scheme, which will be far more comprehensive than any that has preceded it. With few exceptions, practically all workers earnings up to £5 a week will be included.

It has already been decided by the cabinet that under the new scheme greater training facilities for the unemployed must be provided. Vocational or physical training to be a condition of relief for all under 21. Hundreds of thousands of boys will do vocational and physical training. In the new bill it is proposed to lower the age of entry to 14—with 60 cents a week benefit for unemployed of this class.

Farmer Not Included

It is not proposed to include agricultural laborers within the range of insurable workers, but the central commission to be set up under the bill will be asked to investigate the possibility of bringing them in later.

The position of railwaymen and others who have, up to now, been outside the scheme will also be considered. Their inclusion would add considerably to the finances of the unemployment insurance fund.

The bill will be a long one, and it will be fought bitterly by the Labor party.

"It may also provide the long-sought excuse for the Samuelite Liberals to cross the floor of the House of Commons and go definitely into opposition.

NAZIS BANNED EVA IN BERLIN FROM DANCING

Eva the Elephant Appears in Act Before Grand Stand.

BACK FROM EUROPE.

Max Gruber is One of the Foremost Animal Trainers.

Eva the elephant, who is appearing before the grandstand on the bill of fare at Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, was banned by the Nazis from performing the Rhumba, during her recent visit to Berlin. The dance which has met with anything but disapproval from local crowds, was characterized by the Nazis as being "too jazzy and exotic".

Max Gruber, genial world-renowned animal trainer turned back the clock during an interview with The Examiner this morning. He was in reminiscent mood and besides recounting some of the highlights of his recent European tour from which he returned in July, he recalled his first visit to America twenty-four years ago.

He first came to this side of the Atlantic, he stated, at the solicitation of the late Percy G. Williams who imported him and his marvellous animal act from London to the United States. With a well-earned reputation as one of foremost animal trainers in the business Gruber soon duplicated his success in this new world. Every since then he has been confining his operations, almost solely to the United States and Canada, with the exception of a European tour from which he has just returned, and several excursions into Mexico.

When unemployed with Eva, the elephant; Topsy, the Zebra; and Rigo, the Great Dane and other pets, you are almost sure to find Mr. Gruber at Muskegon, Michigan, where he has his fine home and commodious quarters for his dumb charges.

Eva, who is regarded as a sacred white elephant, in Siam from which country she was imported, nodded her head sagely in salutation to the reporter who called upon her this morning. But Mr. Gruber assured his interviewer that she was anything but docile when he first undertook to train her five years ago.

Topsy, the Zebra stood nearby seeming to enjoy the currying she was receiving in readiness for her grandstand appearance. In her case however, docile acquiesence is most unusual.

Most animal trainers according to Mr. Gruber will not bother even to attempt to train the Zebra, which de described as being "more stubborn than a mule and wilder than a tiger."

Nervous Animals

Topsy's affection for Eva is touching Topsy wouldn't even bite a stable boy in Eva"s presence. She might bash his brains out; but no more. Zebras are normally hard to handle. They are nervous animals never keyed down to work-a-day tempo, but Topsy will walk on her hind legs and dance and jump up on Evas back.

Eva rides a bicycle and does a Rhumba, and is a great comedian. The dog Rigo is boss of the outfit.

Mr. Gruber, having travelled the world over with his act is an authority on nationalism.

In Berlin for instance he related the Nazi government wouldn't let Eva perform the Rhumba. It was too jassy or blase or something. They even excised a few bars of "Turkey in the Straw". But the most Nationalistic newspaper gave Gruber and his act an enthusiastic write-up. He had the only German-sounding name on the bill at the Scala Music Hall in Berlin.

They did not know that Mr. Gruber was naturalised and anyway he was born in Innsbruck Austrian Tyrol.

The officials at the State Circus in Moscow do not waste any time in telling foreign performers about the monetary regulations, according to Mr. Gruber.

"You get a contract and go to that very cold place—Eva got her trunk frozen there, and couldn't eat for day—then you play for a week or more and they pay you. But they tell you that you can't take the money out of the country," Gruber complained.

"And Poland is worse", he said. You get a special visa for 15-days. On the last night of the show the manager is nowhere to be found, and the police order you onto the train for Vienna without your your money".

SOMERVILLE IS 2 STROKES DOWN

first few holes of the outgoing nine the London clam recovered to square the match at the seventh and keep pace with Little until the tenth where he again dropped behind when his opponent took a four against Sandy's five.

Sandy squared the match again at the 11th with a beautiful par three but lost the advantage at the 14th. They halved the next hole. Then Little went two up at the 16th.

Marston Ties Noyes

In a spectacular match punctuated by nine birdies, Max Marston of Philadelphia veteran former title holder was all square with Sidney W Noyes, Jr., of New York, after the first 18 holes.

Jack Munger of Dallas finished the morning round two up on Jack Westland of Chicago.

George T. Dunlap, Jr., of New York, Walker Cup star, gained the biggest lead of the morning competion by finishing the 18 holes three up on Eddie Held, his rival from the metropolitan district.

They were both well on the 18th and halved in par fours, leaving Little two up for the morning.

Somerville, in ..533 444 454—36—74
Little, in .....443 434 354—34—72

Sidney W. Noyes, Jr., of New York, the slim, blond Yale star, teed off with thick-set, hard-hitting Max Marston of Philadelphia. The collegian went one up at the short second with easy three.

The well-built, bespectacled Texas youngster, Jack Munger, played Jack Westland, slim Chicagoan, in the upper half match and went one up forthwith by annexing the first hole.

Marston laid a brassie shot on the 562-yard third within four feet of the cup and bagged a birdie four to square the match.

Noyes went one up by taking the fourth in par.

Westland and Munger both were trapped on the second hole, but the Chicagoan made the better recovery and holed a three-footer for a winning three, squaring the match.

Evens Match on Fifth.

Marston evened his match on the 134-yard fifth.

Little captured the second hole to become one up as both had a lot of trouble on the 175-yarder. The Californian's tee shot dropped to the left of the green, from where he pitched six feet wide of the cup and took two putts for a four. The champion's iron was pushed off to the right and he dubbed his second shot completely the ball hitting a bank and rolling back. Somerville then chipped within three feet of the cup, but missed the putt and took a "buzzard" five.

The champion was stymied and failed in a try to "cut" the ball around his opponent's.

Munger's third shot on the long third hole nearly hit the pin. The ball stopped only a foot away and the birdie four was a winner for the Texan.

Westland came back to square matters on the fourth when Munger three-putted.

Westland overshot the green on the short fifth and took a four to Munger's three.

Somerville's regulation five was not good enough on the tough third hole where Little banged two wood shots to the green on this 562 yarder and took two putts from 30 feet for a birdie four. This put the youngster two up on the champion.

Eddie Held and George T. Dunlap Jr., rivals from the New York metropolitan district, the rear guard among the quarter-finalists, halved the first hole with cautious fives.

Somerville's drive was in the rough off the fourth tee, but he belted a fine number two iron to the green and got back a hole with a par four. Little's drive was bunkered, his recovery well short of the green and his third 35 feet away, from where he took two putts.

The fifth, another short hole, also proved troublesome for Somerville and Little. Both took three putts and halved in fours.

Marston spurted into a two up lead by taking two holes in a row. He was out in 36, even par.

Somerville sliced his drive into the rough on the 594 yard sixth, still was in the tall grass with his second and played his third shot, but finally got down a 16-foot putt to save the half. Little's third was 20 feet from the pin and he took two putts for his five.

Squares the Match.

The champion got a birdie three on the seventh hole to square the match, holing a nine-foot putt.

Held finally stopped his losing streak by getting down a 20-foot putt for a birdie four on the long sixth. This cut Dunlap's margin to three up.

Somerville's shots were under better control as he halved the eighth and ninth with par. Little made a nice recovery from the apple trees on the eighth to get his four but was never off the blue line on the ninth.

Somerville, out.....445 445 344—38
Little, out.....444 545 444—38

Noyes cut Marston's margin to one up when Max overshot the fourteenth green and took a five to Sidney's four Westland and Munger took a turn at exploding a few fireworks when they halved the tenth with birdies. They halved the next in par fours.

Held was stymied on the eighth after halving the seventh with Dunlap. Eddie hauled out his niblick, missed the shot and lost the hole. He got one back when George was trapped and took a five on the ninth. This left Dunlap three up at the turn.

Noyes continued his dazzling comeback, squaring the match on the fifteenth where Marston was stymied, and going one up at the short sixteenth

Westland and Munger halved the shorth twelfth in par and the latter remained one up.

Loses the Tenth Hole.

Somerville drbpped the tenth hole by taking three putts from 35 feet, his first putt stopping five feet short of the cup. Little's second shot was wild but he got down a 25-foot putt for the winning four. Sandy squared matters with a birdie three on the eleventh firing his second shot to six feet of the pin. Little took two putts from eight feet.

Marston squared the match with his sixth birdie of the round, on the seventeenth.

Somerville and Little halved the short twelfth with par threes, both reaching the green from the tee.

Marston hopped a stymie on the thirteenth, using a spade to get over Noyes' ball from a distance of about two feet from the cup. This gave Max a half in fours and kept the match all even for the first round.

Munger clung to his one-hole lead through the fifteenth.

Somerville had to chip "dead" on the thirteenth to get a half in fours with Little, who continued to shoot the steadiest kind of golf and give an exhibition of iron play superior to the champion's specialty.

After an uneventful half on the thirteenth, Munger made fine recoveries on the next two holes to hold his thin margin.

The two Jacks halved another one with threes on the short sixteenth.

Little canned a 20-foot putt for a birdie three on the fourteenth and went one up on the champion.

Held gave Dunlap more of a tussle starting back, George's birdie with a 10-footer won the tenth. They halved the twelfth. Dunlap's par four captured the thirteenth, where Held was trapped at the green, but Eddie came back to sink a 20-footer for a birdie on the fourteenth. After this melee, Dunlap remained three up.

Little was home with a good belt on the 224-yard sixteenth and went two up with a par three. Somerville hooked into the rough, came out within 10 feet of the cup and took two putts.

Westland, recovering twice from the side of bunkers, chipped on and holed a 14-foot putt for his five and a half on the seventeenth hole.

Little halved the fifteenth in par fours, despite driving into a clump of trees. He was forced to drop back, taking a penalty stroke, and then put his third on the green, 15 feet from the cup.

Somerville's second shot laid Little a stymie but the Californian used a niblick and put the ball into the cup on the second bounce. Sandy took two putts, for his four.

Little dropped back some 50 yards after taking the penalty, thereby getting a clearer shot for the green, some 130 yards away, with a No. 5 iron.

Westland failed to get around his opponent's ball when stymied at the eighteenth and carded a five, going two down.

Dunlap negotiated a partial stymie to win the fifteenth with a par four and go four up again.

Little's second shot was bunkered in front of the 573-yard seventeenth but the Californian got out safely and took two putts from 36 feet for a half in fives. The champion's third landed 25 feet from the home.

B. C. IS VISIONED AS THE BELGIUM OF U. S.-JAP WAR

ASIA ROUTE VIA ALASKA.

Fate of Empire Debated in Event of League of Nations Breakdown.

TORONTO, Sept. 1. (CP)—British Columbia may be the Belgium of a future war and its skies the pathway to a desperate conflict between huge fleets of heavily armed aeroplanes. This was one of the possibilities mentioned when the British Commonwealth Relations Conference meeting here turned to a discussion to-day of the probabilities of another great War.

General agreement was expressed that the Pacific was an area of tension. A British delegate wondered what would happen if war occured between United States and Japan. In his view it would be fought in the air, probably along the way of the Alaskan route to Asia. That would make British Columbia the corridor of aerial passage towards the north.

The discussion of war centred around the general topic of what would happen to the British Commonwealth, in the event of a breakdown or failure of the League of Nations and the present international co-operative system of maintaining peace. Some members doubted whether the Commonwealth could continue to exist and others were convinced it could exist by making itself strong and defending its resources.

Naval Spheres

One of the more pessimistic speakers at the meeting, held in camera, contended the world was now showing a tendency to divide up into naval spheres. Australia and New Zealand were clearly outside the British naval sphere and in the event of war could not receive adequate protection from the British navy unless conditions were so peaceful in Europe the entire navy could be released for service in the Pacific. But this possibility was unlikely as Japan, for instance, he said, would have better sense than to launch a conflict on the Pacific unless there was enough trouble in Europe to keep a good part of the navy busy there.

It was so clearly in the interests of the British Empire to make a success of the League of Nations and the co-operative method of settling international disputes, it was impossible to conceive of any member of the commonwealth waging an aggressive war, a Canadian member asserted. Any war in which the Empire would be engaged would be a "League or Pact war."

In that case Canada would likely supply land forces which would be moved to the seat of the conflict in the pooled navies of the League of Nations.

This led to a discussion of Canada's relation to the British navy and a Canadian asserted this country got no more benefit from the navy than many other nations and should pay no special premium for its support. The same speaker declared Great Britain would not drop a single warship if all the dominions were out of the Empire, as she would still have to protect the colonial empire and her trade routes.

PIANOS ATTRACT AT EXHIBITION

Also Radios, Refrigerators and Washers by Heintzman Co.

In the Manufacturers' Building at the Peterborough Exhibition Ye Olde Firme, Heintzman & Co., is again to the fore with an interest-holding exhibit of Washers, Refrigerators and Radios, all dominated by the Heintzman Piano, which is found in the four corners of the music-loving world.

In pianos, they are showing a handsome Concert Grand, such as is used by the world's leading vocal and instrumental artists; also a lovely Apartment Upright with walnut case. Both are instruments the most refined home would be proud to possess, and both are the last word in construction and tonal beauty. Mechanical instruments that take away the human element—that bars the individual from an active part in providing entertainment, can never replace the piano.

Other exhibits include two walnut veneer Victor Radios, noted for their long distance pick-up, true-to-life repoduction, and beauty of construction that is not oppressively ornate; a Westinghouse Electric Refrigerator of commanding build and economical in operation; and a Connor Thermo Washing Machine, electrically operated. Connor Washers are sold with a 12 years' guarantee, under which fifty thousand have been delivered. They are guaranteed to give perfect results and to save time, worry and money.

The uptown store of Heintzman & Co. is in the Royal Bank Building, cor. of George and Hunter Streets, where Manager R. Haddow and his staff will gladly demonstrate their merchandise with that thoroughness and courtesy so characteristic of Ye Olde Firme.

NEW FOREIGN MINISTER.

TOKIO, Sept. 14.—(C.P.)— The resignation of Count Yasuya Ushida as Japanese Foreign Minister to-day, was immediately followed by the appointment to that position of Koki Hirota, described as a staunch Nationalist closely connected with the army clique.

The change was hailed as presaging an increased Nationalistic and uncompromising Japanese foreign policy.

Carrying Of Firearms As Now Provided Under The New Game And Fisheries Laws

The Peterborough Game and Fish Protective Association through the courtesy of The Examiner publishes the following information regarding the change in the Game and Fisheries Laws with respect to the carrying of firearms. It is suggested that readers who are interested in this matter clip and retain this article in order that they may be in a position to inform others who may have read it, as well as to refresh their own memories later.

Sub-Section 3, Section 10

Notwithstanding the provisions of Sub-Section 2, every resident who uses any firearm or air gun for the purpose of hunting or shooting any bird or animal except under the authority of a license, shall be guilty of an offence against this act, but this sub-section possession of any firearm or air gun shall be prima facie evidence that the person in possession thereof was hunting or shooting such birds or animals.

Section 20, Sub-Section "E"

A license may be issued, to a resident of Ontario not under sixteen years of age to use firearms, or air guns for hunting purposes as demanded under the provisions of sub-section 3, of section 10, and the fee for such license shall be 85c together with a fee of 15c for the issuing of same.

Section "O", of Section 10, 2

Resident shall mean any person who has actually resided in the province of Ontario for a period of twelve consecutive months immediately preceding the time that his residence becomes material under the provisions of this act.

Sub-Section BB of Section 2

Farmers shall mean any person actually living upon and tilling his own land or lands to possession of which he is for the time being entitled or any bona fide settler engaged in clearing the land for the purpose of bringing same to a state of cultivation.

The following comment is offered on this law. No person under the age of sixteen can legally obtain a permit to use firearms or an air gun for hunting purposes. Parents of children under this age should note this and avoid trouble by not allowing these minors to carry firearms or air rifles.

A farmer means exactly a person as described by sub-section BB of Section 2, of the Act. That is any person actually living upon and tilling his own land or land to the possession of which he is for the time being entitled such as land he has leased or rented, but he must be living upon and tilling it. This also applies to a settler engaged in clearing the land for the purposes of bringing same to a state of cultivation. Obviously a person owning and but not living upon and tilling it does not qualify as a farmer within the meaning of this act.

A farmer as defined by this act does not require this gun license to hunt on his own land, but does require if he hunts elsewhere.

A resident within the meaning of this act is a person who has actually resided in Ontario for a period of at least twelve consecutive months immediately preceding the time his residence becomes material under the provisions of this Act, that is, twelve months immediately preceding the time he applies for a resident gun license or assumes any of the privileges granted to a resident of this province under this act, but not granted to a citizen of another province or country.

A non resident cannot legally obtain this resident gun license, and cannot legally hunt, take, kill or wound or destroy any animal or bird or carry or use a firearm or air rifle for such purpose without obtaining a regular hunting license which costs $21 for a license to hunt game birds and rabbits and $41 for a general license to hunt game birds and rabbits as well as big game.

Nothing in the Game and Fisheries Act has any bearing on the recent amendment to the Criminal Code of Canada covering the carrying of revolvers, pistols and other offensive weapons that may be concealed on the person. The public is advised to inform themselves on this law as well. Ask any police officer about this.

The open season for ducks starts at sunrise on Friday, September 15th, and ends at sunset on December 15th, except for wood and eider ducks, there being no open season for these. It is illegal to sell or purchase any game birds, or any restaurant, camp, boarding house, hotel or club to have such birds or fowl served or mentioned on a bill of fare.

It is illegal to hunt from a power boat or to use a gun of larger calibre than 10 gauge.

No person shall set out more than one flock of decoys, of not more than fifty, and all decoys shall be removed from the water during the hours when shooting is prohibited, that is, between sunset and sunrise and on Sundays.

It is illegal to use automatic shot guns or to carry loaded guns in a car or other vehicle. A gun with loaded shells in the magazine is deemed to be loaded. The bag limit for ducks is fifteen per day and not more than one hundred and fifty in any one year.

Kich Candy Display In Examiner Window

Deep purple and rich crimson, the colors of royal trappings, make the outer coverings for a display of Cadbury's chocolate wares, on view in the Examiner's window.

Spirals of twisted purple paper, alternating with palest green, form the background for an exhibit of these toothsome looking goodies, which include many of the popular variations in milk and nut chocolates, Dairy milk, almonds and raisins, whole nut milk chocolate, burnt almonds, nut milk and the new Milk Chocolate flakes.

Naborhood News

Brisk signs of returning prosperity are noticed at the Naborhood Shoe Store, 396 George Street, with a trebling of business for the past 3 months over same period during the past years of depression.

The new management wish to thank the people of Peterborough and surrounding country for their patronage during the period. They are building their trade by offering the patrons better shoes for their money, and an all round better shoe service than can be obtained elsewhere.

On this platform they ask for your shoe trade this Fall.

Jabs and Jottings as Picked Up by an Examiner Reporter

EVERYTHING PEACEFUL

Provincial and city police reported everything "peaceful" today. There were no cases for police court. Police have been on duty at the Exhibiton but stated that as yet there has been nothing requiring special attention. There has been no rowdyism of any kind. "Everyone has been too busy having a good time and enjoying the big sights" Constable D. Silvester explained.

TWO FIRE ALARMS.

Two blazes required the services of the Fire Department at the same time yesterday afternoon. A few minutes after the Brigade had arrived at New Romaine Street to fight the disastrous fire which gutted the homes of James O'Neill and George Ellis, an alarm was sounded for a fire at the home of Dr. D. W. Clark, 291 Charlotte Street. The blaze at Dr. Clark's house was started by some sparks from a chimney on the shingles of the roof. Minor damage was done before it was extinguished.

"THE HOLE IN THE WALL"

Along the Midway toward the grand stand, T. H. Aitken of Peterborough has a novel concession called "The Hole in the Wall," a game of throwing overblown rubber balls through holes in a painted wall. The prizes are Indian novelties, especially burnt leather articles ranging in value well up the scale.

"This is one place where the public has a good chance to win," Mr. Aitken told The Examiner and the prizes are useful and valuable."

BROOKDALE NURSERIES

Among the exhibits in the Flower Tent at the Exhibition this week is a fine display of shrubs by the Brookdale Nurseries of Bowmanville. The shrubs are attractively arranged in a miniature rock garden which is complete even to the inclusion of a small pond.

The Brookdale Nurseries have sponsored many fine non-competitive exhibits in the Flower Tent during recent Exhibitions.

DINNER AT EXHIBITION

Co-operating with the Board of Directors of Peterborough Industrial Exhibition the members of the Kiwanis Club are this week holding their luncheon meeting at the Fair Grounds in St. James' Dining Tent. After dinner the clubmen will have an audience with Eric the Robot. Herb McCannan and his Harmonica "Blowers" are to provide the entertainment at the luncheon.

BRITISH BUYERS GRAB LIGHT CANADIAN CATTLE

OTTAWA, Sept. 14. (CP)—Canadian cattle from the S.S. Manchester Commerce sold at Birkenhead were of good quality, says a report received by the livestock branch, Department of Agriculture to-day. A big percentage of the shipment was of suitable light and medium weights and gave a better tone to an otherwise dull market. Heavy Eastern cattle sold from 11 to 11.5 cents per lb.; heavy westerns 10.5 cents; medium easterns 12 cents; medium westerns 11 cents; light easterns 12 to 12.5 cents, and western cows and heifers 10 to 11.5 cents per lb.

Canadian cattle from S.S. Vardulia on the Glasgow market were of mixed quality. The small cattle sold readily, but heavies and mixed common cattle were difficult to clear.

Cattle from the S.S. Prospector on the Cardiff market were nearly cleared, says the report. General prices were slightly shaded. Demand for store cattle was light, due to drought and a prospective shortage of feed.

Four Girls Enter Diving Contest

Four entries for the ladies' championship diving contest which is to commence in front of the grand stand at the Exhibition to-night had been received by The Examiner up to noon to-day and more are definitely expected. With the hope of securing as many competitors as possible, Exhibition officials have agreed to extend the time limit for entries until the commencement of the preliminary contest at 9 o'clock.

The four entries already made are: Hazel and Elda Bradley, 299 Sherbrooke street; Mary Kingsbury, 177 Murray street; and Jessie Sholey, 96 Stewart street.

G. H. Roper, secretary of the Y.M.C.A., has been secured to act as judge along with Captain Lavelley, the torch diver, and his companion, Pauline Black.

Officials of the Y.W.C.A. have secured the services of several volunteer ladies who will chaperone the girls taking part in the contest.

MURDOCK SAYS DISMISSAL WILL NOT BE UPHELD

Plans Appeal Against Action and Whitney's Czar-like Attitude.

RESTATES CHARGES.

Claims Brotherhood Lost 37,000 Members in 11 Months Through President.

OTTAWA, September 14 (C.P.).—Prediction that the 900-odd delegates at their next convention will not confirm the action of the executive board of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen in removing him from the office of Canadian vice-president was made here to-day by Senator James Murdock.

"Unquestionably I will appeal against the action taken and against the Czar-like attitude of President A. F. Whitney." Senator Murdock stated. "Unquestionably, in my judgment, the delegates will not sustain the action which has been taken."

More than 37,000 members had been lost to the Brotherhood in 11 months by the action of President Whitney, contrary to convention instructions, in authorizing or permitting insurance transfer agents to compel Brotherhood members to transfer their insurance. Sen Murdock said in speaking of the original charges he had brought against Mr. Whitney. In his charges, stated Senator Murdock, he had stated tens of thousands of dollars had been spent annually by Whitney in maintaining a paid "personal boosting corps."

Says Charges Can't Be Made

No one in Canada would make the charge that he had been guilty of dilatory action in connection with the handling of the wage controversy on Canadian railways, Senator Murdock declared, commenting on the finding against him on charges of Mr. Whitney. While there were officers of equal rank in four other labor organizations involved in the wage dispute, action in removing Senator Murdock from office has been the only one taken because he did not ensure that a strike vote be taken weeks ago, was learned.

Reluctance to discuss the subject in any manner because such matters were secrets of the organization was shown by Senator Murdock. Because of the announcement and statement from Cleveland of Mr. Whitney and published reports, Senator Murdock made his comment.

New U.K. Fowl Tax Boost To Dominion

OTTAWA, Sept. 14 (CP) — The tariff which the United Kingdom will impose on dead fowl, ducks and geese from foreign countries after Sept. 15 will be three pence a pound instead of 10 per cent ad valorem. Word was received by the Department of Trade and Commerce yesterday of this change. The Canadian product will continue to go into the U.K. markets free.

This may have an important effect on the Canadian trade this Fall as Canada is planning on shipping dressed chickens, and perhaps some ducks and geese to British markets. All these will come under the increased preference.

Turkeys, however, are not affected. Canada will continue to receive 10 per cent preference on this products and plans are being made to ship 1,000,000 lbs. to U.K. this Fall. This trade was started last year and proved satisfactory.

CHOICE BETWEEN TRUMP AND NO TRUMPS

Two important questions have been asked, as follows: 1. When either a trump call or a no trump may be made which should first be shown? 2. What are the best rules for choosing between making an opening suit bid or a no trump?

The two questions come from different sources, and to me they appear to be only two different methods of asking the same information.

There are several different methods of bidding hands in common use. One of these methods is always to bid a suit worth a declaration, regardless of distribution. Another method is always to bid no trump upon 3 or more guarded suits, provided the distribution is 4-3-3-3. Another rule is to bid the no trump when 4 suits are guarded, and to bid the suit in case only 3 suits are guarded. If you are a better player than your partner, you had better bid his way, to make the best possible use of such ability as he possesses. The hands which follow will serve to illustrate the differences between the three above methods of choosing between trump and no trump makes.

♠AQ63 ♠A64
♥K73 ♣QJ5

3—
♠KQ63 ♠A6
♥AJ72 ♣QJ6

Method 1 calls for an opening suit bid on each of the 3 hands. Method 3 also calls for a suit bid on Hand 1, because all 4 suits are not guarded. Hand 2 obligates no trump under either Method 2 or 3. Hand 3 calls for a suit bid by those following Method 2, as there are 2 biddable suits. All three systems must bid no trump on Hand 4, as it lacks a sound suit declaration.

←
♥AK6 ♣A85

Ordinarily a 5-card suit makes a better trump make than no trumps, especially if the suit is a major one. If the 5-card suit is a minor one, bid 2-No Trumps in case every suit is twice stopped against leads coming from the left. I prefer 2-No Trumps on Hand 5; 1-Diamond is preferable on Hand 6, as hearts contain only a single stop. I would rather bid 2-Hearts on Hand 7, as a sign of game expectancy.

6—
♠AK ♠KQJ73
♥K84 ♣AQ6

7—

♥KQJ73 ♣AK

Unless partner is willing to bid 4 in his suit, I would bid 3-No Trumps on Hand 5, as there is an advantage in having the lead come up to such a hand with two tenace suits like hearts and spades, rather than have the lead go through it. Although a no trump take-out of the 1-Diamond bid on Hand 6, does not necessarily show more than the equal of 3 Kings, I would jump my partner to 3-No Trumps on the chance to go game at that make if he has as good as the K of clubs and Q-J of hearts. If partner can make any suit, take-out of your 2-Hearts on Hand 7, he should have at least one quick trick, which must show either the Ace of hearts or Ace of diamonds, so that 3-No Trumps should be a practical certainty.

Style Features Of These Frocks Will Last

Left, black canion crepe dress with white collar and cuffs; second, plain wool crepe skirt, plaid top; third, silk crepe dress with plaid taffeta trimmings; four, crepe coat dress with plaid scarf; right, rough sheer crepe frock with satin trimming

(Courtesy Good Housekeeping)

You can depend on the style of these new frocks to last not only through the autumn, but through the entire winter. They are as smart and wearable as you will find anywhere.

For the first of the season, black and white is a wise choice. The dress sketched left is in faille canton crepe, with collar, flower and cuffs of a new white ribbed silk. The dress has the fashionable dropped shoulder and sleeves puffed below the elbow.

In the two-piece frock, second, the top is monotone plaid wool crepe, the skirt plain wool crepe. It is the ideal, practical everyday frock.

A drawstring neckline and a wide belt and jabot of plaid taffeta are three points of smartness of the third frock. While the fourth model sketched also uses plaid to brighten up a dark dress. A fine effect in the fabric of the latter file crepe coat dress makes it new. The fabric looks like silk, but is one of the new silk-like materials. It buttons well over at the side of the neck, and has a wrap-over skirt.

Satin is exceedingly smart this season, especially when combined with a dull fabric. This formal afternoon dress is fashioned of a new sheer crepe with a rough surface, and matching satin is used for trimming and also for sash belt. The tiny collar edge and scarf are of heavy white crinkle crepe.

Your Health

By DR LOGAN CLENDENING

Respectfully submitted to Mr. Ripley's "Believe It or Not" column are the following medical records:

EATING: A boy of twelve is reported to have eaten 384 pounds of food in six days. At the same time he vomited constantly, and when food was withheld he would bite off pieces of his own flesh. The only explanation medical science can offer is that it was an example of insanity.

Dr. Clendenius

DRINKING: A young man under ordinary circumstances drank from eight to twelve gallons of water a day. At night he had a tubful of water at the side of his bed. At times his thirst would become so excessive that he would drive hogs from their troughs or mudholes in order to quench it. The explanation would seem to be that it was an example of a disease known as "diabetes insipidus" (not the same as ordinary diabetes). In this condition there is a disturbance of water balance: Due to a lesion at the base of the brain the body is unable to "fix" the water consumed in the tissue. It can be treated by the use of pituitary extract.

HEAT ENDURANCE: A Russian named Chamonni made his living by entering an oven carrying a raw leg of mutton, and would stand there until the meat was cooked. There is no adequate explanation except to say it was adaptation. However, his adaptation was not sufficiently complete, because one day he died at the end of the performance.

INJURIES: The amount of insult which the body can withstand successfully has been the subject of countless reports. Last year in this column was reported the case of a youth who in an automobile accident was impaled on the point of a splintered two-by-four, as a beetle is impaled by a naturalist on a pin, and yet recovered.

At the meeting of the American Medical association this year Dr. Gardner of Cleveland described a woman who had half her brain removed on account of tumor, and yet was able to see and hear and move.

Similarly the case is reported by Dr. C. B. Schutz of Kansas City of a man who had half his brain cut away by a large hand saw. "The plant foreman poured iodine on the surface of the brain and transported the man some twelve miles to a hospital, where he promptly recovered."

The "famous American crowbar case" concerned a workman who exploded a charge of dynamite with his crowbar, driving it up through his jaw and through the frontal lobes of his brain. These lobes are supposed to control intellectual processes only, and this case seems to confirm that idea because the only bad result was that the man had a change of disposition and became moody and irritable. All the functions of sight, hearing, movement of both hands and legs, etc., remained intact.

BE BEAUTIFUL

By GLADYS GLAD.

It's a funny thing, but half the women of history who have won fame because of their loveliness, were not really perfect from a technical point of view. Take the famous Empress Josephine, for instance. Napoleon considered Josephine the most gorgeous of femmes. Yet Josephine had a very ugly set of teeth, and a far from pretty mouth. However, this famous French empress possessed a lot of charm. And the woman who possesses charm doesn't really need much else.

Charm is something that is really rather difficult to define. But everyone agrees that it is as valuable a possession for a woman as beauty itself. It is a necessary part of beauty. And it can make even a truly homely woman seem magnetic and fascinating.

Charm, I think, can probably best be described as the power of attracting and pleasing people. And although some women are born with this faculty, it is possible for every woman to develop charm in herself. It is more or less a matter merely of giving attention to the manner in which she conducts herself in her contacts with people.

If you really want to cultivate charm, the first thing to do is always to give your entire attention to people in your meetings with them. Don't make them feel that your mind is half occupied with something else. It's not very flattering to them. Make them feel that they are all-important to you, and they will succumb to your attentiveness.

Again, always be gracious and kind in your dealings with people. Don't, in a careless moment, say something that you might regret later. Catty or unkind remarks, whether thoughtlessly or intentionally made, will hurt you more than they will the individual at whom you direct them. And they will greatly detract from your charm. Be careful that you do not even unintentionally offend people.

And finally, polish up your manners. Don't, of course, act gushy or unnatural. And don't be stiffly polite or coldly conventional. But be polite, courteous and considerate of people in a natural way. If you are, you are bound to make them feel at once the full force of your graciousness and charm.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

Colors.

Redhead: For a girl of your coloring, shades of tan, brown, russet, capucine, pinkish beige, cool greens, mat white and black should prove most becoming.

Quince Seeds.

Mrs. T.: The quince seeds for the wave-setting lotion can be purchased in any well-stocked drug store.

Coco Butter.

Margie: In addition to the exercising, coco butter will help to fill out your thighs. Warm it and massage it into your thighs nightly.

Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors conducted by Anne Wilcox

The abbreviations for stitches used in crocheting are very simple when once discovered and because a number have written in asking about these, I thought it might be a good idea to devote some space to it today.

* * * * * * *

They are apt to be the first two letters of the word for which they stand, or they may be a combination of the first letters of two words. For example, a stitch is abbreviated into st., plural sts., while single crochet is sc., double crochet dc., triple crochet, tc. or trc., and slip stitch by sl. st.

* * * * * * *

Chain stitch is ch. The number designating how many stitches are to be worked of any kind are put before the abbreviations as 3 sc., 2d., etc. The number of chain stitches is more flexible. It sometimes comes as 5 ch., or it may come after as ch. 5.

* * * * * * *

In filet crochet the open stitch is called a space, abbreviated to sp. The solid one is a block or bk. Designs are in blocks.

* * * * * * *

Asterisks (stars) signify that the stitches between them are to be repeated according to directions given. It may be that another printers' mark is used such as † instead of stars, but the significance is the same.

* * * * * * *

The word 'row' is not abbreviated but given in full. The number of the row is stated as 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, etc., but these abbreviations are not peculiar to crochet directions, and with one exception they are understood without explanation.

* * * * * * *

The abbreviation of st., is common to both. It may stand for first, twenty-first, etc., as 1st, 21st, 31st, etc. Or it may stand for stitch as explained before. The context makes it plain which abbreviation is meant.

* * * * * * *

For instance when the directions specify 1st row, it is evident that the word is first. If in stitchery given in the row there comes 1st, it is as readily understood that one stitch is designated.

* * * * * * *

Thread over is a term used in crochet, and which should be understood although it is not an abbreviation. It signifies putting the thread over the crochet needle. Medium is a word used today to indicate any kind of yarn, thread, etc., of whatever kind. It is comprehensive.

PEOPLE BUYING MORE FREELY

In August More Chrysler Cars Shipped From Canadian Points Than Same Month Last Year.

"An extraordinary performance, confirming our opinion that buying power and confidence are returning rapidly," says Jno. D. Mansfield, President of the Chrysler Corporation of Canada Limited, referring to August shipments of Chrysler Motors products.

"During August we shipped from our Canadian plants more than five and a half times the number of motor vehicles shipped during August 1932," stated Mr. Mansfield. "During the month we were constantly behind in filling our dealers' requirements and entered September with a bank of unfilled orders from dealers greater than our entire shipments for August 1932. We have had the biggest August business since 1929."

"This means something more to me than merely the popularity of Chrysler Motors products, although that is no doubt a big factor," continued Mr. Mansfield. "It means that people are buying more freely because they are confident that business is on the upgrade. They are beginning to believe that tomorrow will be better than to-day and have lost their fear that their income and assets would be subject to further shrinkage."

"I have felt for some time that business and industry had gone far enough in making fundamental adjustments to justify a substantial measure of recovery as soon as the public regained confidence. I believe that this necessary public confidence is returning rapidly," concluded Mr. Mansfield.

Carnation Milk

"From Contented Cows"

WORLD'S LARGEST SELLING BRAND OF EVAPORATED MILK

Trimmed With Lamb

By LISBETH

The combination of two furs in coats is classic, but the union achieved here is a bit unusual—dark brown kid caracul with darker brown Persian lamb.

It's very swanky, and the tiny hat of the caracul adds its bit to the general smartness, as do the brown kid oxfords with spotted reptile trim.

They were awarded a teapot and caddy of tea, and received the congratulations from many old friends. The youngest married couple were Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Pearson, 253 Princess Street, who were married on Labor Day, the day of the social.

The prize for the largest family on the grounds produced a tie between A. Tedford of Indian River and Wm. Garvey, each of whom with their wives had twelve children present. They divided the first and second prizes. The third went to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Heffernan who attended the social with nine children.

Other drawings were as follows: 1 centre piece. Won by Miss Florence Mahoney, R.R. No. 10, Peterborough.

Household Hints

MENU HINTS.

Half Cantaloupes Filled With Watermelon Balls
Creamed Eggs and Mushrooms
Baked Potatoes
Corn on Cob Sliced Peaches
Cake or Cookies Tea

This menu will serve for a bridge luncheon or for a supper menu—or dinner, for that matter.

To-day's Recipes.

Creamed Eggs and Mushrooms. — Cook one tablespoon of minced onion and one tablespoon of minced green pepper in three tablespoons of butter. When soft, blend with three tablespoons of flour. Stir in one and three-fourths cups of milk and the liquid from an eight-ounce can of mushrooms, season, add mushrooms and six hard-cooked eggs which have been sliced. Serve on toast and garnish with stuffed olives. Should be very hot.

FACTS AND FANCIES

Useful Hints From Other Housewives.

To wash painted walls use one pint sal soda dissolved in six quarts warm water. Measure with a milk bottle to be accurate. Wash walls with this, rinse in clear water and wipe dry.

An easy way to clean wallpaper is to take one pint of kerosene oil and one pint of lukewarm water; mix thoroughly.

Wring old pieces of cloth such as old pillowcases, sheets, cheesecloth, etc., out of the mixture, dry them thoroughly and wipe ceiling and walls down. It works like magic.

Important Trifles.

Pears, candied ginger, and sliced pasteurized dates are a combination which may be used for fruit cup, salad or dessert course.

Souffles made with crackers don't fail, and go farther.

Cookies and cakes made with corn syrup will keep moist in the summertime.

A quick sauce for ice cream, cottage pudding or shortcake is easy to make, simply by heating maple syrup and adding a half cup of toasted nutmeats to it just before serving.

Use ginger snaps for making a "cracker crumb" crust for your next apple pie.

THIS MODERN WORLD

The world of business becomes more and more complex; the boy or girl who enters it without training is under a handicap. A systematic Savings Account, growing at compound interest, will assist you in giving your child a favorable start in life.

THE ROYAL BANK OF CANADA

TO GIVE AWAY CIRCUS PONY

Special Children's Day at Exhibition on Saturday, Board Announces.

KIDDIES HAVE BIG DAY.

The rising generation certainly had their day at the Exhibition yesterday, for they were provided with weather that was not too hot and entertainment that would be hard to beat anywhere.

From twelve noon there was a steady influx of kiddies into the Fair Grounds, and by the time the grand stand got under way there was a seething mass of children in all parts of the grounds.

In the afternoon the grand stand attractions drew to capacity, but there were still thousands milling around the Midway and buildings.

When the performance was over in the stand the grounds were literally alive with kiddies and it was quite a struggle to get through the Midway. Eric the Robot seemed to be the big magnet for the children, but all the rides and shows did a land-office business and it was way late in the evening before the last of the kiddies were on their way home.

The directors of the Fair and Paddy Conklin of the All-Canadian Shows were delighted at the wonderful support given to the Fair by the children, and as a result have decided to have a special Kiddies' Day on Saturday from 12 noon until 5.30.

In addition to the admission to grounds being five cents and all attractions the same price, each child entering the grounds will be given a ticket which will entitle them to a chance to win a real live Circus Pony which is being given by Mr. Conklin.

The drawing will take place at 5 o'clock in front of the Circus Side Show on the Midway, and who knows but what you may be the lucky one to ride home on a real live pony owned by yourself.

GANDHI CEASES DRIVE FOR YEAR

Will Avoid Being Jailed For Disobedience Till August 3, 1934.

"CUP OF AGONY."

POONA, India, Sept. 14 (CP) — Mahatma Gandhi promised to-day to refrain from aggressive civil disobedience acts, and thereby avoid courting re-imprisonment, until Aug. 3, 1934, even though he believes this restraint is a "bitter cup of agony."

He gave this assurance to Pandit Jawarhalal Nehru, a Nationalist leader like Gandhi, after they completed protracted talks.

"Since my unexpected release on Aug. 23, darkness has surrounded me," Gandhi said. "It will take me several weeks to regain my health. So, after hard praying, I have decided not to court imprisonment until Aug. 3, 1934, marking the termination of the sentence from which I was released after my latest fast.

"Nevertheless, this does not affect the advice I gave urging to the country to participate in individual disobedience against British authority.

"That I have suspended action myself is unfortunate but inevitable. This self-restraint is a bitter cup of agony. I can remain outside, but I cannot be a willing party to an undignified cat and mouse game if the government is contemplating one.

"But if I am re-arrested and if an inner urge is present I shall not hesitate to undertake a fast to the finish, and if I am denied the right to work for the untouchable class not even release from jail would end my fast."

REICHSTAG FIRE INQUIRY OPENS

Three German Witnesses Reported Marked for Death By Nazi Orders.

HEARING IN LONDON.

LONDON, Sept. 14 (C.P.). — An international legal commission of inquiry into the burning last February of the German Reichstag Building began its sessions to-day.

Of 15 witnesses to be called there are on the list three Germans, the Herald said were threatened with death in a notice posted in a Nazi meeting place in London's West-End.

Police started an investigation of the newspaper report which said photographs of the Germans were posted in the Nazi Club under the injunction: "If you meet any one of them, kill him, and if he is a Jew, break every bone in his body."

The Herald identified the three as a man named Breitscheid, former Reichstag Socialist leader; Professor George Bernhard, former editor of the Vossische Zeitung, and Albert Grzesinski, one time Berlin police chief.

The commission is meeting in the court room of the Law Society. It was pointed out that the society is disinterested in the proceedings and is merely renting the premises.

D. N. Pritt, K.C., is the commission chairman.

Five men will go on trial in Leipsig, Germany, September 21, for setting the fire February 27. Communists were accused of being responsible.

BIG APPLE CROP

BELLEVILLE, Ont. — Belleville district will have one of the best apple crops in years, in the opinion of George F. Ostrum, prominent shipper. "Everything has been in its favor this year," he said, "and we have been given one of the best apple crops we ever had. We could ship thousands of barrels from the immediate district to England and the Continent if we had the facilities."

"Chipso put an end to faded clothes in our house" says busy mother of four

"Mother started me using Chipso two years ago," beamed Mrs. Thomas Kelly. "She had been so annoyed with the way clothes faded that when she found that Chipso kept her dresses bright and new looking she couldn't wait to tell me.

"I had been disheartened, too, because my daughter's colorful rayon or silk sports dresses dulled so quickly. Chipso put an end to that worry!

"Chipso is just as wonderful for white clothes! My laundress, whom I've had thirteen years, was never able to get our clothes so white as they are now with Chipso.

"The clothes don't require hard rubbing. Chipso soaks them clean. And they aren't weakened by any harshness in the soap. That saves mending for me. As a matter of fact, we put everything—even woollens and silk stockings—into Chipso suds without a fear of damage. I just love Chipso for blankets, too. It makes them so soft."

We asked Mrs. Kelly what soap she uses for dishwashing and cleaning. "Chipso always," she said. "It is so sudsy it makes all that kind of work go faster and it saves my hands just the way it saves clothes."

Well, there—that is Mrs. Kelly's experience. Maybe you can find help from it for your problem! As for the technical explanation—it is this. Chipso works hard and fast without being injurious, BECAUSE IT IS SOAPIER. It is not adulterated with harsh, "dirt-cutting" ingredients. It has a bigger percentage of good RICH SUDS. That is why it goes farther, too. That big box of low-priced, SAFE Chipso is truly the very best soap value you will find on your grocer's shelf today. Get your Chipso this week.

Chipso makes clothes wear longer

"Gossip and Such"

Bill Terry

THAT GRAND old figure of speech about the irresistible force colliding with the immovable object may describe the 1933 world series problem if the N. Y. Giants and Washington Senators meet — and it's better than 10 to 1 they do — in the fall games.

The Giants have the pitchers and—as it once was considered smart to say — how! But no hitters. That is, they have batters who do very little successful batting.

The Senators have the hitters and—again—how! And the Senators have some pretty fair moundsmen, too. But they do not compare, as a group, on this season's showing, with the brilliant elbowmen of the Terriers.

• • •

THE GIANTS would seem to have the edge, because of their pitchers. In setting the pace in the National league the New Yorkers licked several clubs who compare favorably in batting strength with the Senators.

• • •

THE AMERICAN League has so dominated the world series since 1926 that it has become almost second nature with baseball writers and fans to rate the junior circuit's entry as favorite each year.

• • •

THE 1933 Washington club is a smart, hustling team, but it lacks the great batting power and brilliant array of pitchers which the New York Yankees and Philadelphia Athletics possessed when they were making the autumnal classics annual massacres.

• • •

HEINIE MANUSH, Goose Goslin, Joe Kuhel, Buddy Myer and Joe Cronin are good hitters, but they hardly measure up to the old Yank combination of Ruth, Gehrig, Lazeri, Combs or the A's great group of Simmons, Cochrane, Foxx and Miller.

• • •

AND AS FOR pitchers—Alvin Crowder, Monte Weaver, Earl Whitehill, Wally Stewart and Bob Burke, are as good a group as the American league now can show, but would you take 'em in a trade for that old Yankee quartet of Pennock, Hoyt, Shocker and Pipgras or Connie Mack's Grover-Earnshaw-Walberg-Rommel setup?

Neither would we.

• • •

THE GIANTS, if they win, will have successfully concluded a much harder job than the Senators can have had in winning the American league pennant.

• • •

WASHINGTON HAD but to step along in second place—and they were a poor second at that—until the sudden collapse of the Yankees destroyed New York's pennant hopes. The Senators stepped into the lead.

• • •

The Giants not only needed to overcome the repeated challenges of Pittsburgh, Chicago, St. Louis and Boston to remain on top but also to develop a fine fighting morale, a morale always menaced by the thought that just a season ago they were in the second division and that until Sept. 1 many still regarded them as a team playing "way over their heads. It's been no picnic for Bill Terry's boys. They've been through the mill — so a world series should find them supremely confident of taking the games in their stride.

SOMERVILLE TRIUMPHS IN EXTRA-HOLE MATCH OVER ERNIE CALDWELL

Fischer Follows Goodman With Host of Other Potential Champions Into Discard.

36 HOLES TO-DAY.

Somerville Paired With Little While Dunlap Draws Eddie Held.

(By James L. Renick—A.P. Sports Writer).

KENWOOD COUNTRY CLUB, Cincinnati, Sept. 14 (C.P.).—The job of stopping C. Ross (Sandy) Somerville, the silent Canadian Scot of London, Ont., from winning his second consecutive United States amateur golf championship looked tougher than ever to-day.

Gone was Johnny Goodman of Omaha, the U.S. open title holder; gone was Johnny Fischer of Cincinnati, the record-making medalist; gone was a host of other potential champions and other Canadians as the tournament entered the quarter-finals.

Still in the race against Somerville after yesterday's rampant charge of the "dark horse" candidates were four contenders from the east, and one each from the mid-west, the far west and the south-west. The only ex-champion left among the seven was Max Marston of Philadelphia. The first two rounds of match play were of 18 holes each, but from now on the fight will consist of a 36-hole match each day.

Faces Real Opportunity.

Dead serious in his quest for his second straight title, Somerville faced some more real opposition today in a match with Lawson Little, Jr., of San Francisco, who first attracted attention at Pebble Beach several years ago.

The Canadian stole the show yesterday by turning back two stubborn bids for the crown. The first was made by a former champion, Chick Evans, Jr., of Chicago, who found himself paired with the defending champion after winning the right to enter the first match round in a playoff for the final positions. Evans fired straight and true all morning on a rain-soaked course, and not until the match had gone three extra holes did he fall before the sharpshooting of Somerville.

Makes Good Bid

A young golfer from Baltimore, Ernie Caldwell—one of the "dark horse" legion—made the second attempt of the day to eliminate the title holder. With the honor of dethroning the champion within his grasp going to the 18th hole, Caldwell faltered slightly and allowed the Canadian to square the match on the home green. Forced into an extra hole match for the second time during the day, Somerville won out on the 20th with a birdie two.

Puts Up Great Battle

Following as a close second in thrills to Somerville's stubborn resistance was the ding-dong battle between H. Chandler Egan of Del Monte, Calif., and Goodman, the open king, in the first round.

Amateur title holder several years before Goodman was born, the 40-year old Californian matched his youthful opponent stroke for stroke, went one up at the 14th, held the advantage to the home green and then dropped an 18-foot putt to dispose of one of the favorites, two up, by means of a 70, one under par.

Spent from his strenuous round in the morning, Egan fell by the wayside before the sniping of 18-year-old Jack Munger, of Dallas, Tex., in the afternoon, 5 and 4. Munger is making his first bid for the title.

BIRDS AGAIN DEFEATED BY BUFFALO 6-5

Bisons Make it Two Straight at Baltimore, While Wings Beat Bears.

MOVE TO ROCHESTER.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 14.—(CP)—Newarks baseball Bears, who finished the regular International League season last week about 15 games ahead of the Rochester Red Wings, today were on even terms with the St. Louis Cardinal "farm" team as they awaited the third game of the new play-off system of deciding the league championship.

Both clubs moved to Rochester last night, after the Wings had taken a 4 to 3 decision here to even the series, and tonight they will meet under the flood lights. Manager Al Mamaux, of the Bears, had nominated Johnny Broaca, late of Yale, to take the pitching job in which Don Brennan, leading hurler of the league last year, was unsuccessful yesterday.

Tony Kaufmann's veteran pitching and Young Tom Carey's fancy batting were too much for Newark, 1932 champions, to overcome yesterday. Kaufmann gave the Bears only six hits and Carey, a New Jersey boy himself, smashed out two devastating drives. One was a home run with Kaufmann on base in the third and the other was a hard-hit ball that caused Roy Schalk to error, letting in the other two runs in the fifth.

Three hits gave the Bears two of their runs in the opening inning. Vince Barton, the Toronto west-end slugger, added another with a long homer in the seventh, but repeated threats in the final innings were squelched by Kaufmann and some brilliant fielding.

NOT IN FAVOR OF PROPOSED INTERNATIONAL HOCKEY LOOP

League Would Include Minneapolis, Duluth, St. Paul, Fort William and Winnipeg—C.A.H.A. Vice-President Against Idea.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 14. — (CP) — Fans might like to see International amateur hockey teams in action this winter, as suggested in Fort William ice circles, but officials are skeptical.

From Fort William came word Wednesday the formation of an international loop to include Duluth, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Fort William, Port Arthur and Winnipeg was a possibility for the 1933-34 season.

The suggestion was greeted with favor at the annual meeting of the Port Arthur Hockey club from E. A. Gilroy, vice-president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey association, and J. E. Goodwillie, an executive of the Minnesota Central Hockey league, came words of doubt.

"An international league composed of United States and Canadian amateur teams, under the jurisdiction of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, does not appeal to me," Mr. Gilroy, who resides at Portage La Prairie, wired the Canadian Press. "It is my opinion," he added, "that such a league would not at present, if ever, receive the approval of the C.A.A.A."

Sanction of the C.A.H.A. would be necessary, and the registration of United States clubs assured, before an international league could operate.

Mr. Goodwillie doubted the feasibility of the international league. Expenses would be too great and with a circuit already operating in Minneapolis and St. Paul there would probably be opposition in obtaining consent for the formation of a second, he said.

WEST TORONTO CHAMPS BEATEN BY 7-3 COUNT

Six-run Hitting Splurge in Second Puts Game on Ice For Ponies.

FOURNIER GOES GOOD.

New Toronto Stages Rally in Ninth But Fails to Make Grade.

Kingston, C.O.B.L. champions, eliminated New Toronto, the title-holders of the West Toronto League, from the O.B.A.A. playdowns yesterday in Stevenson Park, 7 to 3, before over seven hundred fans. A six-run hitting splurge in the second frame put the game on ice for the Ponies, who played excellent ball behind Fournier's fine pitching. Outside of that second frame, it was a classy contest, with New Toronto putting on an exciting but short-lived rally in the ninth.

Chuck Fournier fanned six and gave but seven hits, mostly scattered, in a good slab performance. He turned the Toronto players back in order with a hit from the fourth to the ninth, getting better as he went along though weak at the last. He gave four walks and had the best of support throughout.

Costly Second Frame

Lefty Stafford started for the Queen City crew, but was wild and hit hard in the second to allow five hits, six runs and three walks. Herod took over the burden in the third and held the Ponies to four hits, no two to a frame, the rest of the route. He struck out two, but walked six. Their support was good for the most part.

Compeau and G. Arnell went best in the field for Kingston, though the whole infield and outfield played good defensive ball. Stone had the only error, the ball being knocked from his hand in a collision with Eisner in the fourth, the Pony first-sacker being hurt and retiring shortly in favor of Joyce. Adams and Gibbs played good ball afield for the losers, with the other also turning in some smart saves.

Leads Limestone Hitters

McQuaid topped the Limestone stickers with a triple and double in four; G. Arnell and Scrutton also hitting twice each. Jennings and Adams came through with two bingles apiece for New Toronto.

Jennings walked, went to second on an out, third on Dean's single, and scored on an oufield fly for Toronto's first run in the opening stanza. Kingston came back strong in the second to tally six on two walks, a wild pitch, an error, singles by Quinn, G. Arnell, Scrutton and Smith, and a double by McQuaid. Evans, of the Toronton, tripled to centre in the third and raced home on a fly to the outfield. Neither side could do anything then till the eighth, when Kingston got one on McQuaid's triple and an outfield fly. In New Toronto's half of the ninth, they got one run on Adams' single, two steals and a hit by Jennings. The bases were full when the last out was made.

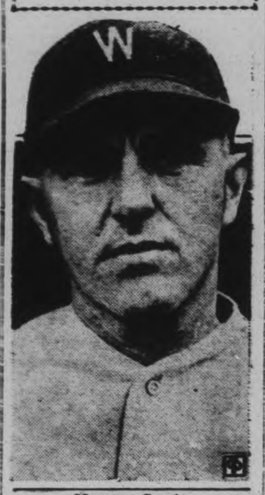
Salute This Senator!



Manager Cronin

Joseph Edward Cronin, manager and shortstop, was born in San Francisco, Cal., on Columbus Day —Oct. 12, 1906.

After playing third base for Mission high school and several amateur teams in Frisco, he was signed by the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1925 at the age of 18. The Pirates optioned him to the Johnstown, Pa., Mid-Atlantic, and New Haven, Conn., Eastern league clubs.

Early in 1928 the Pirates sold him to Kansas City, Mo., American association club, from which team Washington acquired him.

On Oct. 8, 1932, Owner Clark Griffith appointed him manager of the Senators—and Joe has now become the youngest playing manager ever to pilot a major league championship team. He weighs 180 pounds, is five feet 11 inches tall, bats, throws right handed. Joe isn't married.

"BEDFORD GRATTAN" ENTERED IN FRIDAY'S TROTTING RACES

Increase in Purses Brings Better Quality of Trotters to Exhibition Track This Year — Several of the Grattan Strain.

"Bedford Grattan," winner of the Canadian Futurity stake race at the Toronto Exhibition last week, is going for all the money in the three-year-old pace stake at the Peterborough Exhibition Friday afternoon against a classy field of light harness horses that have come direct from Toronto.

Followers of the sulky stars in this district will not miss Friday afternoon's card of two stake races, the other having been arranged for the 2.22 class of steppers. Stan Lowe, convenor of the track committee, believes that there has never been a faster field of racers than those now stabled at Exhibition Park.

The entry list speaks for itself as follows in the three-year-old stake pace which will be decided in three heats:

Bedford Grattan—Gid Litt, Goderich.
Dominion Grattan—W. Herberts, Niagara Falls.
Miss Grattan Barr—Neil McRachlan, Aisla Craig.
Grattanette—Dr. C. H. Heslop, Milton.
Dominion Grattan—J. T. Payette, Penetanguishine.
Dixie Grattan—Vic Rountree, Weston.

Mr. Lowe said that Earl Rowe, M.P.P. for Dufferin-Simcoe, had entered J. C. Dunn's "Peter Chilcoot," but there was some doubt as to whether it would be vanned to Peterborough for Friday.

"We don't want to mislead the public in the least," he remarked, "and as we are not certain about 'Peter Chilcoot' I have not included him in the entries but he may be here. The fans will notice that there are two horses named 'Dominion Grattan' in the three-year-old event. That is the way they appeared on the Toronto Exhibition score cards. The first owner to register this name was W. Herberts of Niagara Falls. Then J. T. Payette of Penetanguishine chose the same name for horse, and he was advised by the Racing Association that he would have to change it. Instead, he raced it at Meaford on May 24, and it will now cost him $50 to register a new name."

These horses will be distinguished on the score cards for Friday afternoon, and the similarity of names, a rather unusual coincident in the racing register, stands for the present until the Payette horse gets a new moniker.

To attract better horses to Peterborough, for the purpose of improving this attraction at the grandstand, the directors decided to give three $500 stakes, and the result of the increased purses is shown by the improvement and quality and number of the entries for the six races carded for the last three afternoons of the Exhibition. These events alone would make a feature grandstand attraction, but the vaudeville performance will go on just the same. It looks like a big afternoon for Friday.

$500 Purse for 2.22 Class

At least eight horses will cross the wire in the start of the 2.22 class, first money going to the winner of three out of five hearts. A glance at the appended entry list should tickle the horse-loving public with anticipation of the speed that is going to be turned on in deciding these two events. All that is needed is a fast racing strip, and if the weather remains clear the track will be in good condition. Followers of this game remember that "Bedford Grattan" did the mile in 2.10½ to win the Canadian Futurity Cup which was brought to Peterborough a few years ago by the Fife mare "Keendale" when she captured the honors for three-year-olds at the Toronto Exhibition and seemed to have a real future on the Ontario track.

The entries for the 2.22 class are:

Philco—L. G. Bennett, Port Hope.
Lolla K. T.—W. Briggs, Toronto.
Cigarette—Dr. E. M. Herrington, Picton.
Billie Hugo—Rossell and Fraser, Ridgetown.
High Brass—Mehlenbacher Bros., Neils Corners.
Senator Patch—Gibbs Bros., Lumsden, Sask.
Margaret Dillon—Moore Bros., Sarnia.
Ted Grattan—James Sutherland, Peterborough.

WALL QUARTET DEFEATED 15-8 IN RINKS FINAL

Local Bowlers Are Successful in Doubles and Singles Competition.

SMALLER ENTRY.

By HERB MARTIN

Harry Rosevear and his rink from Port Hope defeated Ernie Wall's quartette from Peterborough, 15-8, in the final game to win the rink competition of the Central Ontario Lawn Bowling Association. Both rinks won both their previous games after hard struggles with Cobourg and Brighton. Hank always does well up here and the boys certainly deserved the honor of holding the championship and cup for 1933.

The Peterborough club, represented by Benny Chesler and Will Wood won the doubles competition from R. Winters and J. McTaggart of Port Hope, 20-6, while George Gimblett won the singles for the same club, 21-8, from Les. Wilson of Cobourg.

This is the first time in the history of this organization that any two competitions have been won by the same club, and the boys deserve the congratulations of the entire membership.

The Winners.

W. J. Oke, Dr. J. T. Daly, F. Flood, H. Rosevear, Port Hope—Cup and individual silver-plated cocktail shakers.

B. Chesler and W. Wood, Peterborough, each received silver-plated water jugs.

George Gimblett, Peterborough—half-dozen sherbet glasses.

HOLLYWOOD

Sense and Nonsense

Those kidnaping threats against her niece still have Lupe Veles in a flurry. Besides sending the youngsters to Mexico, she has done everything but put a moat around her Beverly Hills house.

Lupe Velez

The latest safeguard is $1500 worth of ornamental but effective iron bars which workmen installed last week on all accessible windows of the Velez menage.

Lupe's chauffeur can hit a dime at 20 paces and draws like an old-time western gunman. Her swank car rolls into a flood-lighted driveway, and before the Mexican star gets out a man servant appears at the door to cover her entrance. And, of course, you've heard that both Lupe and Johnny Weissmuller have pistols.

The kidnapper who tries to abduct the daughter of Colonel Jacob Villalobos is going to have his hands full.

Here's a hot one. Unless they decide to cut it out, a satirical echo of the Winchell-Jolson fisticuffs will be heard in the motion picture, "Broadway Through a Keyhole."

One of the characters, Blossom Seeley, says: "By the way, didn't somebody out in Hollywood take a poke at Winchell?"

And Heroine Constance Cummings replies: "Yeah; I think so, but I can't remember his name."

Our match-makers may as well cool down about Sally Eilers and Harry Joe Brown, because Sally intends to divorce Hoot Gibson in California and that means a year's wait before she could remarry. Were there any real romance in the offing, the Nevada courts would offer a convenient release in six weeks.

Sally treats the gossip lightly, anyway—calls Harry Joe her "Big Bear."

You can look for the star to file one of those mental cruelty complaints as soon as she returns from a vacation in Yosemite. It's her first trip to the California resort and she is taking Dixie Martin along for company. They'll spend their time doing a lot of resting.

George O'Brien rides again and he will ride right into your heart in "Life in the Raw," the Fox romance which opens at the Regent theatre on Saturday for a three day run.

The story concerns a young and attractive girl who finds herself among the more or less primitive elements of the western wastes. She no sooner lands in this strange territory than she becomes the centre of attraction—among the men, at least. Her very obvious newness to her surroundings, and her need for protection are the agents that bring her and O'Brien together. In a series of adventures that involve a number of the most hair-raising feats of riding you ever saw, O'Brien establishes his pre-eminence over the rest of her admirers.

England is making a strong bid to take Bing Crosby away from Hollywood. More of Bing's records are sold in the British Isles than in any other part of the world. The season according to Ev Crosby, the crooning star's brother and manager, is that records are not allowed to be played on the English radio.

Holland also is a good market for records. The Dutch like hot music.

You have a treat coming when you hear the music that Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed have composed for Marion Davies and Bing in "Going Hollywood." Listen for: "We'll Make Hay While the Sun Shines," "Temptation" and "After Sundown."

The three-year-olds race here tomorrow! Yessir, and not only that but there are two stake races down there Friday afternoon at the Exhibition Grounds. The 2.22 pace and the one for the colts. A thousand bucks is what they'll be shooting at, five hundred to each run with the winner in each case knocking down fifty percent, or $350. No fooling that three-year-old race ought to be a dream, as most of the best young hosses in the country—and by that, we mean Canada!—are here for it. Outside of Toronto, this is the most promising spot to put the colts in, with big money prizes up to attract them from all over, with this Ex. following on the heels of the C.N.E., and with always a chance to sell for the right price. To say nothing of the training for the three-year-old trotters and pacers. Should be worth seeing.

The big guns of the Kingston Ponies boomed out in the second inning of their final game with New Toronto here yesterday and blasted in six runs in one frame to grab the series, 7 to 3. Chuck Fournier forkaided the pill across in great style, and he had some hard hitting and grand fielding to aid him in the win that sends the Ponies on into the third O.B.A.A. senior round 'gainst Riverdale Grads. Mick da Comp—as some of 'em call the Ponies' shortstopper—turned in a fine exhibish on how that position should be played, and every other guy on the team pulled off smart saves.

* * * * * * *

But it's in hitting that Kingston looks so good. When they need the runs, any one of them it seems can step up there and clout out a clean hit, and someone else will drive him around. McQuaid, the best hitter in the loop this year, hit in two runs and scored twice himself, getting a double and triple in four times to bat. If we had a hitter like that on the Petes' lineup this year, we'd probably have been in the O.B.A.A. race right now instead of sitting back and cheering the Ponies along.

* * * * * * *

Speaking of cheering it certainly seemed odd to hear the local fans yelling encouragement and rooting for our ex-enemies from the Limestone burg. Hewitt Smith, Mickey Compeau, Quinn, Stone and the others—all received cheers yesterday where before they were called everything but printable names. What a whale of a difference a few weeks make! Quite a gang took in the game, many being from Oshawa, Belleville and Kingston. Well, we're glad to see the O.O.B.L. winners taking the W. Toronto loop champs, and we hope they go right on to the finals.

For no other reason than the fact that we, too, get a huge kick out of colorful sports, regardless of their sanity or value to mankind, we are heartily in accord with Bud Shaver's remarks on the Harmsworth Trophy race: "I am delighted with it as I am with all goofiness. It is a great and colorful spectacle, completely innocent of usefulness or sanity, but so are many works of art. It is diverting. It is exhilarating, and there is too little of those two commodities in the world. Its greatest thrill is its colossal goofiness!"

A brief notice from Cobourg in this morning's paper states: "Cobourg lacrosse team, entry in the Inter-County Lacrosse League, will protest, it is stated here, the playoff games with Dinty's Inn, Peterborough, on the ground that the latter used players not belonging to their team. Both the game at Norwood, in which Cobourg was defeated, and the game here, which was a tie, 10-10, will be protested." There you are, and following is a letter on the subject which we received from the president of the Cobourg Lacrosse Club, Mr. Leiper. We're passing no comment on the matter till we get a load of both sides of the case

* * * * * * *

"Dear Sir," Mr. Leiper writes, "Kindly insert in The Examiner re Inter-County Junior Lacrosse "Super-Test Shield" games: Cobourg Lacrosse Club has been shamefully treated in the above games. The manager or managers, I should say, of the Dinty's Inn Club, or Peterborough's' select, rather, have not played what they preached, At the beginning of the season they didn't want us to have anything to do with the inter-city league or the senior or intermediate league, nor their officials. What do we find now? Players and officials from the inter-city and senior or intermediate clubs, and some from Norwood included!

* * * * * * *

"The Cobourg Club went through this league without a defeat, not even a draw, winning all games, having 24 points to Dinty's Inn's' 12 points. Then what happens? When something is at stake they show nice sportsmanship. I'm sure it's not a replica of sport as it is handled in the well-known Littlock city. Why could they not play their own Inter-County players and take the luck of the game, like other teams. Cobourg has stuck by her own boys all through. I'm sure the lacrosse sporting public of Peterborough don't want anything that is not above board and it is up to the executive of the above Inter-County League to meet soon and handle this in a clean manner. Cobourg Juniors will be in the O.A.L.A. playoffs, regardless of any news reports to the contrary. I am yours in sport, etc."

CUBS DEFEAT CARL HUBBELL IN LONG GAME

Score Two Runs in First Inning While Guy Bush Blanks Giants.

PIRATES BEAT BRAVES.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, Jr.
(A. P. Sports Writer)

Chicago's home loving Cubs were credited with a first down to-day in the drive toward their goal of six straight victories over the league leading New York Giants and a real place in the National League pennant picture. But there still were five games to go.

The Cubs weathered the difficulties of a rainy day Carl Hubbell's famed pitching and what power the Giants' bats could muster to win the opener 2-0 yesterday. It started out to be a doubleheader but after delays that totalled more than two hours had kept a crowd of 20000 hanging around until six o'clock to see the finish of one contest, the second was postponed, making a bargain bill to-day with another to follow to-morrow.

Washout Program

So far as the Giants were concerned the whole program was a washout. Their margin over the Cubs and Pittsburgh Pirates, who also won a game, was reduced to 6½ games and while they still can clinch the pennant with only nine more victories in 17 games, even if the Cubs and Pirates should win all they have left, they would be ahead of Chicago by only a single percentage point, in such an event.

It took just one inning to give the Cubs the decision after the game finally was started and the rest was just a matter of dodging showers and the pitching of Guy Bush, Bill Hermann, Kiki Cuyler and Riggs Stephenson supped singles to produce one run in the first. Then after a pass had loaded the bases Adolph Camilli forced Frank Demaree at second and Bill Terry juggled the relay for an attempted double play long enough to let Cuyler score the second tally.

Pittsburgh did its share toward climbing up on the Giants and holding a second place tie with the Cubs by turning back Boston Braves 1-0 behind the four-hit pitching of Lefty Larry French. The only run off Ben Cantwell came in the first when Freddy Lindstrom doubled and Pie Traynor brought him home with a single. St. Louis Cardinals also got the benefit of fine pitching and downed Brooklyn Dodgers 4-1. Dizzy Dean gave only five hits for his 20th victory of the season.

Games Rained Out

All the leading American League clubs were idle as Cleveland and Washington were rained out and New York Yankees and Detroit had an open date.

Philadelphia Athletics and Chicago White Sox split their final doubleheader, Chicago winning the opener, 3-2 despite Jimmie Foxx's 40th homer and the A's taking the second game 4-2 by landing on Red Faber for a three-run rally in the sixth.

Boston Red Sox finally halted St. Louis Browns 3-1 when Lloyd Brown, former St. Louis southpaw, held his old team to six hits and the Sox bunched their hits in the sixth as Jack Knott struck a streak of wildness.

GOLF FACTS NOT THEORIES

By ALEX. J. MORRISON

THIS CLASSED CLUB IS NOT SUITED FOR BEGINNER SWING

ALEX MORRISON says:

A niblick or a mashie niblick with a thin blade makes difficult the playing of a recovery shot from sand.

The thin blade invariably cuts right down into the sand so that the clubhead fails to strike the ball with the required amount of force.

The average player's effort to strike the sand just right generally causes him to tighten up during his swing.

A clubhead with a wide or flanged sole enables you to hang down into the sand almost recklessly and get a good result.

27-MONTH TERM FOR FARM HAND

Convicted in Lindsay Court of Fraud in Automobile Deal.

LINDSAY, September 14 (Examiner Correspondence). — At a session of the Police Court yesterday, William Lyle, a farm hand, was sentenced to twenty-seven months in Kingston Penitentiary on the charge of fraud. Lyle, who is only twenty-two years of age, has a remarkable criminal record, and had broken his parole. His activities in crime extended over the province, and the offence which led to his arrest and conviction here was one which he had practised more than once. He turned in a car at a local garage and issued a worthless cheque for a new one. He drove to Bowmanville, where he put over a similar deal. At the latter place, however, the car dealer became suspicious, and telephoned Lindsay, where he was informed that Lyle was wanted by the police.

At a meeting of the Lindsay Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church held here on Tuesday, Rev. J. C. Grier, pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, was elected Moderator.

For Friday September 15

The lunar aspects of this day, while indicating some advancement, gain or progress, with business, finances or investments at least holding their own, yet there are signs of peculiar dangers, disturbances and disruptions, affecting the private life and associations as well as business. There may be a sudden visitation, inciting to change, travel or radical measures, not advantageous or profitable. This should be met with sagacity and calmness. Be discreet also in personal contacts.

Those whose birthday it is, although having some satisfactory conditions in finances, investments or speculation, with some aid or friendly co-operation, may encounter peculiar circumstaces of a perplexing nature. Disturbed and restless conditions may suddenly incite to ill-advised moves, or contacts with strangers may lead to anxious or compromising situations. Private affairs are under a particular menace of these unusual complications.

MUSTARD CATSUP

Wash and dry a peck of tomatoes

These delicious pickles will be the delight of your family and the envy of your friends. Just look at the simple recipe:—One quart of vinegar, 1 lb. brown sugar, ¾ lb. salt, 1 oz. black pepper, 1 oz. allspice, ½ oz. cloves, ½ lb. Keen's Mustard and 2 red peppers. Wash and dry one peck of tomatoes, bake in oven until soft, drain off water and pass through colander. Add the above ingredients and boil the lot for 1½ hours, stirring constantly. Then bottle.

You couldn't possibly prepare a more appetizing condiment than this Mustard Catsup. And it might be well to prepare lots of it. That pungent, zesty flavour will certainly make it popular at the table. Assuming, of course, you have included the Keen's Mustard called for in the recipe.

COSSACKS BUSY WITH HARVEST OF RICH YIELD

Writer Finds Peasants Working 24 Hours Daily in Two Shifts.

FIXED GRAIN TAX.

Pay is Small Monetary Wage With Rest in Grain, Vegetables—No Famine Now.

(By Stanley P. Richardson—A.P. Staff Correspondent).

PAVLOSKAYA, Kuban, U.S.S.R., Sept. 14 (A.P.).—The whole North Caucasus is now engaged in the task of getting in the richest harvest of years and shows few outward signs of hardships felt because of recent poor crops.

In an automobile tour completed to-day from Rostov-on-Don into the heart of Kuban—the native habitat of the Cossacks, as a class, proved to be the bitterest enemies of the Bolsheviks—the Associated Press correspondent found peasants generally working 24 hours a day in 12-hour shifts.

They worked hard to complete the last stages of what for them will prove the most profitable crop since the collectivisation of farms began, if present signs are indicative.

Under the new Agrarian policy of substituting a fixed "grain tax" for "collections," which heretofore have fluctuated according to the size of the crop, each member of collective farms in this section may earn an average of six to 10 kilograms of grain each working day (about 13 to 22 pounds), which he can sell on the private market after his own needs have been satisfied.

Small Monetary Wage.

In addition, they received a small monetary wage, and as much vegetables and produce as they need.

The facts that the Government came to their aid last winter and spring with food and seed loans and that they had subsisted on smaller rations during that period than did city workers were subordinated in the minds of more than a dozen collective farm peasants with whom the correspondent talked on his way to Pavlovskaya to the more immediate fact that they now have a bountiful harvest.

Whatever suffering there was, this region seems to have been among a class which not only refused to join the collectives but actively opposed Communist agricultural policies. Many of these persons have now been "liquidated" in one form or another.

"Things were pretty bad last year, but there is no hunger now," the working peasant told the correspondent. Hunger is their word for famine.

"We barely had enough then, but that is no more," they added.

None of the children seen on the trip showed signs of earlier malnutrition.

Downpour Drenches Kenwood Golf Course

KENWOOD COUNTRY CLUB, Cincinnati, Sept. 14.—(A.P.) — A terrific storm broke over the golf course this afternoon, delaying the start of the quarter-finalists in the United States' amateur golf championship for the afternoon round. Thousands of spectators were drenched trying to find cover. It was the third storm to hit the battle ground in less than two days. Fairways, bunkers and greens were temporarily flooded.

It was still coming down in torrents at 2.25 p.m. E.D.T. and the play appeared indefinitely delayed. Officials discussed the possibility of postponing the finish of the quarter-finals until to-morrow, setting the semi-finals back to Saturday and the final round to Sunday.

As a means of preserving ice for household use, the "ice well" has no advantage over storage in a rough shed.

Alone

TORONTO, Sept. 14 (CP)— Mrs. Elizabeth Finlayson, whose age is somewhere between 90 and 100, was lonesome to-day. Yesterday she found her only son, Albert, with whom she lived, dead on the floor of their apartment, stricken by a heart attack. She recalls vaguely she has a niece in the city but has not seen her for years and doesn't know her address.

"I'm so lonesome," she said last night as friends of her son rummaged through a pile of letters and papers in an effort to uncover information about relatives.

PROFESSOR CANDIDATE.

RICHMOND, Ont.— Huntley M. He will resign from the University at the end of the year, terminating six years on the staff.

LAMONT QUITS .. AS STEEL 'CZAR'

Not in Favor of Government Regulation of Industry in United States.

GOT $100,000 YEARLY.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14 (CP) — Charles M. Schwab was mentioned to-day as probable successor to Robert P. Lamont, steel "czar" who stepped out yesterday with a declartion that government regulation of industry has begun and "no one knows how far it may go."

Lamont's resignation as president of the American Iron and Steel Institute, a post he had held for 13 months at a salary said to be $100,000 a year, came as a surprise to all except "inside" quarters.

Talk about the reasons for the resignation was rife. The New York Times said "the tone of his letter of resignation clearly indicated a lack of sympathy with the NRA." Institute officials said the resignation was not a protest against the recently adopted steel code.

MARITIME FISH LANDING SHOWS GOOD INCREASE

56,310,000 Pounds Taken During June Compared With 47,836,100 Last Year. $1,093,264 VALUE

HALIFAX, Sept. 13. —(CP)— An increase of more than 8,000,000 pounds in the total landings of fish in the Maritime Provinces during June, as compared with landings during the same months last year, is reported by the Eastern Division of the Department of Fisheries.

The catches totalled 56,310,300 pounds valued at $1,093,264, while in June last year 47,836,100 pounds were landed and valued at $1,086,454.

Chief varieties taken were lobsters, salmon, cod, mackerel, halibut and haddock. The report noted decrease in the lobster catches in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and a favorable increase in P. E. I. Increases in value were shown for salmon, and although there was a fair increase in the catch of cod the value did not move up accordingly. The mackerel catch was double that for June last year with a corresponding increase in landed value. Halibut was better in catch and value but the haddock catch fell off considerably.

The catches by Provinces:

Nova Scotia: 32,973,900 pounds valued at $511,321 compared with 33,299,400 pounds valued at $640,147 in June last year. Increases were shown in mackerel, salmon and halibut, decreases in lobsters, cod and haddock.

New Brunswick: 11,963,600 pounds valued at $352,335 compared with 9,196,400 valued at $254,358 in June last year. The increase was due largely to heavier landings of salmon and sardines, although increases also were shown in cod and shad.

Prince Edward Island: 11,368,800 pounds valued at $229,608 compared with 5,340,300 pounds valued at $191,949 in June last year. Increases were shown in lobsters, cod, mackerel and herring.

ONTARIO GRAIN.

Approximate prices track shipping point—Wheat, 64c to 65c; oats, 32c to 34c; barley, 40c to 43c; rye, 45c to 46c.

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

The butter market presented a somewhat unsettled appearance on the Montreal Dairy and Produce Market yesterday. At the weekly auction yesterday the highest bid for No. 1 butter was 18 cents a pound. It was later announced the butter offered at the auction had been sold at a level above this bid, but no figure was announced. The general market eased slightly to 18¾ to 19 cents a pound. Receipts were 7,448 boxes, but 7,403 boxes of this represented butter passing through for export.

Other lines held steady. Cheese was 10¼ to 11¼ cents a pound for Ontario, and ½ cent less for Quebec. At the auction 859 boxes of No. 1 Quebec cheese brought 10½ cents per pound. Receipts totalled 812 boxes.

The egg market had a firm undertone, although quotations remained unchanged. Graded shipments in carlots or less of Ontarios were 22 to 23 cents a dozen for extras, 17 to 18 cents for firsts, and 13½ to 14 cents for seconds, with Westerns slightly below these levels. Arrivals were 363 cases.

The potato market held at 75 to 80 cents per 80-pound bag of new Quebecs.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Grain leaped upward yesterday with a force rarely equalled of late, closing buoyant, wheat 4¾c a bushel higher.

Washington reports supplied the impetus, especially word that the Roosevelt Administration was determined to hoist commodity values 32 per cent. to the level of 1914. Contributing momentum were advices that export of 30,000,000 to 35,000,000 bushels of Pacific Coast wheat would be financed by the United States Government, and that the President was extending full Federal backing to get banks to expand credit operations without delay.

Wheat finished strong at the topmost point reached. 4¼c-4¾c above Tuesday's close, corn 2¼c-1¼c advanced, and provisions showing a rise of 5c to 15c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, September 14. — Export business estimated between 500,000 and 750,000 bushels of Canadian wheat, and strength in outside markets, coupled with generally bullish news, lifted wheat prices up to close unchanged to ⅝c higher on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange yesterday.

The export movement was reflected not only in the pit, but in the excellent demond for cash wheat and activity in shipping circles on the lakes. At the close, October wheat was still at the minimum of 70⅝c, but December and May were above the peg levels at 71⅞c to 72c and 77c to 77⅛c, respectively.

Chicago advanced sharply on current rumors of inflation in the United States, and reports Washington would subsidize export surplus of United States wheat located in the Pacific States.

Liverpool wheat also advanced, along with Buenos Aires, on unfavorable reports from Argentina, and closed ½d to ½d higher.

These bullish developments in outside markets got Winnipeg on the move early in the day, and a fairly active trade was seen. Rains in Western Canada continue to hold up movement of new crops, and hedging is reduced on that account.

News from Australia was bullish. Chicago advices stated there was possibility of only 160,000,000 bushels being raised in Australia this year, compared with about 210,000,000 last year.

Millers were in the market for substantial quantities of cash grain, with No. 1 Hard in the best demand. In sympathy with Duluth, flax prices leaped up 3c, while rye, following actions at Chicago, also clambered upward.

NO 'TAVERN DAYS' IN BEER ISSUE—HENRY

JAMES SEYMOUR GIVEN CHARGE OF SHOT IN HIP

Son of Rev. H. P. Seymour Accidentally Injured While Hunting.

AFTER RABBITS.

Boy Rushed to Campbellford and Then to Belleville Hospital.

BELLEVILLE, Ont, Sept. 15 (CP) —Condition of James Seymour, 16-year-old son of Rev. J. H. Seymour of Campbellford, accidentally wounded yesterday by gunshot from a weapon held by his chum, was announced as favorable to-day by Dr. G. H. Stobie. His recovery is anticipated.

CAMPBELLFORD, September 15 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—James Seymour, sixteen-year-old son of the Rev. H. P. L. Seymour of Campbellford, was rushed to the Belleville Hospital last evening following a shooting accident, when he received a charge of No. 5 shot from a 12-gauge shotgun in his left hip, accidentally discharged by one of his hunting companions, Raymond Wragg.

The accident happened about six o'cock when Seymour, with Wragg and another companion, Angus Donald, all sixteen years of age, and students at the Campbellford High School, were returning from a rabbit hunt, upon hich they had embarked after school was dismissed. Seymour and Wragg were the only ones to carry guns. About a mile from the town limits, near where Victoria Street leads into the Township of Seymour, two hounds which the boys had taken with them, chased a rabbit across the road in front of the party.

Eager for a shot, Wragg lifted his gun to fire, pulling down the hammer with his thumb at the same time. The thumb, however, slipped off the hammer and the shot was fired, young Seymour receiving the majority of it in his left hip about a five yard range. He immediately dropped in his tracks.

His companions immediately went to the nearest farmer, Ralph Rowe, and there secured a car which rushed the wounded lad into Campbellford, where Drs. H. B. Longmore and E. V. Frederick attneded him. After examination, it was felt necessary to rush Seymour to hospital where he was taken by ambulance. Dr Frederick accompanied him. Dr. Stobie of the Belleville Genera' Hospital received and tended the injured youth.

Unknown Woman Dies Crash Near Edmonton

EDMONTON, September 15 (C.P.) —An unidentified woman was killed and three other presons critically injured when their automobile overturned on the St. Albert Highway, six miles north of here. The injured: Miss Mary Lautos and Colin Williams suffering from fractured skulls; Alexander Clarke, who received internal injuries and a fractured shoulder.

All efforts by police and physicians have failed to disclose the dead woman's identity. The injured persons are in too critical a condition to talk. The automobile, which jumped clear of the highway, was completely wrecked.

NEVER SAW A MOVIE

Miss Mary Kalbron, 17, was awarded a silver cup yesterday for outstanding work in children's' gardens maintained on the upper east side by the Plant and Flower guild.

Blushing, she admitted she knew her onions and radishes, but has never seen a film. Too busy hoeing, she explained.

Bear-Tooth Plate

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 15. (AP).—Here's one told by Ross Moulton, of Vancouver, B.C., here for the international sour-dough reunion.

"With two friends, Happy Jack and Bill, I set out from Circle City into the Yukon country. Jack broke his false teeth.

"Well, sir, that same day Bill shot a bear. We skinned the bear and Jack cemented its teeth into his plate with copper rivets. Then he helped eat the bear meat with the bear's own teeth. So help me, its true."

NEW BUILDING MAY BE BUILT AT EXHIBITION

Two Governments Will Contribute Two-thirds of Cost.

IS BADLY NEEDED.

Kiwanis Club and Exhibition Board Had Dinner Together.

Speaking before a joint meeting of the Kiwanis Club and Exhibition Board Directors in St. James' United Church dining tent at the Fair Grounds to-day, His Worship Mayor Denne, president of the Exhibition Board made an important announcement relative to the possibility of a new building being erected on the Exhibition grounds for next year.

Pointing out that the Fair Board owned $65,000 worth of equipment, but that the increasing number of exhibits that are being received in all departments each year had created an extreme condition of overcrowding in the existing buildings, the Mayor said that the Hon. Thomas Kennedy, provincial Minister of Agriculture, had promised that the government would defray two-thirds of the cost of a new building, if the city and county municipal authorities would jointly contribute the other third of the cost.

Seen by The Examiner following the luncheon, His Worship was unable to provide any additional details, beyond emphasizing the need of more accommodation for live-stock exhibits, and mooting the possibility that the work would in all probability be undertaken this winter as a relief measure.

Tribute to Fair Board

John I. Allen, past president of the Kiwanis Club, presided at the luncheon in the absence of President J. A. O'Brien. He stated that the Kiwanians were always glad to co-operate with the Fair Board to the fullest extent. Mr. Allen paid tribute to the work that had been accomplished by the Fair Board directorate in making this year's Fair such as to warrant the unqualified approval of the Minister of Agriculture, who had declared on his visit to Peterborough this week, "There is no fair in the province that does more for the farmer than Peterborough Exhibition."

The Mayor, during the course of his brief address compared the Kiwanis Club and the Fair Board as both having the same motto "We Build." He acknowledged the support that the Kiwanians were always prepared to offer for any worthwhile cause for the good of the city and district, and spoke particularly of the fine work that was carried on by the Kiwanis Club in the operation of Jackson Park Health Camp. He was not unmindful of "the group of public-spirited ladies" who took care of the children at the camp throughout the summer.

Exhibitor Sold Horse

$750 For One Night's Pay, Easy Money In Gold Rush Days Says Klondike Kate

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 15.—(CP)—Deftly rolling a cigarette, her eyes bright with memories of gold rush days in Alaska, Klondike Kate told how she had made $750 in Dawson one night "as easy as falling off a log."

But first Kate, now Mrs. Kate Rockwell Matson, here for the international sourdough reunion, rose in defence of the dance hall girls, girls, of whom she was hailed as "queen."

"I want to state," said she, "that a more decent set of girls never existed than those of us who gambolled so merrily in the Dawson dance halls. We asked for and demanded respect—and we made it pay.

"About that $750—all I had to do was to chat with a gentleman who was buying wine. He bought $1,500 worth and I got a 50 percent commission."

Kate is married to John Matson, gold miner who "stayed in," and they live at Matson's' creek, 100 miles north of Dawson.

FOOD SHORTAGE THREATENS NEW CUBAN FRICTION

Warehousemen Continue Strike in Havana and Prices Soar.

KILLINGS GO ON.

President's New Constitution of Independence Subordinates Individual Rights.

By EDMUND A. CHESTER
(Copyright, 1933, by the A. P.)

HAVANA, Sept. 15.—A new Cuban "constitution of independence" subordinating individual rights to common welfare was inaugurated to-day as unrest and political turmoil boiled to a crisis.

Strikes grew through the island, some admittedly in opposition to the government. Havana was threatened with another serious food shortage. The administration heard rumors of armed resistance and tightened guard lines about 500 defiant officers besieged in the National Hotel.

Fighting and bloodshed, mutiny and rebellion were abroad as the administration of a former university professor announced a plan calling for "absolute independence and national sovereignity," a "perfect adjustment of political and economic interests" and general elections for a constitutional convention.

A detachment of troops was sent from Havana to quell an uprising near the town of Consolacion del Sur, in Pinar Del Rio Province, where a former army captain, Fernando Aran and a group of armed civilians persuaded an army post to join them in a revolt against the government. The band then went to the hills.

Warehousemen were on strike in Havana. Already prices have soared because of this and a field workers walkout in adjacent provinces, and authorities foresaw a growing scarcity of food.

Employees of the Havana Electric Railway were at odds over the allotment of work, and officials said the situation was not encouraging. The powerful O.C.R.R. secret society instituted a consumers' strike against electric and telephone rates. The government was asked to intervene. Drug store messengers were on strike.

An inspector for the Stevedores Syndicate was killed by unidentified persons in a passing automobile.

Street fighting was reported in Matanzas. In Cardenas and Cien-

Fears for Safety Mount as Tropical Gale Moves on Tampico.

LIVE WIRE KILLS MAN.

TAMPICO, Mexico, Sept. 15 (AP) Fears for the safety of three vessels at sea were expressed by Maritime officials to-day as a tropical storm moved toward Tampico.

One of the ships they believed lost in the storm is the Mexican tug. Cernicalo, due yesterday with oil tankers. The others are the Dan Juan and Arturo, two days overdue.

One person was killed when a live wire was broken by high winds.

The storm was reported moving northwestward across the Gulf of Mexico and was expected to reach a point between Tampico and Tuxpan some time to-day.

Doukhobor Break-Up Seen In Near Future

LTHBRIDGE, Sept. 15 (C.P.).—The Lethbridge Herald says to-day: "The break-up of the Christian Community of the Universal Brotherhood of Doukhobors would not be a surprise to those close to the sect. Information obtained shows such a step might occur soon."

Discontent in the Doukhobor colonies is said to be most pronounced among the younger element, although not confined to this group, and a weariness with community life is given as a fruitful source of the restive spirit. The leadership of Peter Verigin the Younger, is, seemingly, not to the liking of many and the cry for a change is heard in the colonies.

The Plot to "Get" Draper

The persistency with which Chief Constable General Draper is being attacked in certain quarters looks from this distance like a determined effort to "get" Toronto's police chief.

The obvious danger of interference with the administration of the police department and of throwing the control of that important department into the arena of municipal politics is being over looked in this drive to oust the man who has made the Toronto police forse as outsiders see it, an efficient and well disciplined organization whose successful efforts to check major crimes have won wide spread attention.

"Anything to get Draper" would seem to be the slogan of those who are leading the campaign against the Queen City's chief constable and it would be a pity indeed if their efforts were to be crowned with success.

General Draper brought with him to Toronto, an enviable war record and the regard and esteem of everybody who had come into contact with him as an efficient and fearless officer in Canada's overseas forces.

In his administration of the Toronto Police Department he has shown the same qualities that won him distinction at the front; he has given that department efficient leadership, and a new spirit which is shown in a dozen ways to anybody who will face the facts.

It would be a reflection upon Toronto's intelligence as well as its spirit of fair play if such a man were to be sacrificed to satisfy those who are apparently carrying on a "grudge" fight against him.

GOOD PROGRAM BEING PLANNED FOR SATURDAY

Two Horse Races and Parade of Prize Winning Livestock.

NIGHT PERFORMANCE.

Program in Front of Grandstand Acclaimed By All Who Have Seen It.

1 p.m.—Judging of heavy horse special classes.

1.30 p.m.—Judging of light delivery horses.

2.00 p.m.—Judging of ponies.

Grand stand program begins, with complete vaudeville attractions, and two horse races, the 225 and 2.18 classes.

2.30 p.m.— Light horse specials judged.

3.30 p.m.—Live stock parade.

8.00 p.m.—Concluding program at grand stand with added finals of the local girls' diving contest, for which five have qualified.

Directors of the Exhibition were apprehensive this morning of the east winds that seemed ominous of rain. If the week's fine weather winds up with a fine Saturday, the attendance figures are likely to be satisfactory. For the final day it is sincerely hoped that the public will manifest their co-operation with the Board by turning out in large numbers.

The week-end holiday in the schools provides another day for the children. They will be admitted to the Exhibition for five cents and all the midway prices have been reduced to the same figure by Conklin Brothers.

Saturday's program at the west end of the grounds includes two horse races in the afternoon and the parade of ribboned livestock, the complete vaudeville program with music by the Peterborough Rangers Band; and the night performance has the added attraction of the diving competition in which five local girls qualified last night.

This is the last chance to see the 1933 Exhibition, and help clinch its financial success in the first year of Peterborough's status of Class A Exhibitions. The people of the city and district have it in their power to make aturday a real big success. Every department has literally been bigger and better than ever, but the final attendance totals depends upon the public for figures that will round out the complete success of the "Ex."

Many Visitors.

Among the visitors to the cattle judging arena Thursday afternoon and this morning were C. F. McKenzie of the cattle division of the Dominion Livestock Branch, Ottawa, Robert Holtby, field man for the Dominion Holstein Association; Dave Huner of the Ayrshire Breeders' Association; Clarence Hodge of the staff of "The Ontario Farmer," Toronto; and many breeders from the district, among them James Caskey of Madoc who judged the Holstein class; Alex Hume of Menie; J. T. Drope of Roseneath; Arthur Brethen of Norwood.

150 BOYS WANTED TO ASSIST IN PRIZE LIVE STOCK PARADE. BOYS ARE REQUESTED TO BE AT THE LOCK ST. ENTRANCE AT 1 O'CLOCK.

Thanksgiving Day October 9th

GIANT MUMMIES FOUND IN CAVES

Find in Mexico Believed Remains of Race Migrated From Sunken Continent.

ANTEDATED MAYANS.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 15. (AP) Discoveries of mummies of giants and pigmies of races that roamed Mexico in prehistoric times had been reported to-day by Paxon C. Hayes, Hollywood scientist, just returned from an exploration trip by pack train through northern Sonora and down the Yaqui river.

Hayes said some of the mummies were of giant stature—more than seven feet tall—and had head formations indicating they belonged to the Mongoloid race. Embroidered symbols in blue upon the mummy cloths, the use of shell ornaments and the strata of dust under which they were found tend to indicate, said Hayes, the people probably antedated the Mayans.

Slow as orthodox scientists have been to recognize early migrations by boat from a continent now sunk beneath the Pacific, I am convinced that what we have found will force this conclusion" Hays said. "We found in carefully plotted caves that were undisturbed, these giant mummies, side by side with a race of normal stature, and pigmies who obviously used the art of mummification practiced in ancient Egypt. With them are teakwood art-crafts which it wold be ridiculous to assume had been carried on the long trek via Alaska and the Aleutian Islands."

New Machines Tested To Pay British Dole

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—(C.P.)—Machines to pay out the dole to Great Britain's unemployed are undergoing tests in the British Isles, says the I. York Herald-Tribune to-day in a copyrighted despatch from London.

The Ministry of Labor is experimenting in certain employment exchanges with semi-automatic machines for paying out unemployment allowances. If the experiment is successful it presumably will mean that fewer clerks will be employed in making the weekly payments to the jobless, says the despatch.

The clerks operating the machines in question complain there is greater likelihood of wrong payments in this way, and the machines also lend themselves to the possibility of fraud.

Be No Plebiscite If Gov't Decides To "Loosen" Laws

Sale Of Beer And Wine In Hotels Election Issue, Premier Admits, If New Attitude Taken—Another Session Of Legislature, Like Beer Question, "Up In The Air"—Sees $3,000,000 Deficit.

CLAIMS ONTARIO LIQUOR ALWAYS BETTER THAN U.S. PRODUCT AND ALWAYS WILL BE.

OTTAWA, September 15 (C.P.). — If the Ontario Government decided to "loosen" the Provincial liquor law, the question of the sale of beer and wines in hotels would be an issue in the next Provicial election, Premier George S. Henry of Ontario stated here to-day.

"If it is decided to loosen the regulations, there will be no plebiscite," Mr. Henry said.

An election will be held in the Government's "own time" within the limit of its legal tenure of office, was the reply of the Premier as to when the Provincial election would take place.

"Is there to be another session of Legislature?" he was asked.

"That," like the beer and wine question, is still up in the air," he answered.

"Is there any important legislation which should require the attention of the Government before appealing to the people?"

"Oh, no, we always believe in keeping legislation up to date," Mr. Henry said.

As on many occasions, Premier Henry denied that he had any intention of giving up the leadership of the Ontario Conservative Party. He said he hoped to have many years of public life ahead of him.

$3,000,000 Deficit

In reference to the fiscal year of the Government which ends on Oct. 31, he said that there would be a deficit of about $3,000,000.

When questioned about the prospect of repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, Premier Henry stated that Ontario always had better liquor and always would have. There had been no suggestion in Ontario even by those who most favored the loosening of liquor laws that the province should go back to the days of taverns on every corner, he said. The very extreme which Ontario would put up with was a limited number of taverns, stated Mr. Henry.

Mr. Henry said he had not arranged an hour for his discussion of unemployment relief, but would do so in the course of the day. The Minister of Labor, Hon. W. A. Gordon, was out of the city this morning.

The new public works program under the recent agreement between the Dominion and Ontario will be discussed by Mr. Henry with the Department of Labor, the Ontario Premier said. A phase of this question he intimated, was the complaint of the Emergency Hospital Association of Ontario that most municipalities cannot afford participation in the public works program unless the two governments would share the cost of material as well as labor.

CLAIRE WINDSOR TO PAY $75,000 AS HEART BALM

Mrs. Marian Read, Jr., is Victor in Suite for Alienations of Husband's Affections.

APPEAL TO BE MADE.

No Money Says Actress—Will Wed Again if Necessary to Escape Paying.

LOS ANGELES, September 15 (C. P.) — Ordered by a Superior Court jury to pay Mrs. Marian Read $75,000 for alienation of the affections of her former husband, Alfred C. Read, Jr., Claire Windsor said today she would marry if necessary to escape paying the judgment.

Attorneys for the blonde actress said a motion for a new trial will be made within the next few days. They said they were ready to carry the case to the State Supreme Court.

The verdict against Miss Windsor was returned late yesterday by a jury of seven women and five men amid cheers and hand-clapping of courtroom spectators.

"I have no money, and rather than go to work that Mrs. Read may collect, I will get married again," Miss Windsor said with half a laugh. "I can't understand it all."

Read "Awfuly Sorry."

"All I can say is that it is a shame," Read said. "I testified it was my fault, and it was. I am awfully sorry for Claire."

"Oh, I am so happy," Mrs. Read told the jurors. "Thank you, thank you all so much."

Read, in the witness chair, had shouldered the blame for Miss Windsor's troubles when he admitted making love to her, posing as a single man and then telling her he was separated from his wife and planning a divorce. He denied Miss Windsor had pursued him.

Mrs. Read in her testimony, accused Miss Windsor of enticing her husband to leave her. The jury deliberated three hours. The judgment was one of the largest of its kind recorded in Southern California courts.

CLOSE FINISHES FEATURE PACING OF 2.28 EVENTS

Merlin Entry, Guy Pointer, is Winner With Three Firsts and a Tenth.

LOCAL HORSE IS THIRD.

Black Patch, Owned by Gordon Knight, Wins in the 2.17 Trot.

Horse racing enthusiasts who witnessed the opening races yesterday afternoon on the Exhibition's big program of harness racing secured some idea of the class of steeds that will perform here for the rich stakes that the Exhibition Board has offered.

Seventeen horses raced in the two races yesterday that raised the curtain on what promises to be the greatest card of harness racing ever to be held in Central Ontario, and on a track inclined to heaviness due to Wednesday night's rain they unleased plenty of speed. Fans saw everything yesterday that should be features of high-grade harness racing. Close finishes marked nearly every heat. There was that jockeying for position at the start that shows true horsemanship on the the part of the driver. And then there were some hard-driving finishes that saw at least one horse sweep up from fifth position on the last turn, to go under the rail a winner by a nose.

Wins First Money.

More is going to be heard around Ontario tracks of this horse Guy Pointer, a sweet trotter, owned by James Wellwood, of Merlin This horse has plenty of style and showed great speed in the last quarter mile yesterday to win first place in the 2.28 class, purse $200.

June Peters, owned by L. Hess, of Hastings, and driven by the renowned Cliff Chapman, was Guy Peter's real opposition in the four heats yesterday that were required to declare a winner in the class. Displaying all his old-time skill with the reins, "Chappie" constantly wheeled June Peters onto the rail and out in front at the start of each. In the first half, June Peters always drew away from the field.

Going around the back stretch in the final lap, Guy Pointer was usually well back. Then the driver, son of the owner, would shake out the reins and the big horse would thunder past horses after horse. Three times in great finishes, Guy Pointer nosed out June Peters as

Prize Mare Frightened At Elephant Somersaults And Breaks Her Neck

Five minutes after a ribbon had been pinned to her halter showing that she had won second prize for mares in the registered draught class, a valuable horse, owned by Norman Breckenbridge of Cavan township, lay dead in the show ring at the Exhibition here yesterday afternoon at the feet of the judges.

The mare was frightened by an elephant, one of the trick animals in the grandstand entertainment bill, as she was being led around the ring by its owner. In a wild frenzy, it raised up on its hind legs and then took a complete somersault backwards. The mare's neck was broken in the fall and in two minutes she was dead.

A colt of the mare won first prize in its class, according to the owner, winning first over a colt that had been first winner at the Ottawa Exhibition.

ARMAMENT RACE THREAT LOOMS

France Fears U. S. and Britain Reached Understanding Prior to Arms Parley.

MAY HURT OUTCOME.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—Threat of armament races among the major powers complicated the problem facing the French cabinet last night as it met to consider France's position at the forthcoming arms conversations here next week.

Word that Norman Davis, United States roving ambassador and chief Washington delegate to the arms parley, conferred again with Arthur Henderson, chief British delegate, at London yesterday caused growing fears of the possibility of an Anglo-American understanding prior to the resumption of the arms conference.

Davis is due in Paris by Monday with members of the British delegation to initiate conversations between Britain, the United States and France on a definite arms policy. The French desire to reach some understanding among these major powers prior to proceeding to Geneva for resumption of the preliminary world arms conference Oct. 16.

Two basic problems will face the diplomats here next week: Acceptance of the so-called "trial disarmament plan" which Davis is expected to submit, and how far France will be asked to go in disarmament concessions in the event the British accept the trial scheme.

The council of ministers is to meet again this morning, headed by President Albert Lebrun, to revise and approve finally the French decisions on policy at the three-party sessions next week.

STRIKE IN 'PEG TO GO THROUGH

Railway Officials Confident 300 of 1,000 Employes Will Not Quit.

UNION STICKS TO GUNS

WINNIPEG, September 15 (C.P.)—Final plans for the strike of 1,000 carmen of the Winnipeg Electric Railway were completed early today. The walk-out of motormen, conductors, track men and mechanical workers has been called for midnight.

The workers have refused to accept a 15 per cent. wage reduction which the company, under authorization of a Conciliation Board award, put into effect to-day.

At a meeting of the central executive of the men's organization, which concluded early this morning, arrangements for the establishment of picket lines at all car barns were completed and plans made for the operation of fleets of automobiles, which will aid in carrying Winnipeg citizens to work on Saturday morning. No charge will be made, the automobiles to be operated along the main car routes, including suburban areas.

"We expect the strike will be practically 100 per cent." declared Ed. Armstrong, president of the Street Car Workers' Union, a unit of the One Big Union. "There are a few men who do not belong to our union, but we expect they will join us."

Winnipeg Electric Company officials, however, held a different view. They believed approximately 300 men out of the 1,000 affected will stay on the job. Every man who goes on strike, they declare, will lose his seniority.

MOLLISON GAME FOR NEW FLIGHT

Should Get Away By End of Month He States on Landing at Quebec.

AMY WAITS IN TORONTO.

(By Charles Bruce, C. P. Staff Writer.)

QUEBEC, September 15. — Jimmy Mollison landed here to-day bound for Toronto to plan a new assault on the world's record for distance flight by air.

Scanning weather reports in the officers' cabin aboard the Empress of Britain before the ship docked this smiling partner in the Empire's most famous adventuring crew declared he and his wife, the skywise Amy, would start their journey, conditions permitting, by the end of the month. Where their plane, "Seafarer II," would take off on its long voyage eastward against the mileage mark of Rossi and Codos he would not say definitely.

"That's up to Amy—she knows the ground," he said. "But we'll get away as soon as we can, before the dirty autumn weather sets in for good." It was generally understood Wasaga Beach, near Simcoe, Ont., would see the start of what was to be their last spectacular flight before settling down to a more staid existence.

Mollison entrains for Montreal today and will go on to Toronto tonight, there to meet the charming and courageous partner of his later distance flights. His new plane will reach Montreal Saturday aboard the Duchess of York.

Hon. Leopold Macaulay, Minister of Highways for Ontario, in his address as retiring president suggested the organization enlarge its activities seeking the correlation and closer adhesion of its component groups.

FARMER LOST BARN, HOUSE

Small Boy Falls Downstairs And Fractures His Skull.

VETERAN BOWLER DEAD

LINDSAY, September 15 (Examiner Correspondence).—A disastrous fire occurred on Tuesday near Kinmount when the residence and barn of George English were totally destroyed by fire, together with nearly all the contents. The English family was away from home at the time, and the cause of the fire is a mystery. The loss is a heavy one.

The brick residence of Richard Burke was destroyed by fire at Haliburton Wednesday night. The house is situated about two miles from the village and the fire had gained considerable headway before being noticed. Very little of the household effects was saved. A defective chimney is said to be responsible for the blaze. The insurance carried will not nearly cover the loss.

Keith Dawson, the three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Dawson, of Minden, was seriously injured at Brantford this week. He fell downstairs at the home of his grandparents, fracturing his skull and sustaining other injuries.

The deceased was born in England and came to Canada when a mere child with his parents, who settled in Emily Township. He is survived by one daughter and seven sons.

PUBLIC WORKS FOR MANITOBA

Situation Calls for Different Treatment Than Direct Relief Says Premier.

73,403 ON LIST.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 15 (CP)—A program of carefully planned public works to take the place of the dole or direct unemployment relief had the endorsement of all cities of Manitoba and the municipalities of Greater Winnipeg to-day.

At a conference here yesterday, Premier John Braeken declared with 73,403 persons on relief in Manitoba to-day, 20,000 more than a year ago, the situation called for different treatment than direct relief.

Since October, 1931, he said a total of $20,000,000 had been spent on relief in Manitoba. There was no tangible asset for the money now being spent. He said he favored a program of public works.

The Dominion Government will be urged to extend credit to the province and municipalities for public relief works at the same low rate of interest as the Dominion itself pays on the money it devotes to relief expenditures.

Mrs. J. Chamberlain and her daughter, Miss Margaret Chamberlain, 19, both of Kitchener, are in serious condition at a home near where the mishap took place. Both women are suffering from severe shock.

A tire on their car blew out. The car somersaulted into a ditch, landing on its four wheels.

JUDGE ALLOWS NUDE PAINTINGS

Claims Policeman's View Should Not be Taken as Critic of Undraped Women.

TOO MUCH PRUDERY.

CHICAGO, Sept. 15—Judge Joseph David of "Pants on a Horse" fame, ruled yesterday that pictures of nude women can be displayed at the World's Fair under certain provisions.

"Let true love of art increase — how can a policeman act as an art critic?" declared Judge David in ruling that Miss Catl Mount, woman artist, can continue exhibiting her painting, "Olympia."

Miss Mount, who both poses for and paints picture of nude women, had asked Judge David for an injunction to prevent Policeman Joseph Moriarity from closing her exhibition at a Century of Progress Exposition.

Moriarity, who is the police department's censor of World Fair art, had threatened to close the show because he said the picture of "Olympia" was indecent. He contended that the nude woman in the portrait should be portrayed as wearing "at least some flower petals."

By coincidence, the case came up before the same judge who recently ruled that Sally Rand could continue her fan dance at the fair grounds. It was in the Rand trial that David made his now famous remark to the effect that "some people would want to put pants on a horse."

At that time, David also declared that "nobody but boobs will pay to see a nude woman dance and that if the boobs want to pay for that kind of amusement it's their own business, and nobody else's."

Judge David was just as emphatic yesterday in ruling that Miss Mount's art exhibit at the fair grounds is not "indecent" so long as it follows the rules of true reproduction.

"There is too much prudery around here," said David.

SHE LOOKED FAT—AND FELT IT

Now Getting the Pounds Off

Takes Hot Water, Lemon Juice—and Kruschen Salts

A few surplus pounds of fat can make a lot of difference. A woman who has taken 11 lbs. off her 139 lbs. says she "feels so fine and happy." She writes: "Two years ago I suffered with pains in my arms and shoulders, so I decided to try Kruschen Salts, seeing in the papers what it had done for others. Although I only weighed 139 lbs., I looked very fat and felt it. But after taking a spoonful of that wonderful Kruschen every morning, in hot water and lemon juice, I went down to 128 lbs., and I must say I feel a lot better for it. I have no signs of any pain whatever. I am not quite sure, but I think this is my sixth jar. I feel so fine and happy that I had to write and let you know what Kruschen Salts have done for me. I have a friend here that has started taking it, and she has reduced from 138 lbs., to 132 lbs."—(Mrs.) E. E.

Start taking Kruschen Salts—that's the common-sense way to reduce—but don't take them with the idea that they possess reducing qualities in themselves. This is what they do—they clean out the impurities in your blood by keeping the bowels, kidneys and liver in splendid working shape, and fill you with vigor and tireless energy you'd almost forgotten had existed.

And after two weeks your excess flesh starts to go—you'll know it—feel it—see it—the scales will tell the story.

Kruschen Salts is obtainable at all Drug Stores at 45c. and 75c. per bottle.

DEBATE STATUS COMMISSIONERS

Proper Course for Exchanging Information Between Empire Governments is Decision.

COMMONWEALTH PARLEY.

TORONTO, Sept. 14.—(CP)—Status of high commissioners representing the Dominions in London is one of the subjects receiving consideration at the British Commonwealth relations conference now in progress at Hart House here. The present degree of uncertainty over the position and functions of commissioners, it was felt, is due to the rapid evolution of the independent status of the Dominions.

There was some difference of opinion as to whether these officers should be considered as diplomatic officials, not subject to change with changes in governments, or as representatives of the government in power. But there was general agreement that the high commissioner was the proper channel for the interchange of information between Empire governments and should fulfill this function to a greater extent than was done at present.

An Australian delegate explained the presence of Rt. Hon Stanley Bruce as a resident minister of the Australian government in London was not to be taken as an indication of the fixed policy of that country. Mr. Bruce, he said, went to London because of a particular situation and Australia had no settled policy of retaining a cabinet minister always at the heart of the Empire.

The conference, an unofficial gathering of statesmen and students of foreign and imperial affairs from all sections of the Empire today ends the first week of its meeting. A wide variety of topics connected with the relations of the various parts of the Empire to one another, to other nations and to the League of Nations has been canvassed so far.

Numerous compliments have been paid to Peterborough's Exhibition by visitors this week, commendation of its management, the quality and number of its exhibits, its commodious grounds and plant, and of the enterprise of the community which has produced.

Praise from the Hon. J. L. Kennedy, Ontario's Minister of Agriculture, was praise indeed, and his tribute Tuesday night, based on personal observation of progress and results, must have given the directors a new impulse of encouragement in the face of the extraordinary difficulties which have challenged the Board's ambitions this year.

One of yesterday's visitors was J. E. Boucher, manager of the exhibition which is held annually in the city of Quebec.

Mr. Boucher came to Peterborough to see the Conklin Carnival shows, the big midway attraction, with a view to engaging for Quebec next year. He told directors that he was greatly surprised by the extent of Peterborough's Exhibition, the layout and completeness of its equipment.

"You have one of the best plants I have seen outside of Toronto," Mr. Boucher said, "and the cattle and horses I have seen here have been a revelation to me. I never dreamed that you had such high class exhibits. They should be a great lesson to your farmers, for if they can take prizes in that company they could make a good showing anywhere. It has been a real lesson to me, and I can speak from experience of fifteen years. Everything I have seen strikes me as excellent, and I wish your Board a very successful week, for they must certainly deserve it."

Comparison With Kingston.

C. H. Curtis of Warkworth is one of the veteran exhibitors at Peterborough. "Hy" has been coming here for years, knows everybody, and likes Peterborough. The Exhition would hardly seem complete without him.

"There is no more comparison between Peterborough and Kingston fairs," said Mr. Curtis, but he didn't complete the figure. "I was down there last week, and of course they have a good show, but it is not in the same class with Peterborough. The only section of the exhibits that I would say looked just about as good was the poultry show, but outside of that there was no comparison. Their grounds are not in it, but they have a harder and faster race track.

The Peterborough directors are on their job all week, and that is very important in making the fair a success. I heard a little criticism among some of the cattle men, but it wasn't much. The management here is first class. Personally I miss William Knox more than I realised. I found myself expecting to see him. Vivian Milburn has a big job largely because of the respect and confidence all the exhibitors had in Mr. Knox, but I feel sure that Mr. Milburn is going to make a good manager."

Archbishop O'Brien Holds Confirmation

MARMORA, Sept. 15 (Examiner Correspondence). — His Excellency Right Rev. M. J. O'Brien, Archbishop of Kingston, held a confirmation service at the Sacred Heart Church on Wednesday evening, when about 60 boys and girls were confirmed, their sponsors also being in attendance. The procession was very imposing as it wended its way from the Separate School to the church.

Prior to the laying on of hands, the children were examined in their catechism by the Archbishop. His address to the candidates was very uplifting and the Diocesan report for the year was also listened to with much interest. Also in attendance were Rev. Dr. Leo Byrne of Kingston, Rev. Father J. V. Meagher of Madoc and Rev. Father H. J. Farrell of Stirling. The sacred edifice was exquisitely decorated with a profusion of autumn blooms.

Weddings

WILSON—BELL.

Ferns, gladioli and pink larkspur formed the background for a very pretty but quiet wedding at the home of Misses Kate and Annie Bell, 5th Avenue E, Owen Sound, when at 12 o'clock noon on Saturday, September 2nd, 1933, their niece, Florence Annie, daughter of Mr. William G. Bell, R.R. No. 7, Owen Sound, and the late Mrs. Bell became the bride of Norman Hurrell Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Wilson, Hamilton. Rev. E. W. Jewett, minister of Division Street United Church, officiated.

The bride wore a very graceful ankle-length gown of shell pink chiffon organdie, with matching accessories, and the groom's gift, a white gold and onyx bracelet, and carried a bouquet of pink roses, lily of the valley and fern.

The only attendant was the dainty little flower girl, Dorothy Beirnes, niece of the bride, who wore pink and white organdie and carried a basket of roses and asters.

Following the ceremony luncheon was served to those present, immediate relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson left by motor on a honeymoon trip to Muskoka, after which they will reside in Apsley. The bride, who is well known in young people's church circles, being president of the Young People's Union of the Grey Presbytery of the United Church, has been a popular member of the Dufferin school teaching staff in Owen Sound for the past year and a half, and a former teacher in the Mount Julian district.

On the young couple's return to this vicinity a reception was held in the Viamede Pavilion, where a jolly evening was spent in round and square dancing, music being provided by a Peterborough orchestra. The roomy pavilion ably accommodating the large crowd, while the Viamede proprietress catered at the refreshment period.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson were the recipients of many useful and lovely gifts, showing the high esteem in which both are held.

Among those from a distance who attended the reception were: Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Doughty, Mr. and Mrs. John Coons, Mr. and Mrs. Russel Reid, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Moffatt, and Mr. and Mrs. George Foster all of Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. Percy Northey, Miss Madeline Northey, Miss Viola Redpath, Rev. and Mrs. E. Scott, Muriel Boyce and Mrs. Norman Wilson, all of Apsley.

Mrs. S. Wilson and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Moffatt, sister and brother-in-law of the groom, attended the wedding ceremony at Owen Sound.

Woman Is Injured In Highway Crash

Lacerations of the scalp and face and several fractured ribs were the injuries suffered by Mrs. J. W. Sexsmith, 5 Olive Avenue, in a motor accident Wednesday evening jus below Bewdley on Highway 28. Mrs. Sexsmith is in St. Joseph's Hospital.

She was a passenger in a light truck driven by Alex Turner, truck gardener of Park street, south. Mr. Turner's truck, according to Highway Patrol Officer A. E. Hornick, who investigated the crash, was over past the centre of the highway when a Belleville car, driven by Harold Sanders, was passing. The rear fender of the Belleville car caught the front wheel of Turner's truck. The truck swerved across the road, hit the ditch and rolled over, coming to rest on its wheels again. The cab was badly crushed. Mrs. Sexsmith was the only one injured.

New General Strike?

Talk of another general strike, such as the one that paralysed almost every sphere of activity and forced the eviction of Gerardo Machado's administration, went the rounds here.

Into these scenes the young administration brought its plan of government. It provided:

The provisional government will maintain above all else absolute independence and national sovereignty, the principle of the free determination of the people in its interior conflicts and the "principle of the juridicial equality of the States."

In its foreign policy, the government will strive to obtain better harmony. It will also respect all treaties. The government will call for general elections as soon as possible, to elect delegates to a constitutional convention which will prepare a new constitution and organize another government to which the present one will cede its powers.

The government will create courts of sanctions, which will be empowered to judge all persons accused of being responsible for crimes.

Temporarily it (the government) will make individual rights secondary to a regime of government fiscalization. No one may be deprived of his lawful property except by competent authority and for cause justified by the public good. The secretary of state is authorized to propose to the government the necessary provisions to determine the number, organization, and method of functioning of the courts of sanctions and equally for carrying out of the precepts of this statute.

they went under the wire.

Falls Behind In Second.

After winning first in the first two heats, Guy Pointer broke a trace in the second lap of the third heat, and due to this accident finished in tenth place. However, in the fourth heat, which by the way saw the closest finish of the day, he again overcame June Peters' long lead to win first money.

Peter W., owned by William Sharen, of Peterborough, after finishing away back in the first two heats, turned in a surprising performance in the third heat to win second place and grab off third money. Aggie Grattan was consistently up with the leaders in all heats and took fourth prize.

Colorful 2.17 Event.

The racing in the 2.17 class was also colorful and everything to be desired from a field of well-trained horses and veteran drivers, but the finishes were not as close as in the 2.28 class. Black Patch with J. Fraser driving laid in on the rail at the start and maintained the lead full way round in each heat although challenged repeatedly by Tony Mac, and Lee Note. Strang to say the last heat in this class was the fastest, Tony Mac forcing the big black horse to unloose everything he had to win. They did the first half in 1.05.

George S. McCall of Toronto was starter. Mr. McCall is a veteran of the racing game although not having officiated previously in this district. Owing to the big field in the 2.28 class there was some difficulty in getting all the horses lined up for a fair start, and $10 fines had to be clapped on two drivers.

Dr. W. F. McElroy was judge; D. R. Fleming, clerk of the course, and Gus White and L. Ferguson, timers.

APPLE EXHIBIT ONE OF FINEST IN MANY YEARS

Volume Of Fruit On Exhibit Shows Decided Increase This Year.

COVER WIDE FIELD.

New Class Farm Root Collection Proved a Big Success.

One of the finest apple exhibits in years is a feature in the vegetable tent at the Exhibition this week. The exhibit includes entries from many outside points as well as the immediate Peterborough district.

Resulting from the elevation of the Peterborough Exhibition to Class A this year, the volume of exhibits as a whole in the tent shows an increase over last year. Accommodations are now fully utilized and more room for the display may be required in future years if the present expansion continues, Frank Kitney, chairman of the Agricultural committee, told The Examiner.

With the provision of extra prize money and the addition of several classes as a result of the Exhibition's new rating, new contestants from further afield have exhibits in the tent this year. Among the exhibits are entries from an area extending almost to Toronto on the west and Belleville in the east. Exhibitors from the immediate district of Peterborough, however, have been successful in winning the bulk of the prize money.

A new class inaugurated this year—the farm root collection—has proved a success. Ten fine entries on exhibit gave the judges a difficult task in making their choices. The potato section is unusually good and the grain exhibit is the largest in the history of the exhibition. On display in the new standard bags provided by the Exhibition, the grain entries are neatly presented for view. With twelve entries, the fodder corn exhibit is also the largest on record and, despite the difficult growing conditions of the exceptionally dry summer, the sheaf grain exhibit has never been surpassed. Another new class this year, the gardeners' section, has done well, drawing a large number of exhibits.

In arranging and handling the agricultural show this year, Mr. Kitney was assisted by Alex. Huston in charge of the grain exhibits, Gordon Hancock in charge of fruit exhibits and A. J. Arnott in charge of the vegetable section.

A Pet Gone

PITTSBURGH Sept. 15.—(CP)—Pat, a tame black crow, endeared himself to the school children of suburban Thornburg.

He'd pluck clothes pins from lines and caw in glee as the clothes fell to the ground. He'd follow the children to school and then peck at the window panes after the teacher put him out.

Last week he disappeared and when he returned he went on a hunger strike. Today the children are mourning his death.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1933

TOMORROW'S TAG DAY.

The tag day of the Peterborough branch of the Humane Society tomorrow offers an opportunity for local citizens to endorse and assist the efforts this splendid organization have been making in the interest of our dumb animals.

That there is a very real need for this work the report of the activities of Inspector Johnston clearly proves; it is obvious that he has been successful in checking up and correcting conditions that needed attention.

There are few people who would stand by and see an animal ill treated, but it is sometimes difficult to interest the public in an organization like the Humane Society which seeks to act as a protector for animals in general.

If the Society were looked upon as an agency acting for the community at large to prevent cruel, inhumane or careless treatment for animals, doing as a general policy what individuals would do in particular cases that came to their attention, it is safe to say that there would be always ample funds with which to carry on the work.

The Examiner presents that viewpoint to its readers as an introduction to tomorrow's tag day in the hope that the necessity and desirability of the Humane Society's activities will be recognized and that substantial financial support will be assured.

A small donation from citizens generally will achieve the desired results.

MAKE THE LAST DAY COUNT.

A record last day's attendance at the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition tomorrow will give the big fair a glorious close and in view of the splendid program, the finest of the week, there is every reason why the turnstiles should click merrily.

With the spectacular parade of prize-winning live stock added to all the other features, and with a remarkable field of fast harness horses lined up for the racing events, the program should have an irresistible appeal not only to Peterborough citizens but to people from all over the district.

It is agreed that in its general features this has been a splendid exhibition, strong in all departments, and an emphatic challenge to blue ruinists and to the unusual conditions.

There was no cheapening of any side of the Exhibition in an effort to cut expenses and save money at the expense of the merit of the program; on the contrary the bold course has been followed of spending money freely—in a successful attempt to maintain the high standard of other years.

This courageous policy deserves support, and it should be accorded in full measure tonight, tomorrow afternoon and tomorrow night, the last three opportunities left to help the Exhibition in the only way that counts—namely, by box office patronage.

Much depends upon the last day's showing; it may have a great deal to do with deciding the calibre of next year's exhibition, so that it is up to every friend of this big annual event to lend a helping hand tomorrow.

ADVERTISING THAT SCORED.

Figures in regard to recent newspaper advertising in the United States tell a significant story to all who give them a moment's thought.

In the first place newspaper display advertising in 25 representative American cities showed an average increase of 16 per cent. in August of this year as compared with the same month in 1932.

That increase undoubtedly reflected increased confidence on the part of American business men and it is interesting to note that the confidence thus displayed is already being vindicated.

There is no more accurate barometer of business than the weekly report of car loadings and that barometer's latest reading shows the business mercury rising rapidly. September started her brief career by running the car loadings total to the highest point in two years.

The loadings for the week were 105,327 cars in excess of those of the corresponding week of 1932 and the highest weekly total since November, 1931.

That showing offers corroborative evidence not only the newspaper advertising gains reflected business gains but accounted for them, at least in part.

More car loadings can mean only one thing: more business done; and more goods sold, and it is obvious that the big increase in advertising space had a large share in bringing about that condition.

NOT SO EASY TO DO.

The Stratford Council has declined to pass a resolution calling upon the Government to bear all the cost of unemployment relief and to secure the necessary moneys by placing a special tax on all incomes of $25,000 a year and over.

In that attitude the members of the Stratford body showed good judgment.

It is all very well to talk about making the person with the big income pay, but after the process has been carried on for some time a limit is reached beyond which it is not safe to press without setting up the danger of other people having to contribute.

One newspaper estimates that already the man with $35,000 income has to pay one-third of that sum in federal, municipal, corporation and property tax.

To go farther than that and levy, say one-half or more of his income, would merely mean in a good many cases that the persons in his employ or the others who are dependent upon him for a living through the money he spends would find their own incomes seriously impaired.

It is against human nature that individuals called upon to contribute 50 or 60 per cent. of their incomes to the state should continue to pay the levy cheerfully and not make an effort to make somebody else help him to pay.

It is easy enough to talk about soaking the rich—the difficulty comes in applying the process without injurying a lot of other people who cannot be called rich.

TRAFFIC RULES.

The mounting toll of life at level railway crossings is the cause of great concern in the minds of those interested in the proper regulating of traffic, and safety on the highways. Every little while someone issues sets of rules for motorists to follow. Nearly every newspaper in the country picks them up and publishes them in the hope that it may do some good in making people more thoughtful.

Not the least impressive comment is the series of signs for level crossings proposed in a cartoon by George Shields in the Toronto Telegram. There is an ironic touch about these which may drive their lesson home. Here they are:

Don't stop—you might escape disaster.
Don't look—you might see a train coming.
Don't listen—you might hear a warning whistle.
Each week-end adds to the level crossing toll. How about you?
Railway crossing 300 feet. Go right ahead. It's your funeral.

This might be an effective way to bring home the lesson of safety first. Eddie Cantor says that some motorists drive as if they thought they were late for their accident. Probably a little sarcasm might be beneficial in hammering it into the heads of all motorists that "it is always train time" at a level crossing, and the train has the right of way. Straight serious advice undoubtedly has had some beneficial effect, but there is still much work to be done along the line of educating motorists in the various sources of danger along the highways.—Chatham Daily News.

FASCISM IN THE U. S.?

Is America ripe for Fascism? is the question asked and answered by V. F. Calverton, editor of the Modern Monthly. By America Mr. Calverton means the United States. Some Canadians are irritated by this assumption of the name of the continent, but the custom is equally prevalent in Great Britain. Mr. Calverton answers the question in the negative. President Roosevelt, he says, is as far from becoming a Fascist despot as Kerensky was from becoming a Bolshevik leader, and the United States is further removed from Fascism than almost any other country. The error of describing the Roosevelt policy as Fascist arises from the fact that, like Italian and German Fascism, it leads toward state capitalism. But that does not make the movements identical. Fascism, says this writer, is a militant uprising of such divers types as farmers, shopkeepers and minor industrial executives—what are sometimes called, though we dislike the term, the lower middle classes—and disillusioned radicals. In this it is distinguished from Bolshevism, which seeks support in the masses of manual workers. There is neither movement in the United States. There was no class upheaval in the vote polled for Mr. Roosevelt. It was a national uprising.

Fascism, he goes on to say, is contemptuous of democracy and legality in every form. Its earliest expression is the formation of extra-legal armies, storm troops, black-shirt phalanxes, organized, supported and armed for the purpose of annihilating enemies and rivals. It substitutes force and mobocracy for democracy and law. The election of Roosevelt had none of these features. There was no coercion and there were no illegal methods. Furthermore, there were no revolutionary working class parties of any significance, while in Italy and Germany these revolutionary organizations furnished a pretext for Fascism. Mr. Calverton's conclusion is that Fascism will not develop in the United States unless and until the economic situation provokes it. "If President Roosevelt's recovery program fails, the faith of the American workers and middle classes in the present economic system will undoubtedly be so greatly shaken that revolutionary working-class parties will appear on the one hand and Fascist legions on the other."

Mr. Calverton might have pointed out also the absence of any racial persecution or of any attempt to suppress liberal opinions—at least in the Roosevelt program. There have been, and still are anti-liberal tendencies in the United States, but one finds no trace of them in Mr. Roosevelt's utterances. He is, in fact, a liberal himself, exercising dictatorial powers by the free consent of the nation and because of peculiar circumstances. He might in this respect be compared with Lincoln, a lover of freedom, yet using extraordinary powers under the exigency of war. Nobody objects to the temporary dictatorship of the fire brigade during a fire. But when the fire is over the fireman becomes an ordinary citizen again. And we are inclined to think that Mr. Roosevelt will be relieved when the return of prosperity enables him to give up his dictatorial powers.—London Advertiser.

VACATION ESCAPADE

By ARTHUR SHUMWAY

CHAPTER 24.

"What are you doin' here?" demanded the man with the gun.

Sally saw his face. It was vaguely familiar, a rough, square-jawed face, covered with a red stubble.

"I was trying to get past," Sally said.

The man was smiling and looking down at her half-naked body. She remembered only then that she was unclothed and in tatters. She tugged at the filmy brassiere and clasped her arms about her body. The man chuckled.

"Tryin' to get past, hey?" he said. "You look like you was goin' swimmin'."

"I was," Sally said. "I was trying to get across to the beach. I was trying to get through these awful islands and get onto the beach."

"To swim?"

"No. To get picked up by somebody."

By this time three men were on the deck of the boat looking toward Sally and the man.

"What's this?" the loud, foreign voice called.

"A gal that's tryin' to get picked up. Come here and take a look. Shouldn't have no trouble, looks to me like."

They came and the big one turned a light on Sally.

"Whewee," he said, whistling.

"What'd I tell you?" said the man with the gun.

"But, but this is the boss' girl, Pink," the loud-voiced one said.

"What's that?" Pink demanded, incredulously.

The other man played the light on Sally's face. "Yah, sure! Ain't you the secretary up to Proctor's, kid?"

Sally nodded, blinking her eyes and turning her face away from the light. She heard one of the other men mumble something and the others chuckle.

"Listen here!" the loud one said. "I don't want none of this. Listen, kid, come aboard and get some clothes on and get warm."

Sally rose and started for the boat. Seeing that she tottered weakly, the man with the gun took her arm. She had just strength enough to go aboard. They led her down into a stuffy, tobacco-fouled compartment and one of them threw her a sweater, another a coat. She drew the sweater around her shoulders and draped the coat over her legs.

"Look at them scratches!" the loud one said. "Look how blue her lips is!" Without waiting to be told another of the men brought a bottle and a cup and the loud one held a drink to Sally's lips. She gulped it eagerly, hoping it would be warm. It was; it was as hot as fire and as raw as lye. She coughed and sputtered. "Take another," the man insisted. She did and coughed again. Already, though, she felt her body shiver with the contrast of sudden internal warmth.

"Now," the loud one said, "how is this you come here?"

"I was on Mr. Proctor's boat," Sally explained. "We were going down the river——"

"Yah, yah, I know," the man said, nodding to the others as to say "I told you so."

"Well—there was a lot of excitement. Everything was all mixed up. You know how those things are sometimes——"

"Yah. Sure, kid."

"Well, I fell off the boat when nobody was watching," she said, "and they went on without me. I swam ashore—I had to take off my shoes and dress so I could swim—and that's all. I've just been trying to get through to the peninsula so I could get to the beach and find a house or somebody driving toward Daytona."

"Why didn't you come to the boat, sister?" one of the other men demanded, looking at her shrewdly.

"Yah," said the big one, "why you try to go by when you see the boat?"

"But I didn't know whose boat it was," Sally explained. "I was afraid to stop. I was just trying to slip by without making any noise."

"Hm," the big one said. He looked about the circle of faces, scowling questioningly. "Well, what you think?" he demanded. "This is the boss' secretary. She fall off the boss' boat. What we goin' to do?"

"Let her ride back with Ed," the one with the gun said.

The big one looked at his companions. They nodded.

"Sure," the one with the gun agreed, "that's what the boss would want us to do. Let Ed take her."

"All right then," the big one said. "How you feel now, kid, huh?"

"All right, I guess," Sally said, smiling wanly.

"You lay down on the bunk and go to sleep," the big one told her. "You need the sleep, huh?"

Sally nodded and moved painfully to the smelly bunk. She lay down and the big man threw an old greasy blanket over her. "That's good, hun? You sleep. When Ed comes we wake you up. You go back with Ed, huh kid?"

Sally nodded weakly. The close atmosphere of the room, the effect of the stimulant and the overpowering fatigue were having their effect. Her last thought as she dropped off into a bottomless pit of sleep was that she really wanted to stay awake in the presence of these rough-looking men, but it was no use.

How long she slept she had no idea. She felt at last a big hand shaking her shoulder gently but insistently. For a moment she could not open her eyes or summon her full consciousness. Then she heard a distant voice saying: "The kid's sure done up."

When she opened her eyes she saw the face of the big man with the loud voice. At first she did not recognize him. She closed her eyes again. Where was she? What had happened? She smelled strong tobacco. She heard rough, male voices. She looked up once more and then she remembered. She tried to sit up, but found she had not the strength. She smiled apologetically and the big man lifted her gently. "You pretty tired, huh kid?" He drew off the blanket. Sally looked down at her stiff, aching body and saw that she was still clothed in the ragged sweater, with the old coat fastened about her legs.

The man helped her to her feet. "Here," another said, wrapping the blanket around her.

"Yah, yah," the big one said. "That's good." He swung her into his arms and carried her up on deck. A rowboat was waiting beside the rum carrier. The man let himself down, holding her securely, and sat in the stern while another man rowed silently around the point of the next island and across the remaining 200 yards to a dark shore. Sally realized sleepily that this must be the peninsula that she had been trying to reach. At the shore the big man got out, taking her with him, and made his way through the brush until he came to a road where a big truck stood waiting without lights, the motor running quietly.

"Here she is, Ed," the big one said, hoisting her up to somebody in the cab. The driver said "Okay, Louie," and propped Sally up in the seat. "Okay, kid?" Sally nodded. The driver threw the truck into low and it began to move slowly, a ghostly, awesome bulk, north, toward Daytona.

When Sally awoke again she was in somebody's arms. She squirmed and tried to look up.

"It's oke, kid. It's me, Ed," the man said. Sally lay back, limp, and let him carry her. She began to realize that the surroundings were familiar; they were at Proctor's house.

The next she knew, she was being lowered upon her bed. She heard Ed say to somebody, "Get that girl up here to help" and again she fell asleep. She awoke just once more before day and that was when she realized Flobelle, the maid, was slipping a clean nightgown over her head.

"You jus' go on sleepin', honey," she heard Flobelle say. "You all tahred out."

It was broad daylight when she finally awoke. After several minutes of lying with her eyes half open, she realized what had happened. Here she was, then, home—or back at her bedroom in Proctor's house. She lay there too numb and sore to rise. Perhaps an hour went by when she heard a soft knock at the door.

"Yes?" she said. The sound of her voice surprised her.

"Fred Proctor, Sally. Are you all right?"

"I guess so," Sally replied weakly.

"May I come in?"

"Yes," she replied.

Proctor came in, an anxious look on his brown face. His expression moved Sally deeply; she never had thought of him as a human, sympathetic sort of man.

"Sally," he said contritely, "I can't begin to tell you how sorry I am."

She smiled and nodded rather than waste the effort of speaking. She wanted to lie in that soft bed forever.

"I'll not keep you awake if you want to rest," he said. "Are you all right, though? Should I send for the doctor?"

She shook her head.

"What happened last night will never happen again," Proctor said. There was something dreadful in his quiet tone. "We combed the river for you; gave you up at nine o'clock this morning; then came home and found you here."

Sally nodded. "They brought me," she said.

Proctor pused his lips, thoughtfully. "Yes," he said, "they brought you. My men." He smiled and began to back out. "When you're feeling yourself again I want to have a little talk with you—Sally."

Curfew Bell

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 14. (AP)—Intended to clear children from the streets of suburban Pennbrook, the curfew will be sounded as usual tonight, but it won't be the same old siren's shriek.

Budget-paring councilmanic dads decided last night that all the little Willies and Johnnies could be "shooed" home by the ringing of the firehouse bell, and vetoed the further use of an electric siren.

The saving will be 15 cents daily—$54.75 yearly—not figuring the energy a volunteer fireman will expend on the bell rope.

ON THIS DATE

A DAY IN CANADIAN HISTORY

By Fred Williams

THE KILLING OF JUMBO.

On this date, in 1885, the world, especially the juvenile world, was staggered by the news that Jumbo, the greatest elephant in captivity, had been killed because he had been hit by a train at St. Thomas, Ontario (for which many old country newspaper readers heard for the first time).

When I was a small boy, one of the attractions of the Zoo in London was the giant elephant, "Jumbo." He was one of the "institutions" of the day. When mothers wanted to induce their boys and girls to do something particular the bait was held out: "If you do, you shall have a ride on 'Jumbo.'" Contrariwise, bad little boys and girls were told that as a punishment they should not have a ride on "Jumbo." The elephant was both reward and penalty in the hands of the parents of those days. And the elephant's fame spread far and wide. Children from the provinces went up to London to see him and share the privilege of the children of "Cockayne."

In due course the United States heard of "Jumbo," and, of course, wanting all the "biggest things" in the world, decided that it must annex the elephant. P. T. Barnum, then in the height of his success, went over to London, and approaching the trustees of the Zoological Gardens, made them an offer, which, like a king's ransom, was too big to refuse; and one day it was announced that England was going to lose "Jumbo." Then there arose a whirlwind of an agitation. The Yankees might buy the old masters; they might purchase family heirlooms, but they must not be permitted to annex "Jumbo." That would be a nationa catastrophe. People wrote to The Times about it, the columns of the Daily Telegraph were filled with letters of protest and denunciation of "American greed," children marched in procession to insist that their favorite should not be exiled. Punch published a cartoon about it, questions were asked in the House of Commons—in fact every form of public indignation took shape. The elephant's future was the great national topic of conversation. He must be saved to the British nation!

But, alas! "Yankee gold" proved more effective than Britain's protest. The sale had been completed; it could not be upset, and one day, amidst a nation's mourning, a steamer sailed down the Thames bearing on it the treasured "Jumbo."

In due time the elephant reached New York. They had a "whale of a time" getting him ashore, but eventually he was staked down in Barnum's circus and became the admiration of millions, as the circus made its way through America. "Jumbo" was an aristocratic elephant, he did not mix with the rest of the herd; he disliked the menial task of shoving wagons and other paraphernalia when breaking-up time came; perhaps he missed the London children with their gifts and manifestations of delight as they rode him (he was not permitted to play with children in America, he was too valuable a showthing) and "Jumbo" became bad-tempered. Like most Englishmen (for he had become anglicized), he disliked American modes of travel; he preferred the privacy of the Zoo to the gasflares of the "greatest show on earth," and he was not as easy to handle as he had been.

Barnum made his annual tour of Canada in 1885. "Jumbo" was the star attraction and many a grown Englishman went to the circus just for the sake of seeking his old pal. "Jumbo" was made to do his bit, like the other elephants, and he did not like it. He broke from his handlers, made his way over to another track in the railway yards, and ran into a switching engine. The impact was terrible. The locomotive was derailed. The elephant was so badly mutilated that he had to be shot.

Character From Handwriting

By BLANCHE A. DRAPER

A Feature Conducted by Peterborough's Leading Handwriting Analyst for the Readers of The Examiner.

Miss Lucille Cavanagh, R. R. No. 3, Indian River, Ontario: Your handwriting as portrayed on sample for analysis shows that you are rather overanxious to do things and that you do not stop to think first; therefore, you make many mistakes which otherwise might have been avoided. Your signature expresses unusual force and vitality. The thick heavy downstrokes show strong material tastes and stubbornness. Some of the letter formations reflect independence and perhaps a little selfish characteristic. You seem to be only interested in your own future. You do not seem to be able to adapt yourself to prevailing conditions or circumstances and I am afraid there are times when you are argumentative. However, there is a characteristic which is very pronounced in the last few letters of your writing which suggest another side to your nature. That of simplicity and genuine sorrow when your plans go wrong. Could you not begin to learn something which would bring you happiness because of the knowledge you would gain through the experience and the use of the same as a hobby? You need a form of recreation to bring out your best qualities.

W. E., Canadian National, George Street, Peterborough, Ontario: This handwriting as submitted on sample for analysis represents you as versatile and subject to moods of depression. On the other hand, you are optimistic and indulgent, cheerful and most thoughtful of the sensitive feelings of others. Your capital 'P' in Peterborough denotes an instructive and constructive mind. Your visions are keen and penetrating. The crossing of your 't' bar suggests dominant will-power. It shows that once your mind is made up, your plans are definite and complete. The other capital letter formations being large and open depict generosity and benevolence. You have the ability to work well and diligently. You can be secretive when the necessity arises, but you are usually openhearted and lively. You possess executive ability and should do well in any business where care and thought well directed are essential, because you can plan for others to execute, and you have the faculty for perfect attention to detail. This should guide you along the road to success and prosperity.

Jack Sproule, 709 Water St., Peterborough, Ontario: The handwriting as indited on your sample for analysis delineates you as one who is ready at all times to put honest endeavor into work at hand. You are not very sure of yourself and often rush into complicated details without a thorough knowledge of affairs. Whereas had you stopped to consider first, a catastrophe might have been averted. However, you are generous and free hearted; a failure of yours seems to be that you do not see the faults in others till it is too late to do anything about them. You are a fairly good all-round sport, but lose your enthusiasm for certain projects if they happen to be drawn out over a period of time which is longer than your nature can readily understand. You like to accomplish work and all undertakings as quickly as possible. The dotting of your letter 'i' as represented shows that you are a positive person when dealing with ideas which are your own. The capital letters suggest the tendency to give or spend too much while your purse is full, then skimp and save towards the next remunerative date. The long loop on the capital 'J' above the line indicates a willingness to lead, the shorter loop below counteracts this trait and makes you sensible and evenly balanced.

M. Isabel Faux, Indian River, Ontario: The handwriting as delineated on your sample for analysis shows artistic ability and determination. I do not think that you make much of your artistic talent as yet, for there is a business characteristic in the small letter formations. However, you are not over energetic. You do what is necessary and that is all. You do not make a slave of yourself because you want to. If you work long hours, it is because circumstances over which you have no control forced you to. On the other hand, you are fond of good times and like to be considered a good sport. Try making up your mind to one thing and then stick to it. No doubt your characteristics will be more pronounced as you develop and become more mature, as it is you appear decidedly nervous and not very strong, so do not try to force your strength. Rest as much as possible.

Etton W. N. Miles, R. R. No. 4, Peterborough, Ontario: The handwriting as described on your sample for analysis shows that you are pleasant and friendly. Your strong will-power and driving force should assist you very much in reaching the top, especially as you also possess a spirit of independence. Your character formations throughout the signature indicate that you have decided executive ability and might do well in the business world. Perhaps in real-estate, or somewhere where you could use the knowledge at your disposal of dealing with the public. Your talents run along an independent field so you would have to execute your own ideas in order to become happy and successful. The outlines of your writing, though not quite as definite in pencil as they would have been in ink, are sufficiently clear enough to enable me to judge your characteristics in a general way. You are a person who thinks quickly and acts deliberately and you do not want anything to stand in your path to deter you from accomplishing your plans.

CASTLE EXPLAINS HIS INVENTION WILL BE BIG HELP TO INDUSTRY

Auxiliary Pistons Perform Six Important Functions.

MANY SEE EXHIBIT.

John A. Castle, inventor of the Lambert-Castle Motor Head is working hard at the Exhibition, explaining the functions of his invention for motor cars which is on display in the Main Building. Assisting him at intervals throughout the day are Thomas B. Lambert, president of the Lambert Machine and Tool Works, Windsor, and Emerson Harcourt Arnold, prominent Windsor engineer and business man.

The invention consists of a new type cylinder head that can be attached to any automobile engine simply by removing the present head. The cylinder head contains auxiliary pistons driven by irregular-shaped cams on a camshaft. The upper camshaft is driven from the crankshaft at only half the speed of the engine. The auxiliary piston in the Lambert-Castle head works up and down in an opposing relation to the ordinary piston in a motor and in the same cylinder. Thus a four-cylinder motor with a Lambert-Castle head attached will have eight piston in it.

Mr. Castle points out that the auxiliary pistons in the Lambert-Castle head do not transmit power to the wheels. They do however, cause extreme high compression pressure to be built up in the cylinder.

Many important functions, he explained, are performed by these auxiliary pistons, such as: (1) Complete scavenging of all burned-out gases from the cylinder after each power stroke; (2) Absolute control of the quantity of the new charge; (3) absolute control of the quality of the charge; (4) Absolute control of the place where compression occurs; (5) Absolute control of the time the explosion occurs, and (6) Ability to build up all the compression pressure that a motor will stand without being blown to pieces.

Referring back to function number one Mr. Castle pointed out the great importance of cleaning out old burned-out gases from the cylinder. Old gases left in the combustion chamber, he declared, actually weakens the new charge.

Regarding feature number two, he stated that the control of the quantity of the charge is important because the charge must be small in order that it will completely burn out all its energy during the fraction of a split second the power piston goes down the cylinder.

Approximately twenty-four percent of the gasoline in the present day motor car engine, he claims, goes out through the motor as raw unburned gasoline, and in addition to that he states, about 22 per cent. goes out only partially burned.

Control of the quality of the charge was a question of utmost importance, Mr. Castle claims, for the reason that if the raw gas is not surrounded by oxygen in pure air it will smother and will not burn.

In explaining the fourth feature, he stated too much stress cannot be laid on the place of compressing the charge. Is not the explosive placed directly behind the bullet of a gun?

"Of course it is" he remarked, "and so we, in the construction of the Lambert-Castle Motor Head, cause the compression of the charge between the piston now in the standard motor engine and the piston in the newly invented engine head, entirely in the cylinder directly behind the piston to be driven.

The time of exploding the charge is greater in importance than any of the functions set forth. Because this new invention absolutely eliminates the dead centre knock from the standard engine.

A motor when fitted with a Lambert-Castle. Head is timed to fire past dead centre.

Mr. Castle who points out that millions of dollars have been spent by gasoline corporations in trying to develop a fuel that would reduce motor knock, said that it could not be done with the standard motor. The knock had been built into it by mechanics and anti-knock gasoline could not eliminate it.

"We have mechanically built the knock out for all time" he claims, "because the engine is so built that it fires past dead centre."

Probably he believed the sixth feature was of greater importance than any of the others. It was obvious, he said, that the higher the compression the more effective would be the explosion.

Market Closing On All Exchanges

TORONTO EXCHANGE

TORONTO, Sept. 15. (CP)—The early splurge on the industrial boards flattened out in the afternoon and the price level was down at the close on the Toronto stock exchange. Interruption of the advance on the New York Board was the main factor in weakening the Toronto list but the fact that 31 stocks were standing ex-divided to-day helped to give the board a soft appearance. Volume was off a little also though the turnover was substantial in some of the distillery shares and in nickel.

International Nickel in the morning show of strength, moved up to 22.35 and it subsequently fopped to 21.35 off 45 cents. Brazilian, Ford of Canada and Smelters finished slightly off and C.P.R. retained a gain of ⅝.

STANDARD EXCHANGE

TORONTO, Sept. 15 (CP) Group leaders in the Standard Mining Market gradually worked higher in to-day's session, supported by a considerable pick-up in volume. The advance was restricted by waves of selling in the New York market to which the leading gold issues were particularly sensitive but the close was up for the day.

Nickel successfully combatted a second sell down on the New York market only to slip in an afternoon bear drive, falling back to $21.40. Noranda had 16 cents to the good at the close and Hudson Bay was up 25 at $10.50.

Dome, Lake Shore, McIntyre Bralorne, Hollinger, and Teck all closed unchanged or higher by 5 to 25 cents. Dome was off 60 cents. The bulk of the buying was in McIntyre, Dome, Teck, and Hargreaves.

WALL STREET.

NEW YORK September 15 (CP.)—Stocks see-sawed to-day with heaviness in utilities rails, and alcohols. A late rally in the tobaccos helped to steady the list, although the general tone was uncertain. Homestake was up 12 points at one time, but lost most of this. Shares steady to firm in the final hour included Liggett and Byers B, Cerro de Pasco, American Can, Case and U.S. Smelting. Losses ranging from major fractions to around 2 points or so occurred in U.S. Steel, Consolidated Gas, Union Pacific, American Telephone, National Distillers, Public Service of New Jersey, and American Sugar. Transfers approximated 2,200,000 shares.

Canadian Broadcasts For Michigan State

OTTAWA, Sept. 15— (CP.)—The Canadian Radio Commission will supply its programmes to the Kunsky-Trendle Broadcasting Corporation of Detroit for broadcasting over a network of stations covering the State of Michigan, it was announced in a statement issued today by he Commission. This extension of the service will probably take place within 10 days.

"The quality of the Commission's programmes has led to this demand," said the statement referring to the request of the Kunsky-Trendle Corporation to be permitted to broadcast them. "As the extension of the service to this network will be without cost to the Commission and as many Canadians in parts of Western Ontario and in Michigan are anxious to hear Canadian programmes, and are not getting them from any station in the territory, the Commission has decided to grant the request."

The statement gives the list of seven stations in Michigan which will be broadcasting these programmes.

Seven Girls Entered Diving Contests

Spectators on the grand stand at the Exhibition last night were treated to a fine display of diving by local amateur talent when the preliminary contest of the competition to discover the lady diving champion of Peterborough was staged. Out of a field of seven, five girls were selected to compete in the final contest Saturday night.

The five girls from whom the champion will be chosen are Elda Bradley, Hazel Bradley, Hazel Schiarrisa, Mary Kingsbury and Jessie Scholey. Peggy Edmonds and Lily Long were eliminated by margins of a few points.

Each contestants executed a forward jack-knife dive, a swan dive and an optional dive. Points were awarded on each dive on a basis of approach, execution and return. G. H. Roper of the Y.M.C.A. acted as a judge in co-operation with Captain Lavelley, the torch diver, and his companion, Pauline Black.

All five divers remaining in the competitions are girls who have received most of the training and practice at the Y.W.C.A.

A Soo Mystery

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Sept. 15.—(C.P.) — Sault Ste. Marie was still without word to-day of the "mystery balloon" reported to have passed over the city last night, showing red and green lights. Campers at Haviland Bay also said they saw the balloon over Lake Superior.

According to Ranger Lake residents, an airship passes over the town two or three times a week—always at night.

Fire rangers suggested it might be a smuggler operating between Canada and United States.

LADY CLAYTON CRASH VICTIM

Hurled to Ground as Her Plane Suddenly Starts While She is Climbing In.

WIDOW OF EXPLORER.

BROOKLANDS, England, Sept. 15 (C.P.).—Lady Clayton-East-Clayton, noted young amateur pilot and widow of the explorer, Sir Robert Clayton-East-Clayton, was killed today in an unusual aeroplane accident here.

As she was entering the plane it started up. She tried desperately to climb into the cockpit as the machine rapidly gained speed, but was thrown to the ground violently. As the plane turned over on its nose, her skull was fractured and she died shortly after being taken to a hospital.

Sir Robert died last year from a mysterious germ disease contracted during an unsuccessful aeroplane and motor journey searching for a lost oasis in the Libyan Desert a few months previously.

A different version of the accident was given later by police. They credited witnesses as saying Lady Clayton already was in the plane and was seen to fall from the cockpit as the ship began to rise. The plane careened forward about 25 yards and then overturned.

The police and airport officials said they were unable to determine the cause of the accident.

NEW BUILDING MAY BE BUILT AT EXHIBITION

exhibitors in the horse show ring yesterday, sold a horse for $500. The buyer had come here from Toronto. He believed that to be evidence that outside buyers realized the worth of livestock raised in this district and exhibited at Peterborough Exhibition.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to the ladies of St. James' United Church who provided the meal, and also to Herb McCannan and his orchestra, who provided a splendid program of musical selections throughout the luncheon hour.

After lunch the members of the club adjourned to have an audience with Eric the Robot, and were favorably impressed with the demonstration that was put on by Vincent Holden, son of the inventor of the Robot.

Many of the Kiwanians had seen previous demonstrations of the Robot, not only since he has been in Peterborough, but also at the Canadian National Exhibition. It is commonly regarded as an exhibit that never fails to fascinate, and is well worthy of repeat visits.

The following are the committees for the Kiwanis Carnival, to be held Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 25 and 26:

Railway Strike Looms Strong As Vote Ends

MONTREAL, Sept. 15 (CP)—Possibility of a strike by members of the railway running trades is "very strong," said W. J. Babe, of St. Thomas, Ont., vice-president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainment, when he reached here to-day to arrange with other union leaders the tabulation of the strike ballot.

Voting on the question whether the workers will strike rather than accept a further 10 per cent reduction in basic wage rates, concluded to-day among the 30,000 members of the running trades.

WILLIAM PARKS GIVEN 3 MONTHS

Also Must Pay Fine of $300 for Making Bootleg Liquor.

PLEADED GUILTY.

Pleading guilty to having had in his possession a still capable of producing between nine and ten gallons of moonshine per hour, William H. Parks, aged 25, of Havelock, was sentenced to-day by Police Magistrate Langley to three months in the county gaol and a fine of $500. Failure to pay the fine will bring an additional three months in jail.

Constable L. A. Denton, of the R.C.M.P., Cobourg, stated that he had watched the still, located in a large swamp in Belmont Township, for two days and nights constantly. The still, he explained, was most complete and near it was all the paraphernalia required to make moonshine. He arrested Parks early this morning when he came to stir the mash in a 40-gallon barrel. Two gallons of manufactured whiskey were found in a "hide" a short distance from the still. The officer alleged that the still had been under observation for a year and a half. Constable Pat O'Connell, R.C.M.P., of Lindsay, and Provincial Constable Wm. Warren first located it, but it had been constantly moved from place to place and the officers could never catch anyone in attendance upon it.

The officer further alleged that the still had been supplying a large number of persons in the Havelock district with illicit liquor.

LAID TO REST.

MONTREAL. — Final tribute to an outstanding citizen of the Dominion and the Province of Quebec was paid to-day at the funeral of Senator Frederic Lyman Bridge, president of the Banque Canadienne Nationale and of the University of Montreal.

NEVER IN OUR experience have we seen so many beaten favorites as at the present Thorncliffe session. Up to Wednesday evening there had been twenty-eight races and only one public choice clicked. Imagine one out of twenty-eight, no wonder the regulars are going around talking to themselves. Incidentally we will give ourselves a pat on the back as we called Mrs. Foster on opening, Pat Gaiety on Tuesday, Spey Crest, Horometer and Boscobel on Wednesday, all right on the nose.

* * *

HARRY GILDING told us right when he said he had the 1934 King's Plate winner in his barn. Horometer took the Clarendon plate with ease and won pulled up. If he had been pressed probably would have broken the track record as he was only one second off it as it was. Barring mishaps he should go into winter quarters as odds on favorite for next year's classic. He is owned by R. S. McLaughlin of Oshawa and the whole Motor city moved to Leaside on Wednesday to see him do his stuff.

* * *

BILL WEANT has the largest stable of any owner quartered at Thorncliffe put over a winner in Prince Fox. He took the measure of a classy field and right here we want to say that Bill has a few more sleepers in his barn. One in particular called Matadi. We look for Uppity to account for a win at Woollett's plant. Stealingaway ran second to Prince Fox yesterday and next time should see him in the winner's circle.

* * *

JACK HUTTON the well known and popular trainer of Ryland H. New's stable has the distinction of being the leading trainer up-to-date at Thorncliffe. If Mr. New is really serious about getting out of the horse racing game, this smart handler of horses should not have any trouble getting another position. Once again Khorasan will beat them all on a lightning fast track. Saturday sees the closing of the popular Leaside oval and then after a week's lay-off Woodbine gets under way on Sept 23rd.

Her BACKACHES have GONE!

Quick, sure relief with Fruit-a-tives

"Your wonderful remedy acted like a tonic to my entire system. I can't begin to tell what I suffered from backaches due to kidney derangement. When I would bend down it seemed that I couldn't straighten up again. I was continually awakened at night from the same cause. Dizzy, sick headaches and a weak stomach made me feel perfectly wretched. Now thanks to your wonderful 'Fruit-a-tives', I am enjoying life again."

Fruit-a-tives . . . all drug stores

THAT "LIKE THE DICKENS" FEELING IS LIVER

Wake Up Your Liver Bile. Feel Fit. You Needn't use Calomel To Do It.

It's your liver, failing to pour out the vital two pounds of bile, daily, into your bowels, that makes you feel so off-colour.

Lack of bile means poor digestion. Food stays too long in your bowels and decays. Your system is poisoned. You go through the misery of gas, bloating, pain, heartburn. You have a dark brown abominable taste in your mouth and bad breath. Your skin's unhealthy and often your head aches. Your whole system seems out of kilter.

How can you reasonably expect to clear up a condition like this by merely taking salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum, or roughage? These only move the bowels, and that's not enough. You must wake up your liver bile.

Avoid calomel (mercury). Take Carter's Little Liver Pills. They're purely vegetable, gentle, sure and safe. They'll make you feel a hundred per cent better in a very short time.

Don't waste your money on substitutes. Be definite. Ask for Carter's by name—and get them! Look for the name, Carter's, on the red label. 25c. at all druggists. 69

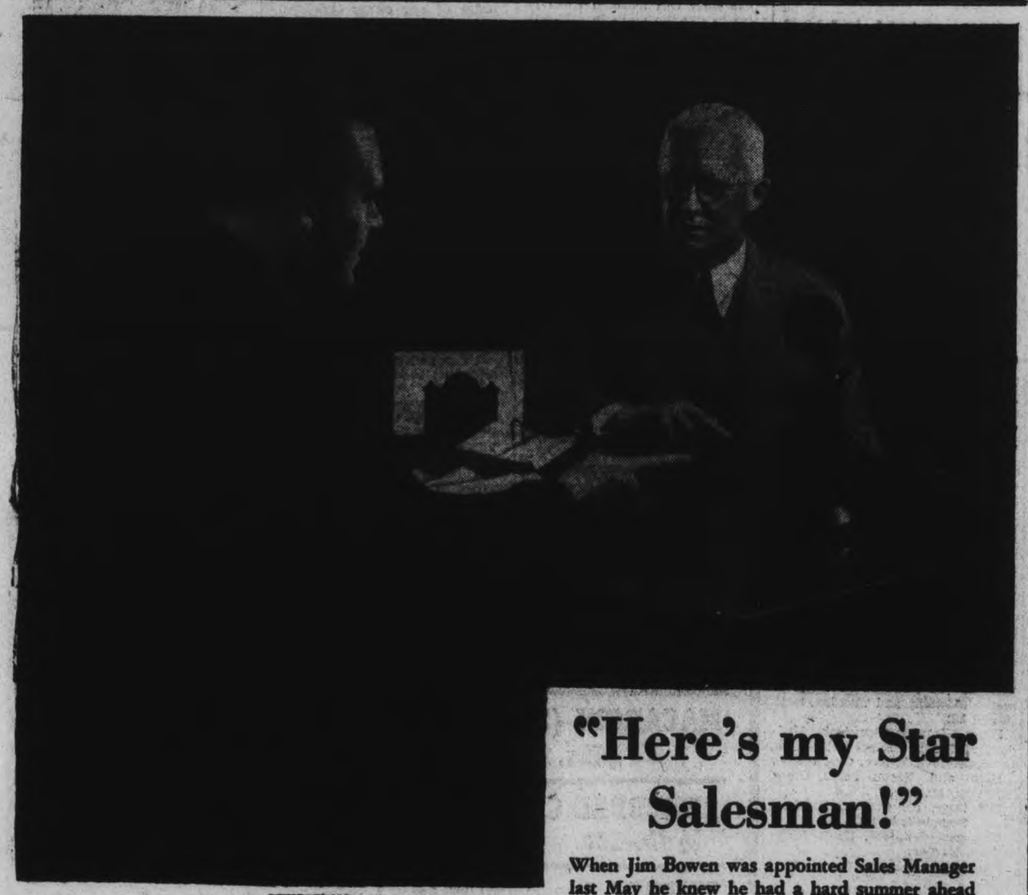
GENUINE SCOTCH ANTHRACITE



"Here's my Star Salesman!"

When Jim Bowen was appointed Sales Manager last May he knew he had a hard summer ahead — reduced sales staff — men away on holidays — uneasy customers wanting extra attention.

But now, with the summer over, Jim can look back at his record with satisfaction.

"We filled up the gaps by using Long Distance telephone," he explained to the General Manager. "By telephone we were able to keep in close touch with all customers and get quick action."

"And I notice you've cut selling costs considerably," the General Manager said.

"Yes," Jim replied, "Long Distance is surprisingly inexpensive. In fact, the telephone has been just about our best salesman."

FORD V-8 TRUCKS meet today's new needs

Stake body on 157-inch Ford V-8 chassis, an ideal all-around unit

Ford trucks with V-8 engine solve today's transportation problems—high power and speed combined with low running costs

Ford V-8 commercial car with light delivery body

THE 30-horsepower Ford V-8 truck is being chosen by Canadian business because it meets perfectly today's conditions.

Some firms have had to abandon heavy trucks, and use lighter ones for the same tasks. Ford power, strength and stamina make this change a real economy.

In other cases, hand-to-mouth buying has increased the number of trips per day, while lowering the weight of the average load. Ford V-8 speed meets this condition perfectly, making possible more trips per day.

Again, some fleets have been cut in size, and each truck must carry more. For such extra burdens the extra power, strength, endurance and long life of the Ford V-8 truck are essential if economical operation is to be obtained.

Never before have the unique advantages of the V-8 engine been available to all truck owners. Modern Ford design, engineering and manufacture bring you the Ford V-8 truck at typically low first cost, and with all the economy in operation you have always associated with the name Ford.

Thus Ford trucks and commercial cars have changed with the times, meeting new conditions with the new economy, power, speed, durability and reliability of the Ford V-8 engine. See your dealer.

Ford V-8 Engine Features

80 horsepower means higher performance. Yet Ford fuel economy records are maintained! R. A. C. horsepower rating, 30. 35 to 45 m. p. h., at which trucks are usually driven, is the Ford V-8's most economical range.

Great reserve power. Maximum torque is 149 foot pounds at 1000 r.p.m., but torque is over 140 foot pounds between 750 and 2200 r.p.m., giving ability to pull steadily under varied conditions and maintain speed under full load.

Aluminum cylinder heads. Provide increased power and smoothness and save fuel.

One-piece cylinder blocks and crankcase. For rigidity and long life.

Aluminum alloy open-skirt pistons.

Diaphragm fuel pump.

Downdraft carburetor.

Automatic spark control.

Big four-wheel brakes. Total area 465⅛ square inches. Entirely enclosed.

High truck ability rating.

Low parts prices and low flat-rate labor charges.

Warnings issued	21
Consultations upon humane matters	33

Observations as result of persons bitten by dogs	3
Dogs placed in homes	5
Horses humanely destroyed	2
Cows humanely destroyed	2
Number of miles covered by motor car	1,800

In addition to the above report, the Society has received the following letter:

Peterborough. Sept. 8 1933.
Thomas E. Sargent, President,
Peterborough Humane Society.

Dear Sir,—There are a number of cases not mentioned in the above report which have received my attention. One was a man very cruel to an aged horse in a very emaciated condition which had fallen on the road; another man hauling wood with horses unfit for the work —very thin in flesh; last week I ordered a horse and a cow destroyed to end their misery. I was called to a small town in this district on complain of a man working a horse with its backbone protruding through the flesh. This man was advised of my coming and had the horse destroyed before I got there. I had two calls to the village of Hastings and one to Meyersburg and had a horse destroyed. also two calls to Campbellford on compaints.

I have taken none of these cases into court as those people whom I have had a complaint against have complied with my orders, and the circumstances in each case have had my consideration. There has been a lot of sickness among animals, partly due to lack of food and the extreme and prolonged heat.

In conclusion, I wish to thank you and your executive for the effort you have made to sustain this commendable work.

THOMAS JOHNSTON, V.S.,
Humane Inspector.

NOTE. — The Society wishes to make it perfectly clear to the public that the Peterborough Humane Society does not desire to bring individuals into law courts for offences against dumb animals. Where offenders are discovered warnings will be given and orders issued and due consideration will be given to all circumstances of cases, but neglect and cruelty will not be tolerated. The Society has been working along educational lines, endeavoring to change the attitude of individuals from cruelty and neglect to one of thoughtfulness and care. By this procedure marvellous results have already been obtained.

We wish to appeal to every citizen of Peterborough and surrounding country, who are in sympathy with this commendable work, to give every possible financial assistance to the Society on their annual Tag Day, September 16, 1933, thus enabling them in some measure to continue this work, which is handicapped at present from lack of funds.

T. Sargent, President.

Gandhi Sees Princes Losing Much Power

POONA, India, Sept. 15.—(A.P.)—Mahatma Gandhi and Pandit Jawarhalal Newru, Nationalist leaders who have conducted a series of conferences, announced to-day an agreement in defining the aim of the Nationalist Congress as the complete independence of India.

Gandhi declared that Indian princes must surrender much of their power and become popular representatives of the people. His colleague emphasied that freedom must be achieved by a revision of the rights of what he called the vested interests in favor of the masses.

The biggest vested interest, he said, is the government and next come the princes.

Overflow Crowd

FORRESTON, Ill., Sept. 15.—(C.P.).—This town of approximately 600 inhabitants held its annual observation of "sauerkraut day" and this is what happened:

About 20,000 visitors came to see how much sauerkraut and "hot dogs" they could eat.

Two tons of sauerkraut was consumed, and if the "hot dogs" that disappeared during yesterday's celebration were placed end to end there would have been a string of them two miles long.

There was no charge for this culinary festival. It's an old Forreston custom to invite one and all to free food once a year.

HOLLYWOOD

Sense and Nonsense

Oh Hollywood, where is your sophistication! The sensation of the social season was the good, old-fashioned barn dance thrown Saturday night by Kay Francis and Kenneth MacKenna.

Kay Francis

Imagine, if you can, the proud ladies and gentlemen of the cinema riding on the back of a cow and scrambling to catch greased pigs on the floor of the Vendome Cafe, one of Hollywood's most expensive eateries, transformed for the evening into a simple rustic setting.

To the eternal fame of Mark Twain, practically everybody came dressed as Huckleberry Finn. The most amusing, perhaps, were Gloria Swanson and her tall Irish husband, Michael Farmer. Sleek, glamorous Gloria in a rumpled shirt, overalls and minus shoes and stockings. She was leading a scraggly pup and Farmer had a fishing pole over his shoulder.

Then, there were Huckleberry Finns No. 3 and No. 4, Florence Eldridge and Fredric March. Florence's get-up was complete, even to the red wig and freckles. You'd have laughed, too, to see the usually elegant Kay Francis in a red and white gingham dress with sunbonnet to match.

And who won the cow-riding contest, Virginia Valli or Kay Johnson?

Yes sir, it was quite a lark!

Jim Davis, who keeps the stars in shape at Paramount, has figured out that Mae West has the identical proportions of Venus de Milo.

Told of this, Mae's swell retore was "That may be so but I have it on the Venus because I have two arms and know how to use them: besides I'm not marble."

* * *

Actually, the West figure is free of fat. When the blonde star came out here to make her first picture, she went to Davis and suggested taking off a few pounds around the hips and bust. He advised her to let nature's curves alone but to take some extra ounces off the back and waist. An inveterate early riser, Mae got up at 7 a.m. to take exercises and repeated in the evening. Davis says she showed more endurance than any man he has ever trained. West muscles are strong, too. She lifted the 180-pound Davis off the floor with one arm.

Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery in "Tugboat Annie," their first appearance since "Min and Bill," are the attraction, sometimes hilariously funny, sometimes tensely dramatic, but always entertaining, at the Capitol theatre, where the long-awaited filmization of Norman Reilly Raine's Saturday Evening Post stories opens Monday. There are hilarious quarrels between the redoubtable feminine tugboat captain and her shiftless, good-natured husband; mother-love furnishes a poignant heart interest, and there is a tremendous dramatic climax in the amazing episode in the engine room.

Miss Dressler plays Annie, Beery as her husband, Terry, and Robert Young as Alec, the son, who grows up, becomes captain of a liner, marries the daughter of the shipping magnate and seeks to remove his parents from the tug which is their livelihood and home. The father lapses into his old alcoholic ways and the son disowns him—but when, in rescuing the son's liner, the father makes an astounding sacrifice, their difficulties are smoothed out.

Marlene Dietrich has stopped all further publicity on the gowns she had made in Paris. Wonder if she's changed her mind about giving up the trousers or if she's merely planning a grand entrance . . . There's a story behind the cancellation (by mutual consent) of Arlene Judge's contract at R-K-O. Arlene was sent to another studio for a picture and refused to do a certain scene. . . . Kleig eyes are making an appearance in Hollywood again. Irene Dunne's got them, so had Jack Dempsey.

To avoid holding up the "Dancing Lady" Company, M-G-M is shooting close-ups of Joan Crawford, whose ankle is too badly swollen to do dancing scenes It's no uncommon practice, y'know, for stars to wear bed-room slippers when making closeups. Jeanette Macdonald often does it, so does Kay Francis.

Ambulance Brigade On Hand At The 'Ex'

Members of the local corps of the St. John Ambulance Brigade are again doing voluntary service at the Exhibition Grounds. Located next to the Manufacturer's Building, the first aid tent is equipped to offer emergency service to sick or injured persons, besides taking care of lost children, until they can be restored to anxious parents. Members of the corps, both men and women, are working in shifts, and maintain a stretcher squad at theg rounds throughout the day. The activities are under the general direction of Divisional Superintendent L. Tomkins. Miss I. Watkins, superintendent has charge of the ladies' detachment.

FUR THIEF SUSPECTS HELD

CHICAGO—Three men, all claiming to be residents of New York, were taken into custody at a Loop hotel to-day by police, who first seized five trucks filled with furs believed to have been taken in a $45,000 fur robbery.

They were seized at the request of New York authorities, who said the stolen furs were being sent to Chicago for disposal.

DIG GRAVES WITH OUR TEETH SAYS VETERAN N.S. BUILDER

Stephen A. Morash, 94, Says Moderns Lack Sane Formula for Living.

LIFE OF TO-DAY TOO FAST

LUNENBURG, N.S., September 15 (C.P.). — The trouble with this modern generation, says Stephen A. Morash, is that it lives too swiftly. Back in the days when he was a young fellow— he's 94 now—they took life more easily.

Not that Lunenburg's oldest resident doesn't believe in hard work. He does. In his 65 years as a shipbuilder he has put in his share of labor. Hard work it has been, too, at times; but always it has been done carefully, without the rush and bustle marking to-day's struggle for existence.

Leisurely shaping the trim lines of a racing yacht on paper; watching them materialize slowly under skilful hands into a swift and graceful creature of wood and canvas—this, Mr. Morash says, is real work—of the sort which leaves the artisan with a tangible feeling of accomplishment, yet exacting none of the mental and physical toll which is the penalty of modern high pressure effort.

And of other modern customs he speaks in the same vein. Take eating, for instance. Most people these days, he declares, don't know how or what to eat. "In many cases, they dig their graves with their teeth," said the veteran builder

His formula for a long life is a simple one: "Hard work, plenty of sleep, moderate eating, and a cheerful outlook on life." And as he nears the century milestone, Mr. Morash is an excellent example of the efficacy of these simple rules.

He is retired now, but age has taken away none of his faculties, and time has impaired none of the skill which produced more than 130 schooners, brigantines, and steamers, not to mention hundreds of smaller inland craft designed in his earlier years.

HIGH TURNIP PRICES

BRANTFORD — Because drought and lice have been having a big season, turnip growers in Western Ontario who were lucky enough to really grow turnips are getting a break. Turnip prices are three times as high as a year ago, being quoted today from 30 to 35 cents a bushel.

The high price does not mean much to most farmers because there is no crop. But it is more than satisfactory to a few others.

9 Women out of 10 Do Not Know How To Use Face Powder

By A Well Known Beauty Specialist

Whatever you do, don't keep dabbing on powder all day. Nothing makes the skin so coarse and dry, and is so likely to cause blackheads and enlarged pores.

But my nose is always shiny, you say. Well, simply blend a little Mousse of Cream with your face powder. It makes the powder stay on all day whatever you are doing. And the Mousse of Cream not only prevents the powder from drying up the skin but actually softens and beautifies it.

Mousse of Cream, this wonderful new face-powder ingredient—is combined by a patent process in Poudre Tokalon. That is what makes Poudre Tokalon so entirely different from ordinary face powders. Not even wind and rain nor perspiration from dancing can affect the fresh, clear, marvellous complexion it gives. Try a box of Poudre Tokalon to-day. If you are not absolutely delighted with the results, every dealer is authorized to refund your money in full.

Simpson Special

Miss E. A. Bogue of Lakefield

Look at men and women who do things. Active. Energetic. Full of health. That's the type who enjoy Kellogg's PEP Bran Flakes.

There's the famous flavor of Pep. Packed with the energy of wheat. Plus enough bran to be mildly laxative.

Buy PEP Bran Flakes from your grocer. Delicious with milk or cream. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

Carrots have a reputation as an appetizer for live stock. Horses relish them greatly.

Lead Warning

CORNWALL, Ont., Sept. 14. (CP)—Believing children were raiding his apple trees Earl Rawlins, 30, of Cornwall last night fired three times with his shotgun toward his orchard, and to-day two boys were in hospital. The boys, Albert Patrois, 12 and Gerald Lanctot, 16, were reported by hospital officials to be only slightly wounded. Rawlins was released on bail on a charge of shooting with intent to maim. The boys denied they had designs on the orchard but were on their way to a lacrosse game.

Try this Recipe for Dinner Tomorrow

HERE is a simple recipe for a delicious custard pie. Serve it to your family for dinner to-night and watch them come back for more!

CUSTARD PIE

1½ cups St. Charles Milk
1½ cups water
4 eggs, well beaten
½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
Unbaked pastry
Few Gratings Nutmeg

Dilute the milk with water and bring just to scalding in a double boiler. (Do not boil). Add sugar and salt to eggs, blend well. Pour the hot milk slowly over the egg mixture, stirring constantly. Cool. Pour into pastry, sprinkled with gratings of nutmeg and place in a rather hot oven to set rim and bake sides and bottom of crust. Then DECREASE the heat and cook at a low temperature until a silver knife inserted in centre comes out clean. The custard must not boil at any time or it will be watery.

Borden's St. Charles Milk is equally delicious in any recipe that calls for milk. 810

GRAIN AND PRODUCE REVIEWS

ONTARIO GRAIN

Approximate prices, track shipping point—Wheat, 60c to 62c; oats 30c to 31c; barley, 40c to 42c; buckwheat, 40c to 42c.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

The wholesale butter market had a slightly weaker undertone on the Montreal dairy and produce market yesterday, with prices of No. 1 grade, in carlots or less, easing to 18½c to 18¾c a pound, ¼c less than Wednesday. It is hoped that this week's exports, which are expected to number between 10,000 and 15,000 boxes, as compared with 2,700 boxes last week, will be followed by heavier quantities, so that surplus in the country can be cut down materially before the end of navigation. Receipts on the local market were 22 boxes.

The cheese market remained unchanged, with average quotations holding at 10¾c a pound for Ontario colored, 10¾ for Ontario white, 10½c to 10⅝c for Quebec colored, and 10¼c to 10⅜c for Quebec white. Arrivals amounted to 1,153 boxes. Indications so far this week are that the week's exports will be fairly heavy. Since the beginning of the week around 36,000 boxes have been shipped.

The egg market firmed slightly. Graded shipments in carlots or less of Ontarios brought 23c a dozen for extras, 17c to 18c for firsts, and 13½c to 14c for seconds, while Westerns held at fractionally lower levels. Offerings were 369 cases.

New Quebec potatoes continued to bring 75c to 80c per 90-pound bag.

CHICAGO GRAIN

Despite severe downturns in grain prices at Winnipeg, the Chicago grain market showed exceptional strength at times yesterday and wheat finished with gains.

Fresh upturns in Chicago grain values, 2½ cents maximum for wheat, were coupled with assertions in some quarters that agricultural products had definitely turned the corner on the way to permanently higher prices. It was also contended that wheat selling here because of removal of an artificial fixed minimum on wheat prices at Winnipeg, was most illogical, especially in view of Washington measures for 23 per cent. advance in values of agricultural commodities to bring back the 1914 level.

Wheat closed nervous, ⅛c to ¼c above Wednesday's finish, corn unchanged to ¼c lower, oats unchanged to ⅜c up, and provisions at 10c to 35c advance.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, September 15. — Following the lifting of price restrictions on the Grain Exchange yesterday, wheat futures supported by a good export business held quite steady, but as liberal offerings surged into the pit in the last hour, prices broke to close 3¼c to 2⅞c lower.

An emergency meeting of the Exchange, held shortly after the start of trading, resulted in members voting for removal of price restrictions in force since August 15.

Steadiness prevailed for a time with operations quite active, but near the start of the last hour the offerings became liberal and prices went down below the former "pegged" price. October delivery closed at 66⅞c, December at 68⅜c, and May at 74⅛c.

Considerable wheat was absorbed during the first hour with exporters active in the pit. Sales of Canadian wheat for shipment abroad was in excess of 1,000,000 bushels. This offered good support to the market early in the day, but later selling proved too much for the buying power.

Liverpool showed firmness near the start, but eased in late trading to close ½d to ⅝d lower. Buenos Aires remained strong and Argentine crop prospects show no improvement.

Export business reflected in the cash wheat market, but only odd lots came out at the prevailing spreads. More activity was seen in the coarse grain pit than for several days, with oats and barley prices breaking 3c to 2c. Flax and rye held comparatively steady.

REVENGE STIRS PRISON BREAK

Captured Convicts Claim Killing of Pal by Guard Angered Them.

USED OIL TO FOOL HOUNDS

BATON ROUGE, La., Sept. 15.—(CP)—Revenge as well as a desire for liberty prompted the bloody riot at the Louisiana Angola penal farm Sunday which has caused seven deaths, three recaptured survivors said here today.

They told penitentiary and parish officers they were angered because a convict guard had shot down and killed "without provocation" a fellow prisoner, Hunt Watson, a few ago. The guard, Arnold Davis, was killed in the Sunday riot.

The prisoners, held in parish jail here, were captured in Voyelles parish Wednesday a few hours before three other escaped convicts were killed by pursuing Negro trusty guards. Five others, still at large, were hunted today.

The three, charged with murder in the break, are Bill Bryant, 26, of Texarkana, Tex.; James C. Bird, 25, of Madisonville, La., and Jimmy Dear, 28, of Bunkie, La., all long-termers.

Dear and Bird said the break had been planned for weeks. They said guns were smuggled into the penal farm through devious channels, and that they also obtained mustard oil and rubbed it on their feet to throw bloodhounds off the trail.

ARTICLES WANTED.

In many Peterborough homes, there is a need for certain articles that will help to make life more comfortable for people who have little work and no money for extras even if they are necessities. The Examiner has been asked to get a small cook stove for an old lady who has no means of heating her house or cooking her food. And another house where there is a very large family and a sick baby is much in need of a baby carriage. Please telephone and we will call, if either of these is available.

A WINNER

A little close figuring won Walter Thorn, Route 11, Peterborough, an Atlas tire and tube. During a visit to the Canadian National Exhibition Mr. Thorn put in his estimate on the mileage of a sealed speedometer registering from a wheel electrically driven 13 hours a day for 14 days. Thorn's estimate was 952.6 miles while the correct mileage was 952.65.

TANKAGE HOGS GO TO WASTE

Inadequate Facilities Force Gov't to Dump Half of Purchased Meat Into Mississippi.

3,000,000 PIGS BOUGHT.

ST. LOUIS September 15 (CP) - With tankage facilities inadequate to handle the multitude of small pigs which have been bought by the government on a premium market at the National Stock Yards it has been found necessary to discard more than half of the meat purchased, dumping it into the Mississippi River.

It was estimated that U.S. Government purchases here to date total almost $800,000, and that of this amount nearly $320 000 has been expended for meat which neither will be ground into fertilizer to aid the crop growers, nor find its way to dinner tables as food.

The government contemplated the purchase of 4,000,000 pigs, and more than 3,000 000 of them already have been bought. Nevertheless, East Side commission houses are being besieged with requests for shipping permits, and P. A. Powell, secretary of the Exchange, estimates the applications exceed the permits possible of issuance by a ratio of 10 to one.

POLICE TO SAVE STILL.

GUELPH. — When Royal Canadian Mounted Police surveyed the huge still they had discovered when they raided a barn tenanted by Herbert Hewer, Puslinch Township, they were at a loss to know what to do about it. The complicated construction reached from the cellar to the roof of the building. Finally it was decided the job was one for plumbers, and two were imported from London to remove the taps, valves, coils, and other mechanism.

Polish Balloonists Safe In Quebec

The two intrepid Polish balloonists who started from Chicago in the Gordon Bennett international balloon race came to a landing in the Quebec bush and trudged 90 miles through rough country with only a pocket compass to guide them into the settlement of Lemieux. At the LEFT is seen Capt. Franciszek Heynik at the spot where the adventurers first came across the railway line which told them they were near civilization. With their balloon hung up in a tree in the Laurentian woods, they staggered into Lemieux five days after their landing. The trip gives them unofficial victory in the trophy race. The photo at the LEFT was taken by Lieut. Z. Burzynski. The two balloonists are shown at the RIGHT as they arrived by train in Quebec city.

Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors conducted by Anne Wilcox

In families where discussions tend to become heated, they are apt to make rifts in the desired harmony. Sometimes this is because of a radical difference of opinions about certain things which are apart from temperamental congeniality.

* * * * *

It has nothing to do with one's affection for another, whether there is agreement about a book, a play, a musical composition or how it is interpreted by the musician or orchestra.

* * * * *

This is, of course, when nothing personal is involved, such as a friend being the artist, or musician, playwright or author, but when the work, impressions, technique, etc., are being discussed impersonally and on merit, as viewed by those entering into the discussion.

* * * * *

When discussions have a trend toward dissension, and hard feelings, there are two wise courses to pursue.. One is to avoid them.

* * * * *

Do not express an opinion, but remain silent should an argumentative subject be brought up. Silence is non-commital. Your thoughts and conclusions can remain uninfluenced.

* * * * *

They are yours to keep if you wish. The other course to pursue is to tactfully turn the subject. In both instances the danger of having dispositions ruffled is averted.

* * * * *

It is interesting to discover how gracefully and quickly a subject can be tactfully turned by one who has schooled herself to do it. The work is worth the effort.

* * * * *

It stands a person in good stead, not alone in the family circle, but in business and society.

* * * * *

When discussions arise about such things as the running of the home and such vital matters as disciplining of children, expenditure of income, changes of residence, etc., discussions assume wider significance and proportions.

* * * * *

These are matters for agreement or compromise. There has to be a margin of giving in to others' points of view in every family where individuality is respected and happiness exists.

* * * * *

Without this willingness to agreeably merge one's ideas with another's at times, smooth waters of congeniality will become tumultuous.

* * * * *

When there is a principle of right and wrong involved a stand to turn the tide the right way is inevitable for permanent peace.

* * * * *

For the most part, however, disrupting discussions are over matters of taste, of opinions, and determinations to carry points of minor importance.

* * * * *

In these things there should be mutual concessions. No one person should be expected to always give in to another.

JUST AMONG US GIRLS

Obituary

MRS. MARY ANN VICTOR.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Mary Ann Victor was held from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Walter Ridley, 432 George street south, on Thursday afternoon at 2 p.m. Services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Perrin, a personal friend of the deceased.

Mrs. Victor passed away on Monday night and although in failing health for some time, death came unexpectedly. Predeceased by her husband, the late Frank Victor, she leaves to mourn four daughters, Mrs. Sophie Riley of England, Mrs. Caroline Ridley of this city, Mrs. Flora Hedworth of Toronto and Mrs. Jessie Colbeck of Jersey Islands; three sons, James of Kitchener, Peter of U. S. A. and John of Peterborough.

She had been a resident of Peterborough for the past 22 years and made a host of friends by her kindly disposition and charitable acts.

Pallbearers were Victor Ridley, T. Park, M. Cooper, F. James, N. Gordon and Mr. Hull.

Interment was made in Little Lake cemetery.

The plaid wool scarf seems likely to largely replace fur trimming for the children's coats for 1933-34 winter season.

HOME AND SCHOOL ASSOCIATION NEWS

Queen Alexandra Home and School Association held their opening meeting of the school year in the kindergarten room Monday night with a good attendance.

A pleasing vocal duet was given by Archie and Gwen Jarvis accompanied on the guitar by Ford Jarvis.

Plans were made to have entrance certificates presented on Monday, Sept. 25.

Mothers of kindergarten and primer classes will be invited to the school some afternoon soon for social half hour when an opportunity will be provided to meet the teachers of these grades. The audience was then shown 100 beautifully-colored slides which took them on a trip across Canada, starting at St. John and Halifax, touching main points of interest in each province and finishing with beautiful Victoria, B.C., a coastal steamer and sunset on the Pacific. Mr. Dearborn very efficiently operated the lantern providing a most entertaining and instructive half hour. The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR CENTRAL PRESS
By E. V. SHEPARD

OPENING 3-BID

In 1926 a few of us taught the opening 3-bid at contract, while the rest of the world played auction. We found two objections to the 3-bid: First, it could be employed properly so seldom that it seemed rather useless to cumber the game with a special meaning to the bid; second, players had advanced only a little way in the new game and they misused the bid. We dropped the 3-bid for some years. Last year P. H. Sims revived the bid. Renewed interest is shown in this declaration, so that it is well to understand what it should mean, even if it cannot be employed more frequently than it could seven years ago.

An opening bid of 3 of any suit is an order to partner from a player with overwhelming strength, as follows: "Partner, I have so strong a trump suit that I require no support there. My whole hand gives me a spread for game, without aid from you. Under no circumstances attempt to change the make. If you lack an Ace, bid 3-No Trumps. Leave the rest to me. If you have an Ace, regardless of the number in the Ace suit, bid that suit. I want to see if a slam can be made. In case you hold more than one Ace, name your Ace suits in regular rotation, commencing with the lowest one. If you have no Ace in case I show two suits, choose between them."

The instructions to partner are so definite that they cannot well be misunderstood. The mistakes in using the bid are made by the opening bidder. Here again there should be no mistake, if the opening bidder will use his head. His orders from headquarters should be as follows:

1. Never bid 3 unless you can pull trumps even if partner has none;
2. Never bid 3 unless you can stand being ruffed, at least once;
3. Never bid 3 if you need even one trick in dummy to go game;
4. Never bid 3 unless at least a small slam can be made in case partner holds all missing Aces.

Cold facts confront the 3-bidder who knows what he is about. To avoid losing at least one trump trick the declarer requires the following tops to his trump suit; either 5 or 6 trumps, A-K-Q-J; 7 trumps, A-K-Q. The K-Q-J-10 will not answer as tops for 5 trumps, unless very high side cards are held in all suits, but the A-K-Q-J are not absolutely required for 6 trumps, as 2 trump tricks can be spared with 6 trumps.

Before tomorrow, think which of these hands should be opened with 3-bids.

BE BEAUTIFUL

By GLADYS GLAD.

The lovely Joan Crawford, who always manages to look charmingly cool and fresh even on the most torrid of days, is an ardent shower fan. Joan usually takes at least four showers a day. She takes one when she rises in the morning; another after breakfast; a third before dinner, and a fourth before retiring at night. And, if the day is particularly warm and sultry, she throws in a few more for good measure.

Gladys Glad

Perhaps that's one of the reasons that the exotic Crawford lass always appears so crisply cool. For before a gal can build up an appearance of cool freshness, she's got to try to make herself FEEL as cool as possible.

What most girls think of first when they feel hot and tired is a stimulating cold shower or plunge. But personally, I think that a real hot bath, followed by an alcohol rub, is infinitely more cooling and refreshing than all the cold showers in the world. For cold baths are stimulating and energizing, and therefore likely to increase perspiration, while hot baths have a soothing, relaxing effect on the body. And the alcohol used after such a soothing bath freshens the body no end, as the quick evaporation leaves the skin feeling cool and clean.

If you begin to feel hot, sticky and fatigued at any time during the day, fill the good old tub with clear, warm water and step into it. Relax in the warmth of the water for a few minutes. Then using a mild soap, cleanse your entire body. You will need a soap, of course, to remove any dirt, oil and salts of perspiration from your body. Then rinse yourself well, step from the tub, and without too much energy, pat your skin dry.

Next, smooth a generous amount of rubbing alcohol over your entire body with a pad of cotton, and pat it briskly into your skin. If you prefer a more fragrant solution, you may make one of a pint of rubbing alcohol, an ounce of violet ammonia, half an ounce of spirits of camphor and half an ounce of rose water. If this lotion is patted on your body after the warm bath, it will cool your skin most deliciously, and will leave your entire body fresh, clean and fragrant.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Manicure.

Dot: Of course you can give yourself an excellent manicure, even if you've never tried it yourself before. Full instructions are contained in my article on "Care of the Hands and Nails."

Reducing.

Dot: I am not in favor of the taking of questionable salts or medicines internally for reducing purposes. The best way to reduce, in my opinion, is by diet and exercise.

McClary Furnace Offers Greatest Improvement in Years

Toronto, Ontario: News has spread concerning a new development in home heating — the McClary Furnace that moistens, cleanses and heats the air. It answers the demands of scientists and doctors that dry heat be taken from the home, that the air in the home be filtered and cleaned of dust and impurities.

Dry Heat Banished

The McClary substitutes clean, pure, moistened air for the dangerous dry heat you get from an ordinary furnace and heating system. The McClary furnace cleans as it moistens as it heats. Furniture will not dry out and crack; walls will not be streaked with dust; draperies will stay clean and last longer; illness from colds and sore throats (caused mostly by dangerous dry heat) will be banished; dusting and house work of that nature is greatly reduced. All the evils of dry heat will disappear when you install the McClary.

System Very Simple

The air is first filtered — withdrawn from all the rooms of the house and passed through web-like filters which are treated with a substance that effectively removes every particle of dirt, dust and pollen.

Moistened Automatically

The filtered air then passes into the furnace for heating. Here the McClary Automatic Drip Humidifier performs the vitally important work of moistening the air while it is being heated. The ingenious drip pan affords a quick evaporation — while the flow of water is controlled, regulated and guarded by an automatic thermostat that requires absolutely no attention.

Buy Cheap Coal if You Want

One other feature of this McClary Furnace must be mentioned. Because of the exclusive feature — the McClary Venti-Blast Ring — you can burn any kind or grade of coal you want. The McClary will burn every pound of it economically. Super-heated air is blasted over the top of the fire-bed from the Venti-Blast Ring. It ignites all combustible gases, allowing no valuable heat units to pass up the chimney.

See Your Furnace Dealer

Don't delay inspecting this new development. If you decide to install a McClary soon, you can save many dollars. See your McClary dealer. He will make a thorough survey of your heating system with recommendations and estimates.

"Gossip and Such"

THE SPORT WRITER, IT seems, may get a break, at last. He may be forced to move to Hollywood to keep in touch with the trend of things athletic. Get that "forced"?

* * *

NO KIDDING. AT THE moment there appears to be more important athletic figures in Los Angeles and its movie suburb than in any other city on the continent. And more are constantly popping off trains and airplanes. The talkies have called them.

* * *

THE INVASION OF SPORT headliners began with the advent of Johnny Weismuller in the cinema city. Other sport figures such as Jack Dempsey, Babe Ruth, Jim Thorpe, Charley Paddock and the like had made visits to Hollywood for picture purposes, but there was no such concentrated rush as has been going on since Weismuller switched from swimming pool to prop tree tops.

* * *

WEISSMULLER WAS SOON followed by Clarence (Buster) Crabbe and Helen Madison, also champion swimmers. Eleanor Holm is still another aquatic star who gravitated to studioland, as the screen mag scribblers call it.

* * *

THEN CAME JACK DEMPsey, again, with Primo Carnera and Max Baer, the Nos. 1 and 2 men of the heavyweight boxing business, to make a picture about prize fighters.

* * *

AND NOW THE SITUATION may become serious for Maxie and Primo may like it in Hollywood. Reports are that they ought to since the femme film fans are said to be switching their sighs from the effete, suave type to the bruising hemen, personified by Baer and Carnera.

* * *

BAER, SAY SOME FILM observers, may revolutionize the movie hero business. He is already extremely popular with the line the ringsides and their sisters, who patronize the talkies, may go for Maxie's brawny good looks just as wholeheartedly.

* * *

ONE SHUDDERS AT THE prospect of Baer becoming a famed film star. Not that Max can't act—they say he does surprisingly well for one so unschooled in acting as Baer was when he arrived in the studios. The chill comes when one considers the possibility of Max, the film hero, deciding that he cannot afford to risk his valuable good looks anymore being Max the fighting man.

* * *

IN THAT EVENT BAER might not fight Carnera, after all, and then sport would lose its biggest heavyweight attraction. But that can hardly happen since a victory over Primo would make Max a greater movie hero than ever.

Sam Clarke Trophy Not Challenge Cup

HASTINGS, Sept. 15 (Examiner Correspondence).—The trustees of the Sam Clarke Cup have ruled that this trophy is not a challenge cup. The only ones entitled to play for it are the winners of the Grafton-Colborne play-off and the winners of the West Northumberland League.

Hastings and Brighton had played two games; Brighton winning one and the other ended in a tie. This latest decision of the trustees will leave these two teams out.

"SILENT SANDY" LOSES TO W. LITTLE, 2 AND 1, AFTER CLOSE STRUGGLE

Western Star Combines Steadiness With Brilliant Play for Golf Win.

RAINS MOST OF DAY.

Little to Meet Dunlap and Marston Tangles With Munger in Semi-finals.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 15.—(CP)—Sandy Somerville was just a spectator at the United States golf title-tourney today and the tall championship cup he held in Canada a year had been returned to its native haunt.

What had already come to be known as the tournament of upsets was delivered its crowning blow yesterday when William Lawson Little, Jr., a 25-year-old dark horse from San Francisco, dethroned the titleholder and favorite son of London, Ont., by a two-and-one margin.

Sandy could not get on top of his game during the day rain fell almost throughout to turn fairways into veritable marshes, traps into soup-bowls and greens into tracky surfaces. He was just out-steadied in a dog-fight.

With the subtraction of Canada's star, only one of goldom's old guard was left. Max Marston, 41 and an ex-champion from Philadelphia, survived the sudden surge of up-and-coming stars after the toughest sort of fight. Sydney Noyes Jr., of New York, recently of Yale, carried him to the 36th green before fading.

Youth Holds Sway

Carrying the challenge of youth with Little into the semi-finals today were Jack Munger, Dallas 16-year-old, and George T. Dunlap, Jr., of New York, 24 and long known in national tourney play. Munger upset Jack Westland, seasoned Chicagoan, by three-and-one in Thursday's quarter finals, while Dunlap ran away from Eddie Held, New Yorker who once wore the Canadian amateur crown, by six-and-five.

The youth who got Sandy two down in the first three holes as the Canadian fought with a cantankerous driver, and never let him get in front, is not unknown. Entrant in the last five national amateurs, he qualified in four. In 1929 he whipped Johnny Goodman of Omaha after the now U. S. open champion had toppled the great Bobby Jones. Little in turn was dropped from the quarter final round by Francis Ouimet. The next year he beat the veteran Dr. O. F. Willing in the first round, then faltered before Gene Homans in the next. Last year Johnny Fischer trounced him in the opening round.

Failed In Finches

When Little had Sandy two down at the end of the morning 18 there was none to bet the determined Londoner couldn't catch up in the afternoon. But Sandy's hooking driver and a putter that failed in the pinches kept letting him down.

Somerville hooked his opening tee shot and sent his next over the green. He was then 3 down and to get these back he had to resort to a string of birdies. These came at the third, fifth and seventh.

But evidently it was not in the cards for the Canadian to win. Little won the eighth with a 3 and, although he bashed the ninth rather badly, he nevertheless won the hole. He was in the rough with a bad hook from the tee, came over the tree tops into a bunker with his second, played out to within seven feet of the cup and sank the putt for a 4.

Ends At 17th Hole

Whole working hard and earnestly after that Somerville could not quite catch up. When he had a chance his clubs failed him. He had a chance to profit at the twelfth when his opponent overplayed the green but instead of doing so he fell short. Little missed a short putt at the fifteenth, but won the fifteenth when Somerville, putting desperately, went over and missed coming back. The winning of the sixteenth by Somerville only delayed the inevitable.

The match came to a conclusion with a par half at the 17th. Little plays Dunlap today while Marston meets Munger.

GOLF FACTS NOT THEORIES!

By ALEX. J. MORRISON

Number 97

ALEX MORRISON says:

Every player should check up on his posture.

Every so often he'll find that he has fallen into the habit of bending over too much toward the ball.

This direct forward bending of the body, next to allowing the head to turn, is the worst fault a player can have. It actually prevents smoothness or power in the the movements of any part of the body.

Standing almost fully erect will afford an immediate relief from tension and allow the entire body, arms and hands, to move with ease.

Don't be afraid of not getting down to the ball. Just stand up straight and the resulting freedom will enable your club to swing under the ball.

CUBS RALLY IN NINTH TO WIN 4-3 VICTORY FROM NEW YORKERS

Chicago Hitting After Errors Combined With Bill Terry's "Boner" Figures Prominently in Bruin's Victory.

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr., A.P. Sports Writer.)

Whether or not they succeed in their uphill struggle to overtake New York Giants in the National League pennant race — and their chances look good to-day after two straight victories over the league leaders—Chicago Cubs can at least point with pride to their record at Wrigley Field this season.

Whn they put on a ninth inning uprising yesterday and took their second rainy day decision from the Giants 4-2, the Cubs lifted their home game percentage to .765. They have won 52 and lost only 16 so far.

The Giants, still 5½ games ahead, have won only 46 and lost 22 at home for a .676 percentage, but they have been considerably more successful than Chicago on the road, winning 37 games and losing 31, where the Cubs have turned in 28 victories and 45 defeats on foreign grounds.

More Games at Home.

The rest of the program seems to be a test between the Giants' consistency and the Cubs' ability to keep on winning at home. New York has nine more road games, including the double-headers at Chicago to-day and to-morrow, and seven at home, while the Cubs play only two of their remaining 13 games away from home.

The weather p'ayed a big part in yesterday's contest as the combination of chilled fingers and a slippery ball made fielding difficult. But despite these handicaps the teams managed to pull off three double plays. The final decision, however, was reached on Cub hitting after errors on both sides and a "boner" by Manager Bill Terry of the Giants had figured prominently in the scoring that sent them into the ninth inning with New York leading 3-2.

Riggs Stephenson opened the last frame with a single. Babe Herman sent the "old hoss" to third with a pinch double and then young Adolph Camilli, whose hitting has won two games for Chicago in his first week in the big league, was purposely passed.

Gabby Hartnett squared off against big Fred Fitzsimmons and smashed a hit into centre field to bring in the winning runs.

While the National League race was closing up, Washington Senators increased their lead in the American to nine games over the Yankees. Coming from behind in the last inning, the Senators landed on Vic Sorrell for three hits and coupled them with a pair of walks to score three runs and defeat Detroit 4-3. The Yankees' game with Cleveland was rained out as was the St. Louis-Philadelphia contest.

Phils Win 2-1.

Like the pace-setters in their league, the lowly Phillies and the Cincinnati Reds started out to p'ay a double-header and got through only one game, the Phils winning 2-1. The Phils got to Paul Derringer for two runs in the fifth, and that was enough to give the Cincinnati flinger his 26th defeat of the year as rain halted the contest after seven innings, and wiped out the second game completely.

The Boston-Pittsburgh and the Brooklyn-St. Louis games never even got started.

Girls' Softball Finalists' Averages

Batting and fielding averages for the Keene and Westclox girls' softball teams who battled through a seven game series for the championship of the Ladies' City and District Loop this year, to finally wind up in a win for the Westclox have been compiled and show Grace Hawkes, second sacker for the Clockmakers leading both teams in the clout column with an average of .462. Dot Gainor, classy catcher for the Keene team is tied for second place with Barbara Blade, both of whom battered the horsehide for an average of .333.

In fielding statistics Dot Gainor again holds the spotlight with a perfect card of 1.000, having fifty putouts no assists and no errors in the six complete games. Dot Merrett, left fielder for the Westclox, also fielded perfectly, snaring seven flies without a slip. The locals had quite an edge on the Rurals in the fielding as nine of the eleven players who took part in the finals turned in averages over the .800 mark, while the Keene Girls had just four players who topped this figure. Keene however as a team eclipsed their opponents from the hitting angle as eight out of the nine players clouted their way to an average of over .200. Two of these, Verna Dixon who played in left and Grace McCarthy in centre hit .320 and 310 respectively.

BISONS QUALIFY FOR THE FINALS

Sweep Series With Baltimore Birds by Taking Final Game 3 to 0.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Sept. 15. —(C.P.)—With the play-off series safely in their bat bags by virtue of three stranght victories over the Baltimore Orioles, Buffalo's Bisons face a rest period before going in to the final competition against either Newark or Rochester for International League supremacy and the right to meet the American Association winner in the "Little World Series."

Unfavorable weather conditions may prolong the present Rochester-Newark series until Sunday, or later.

More than 9,000 fans braved the cold last night to see Southpaw Charley Perkins snuff out the last spark of fight left in the Orioles. Perkins registered his third triumph in a week and gave the Bisons their 10th victory in 11 starts.

Baltimore was outhit, outfielded and outpitched in all three games with the Bisons. Earl Mattingly, the Orioles' last starrring pitcher, gave way early and although Harry Smythe, who replaced him, hurled effectively the rest of the route, he could not offset the dramatic performance of Perkins.

MULLEAVY FAILS TO HIT THURSDAY

Baltimore Hurling Subdues Buffalo Slugger in Final Game of Series.

(By The Canadian Press)

Buffalo Bisons to-day rested in the final brackets of the International League play-off, but their powerful slugger, Greg Mulleavy, was completely tamed by Baltimore hurlers in the final game of the series. Mulleavy who had pounded the pill for a fat average of .777 in the first two games of the series against the Orioles, failed to get a hit in five trips to the plate yesterday. As a result his mark dropped to .500. He held a commanding lead, however, over the regulars although Earl Hattingly, Baltimore pitcher, got a hit in his only visit to the plate for a perfect average.

BOWLMEN POUND TWO TRENTON PITCHERS FOR EIGHTEEN HITS AND 14 TO 4 O.A.S.A. VICTORY

Sturgeon Relieves Currie on Visitors' Mound When Latter is Chased From Fielding for Disputing Close Decision With Base Umps—Holds Homesters to 7 Hits, Fanning Two and Walking One.

Going on a hitting spree to pound two pitchers for eighteen hits, Sugar Bowl took the first game of their third O.A.S.A. round series in Trenton, 14 to 4, yesterday. The small crowd kept a continuous uproar going that spread to the players and made it a bitter fight throughout, despite the one-sided score. The return game will be played Monday evening at five in Stevenson Park.

Ross Currie, on the mound for the Bowlmen, was chased out of the game by the base-umpire, a Trenton man, to start the last half of the second inning for disputing a close decision, and Sturgeon had to return to the slab after a tough game two nights before. He held the homesters to seven hits in a good performance, fanning two and walking just one. He gets credit for the victory, the score being tied at 2-all at the time.

Chambers started for Trenton Riverside Dairy but was hammered out in the third after giving seven hits, six runs and a walk, while fanning two. Cochrane took over the job but was combed for eleven hits as he walked four and struck out two, till he retired with two out in the ninth. Langdon got the last man out. Trenton pitchers' support was not up to the mark of that afforded the Dormer hurlers.

Fine Fielding

H. Dormer, W. Calladine and Russell turned in some fine fielding for the victors, the others also going good. For the losers, Chambers at short and McCue on second went best, while Chase pulled down a couple of smart catches in left.

Smith and Pat Calladine led the local hitters with three apiece in six times. Dormer, Playford, W. Calladine and Weir came through with two each, and every man on the team had at least one. Weese got a triple, Bill Calladine two doubles, and Pat one. For Trenton, Steinberg, Smith and K. Chambers smacked out two hits each. Scarlett got a homer, and Smith, Steinberg and Chase doubles.

Homer in First

The homesters got two runs at the start on a single and homer to deep left. The Bowlmen got them back in the second on singles by P. Calladine and Currie, and a double by W. Calladine. They ran in four in the third on singles by Smith, P. Calladine and Sturgeon, a walk, wild pitch, and double by Bill Calladine. In the fourth Trenton scored a run, Steinberg doubling, going up one on an error and coming in on Chase's double.

An error, wild pitch, singles by Playford and Weir, and a giant triple by Weese scored three for the Bowl in the fifth. The Dairy boys were blanked till the ninth, while the visitors ran in another pair in the eighth on two miscues, Smith's single and Pat Calladine's double. In the Bowl's half of the ninth they shoved across three on a boot and hits by Weir, Russell, Dormer and Playford. The other side got a marker in their half, Miller walking, racing to third on K. Chamber's single and tallying on an out.

TIGERS SCORE EASY VICTORY

Hamilton Team Outplays Mount Dennis Aggregation in O.A.L.A. Finals

FINAL COUNT 13-5.

HAMILTON, September 15 (C.P.)—Manager Ernie Rohmer had his Hamilton Tigers within 60 minutes of the Ontario amateur lacrosse title to-day, following their decisive 13-5 victory over Mount Dennis in the first game of the finals here last night.

A repeat of their win in the return game at Toronto on Saturday will send the Bengals Westward in quest of the Mann Cup and nations' honors with the triple task of eliminating the Thunder Bay champions, Manitoba and Alberta, before they are eligible for the finals at Vancouver.

It took the yellow and black three periods of continual pounding last night before they could break through the dogged defence of Mount Dennis and score goals with any degree of consistency.

Gaining momentum as the game progressed the Rohmermen — including three the Rohmer brothers—smashed the stubborn barrier which had kept them out, and in the last period slipped in six goals that clinched matters.

BOWLING NOTES

(By Herb Martin)

A large number of local bowlers took in the annual visit to Port Hope last night. This is just one of the many friendly visits that have been established between these two towns. The boys were all mixed up one with another, and each team played three six-end games.

To-night will be an all-fruit night. There are not many more Friday nights left to bowl, so come on out and help yourself cash in on the many prizes.

New York Rangers Train At Montreal

MONTREAL, September 15 (C.P.)—New York Rangers, Stanley Cup holders, will do their pre-season training on Montreal ice, it was reported here to-day.

Lester Patrick, coach of the Rangers, has moved his family from the Pacific Coast, and will make his home here, it was further learned. He will put his team through their pre-season drills at the Forum, where the Montreal Maroons are also scheduled to engage in preliminary practice. Last year the Rangers trained at Lake Placid, New York.

Montreal Canadiens will train at Kingston, Ont., while the Leafs have not yet selected their pre-season headquarters.

Mudder Runs First To Save Attachment

CINCINNATI, Sept. 15. (AP) Abe Furst is a horse whose races have been many, but slow. To aging O. G. Brown, Abe was a last hope.

City Sheriff James Burgess appeared yesterday at Brown's home.

"Mr. Brown" said Burgess, "We have an attachment on Abe and we are serving it on you. We must take the horse." The levy was $160.

Brown looked despairingly at the sky, which was gray with rain. "Won't you let him run to-day?" he entreated. "I'm sure he'll win."

The sheriff relented. Abe Furst ran.

Through the mud clashed Abe Furst, a winner. The debt was paid.

SPORTS DAY BY DAY

Baseball—Softball—Lacrosse Soccer—Wrestling, and Others

(By C. J. P.)

Tomorrow afternoon winds up the harness horse racing at the Exhibition. Four hundred bucks are up, two C's to each race, a 2.26 pace and 2.18 one. A number of classy pacers and trotters from all over are here to try and grab off a chunk of that prize dough, and when the boys are booting the broncs around for real potatoes, fans in the grandstand see some mighty smart racing. Those who don't know so much about the game pin their attention on the hoss itself and forget it's the guy with the reins that's doing the thinking. When they're bunched on the turn in a hot race, that's the time you see whether a man is a racer or just another driver.

• • • • • •

If the Sugar Bowl softballers can just keep up their phenomenal hitting since they struck the playoffs, they should take Trenton in two straight games and go in against Kingston in the fourth round of the O.A.S.A. playdowns. Already they've pounded Lindsay and Oshawa out of the running and last night in Trenton they smeared two hurlers for eighteen bingles to win 14-4. They play back here Monday e'en at five bells in Stevenson Park, and should draw a big crowd of fans.

• • • • • •

The O.A.S.A. hasn't been giving the local team a decent break at all. In the first place, Sugar Bowl has had to tackle Lindsay, Oshawa and Trenton, while Kingston has sat back with a bye, not having to play a team in the playdowns yet. And then the local management wanted the return Trenton game here Saturday when they might get a good gate, but Trenton refused to come before Monday and Rowden of Oshawa, the convenor, has backed them up after first saying it would be here Saturday. A few of the Trenton players have to work, it seems, Saturday. Well, don't they work Monday, too? And how about many of the Bowl players having to get off work to go to Trenton yesterday? Yeah, there's something odious in Oshawa!

• • • • • •

Currie spoke out of turn early in yesterday's game and got the gate—without even one warning. However, Lefty Sturgeon—the old Iron Man himself—went in there and flung a good game. He had plenty of solid hitting back of him to pile up a substantial lead, and some right smart fielding. The whole local infield clicked well, and the outfield didn't muff anything that came their way. When Currie was thumbed off, Sturgeon came in from right, Russell took his place and Weese, who had been acting manager in George Dormer's absence, went out to second. He didn't get a chance in eight innings. And Russell roamed up and down the shore of the lake—where the diamond is—to pick off three nice ones and double a man once at third. As Pat Calladine said: "Russell covered the waterfront!"

• • • • • •

They may not get the fans turning out in five or six-hundred lots down that way, but those who come sure do work the old larnyx overtime. They were rabid as rasslin' fans and rode the local players mercilessly throughout. However, that's part of the game and the visiting players get a kick out of it. They had cooled down considerably getting around toward the ninth inning. Our own opinion is that Sugar Bowl can trounce the conquerors of Belleville—and incidentally Trenton had Scarlett, Chambers and Smith of the Belleville Nats on their lineup—here Monday. They will if they just keep digging in and pounding that old pellet into a pulp.

• • • • • •

Quite a flock of lovers of the ponies watched two outsiders cop first prizes in yesterday's races at the Ex. In the stake trot for five hundred berries, Gord Knight's Black Patch from Blenheim won three heats in a row and $350, a Weston horse running second and a Hamilton one showing. In the 2.26 class, purse $200, Jim Wellwood's Guy Pointer of Merlin, kicked up the dirt to get in ahead of June Peters, and Peter W., two local hosses. There were eleven in this run, and six in the stage race.

• • • • • •

Ken Sine, manager of the Dinty's' Inn lacrosse team, told us this a.m. that he'd give us some of the lowdown on the recent Inter-County League playoffs in answer to that letter we ran from Cobourg yesterday. "They make it sound as if we had done somthing unfair to win it" he said, "but I'll write you out the real facts first chance I get and you can publish our side of it. You'll have it in a day or two." We suppose there is something to be said for both clubs—that's the way these affairs generally are.

Public school boys are booting the pigskin around in practice these days, getting ready for the soccer series in the annual championship play. King Edward School holds the Alex Kay Trophy at present, and this piece of silverware is emblematic of the school title. Play will be starting in another week or so. Once again we'd like to draw the sport loving public's attention to what the public schools are doing in developing athletes. Hockey, baseball and soccer—all of them under the fine coaching of the teachers—gets the kids started in these games and started with the proper principles of sportsmanship drilled into them.

NEW CHEMICAL DISCOVERY CUTS THREE YEARS FROM WINE AGING

Believed Process May Cut Cost of Beverage Manufacture Considerably.

NAMED MALEIC ACID.

(By Howard W. Blakeslee, A. P. Science Editor

CHICAGO, Sept. 14. — (CP) — Chemistry today announced a substitute for the cobwebs of time which cuts three years off the period now required to age good wine.

The flavor of apple juice, maleic acid, does it, cheaply, completely and with nature's own smooth processes according to Dr. R. C. Downs of New York in a report to the American Chemical Society.

He said the ageing time can be cut so much that the cost of wine making will be greatly reduced. The process arises from some surprising results described by Dr. Downs that come from passing a current of air over benzene and naphtalene.

The result is maleic acid, a chemical curiosity prior to discovery of this method of synthesis. From maleic acid so made have come a small host of new chemical possibilities, including the quick ageing of wine.

Maleic acid, which is familiar in apples, is one of the new derivatives For the wine a little calcium is added making what the chemists call calcium malate.

Valuable By-Product

Another by product of the maleic acid is succinic acid, a great purifier. This acid is a solid. One tiny tablet of it weighing but six milligrams, said Dr Downs, would be sufficient to disinfect a canteen full of water in a few minutes. So that a one ounce bottle of this acid would disinfect enough water a day for an entire company of soldiers in the field.

A new "chemical policeman" for gasoline was reported by Dr. Gustav Egloff of Chicago. It is a chemical which prevents gum from forming in gasoline.

The use of starch as soap was described by Prof. Lawrence E. Stout and K. F. Schiermier of Washington University, St. Louis. They found that an unstarched piece of cotton cloth required three washings before it was as clean as a single washing of cotton treated with a 20 percent solution of wheat-boiled rice starch.

Eels have attained lengths of four to five feet.

To Give Away Pony

J .W. Conklin, or Paddy as he is known to all his friends, who is the president of the Conklin All-Canadian Shows, is a great lover of children, and nothing gives him greater pleasure than to see the kiddies have a good time. During the years that he has been operating the shows bearing his name, he has entertained thousands of children from orphan homes and charitable institutions, and his name is a household word among the children from coast to coast.

On Saturday, in conjunction with the Exhibition directors he is giving another kiddies' day, and as an added incentive Paddy is giving away a real live circus pony to the girl or boy holding the lucky ticket. These tickets will be given away at the entrance to the Fair Grounds on Saturday, and the drawing will take place in front of the Circus Side Show on the Midway at 8.00 o'clock; and best of all, Paddy will present the pony himself to the girl or boy who is lucky enough to hold the winning ticket.

SAVING THE DUCKS.

CALGARY.—Damming of an irrigation ditch to divert water into Stobart Lake in an effort to save thousands of dying ducks was started to-day by the Canadian Pacific Railway at the instigation of the Alberta Fish and Game Society.

Tests have proven that leeches were the cause of deaths among the wild fowl and it is believed raising of the lake level will spread them. For this purpose, the water backed behind the dam will be turned into the lake.

Handicap Stars Will Run For $500 Purses

CHICAGO, Sept. 15. (CP)—The day when thoroughbred stars will race for $500 purses is not far off according to Harry Morrissey, veteran starter at Lincoln fields. Racing Associations can no longer afford to hang up heavy purses said the gradual reduction of prize money which is taking place now will be increased Morrissey declared.

"Unless horsemen agree to take small purses many racing associations will be forced to close up," he said.

The planetary configurations ruling the events of this day are read as rather ominous, with peculiar situations to combat and tenacious obstacles to surmount. Difficult and dangerous occurrences may arise, arousing a too-aggressive, violent or impetuous mode of "comeback." This may lead to physical danger as well as precipitate quarrels, fierce acts and speech, with reckless and lawless impulses.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a rather trying year, with many impediments and difficult situations to surmount.

MEIGHEN BACKS HYDRO POLICIES

Clean From Garrett to Cellar He Tells Georgian Bay Association.

UPHOLDS 'MACHINE GRANT'

OWEN SOUND, Ont., Sept. 14.—(C.P.).—Although he holds the scientific advancement of industrial machinery is a principal factor in to-day's economic troubles, Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Conservative leader in the Senate and member of the Ontario Hydro Commission, has the utmost faith the problem will be successfully solved.

Figures showed that as production increased gradually the number of persons needed to operate the producing machines declined steadily. Senator Meighen said when addressing members of the Georgian Bay Municipal Electric Association at their annual banquet here yesterday.

He did not believe either, he said, that the machine giant which had caused "such stress, yet at the same time had proved to be such a friend to humanity," should be discarded because such action would be "going back."

Pleading for the retention by man or woman of the conviction that they themselves were the architects of their own lives, Mr. Meighen declared socialization of human effort would mean ruin.

Early in the day at the annual meeting of the association, the Hydro Commission member told the delegates Hydro's achievements resulted from the fact that it had avoided a multiplication of interest charges, which would have followed if power development had been left in the hands of private companies with their duplication of services and huge investments on which to pay interest.

During the course of his brief speech Mr. Meighen defended the Hydro policies and declared Hydro was "clean from garret to cellar. There is no skeleton in any closet."

MARSTON HOLDS 2-STROKE LEAD FOR FIRST HALF

While George Dunlap Leads Lawson Little Jr. One Up at 18th Hole.

HARD FOUGHT DUELS.

KENWOOD COUNTRY CLUB, Cincinnati, September 15 (C.P.). — Making a comeback on the home stretch, Max R. Marston of Philadelphia, former titleholder, gained a lead of two up over young Jack Munger, of Dallas, Texas, after the first 18 holes of their 36-hole semi-final match in the United States amateur golf championship.

By sinking a 15-foot sidehill putt on the home green, George T. Dunlap, Jr., finished the first 18 holes one up on W. Lawson Little, Jr., of San Francisco, who yesterday eliminated the defending champion, C. Ross Somerville, of London, Ont. The New Yorker's finishing birdie broke up a hard-fought engagement for the time being. Little made a great early comeback after losing the first three holes.

Dunlap and Marston each carded 74, three over par. Little had a 75, and Munger a 76.

The weather cleared a bit in the middle of the day for the benefit of the players and the small galleries, but most of the course still was fog-bound.

Spectators came well equipped for the weather, with coats, umbrellas, and nor'-easters, while several women fans shed their shoes and their stockings after discovering that high heels impeded their progress.

SIDELIGHTS ON OIL; SOMETHING DRIVERS CARS SHOULD KNOW

A Column Written by W. G. Ritchie for The Examiner, Giving an Outline on Oils and How They Should be Used in Cars.

COLOR

Color as a criterion of quality may or may not be taken seriously. But all other factors being equal, the paler the color of the oil, or the nearer to a colorless liquid the oil is, the higher the quality of the oil and the greater the care taken in its refinement.

Some refiners, however, realizing this fact, have placed on the market very pale colored oils which have simply been bleached and the impurities left in the oils.

It is wise, therefore, to give consideration to the color of oils, only when combined with other tests in ascertaining its relation to the quality.

Public demand, too, has a bearing on the color of oils. Rich red oils have been on the market much longer than pale oils and have enjoyed great popularity. Refiners, realizing this fact and though able to produce very pale oils, prefer to adhere to the red variety, suiting the public palate. Some refiners even go so far as to actually color their products, although primarily produced in pale colors.

Paraffine oils as a rule are richer in shade than napthenic oils, and especially in the heavier grades, may be identified by their distinct green cast, while the napthenic oils have a somewhat bluer color.

With a little practice it is quite possible to select from a number of samples, the straight napthenic oils, straight paraffine oils, and oils compounded with both.

In describing the colors of oil—numbers are used to designate the shade: the lower the number, the paler the oil; No. 1 being very pale lemon color and No. 5 a light red and so on, these number are arrived at with the use of a colorometer.

CARBON CONTENT

The carbon-forming properties of any oil is measured by what is called the Conradson Test. This is a rather complicated method and it is not necessary to describe it here. It has been accepted by the A.S.-T.M. and A.P.I., however, as being a laboratory test that shows results almost identical with those found under actual working conditions.

This method is not to be understood as measuring the carbon contents of an oil, but the amount of carbon deposit found by the burning of the oil.

It will be found that when comparing oils of similar base the higher viscosity the oil, the higher the carbon percentage. But it will also befound that paraffine oils are higher in percentage of carbon than napthenic oils of equal viscosities. So naturally an oil which is low in carbon is to be preferred to one which is high, particularly for motor use; carbon deposits of any description are undesirable.

A distilled oil is comparatively free from carbon, but by the addition of cylinder stocks, which of course are not distilled, the percentage of carbon is greatly increased, and at a much higher ratio to the viscosity than that of straight napthenic oil which may be wholly distilled.

For this reason then, when considering oils containing cylinder stock the lowest viscosity oil that can be used consistent with safety and efficiency, the less carbon you will have in your engine, and the better your engine will function.

The Road To Buckhorn

By Olive Noad

Sometimes friend Pluvius drops in on us at the beginning of a journey, sometimes at the end, and sometimes effaces himself altogether. He must have been lying in wait for us upon a September afternoon, when we were headed for the Iroquois Trail. Up the Port Hope-Peterborough Highway we travelled, through the Strickland-Stewart country, seeing in fancy the Moodies' following the same road under very different conditions, Mrs. Traill being rowed up the shadowy Otonabee, the Stewarts crossing the frail Peterborough bridge which gave way, once, when one of them was on it, and John Langton traversing the Chemong trail from Sturgeon Lake, to attend the gaities of the most settled districts.

It was dusk when we reached Burleigh Falls, on a very warm but rain-threatening evening. A camping place and supper were our immediate concern. So, turning in on what by a vivid stretch of the imagination might be termed a road, we drew up on half an acre of bare pink dimpled granite, whereon we set our cooking and eating utensils.

Supper was just ready when down came the storm! Taking what few dishes were necessary, we repaired to the "dining car", and ate by its light.

Suddenly the lights of a car, bobbing as though they were on the bounding main, appeared along the road we had travelled, and a masculine voice boomed out "Hey Mac! Is this the road to Buckhorn?" Doubtless "Mac" was expected to dash out in the rain to oblige him, as he made no attempt to shut off the engine. We shouted that if this were a road, it led to the place he wanted. But it is not likely that he heard us, for away went "Leaping Lena" without a word of thanks, assisted by the wind, which blew and byemby blew some more. With each gust an enamel cup, an aluminum plate, a knife, a fork, or a spoon slithered, jingling across the rocks. We wondered how far they would travel by morning.

It was twelve hours before the storm abated, but the world was golden with sunshine at breakfast time; the air and trees washed clean. Every rock dimple was filled to the brim with rain, and out of them we fished most of our kitchenware.

A clean blue car started north to Loon Lake, arriving in a fine clay overcoat. And pleasant weather favored us during the remainder of our trip.

GLASGOW, Sept. 16 (C.P.)—Ireland defeated Scotland 2-1 to-day in the first international game of the season. The match was played before 22,000 spectators at Celtic Park. Ireland led by two goals at half time.

Martin scored twice for Ireland in the first half of the game when the wearers of the Shamrock fully deserved their lead. Scotland retaliated in fine fashion after the change of ends but it was not until 16 minutes had elapsed that McPhail, brilliant Rangers forward, scored from close in.

The Irish backs stood off the Scottish closing attacks, Scott performed valiantly in goal Scotland were awarded a penalty which was taken by McGonagle and Scott made a marvellous save.

GUESTS ESCAPE AS HOTEL BURNS

Blaze Threatens to Destroy Whole Quebec Town of St. Rose.

MONTREAL SENDS AID.

ST. ROSE, Que., September 16 Fire destroyed the Laval Hotel here early to-day as 15 guests and the hotel staff fled in night attire. Montreal firemen were summoned to aid the St. Rose force fight the flames, which were reported under control shortly after dawn.

The blaze, which started in the hotel kitchens, completely demolished the hotel, and for a time it threatened to destroy the whole town. Chief L. Cutmet of the local fire brigade, sent his men to neighboring rooftops to beat out sparks and the fire was confined to the hotel itself.

A passerby noticed the flicker of the flames through the kitchen window and raised the alarm. C. Clermont, owner and manager of the hotel, woke up the guests and they beat a hasty retreat in their night clothes as the flames roared through the wooden building.

Several guests had to be carried from the building by firemen. An unidentified young man rushed into the burning building at the last moment to rescue a girl who had fainted as she tried to escape. The damage was roughly estimated at $30,000.

SHELTON, Conn., Sept. 16.—(C.P.) — The prize turkey in Fred Nichol's flock used good logic, but put too much faith in the watch dog.

The turkey picked out the top of the dog kennel as a good safe place to roost at night. Nichols is now looking for his turkey and a purchaser for his dog. A thief stole the bird and the dog didn't even bark.

WARNING GIVEN AT STRATFORD

Furniture Strike Speakers Are Told to Temper Their Statements.

NO SETTLEMENT.

STRATFORD, Ont., September 16 (C.P.). — As interested parties strove to bring about a settlement between striking furniture workers and their employers to-day, warning had been issued to speakers at the strikers' meetings to temper their utterances.

Yesterday Crown Attorney J. C. Makins, K.C., said his attention had been drawn to reported speeches in which speakers were quoted as outlining steps that might follow should "scabs" be brought into the city.

"There are well-marked limits beyond which speakers cannot go even under provocation," said Crown Attorney Makins. "And when they speak of scabs and what may be done to them they are getting very close to the line where action can be taken against them."

The walkout of between 600 and 700 members of the recently-formed Chesterfield and Furniture Workers' Union took place on Thursday following their employers' refusal to accede to a demand for increased wages and better working conditions.

At Kitchener last night, Fred Collins, Toronto organiser of the union, addressed some 500 workers of all trades. Collins, whom the factory owners refuse to recognize in conciliation talks, declared it was the methods of efficiency experts that the workers objected to.

More than 100 furniture workers took out cards in the union.

FIRE DAMAGES TANNER HOME

Lakefield Fire Brigade Fights Through Dense Smoke to Save Reeve's Residence.

UNKNOWN ORIGIN.

LAKEFIELD, Sept 16.—Reeve C. S. Tanner's home on Water street was damaged by a fire of unknown origin on Friday morning. A still alarm for a chimney fire was sent in from the house at 10.40 but when the detachment of the fire brigade arrived it was found to be much more serious and a general alarm called out the entire brigade. The smoke was very dense and the firemen had to don their gas masks before entering the house. The fire was burning in the attic under the roof and the men had a good deal of difficulty in getting at it.

After nearly a couple of hours hard fighting the blaze was extinguished, but the dining room and the bedroom above were badly damaged. The loss is partially covered by insurance.

Fire Chief Clark and his men did excellent work in subduing what was a nasty looking fire. Mr. Tanner was out of town at the time, but Mrs. Tanner and her family were in the house.

Girls to Be Social Success Warned From Indulging in "Heavy Necking"

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—(CP)—To be a real social success during the coming winter season girls will not go in for "heavy necking."

This interesting bit of advice with other tips on what to do and what not to do was given out by Miss Alice-Leone Moats, New York debutante of 1929, as she arrived in Chicago to see the world's fair.

Miss Moats became somewhat of an authority on the subject of etiquette when she wrote a book entitled, "no nice girl swears."

Among other things she said she would advise the 1933 girl to have a graceful memory and be able to forget little indiscretions, if they are not repeated.

And above all, she said, don't speak to strangers—until they speak to you. As a happy conclusion she added:

"You can do anything, if you can get away with it," she placed plenty of emphasis on the "if", however.

FULL PROGRAM OF EXHIBITION GOING TO-NIGHT

In Spite of Rain Big Crowd Was on Hand at Grounds To-day.

MIDWAY OPEN TILL 12.

Special Diving Contest Will Be Completed This Evening.

With any fair break in the weather, the public has the last chance of doing its bit for the success of this year's Exhibition to-night. The concluding program at the grandstand, with the vaudeville acts amplified by the local diving competition for which five Peterborough girls have qualified, and also five of best divers from Y.M.C.A. will give an exhibition of diving, will be presented in its entirety, including the music of the Rangers' band.

Every feature of the Exhibition has been a record success this year with the exception of the attendance totals at the turnstiles, and the misty noon hour to-day probably curtailed the final day's crowd. The large number of people in the city this morning was an indication of what an ideal September day would have meant to the directors as a last contribution to the treasury.

Every possible appeal has been to the public for their co-operation, and the quality of the Exhibition, the midway, manufacturers' exhibits and other features supported all the tributes which have been expressed by visitors during the week. Among the early visitors this afternoon was Robert Grandy, former director, now living on his farm at Brooklin. Mr. Grandy was warmly welcomed by many friends on the grounds.

In spite of the noon hour mist quite a number of people had already arrived at the Exhibition, taking a chance on the weather, but the absence of the sun was bound to be a deterrent in spite of the fine program which had been arranged for Saturday afternoon.

Ex-Ontario Boy Dies Millionaire In U.S.A.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 16.—John G. Bullock, 62, Ontario-born pioneer merchant and leader in business and civic affairs of Southern California, died unexpectedly yesterday of a heart attack. Leaving school at the age of 11, Bullock was a delivery boy in Paris, Ont., at $2 a week. He came to California in 1896 with $150 his widowed mother gave him, and walked the streets for some time in search of work before he got a job in the Arthur Letts store here. He rose rapidly, and in 1906 Letts put Bullock's name over the store and gave him $250,000 to expand the enterprise as he saw fit. After Letts' death a Los Angeles bank financed Bullock to the extent of $6,000,000. He was a member of the board of directors of the Metropolitan Water District, which is building the $220,000,000 Colorado River aqueduct.

HOUSTON, Texas, September 16 (C.P.). — Five horses and a pack of hounds were among the indirect casualties of hurricane which swept the ranch home of W. A. 'Snake' King, Jr., near Brownsville. King said to-day the animals were killed by a captive lioness liberated by the storm. King then shot the lioness.

CORNER STONE OF NEW CHAPEL LAID BY BISHOP

Bishop O'Connor Laid Corner Stone of New Chapel at Mount.

J. M. PIGOTT PRESENT.

Silver Trowel Used is Presented by Sisters to His Excellency.

The Most Rev. Denis O'Connor, D.D., LL.D., Bishop of the Diocese of Peterborough, this morning laid the cornerstone on the new chapel addition to Mount St. Joseph, now in the course of construction. The uncompleted chapel structure was blessed by His Excellency in the name of St. Joseph.

Attended with all the solemn and dignified pomp and ritual of the Church, the ceremony was performed by the Bishop in the presence of Reverend Mother Irene, Mother Superior of Mount St. Joseph and by a large group of sisters of the community; attending clergy, and officials and employees of the Pigott Construction Company of Hamilton, including J. M. Pigott, president, and Pete Gilbert, construction superintendent.

Under a grey and threatening sky, the Bishop emerged in procession from the old chapel, and proceeded to the site of the main altar of the partly completed new structure, which he blessed. He afterwards proceeded to the southwest corner of the apse, where he blessed the cornerstone, and declared it "well and truly laid," before completing a circuit of the foundations with his entourage. A misty drizzle of rain developed during the course of the ceremony.

The Bishop was assisted by the Very Rev. Dean F. J. O'Sullivan, rector of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, and the Rev. J. V. McAuley of Eanismore. The Master of Ceremonies was the Rev. J. T. Finn. Assisting clergy were Rev. Paul Costello, rector of St. Peter's Cathedral; Rev. J. J. O'Brien, pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart; and the Rev. Dr. V. J. Masterson.

A silver trowel used by His Excellency in performing the stone-laying ceremony was presented to him by the Sisters of the Community of Mount St. Joseph. It is understood that the trowel is to be later engraved, as a memento of the occasion.

WITCH KILLING GETS 71 JAILED

Sentences Follow Wholesale Attack by Africans on Woman and Daughter.

SERIOUS PROBLEM.

DARESSALAAM, Tanganyika, E. Africa, Sept. 16—A mass "witchcraft" trial in which all of the 75 male inhabitants of an isolated Tanganyika village were involved resulted to-day in the conviction of 71 assailants of two women believed by villagers to be witches.

Sentences ranging from six months' imprisonment upwards were imposed. The original charge of manslaughter was reduced to rioting. This district is British mandated territory.

Urged by an ancient superstition, men of the village allegedly attacked a mother and daughter as witches. The women were so badly mistreated they eventually died.

The witchcraft superstition constitutes one of the most acute problems of the white administration in these sections.

At Nairobi last January, 60 natives of the Wakamba tribe were sentenced to death for killing an old woman they believed cast a spell over a man's wife. The sentences were later commuted.

SPLIT LOOMS AMONG RANKS OF DOLLFUSS

Austrain Vice Chancellor Rallies Followers Under 'Peace With Germany' Slogan.

BLOW AT HOME GUARD.

Enemies See Move as Entry of Wooden Horse Into Troy.

VIENNA, Sept. 16. —(UP)— The centre of gravity in Austrian politics shifted today to Graz, where Vice Chancellor Winkler tomorrow will open the first big gathering of his "national corporative front" under the slogan of peace with Germany and the maintenance of Austrian independence from the control of anti-German power.

The meeting is aimed particularly against the Fascist Heimwehr (home guard) who have been among the strongest followers of Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss, and not against the Chancellor himself.

Indeed, it was considered probable in political circles that the vice chancellor may announce the entry of his national corporative front into the Dollfuss "patriotic front."

The vice chancellor's enemies, however, already are discounting this as the entry of a wooden horse into Troy."

In this connection political observers considered it significant that Governor Anton Rintelen of Styria, who several weeks ago was appointed minister to Rome, had not yet left his native province.

Fred Scott Falls From Top Of Silo

Fred. Scott, well-known farmer of the Chemong Road, was seriously injured yesterday when he fell from the top of his silo onto the cement floor. Mr. Scott was working on the top of the silo when he overbalanced and fell a distance of 22 feet. His son, Keith, was working with him and immediately called for assistance in removing the injured man from the floor of the silo.

Mr. Scott was rushed to Nicholls Hospital, where he was attended by Dr. G. R. Scott. It has been impossible as yet to make an X-ray of his injuries, but his condition is critical, The Examiner was informed to-day.

Debris Clutters North Carolina Shoreline Cities

Two Persons Known To Have Been Drowned—Details Lacking Owing To Broken Communications From Many Areas—Residents Flee Inland.

NEW BERN, N.C., AT MOUTH OF TWO RIVERS FLOODED OUT—TORNADO MOVING NORTH.

(By the Associated Press)

The full force of a tropical hurricane unchecked after lashing over the North Carolina coast, struck the Virginia seaboard today and stirred attendant, devastating gales over a wide area. Two persons were known to have been drowned.

Communications were cut off from many cities. A small steamer was in distress at the entrance of Delaware Bay and was taken in tow by a Coast Guard cutter.

New Bern, N. C., with 1,000 inhabitants, was inundated by the meetings of a high tide with two rain-swollen rivers. Its waterfront buildings were crushed, and its only immediate aid available was a landing party from a Coast Guard vessel.

Morehead City, N.C., another of many hard hit, had roads chocked with debris.

Coastal residents of Virginia fled to safer ground in advance of the hurricane's greater fury.

The weather bureau warned that the storm centre, which was near Cape Hatteras at noon, would near Southern New Jersey Sunday, passing near Cape Henry, Va. late this afternoon or tomorrow.

The bureau further warned that whole gales and usually high tides would occur northward of Hatteras to the New Jersey coast.

Second in Two Days

The storm is the second of its kind to swirl up out of the tropics in two days. The first struck the coast of Mexico yesterday and left six dead, 50 injured and 2,000 homeless in the Tampico district.

Weather experts feared that if the storm sweeps north along the coast line, the damage might be greater than last month's hurricane wreckage. Some Virginia waterfront residents evacuated their homes. Shipping fled to port.

Cold rain swept New York and the New Jersey coast, flooding streets and cellars and stopping air traffic. Wooden paving blocks floated in the streets of Montclair, N.J.

A miniature tornado flattened a house at San Benito, Tex., injuring seven Mexicans. Three Red Cross relief workers hastened to Raleigh, N.C., from Washington.

The two known storm victims along the Atlantic coast were a seaman and a fisherman. The first was swept off the motorship Sun off Hatteras and the fisherman drowned at Roanoke Island.

Docks Swept Away

NEW YORK, Sept. 16 (CP)—A wireless message picked up to-day by Coast Guard communications here and presumably sent by a ship said that all docks and buildings at Pamlico, North Carolina, had been swept away in the storm that lashed the coast.

The message was fragmentary and was sent from a low-power transmitter at Cape Henry, Virginia. Some of its contents indicated that it might have been dispatched by a Coast Guard ship.

"All Pamlico docks and buildings swept away," the message as picked up here read. "Lights and communications cut off. Landing, survey damage and determine casualties if any.

"Last reports indicate property damage considerable. Cher Hotel unroofed. Base personnel patrolling waterfront."

Coast Guard offices here were of the opinion that the hotel name was garbled in transmission.

FAMOUS TENOR'S DAUGHTER WEDS

McCormack Travels From Hollywood for Occasion in London, England.

CROWD JAMS CHURCH.

LONDON, Sept. 16 (AP)—John McCormack, the world famous Irish tenor, sang what he called the song of his life to-day at the wedding of his only daughter, Gwendolyn.

He had come all the way from Hollywood to pay a tribute of love at the ceremony and the ancient Brompton Oratory was the centre of one of the most dramatic of weddings London has ever known.

Many distinguished persons gathered to see Miss McCormack and Edward Pyke, a Liverpool businessman, married by the Bishop of Liverpool.

But besides the invited guests were many who remained in the Oratory after an early Mass, in the hope of hearing McCormack sing. The huge church was entirely filled.

So great was the crush that one of the big flower stands collapsed and only quick action by ushers prevented it from falling on members of the congregation. Meanwhile, crowds outside tried to storm the doors, having heard that McCormack was to sing. An enlarged police squad was necessary to keep them back.

The awaited moment arrived when the tenor arose. A hush fell over the congregation, whose members knelt reverently as the "Ave Maria" floated through the Oratory in tones which for years enchanted the world.

Several persons were so overcome with emotion that they left the moment the last note died away.

Four Boys Returned To The Reformatory

HAMILTON, Ont., Sept. 16 (CP) —After a month of freedom, four boys, Gordon Mavella, Hamilton; Donald Anstey, Hespeler; Lynn Brown, Peterborough, and Richard Haywood, Gooderham, are on their way back to the Ontario Industrial School at Mimico to-day. The lads were arrested near Carlisle, Ontario, when a farmer summoned a local police officer. They escaped about a month ago.

The farmer, James B. Gray, said he noticed his car moving after he had left it parked on a roadway and later chased four boys into a bush after they had run the machine into a gate post. The four appeared in court, but no charge was pressed. They were ravenously hungry and eagerly devoured sandwiches supplied by county police.

GALLANT SOULS RUSH TO DEFEND ENGLISH WIVES

Housecraft Director Differs With Medical Officer on Cooking Abilities.

MEASURE WITH BEST.

Do Not Disguise Inferior Foods With Rich Sauces and Seasoning.

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

LONDON, Eng., Sept. 16. (C. P. Cable).—Gallant souls are rushing to the defense of English housewives, who were recently censured by Sir George Newman, chief medical officer of the ministry of health.

In reply to Sir George's strictures, The Daily Mail quotes a director of an important organization which trains hundreds of women annually in housecraft and cookery.

"It is time, says the director, "that gastronomic snobbery which looks upon English cooking as the worst in the world is killed. I have come into contact throughout the year with many hundreds of ordinary women who not only are willing, but anxious, to learn the best methods of cookery and preparing well-balanced menus.

Some Praise

"In choice foods, in which Sir George laments they display ignorance, I would place them first among housewives of the world. The English housewife does not disguise inferior foods with rich sauces and seasoning, but serves dishes which are as wholesome to look at as they are to the palate. The best cooks in the world are women in any provincial centre. They serve up meals which help to build up a sturdy race."

Sir George Newman, in his annual report recently, declared Great Britain is healthier now than at any time in her history.

But, referring to English cooking, the medical officer said, "We continue old habits with regard to meals which we permit to become monotonous, stale, badly cooked, unappetizing and badly served. Many hungry customers bolt their food or wash it down with tea or beer, forgetting that such a custom is unfair to food, tea, beer and body."

Old Law Protects Males From Wiles Of Women Who Use Artificial Makeup

REGINA, Sept. 15.—(CP)—Let the modern woman beware how she uses her makeup. There is at least one law on the statues book to protect males in this country from the wiles of women who use artificial aids to enhance their charms.

Scanning an ancient volume Dr. J. F. Honsberger, Saskatchewan lawyer, came across an act passed by the British parliament in 1670 and never repealed which prohibits women from adding to nature's gifts on pain of being burned as witches.

Here is the law: "All women of whatever age, rank, profession or degree, whether virgins, maids or widows, that shall from the passing of this act impose upon and betray into matrimony any of his majesty's male subjects by scents, paints, cosmetics, high-heeled shoes or bolstered hips, shall incur the penalty of the laws now in force against witchcraft."

TORONTO MAN'S HOLIDAY CRUISE ENDS IN TRAGEDY

Body Washes Ashore Securely Lashed to Wrecked Dinghy.

VICTIM OF GALE.

Young Wife, Feeling Ill, Leaves Boat at Oshawa, Husband Sails to Death.

TORONTO, Sept. 16.—Another tragedy of Lake Ontario was discovered yesterday evening, when an overturned sailing dinghy was washed ashore, near the foot of Woodbine Avenue, with the body of Martin Flowersmith, aged 27, of 47 Bernard Avenue, lashed securely to the boat.

Lifeguards Swim Out

Lifeguards from the Leuty Avenue Station noticed the dinghy out in the lake, and when it was washed near shore swam out through the terrific undertow to pull it up on the beach. It was not until they were near shore that they noticed the young man's body floating underneath the boat.

Flowersmith, with his wife, had been on a camping vacation, having left a week ago to-day, sailing eastward until they reached Oshawa. Yesterday morning the young wife, who was feeling ill and cold, decided to tak their dog and make the return trip by bus. Flowersmith was to sail the boat as far as Frenchman's Bay, where he was to meet his wife, who had stopped off near Pickering to visit her husband's mother.

At noon yesterday Flowersmith's wife and mother prepared a lunch and met him at the shore. He said that he would sail the dinghy back to Toronto in spite of the heavy wind which made the lake dangerous. His wife continued the trip by bus, and arrived here only to learn of the tragedy which had taken from her her young husband and the father of their 1-year-old son, Sebastian.

Spotted on Lake

It was at 5.25 o'clock yesterday afternoon that the Life Guards from the station spotted the overturned dinghy, about half a mile out in the lake. Previously a bundle containing blankets, ground sheets, pyjamas and other camping equipment, had floated ashore at Scarboro' Beach. As soon as the boat was seen, "Cap" Appleton, in charge of the station, instructed the Life Guards to proceed up the beach and bring it ashore.

Life Guards Blair, Hardy, Furrie and Baker hastened toward the spot to which the dinghy was blowing, picking up Life Guards Devlin and Willis, who were patrolling the beach, on the way up. Blair, Hardy and Baker then swam out, fighting the dangerous undertow all the way. They reached the boat and started pulling it in, and had gone some way when a wave caught the boat, picked it up, and the body was noticed underneath it.

"Cap" Appleton at once notified the police and the Coroner, and the body was ordered to be removed to the morgue, where it was later identified by Norman Stitt, 201 Davisville Avenue, part owner of the boat, and Miss Flower, a sister-in-law of the dead man.

Body Lashed Securely

One line attached to the wrecked boom had been looped three times around his ankle, and another was fastened around his stomach. So securely were they tied that lifeguards had to cut them away.

Floating beside the upturned craft, and secured to it by halyards, was the wreckage of the mast, its single sail still intact but tangled to such an extent that life guards were unable to decide whether it had been set or lowered when disaster struck the dinghy.

The slot for the mast was torn away and investigators decided from the splintered deck and missing centreboard that the mast had been torn out while the craft was still upright, and had fallen into the cockpit, leaving the little ship at the mercy of the huge waves driven by the gale out of the east.

In this plight, life guards believe, Flowersmith tied himself to the ship, in the hope of floating safely ashore with it should it capsize, or in order to have his body found if he should die.

Woman Prosecutor Gives Crime Views

NEW YORK, Sept. 16 (C.P.).—As Mrs. Evelyn Gonzales, New York's sole woman prosecutor, prepared today to step out of office to give over her time to being "Mrs. Gonzales." She delivered herself on a number of crime questions.

Some of her observations:

"Most criminals are undernourished. Much crime is due to hunger and the depression.

"Most so-called wayward girls aren't really bad. In 99 cases out of 100, proper environment and not jail will reclaim them.

"Young women shoplifters steal solely for vanity's sake. Branding them convicts is disastrous to society.

"Girls don't commit crimes of violence. I have never yet seen a "gun moll'."

Mrs. Gonzales' husband, Antonio C., was recently named United States Minister to Panama. Mrs. Gonzales will quit her role as assistant district attorney on Sept. 25, a few days before they leave for the tropical republic.

Winnipeg Railway Strike Is Avoided

WINNIPEG, Sept. 16.—Strike of Winnipeg Electric Railway employees, scheduled to go into effect last night at midnight, was averted as the result of an agreement reached late yesterday afternoon.

Representatives of the men and the company agreed to accept a compromise proposal which promised amicable settlement of the dispute. The strike order has been withdrawn, and the men will take a ballot on the proposed 15 per cent. wage reduction. One of the contentions of the company officials was that the employees had no opportunity to express their wishes through a secret ballot.

DUFF COMMENDS HORSE ENTRIES; QUALITY IS GOOD

President of Clydesdale Horse Association Impressed With Peterborough Exhibition.

JUDGING OF HORSES.

Eleven Horses Were Entered in the Heavy Draft Single Competition.

Although entries in the horse classes at the Peterborough Exhibition do no compare in numbers with those at the London, Ottawa and Toronto exhibitions, Peterborough has no apologies to make in regard to its horses, M. J. Duff of Myrtle Station, one of Canada's outstanding breeders, said yesterday after witnessing the equine parades in a number of classes before the grand stand. He stated that he had been particularly impressed by the horses from the city's own district.

Mr. Duff is president of the Dominion Cydesdale Horse Association. He showed eight horses at the Toronto Exhibition, taking thirteen ribbons—five firsts, four seconds, three thirds and two championships—and showed at Ottawa with almost equal success. Entries of his yesterday took three firsts among other ribbons in the heavy horse judging. At the London exhibition he acted as horse judge.

Coming from such a widely recognized breeding authority, the compliment ranks as one of the best tributes the Peterborough Exhibition has received this year. Comparing with his impressions on his last visit to the Exhibition several years ago, he said the quality of horses had shown vast improvement.

Many Heavy Horses

Heavy horses were shown in nine classes and light horses in eleven classes yesterday afternoon. Although competition was comparatively light in most of the light horse classes, each class in the heavy horses was particularly well contested, entries averaging from six to eight. Judging and officials were unanimous in expressing their satisfaction with the grade of animals on display in both divisions.

In the heavy horses, seven ribbons—one first, three seconds and three thirds—were taken by W. H. Armstrong of Millbrook during the afternoon. Three firsts, two seconds and a fifth were taken by Mr. Duff and S. S. Staples and James E. Whittington and Son won five each on their showings. Lloyd Kennedy of Bethany was the outstanding exhibitor in the lighter

SOLICITOR FOR VERIGIN DENIES BREAK-UP RUMOR

YORKTON, Sask., Sept. 16.—(C.P.)—Faith in the leadership of Peter Verigin, chief of the Universal Brotherhood of Doukhobors with 15,000 members in Western Canada, was expressed here to-day by Saskatchewan members of the sect, and counsel for the head of the colonists in the west.

Little credence was placed in reports from Lethbridge that the leadership of Verigin is threatened and a break-up of the brotherhood pending.

"I place no credence in the report whatever," said J. A. Patrick, K.C., of Yorkton, solicitor and legal advisor to the Doukhobor chieftain.

FIRE DESTROYED CAR DRIVER HAD CLOSE CALL

Driving between Oshawa and Brooklin yesterday afternoon, J. G. Hawkins of Lindsay, the district circulation representative of the Toronto Telegram, was forced to make a hurried exit from his car when without warning it became enveloped in flames. Mr. Hawkins' hair was badly singed, while the load of newspapers that he carried from Toronto for distribution in Peterborough and district was completely destroyed along with the vehicle. It is understood that the loss of the car, a sedan, is covered by insurance.

DAIRY CLASSES WELL FILLED AT EXHIBITION

Strong Competition Offered in the Dairy Cattle By Well Known Breeders.

LIST OF WINNERS.

Holstein Class Had Largest Number of Entries at Exhibition.

The judging of dairy cattle Thursday and Friday brought out exceptionally strong competition in all classes. These cattle were exceptionally well fitted, in fact the uniformity in this detail was far more marked than in former years.

The herds of Ayrshires, Holsteins and Jerseys showed the result of splendid care and grooming, and should make a fine showing in this afternoon's parade of prize-winning livestock.

Breeders of the Peterborough district captured a large share of the money and honors. In the Ayrshire class it was interesting to follow the success of those friendly rival breeders Alex Hume & Son, J. Gordon Mann & Son and Fred Rutherford, whose herds were also in competition with the entries of H. C. Hamill & Son of Markham.

The Holstein class had the largest number of herds represented, making an outstanding group.

The results of the judging were as follows:

DAIRY CATTLE.

Ayrshires.

Bull, 3 yrs. or over—1 Alex Hume & Son, R.R. 3, Campbellford; 2 J. Gordon Mann & Son, Peterboro.

WELLES, MARTIN MEET IS SECRET

American Ambassador Reported in Support of New Cuban Chief's Policies.

NO U.S. INTERVENTION.

(By Edmund A. Chester, Copyright 1933, by the A. P.)

HAVANA, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Sumner Welles, U.S. ambassador, hold a long secret session today with a committee of the student directorate, staunch supporters of President Gray San Martin.

This was the ambassador's first contact with the new government, and came at a time when Gray San Martin, in another closed meeting, told his strongest opponents that he would not accede to their demands that he resign the presidency, to which he ascended less than a week ago.

Mr. Welles was said by a student spokesman to have expressed approval of the director's pro-government program.

The ambassador left the conference apparently well pleased, but did not comment. A student representative said the diplomat had sought an explanation of criticism directed at him in some quarters and had denied rumors he was protecting 500 army and navy officers entrenched in the National Hotel.

No Intervention

The student spokesman quoted the ambassador as saying there would be no American intervention in Cuba, although it is possible marines may be landed if the lives and property of Americans in Cuba are menaced.

Welles and the committee met in the home of Eduardo Chibas, Secretary of Public Works under Carlos Manuel de Cespedes, whose return to the presidency is sought by the officers in the hotel.

Afterwards, students took positions near the hotel and compelled residents in the Vedado section to drive 16 blocks out of their way to reach their homes.

They said the government had been informed that the besieged officers planned to start firing on the 500 soldiers and students who held them virtual prisoners in the fortress-like hostelry, in which the officers are supplied with many guns.

Meanwhile, powerful forces, including the A.B.C. and O.C.R.R secret societies, the nationalist followers of Col. Carlos Mendieta, and supporters of Former President Mario G. Menocal, during a protracted session, insisted he make way for a new government of national scope.

Psalms 100: 4—"Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise."

CARLOS MANUEL DE CESPEDES

Leadership of the Provisional President of the Republic of Cuba Severely Tested by His Ability to Win and Master Parties.

(H. W. L. MAHOOD)

Few statesmen of the day have a more difficult situation to master than has the provisional President of Cuba. If the aim of Cespedes had been to keep out of trouble he would not have even considered the lure of Presidency. He is reputed to be wealthy and modest and not selfishly ambitious. Public life has for him but little attraction. Many other Cubans have the aspiration to be President. How often it comes to pass that the man out of sight is the man of destiny. He has been just one of the people. Interested he has been in others' welfare. In a quiet way unsuspected by himself the confidence of the people who knew him best has been won. Such a man is Cespedes.

Cespedes has had some experience in the diplomatic service. He has served in Mexico, Spain and the United States. But private life is his choice rather than public. A Cuban could scarcely be more interested in national affairs than he. His father was a famous Cuban liberator. He took a prominent part in Cuba's struggle into freedom. To him publicity was distasteful. The call of his country struggling to be free to him was decisive. The Cuban people have not forgotten the famous liberator. For several days whether Carlos Manuel would accept the offer of provisional President was in doubt.

At last when he concluded to yield to the call of the people the political storm abated. The people celebrated, and wept and rejoiced, and sang.

Cuba is unblessed by several political factions. To win the confidence, and to weld them into a united citizenship will be for him a major accomplishment. Not the economic, nor the industrial, nor the social problems are the most difficult for leadership. To compose warring factions is the most critical, and vexing.

Menocal a politician and a soldier is a serious threat to the peace of Cuba. If Menocal cannot have right of way in public affairs he can be counted upon to make trouble for any other leader. He is an obstructionist of the worst kind. If defeated he will develop a policy to make impossible the success of another. At this writing he has started to discredit Cespedes. Fortunate Cespedes and his family record is bullet proof. Cespedes has announced he will strive to loosen the hands of the bankers and of the capitalists from control of the basic resources of Cuba. And in keeping with this reform other constitutional changes will be made. Menocal has intimated he will fight these proposed changes to the last ditch.

In every country there are politicians who are not leaders nor statesmen. They are in politics for the honor. Oft times for self interests. Cuba has her share of this breed. Alfred Hornedo publishes a sensational newspaper, the El Pais. The paper is sensational but Hornedo is level headed. He is of the constructive persuasion. He will give the new regime his support. Havana is blessed with a man of force, and foresight. He has been a much respected mayor. His unstinted support will be given to Cespedes.

Cuba is in the midst of a laborer's strike. These men are harbor workers. The strike began during the incumbency of Machado. Great damage has already been done to trade. Communist labor agitators have crept into the few labor unions and have secured positions of trust. From this vantage ground they are stirring up the utmost of confusion. These few Communists have made trouble for Machado. They are now seeking to make a settlement under the leadership of Cespedes; impossible. Communists in the chief cities are at work to make ineffective constitutional government. These agitators will block if possible the way of success in Havana, and Santiago, and Manzanillo and Cienfuegos. These are the pivotal trade points in Cuba. The Communists must be either expelled or squelched. Their conversion to constructive governmental legislation is hopeless. They are traitors in any country, and under any flag except the Red. Where waves the Red flag, alone, that is where every communist ought to be confined and live.

The Communist is not the only force that has hindered Cuban progress. The American press is now telling the American people of the secret commital of Machado at a dinner given him by some fifty bankers in New York City in 1927. Thomas Lamont was one of the prominent bankers present to make a speech extolling Machado. His speech and the encouragement given the Cuban President by the guests led Machado to think he was some pumpkin. Machado made reply. It was with some gusto. He told those New York bankers that as long as he was President their investments in Cuba would be safe. He assured them that revolutions and labor troubles would be nipped in the bud. One remark made by an astute banker after the banquet will stick whenever and wherever the name of Machado is mentioned: "Look at your shoes, Machado has not left a bit of blackening on them. They are licked clean. In this sharp thrust of that upstanding banker is photographed the character of Machado.

Drudgery is as necessary to call out the treasures of the man as harrowing and planting those of the earth.

Unity and Union

By J. C. CARLISLE, C.B., C.B.E., D.D., President of Baptist Union of Great Britain.

Some of the dictionaries regard the words "unity" and "union" as synonyms. In a loose way they are but fundamentally there is a subtle difference. Unity is a state of oneness; it refers to organism rather than organization. Locke wrote: "Whatever we consider as one thing suggests to the understanding the idea of unity." It means sameness identity. In literary and art criticism it is a combination or ordering of parts such as to constitute a whole or promote an undivided total effect.

Union is the joining of two or more things into one; a state of being brought together, a coalition, a combination. Unity is the property of oneness; union is the condition of amalgamation.

Our Lord, thinking aloud in the Father's presence, and with full knowledge of the bitter religious differences of His time, the hatred of Jew and Gentile, the strong sectarianism of Pharisees and Samaritans, looked over the far horizon and saw what was yet to be, and He said: "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on Me through their word, that they all may be one as Thou, Father, art in Me, and I in Thee, that they also may be one in us, that the world may believe that Thou hast sent Me."

That prayer is often quoted, but is it understood? Jesus prayed, not simply for those who had obeyed His call, but for those who through the long ages should be added to the number who had become pilgrims on the mystic way, challenging the world for an ideal that has never been attained and never will be until the day break and the shadows flee away.

There is scarcely a sentence in the New Testament which the theologians have not made the battle-ground of controversy. This record of the prayer that is supremely the Lord's Prayer, is not an exception. Every sentence has been submitted to the fierce light of criticism, yet it is the most tender and intimate utterance in all the literature of the nations. If we could read it as though nothing had been said concerning it, how it would move our hearts, its penetrating pathos, agonizing yearning, and strong, calm assurance hold the devout mind by ties that will not break.

What did Jesus mean when He prayed that all His disciples might be one? We are familiar with the use made of the words. They are the argument for denominational union, for the bringing together of all the religious communities into one organization. The prayer is supposed to have reference to what are ludicrously called "our unhappy divisions," but does it refer to unity or union?

Does this prayer of the Master remain unanswered? When it was spoken the disciples were not united in spirit. Peter was thinking of what they had sacrificed and what they were going to receive. James and John wanted the first places in the Kingdom; they knew not what spirit they were of.

There is an essential unity of the fellowship of all believers. The great figures in the New Testament representing the Church, are all symbols of unity. The writers of the New Testement do not seem to have had any idea that the Church could be other than one. It is the one in the many, the many in the one; the one flock in many folds; the household of faith, a unity, yet possessing a variety only limited by the number of individuals it contains. The Church is the temple, the believers are the stones in the building; it is a body, one as the organism; many as the members. It is the vine, separate as the branches, one as the vine. The unity is so great that it can only be maintained by the variety of the parts.

The Churches in our time are faced by enormous difficulties. Many voices have almost drowned the still small voice: Is it not possible, recognizing our spiritual unity, to unite as one force for the things that were dear to the heart of Jesus? We have learnt this lesson in part in our missionary enterprise. The Chinese Christian Council has for its motto: "We agree to differ and resolve to love." Believing in the unity already existing and that the prayer of the Master is answered by our witness bearing and not our ecclesiastical building, may we not stand together in the demonstration of the Christ-like life?

The world will be led to believe in the claims of Christ not so much by any union of organizations as by the unity of the Christian life, which is the same everywhere and always. The evidencing power is in the living disciple, not in documents or mechanism. The prayer of the Master is answered wherever the disciples manifest His spirit. They may be different as the stars, they are the one as the sky; varied as the leaves, united as the tree.

YOUR PROBLEMS

Religious and Social Questions Answered By DR. WILLIE CLARK

I have been thinking about the state of business, and society. What a rotten state they are in. If there is a God how can He continue to have patience with the whole outfit? Could a really righteous God put up with things as they are even for a day?—M. McK.

The question is very pertinent to the days in which we live and I suppose it was also revelant to every generation of the past; for where in the story of the nations was there ever a people who lived right and did as they ought?

The real answer seems to be this: Man takes the short view while God takes the long view. We count by hours and days; but He counts by centuries and thousands of years.

We are sure God must be just, and therefore, in justice to Himself and us, He must give us all possible chances.

The fact that God spares us is a proof that we may reform and that a kingdom of righteousness may yet possess the earth.

The hope for the future lies in what the love of God is able to endure and the persistency with which His Spirit is willing to move within men and nations.

In spite of all the perversities of the times one feels that the Cross of Christ must triumph—good is stronger than evil.

What is your opinion of women smoking?—S. C. T.

Really I don't like it. I don't like the dirt of it—the ashes and the burned matches.

I am quite sure no woman makes herself more attractive or adds to her charms by smoking. Of course, this is my opinion and some of my friends think I am old-maidish.

This whole smoke business is a luxury and a little more—a soothing luxury—to be obtained in no other way. I suppose when we come down to it, or perhaps up to it, a woman has as much right to a smoke as a man.

I sometimes think that when I am eighty I will have a few draws. They tell me it will add to the happiness of old age.

My advice to all is, don't smoke until you are twenty-one and then let your own commonsense guide you.

Some people think smoking is a sin. Those who do must not smoke. They must keep their consciences clear.

Many speakers and writers on world conditions are warning us against yielding to the power of the spirit of defeat. It is not true that we are defeated? Why should we continue to try to do what we know cannot be done?

—S. W. N.

No, we are not by any means defeated. We are just slowed up a bit. Speakers and writers get harping on themes and don't know when to let up. The word not the thought captivates them. Some words and phrases should be buried and so should those who try to keep them alive.

What is there which cannot be done?

Everything which is right and which ought to be done, can be done. At times we lose faith, get discouraged and fancy we are at the end. If we get so far gone that we cannot be revived, then the next generation will do it.

No, we are not defeated. The reverses have only made us a little more sure and perhaps a little bit more stubborn. We have been forced to stay in the trenches; but one of these days we will go over the top and sweep to victory.

Certain privations, dangers and struggles are necessary for normal development.

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Solomon

By the Rev. Alvin E. Bell And Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—I Kings, chapters 5 to 8.

King David wished to build the temple but was not permitted because he was a man of war. This did not keep him from gathering materials in preparation for the work under Solomon, a man of peace. The timber was secured from Hiram, King of Tyre, who sent cedars of Lebanon to the temple.

"The house when it was in building, was built of stone made ready before it was brought thither: so that there was neither hammer nor axe nor any tool of iron heard in the house while it was in building." This silent masonry is a lesson on reverence much needed in these days.

The temple was completed after seven and a half years' work by an army of over 183,600 workmen. Enriched with precious materials and overlaid with gold it was the most magnificent building of the ancient world, the masterpiece of "Solomon in all his glory".

The ark of the covenant symbolized God's presence in the temple. In his great dedicatory prayer Solomon expressed the mystery of the temple; "Behold the heaven of heavens cannot contain thee; how much less this house that I have builded"?

GOLDEN TEXT—Psalm 100:4.

Cathedral Musings

Of all the creatures living and having their existence in the life of God, man alone possesses creative powers. He alone can formulate an idea and embody it in material form. That alone is enough to show and prove his divine heritage. It cannot be that God has given to His children this ability to create, foresee, and forebuild the things of tomorrow without having intended that it should be used to its fullest degree.

It is time now that man should lift himself beyond the physical world and find that in the spiritual, mental world he can create, build, have and enjoy the things that are beyond the physical, that are more essential, more real, more dependable than anything that the atoms and electrons can manifest.

It is time that man free himself from the wholly fictitious, unreasonable. Cosmically unsound, and wholly inadequate creations of the physical world, and made his life one of living realism of that creative power that has its source in the goodness of God's Love.

A BETTER METHOD.

The new policy announced by Toronto's Police Commission in dealing with speech-making in public parks will strike most people as a reasonable and sensible method of handling this matter.

Henceforth the park orators are not to be interfered with until they actually break the law by advocating violence, and even then the orders are that if possible the offenders shall be arrested at their homes and not at the place where they are speaking.

It is safe to say that this arrangement will do much to put an end to park rioting, and will also deprive soap-box orators of the greater part of their audience and most of the newspaper publicity they have been receiving.

If they are allowed to let off steam by orating at will they will soon get tired of talking to a handful of people, for that is about all that will take the trouble to stop and listen to them, once the chance of the excitement of a police raid and a general disturbance has disappeared.

Those who advocate the overthrow by violence of Canadian institutions can be taken in charge afterward, if the authorities believe that their wild remarks are dangerous; that is a simple and effective way of avoiding riots and of depriving the Reds of their argument that they are being persecuted by the police force of capitalism.

There will be less heard about freedom of speech in Toronto from now on, if we are in the least degree capable of understanding human nature.

GETTING AFTER THE HIGHWAY BULLIES.

When it comes to the handling of motor traffic the province of Quebec seems able to set a good example to the rest of Canada.

Quebec's regulation requiring motorists to bring their cars to a full stop before passing over a railway crossing is a progressive bit of legislation that has worked well and that might profitably be emulated elsewhere.

Now comes word that the Quebec Roads Department proposes to deal drastically with that bully of the highways, the motor truck; it has been decided to cancel the licenses of all trucks that speed the maximum legal speed of 25 miles per hour, which sounds like a very effective way of dealing with that phase of the situation.

The actions of a large proportion of truck drivers have brought about this drastic step.

While there are a good many sensible and courteous drivers who believe in giving the other fellow his share of the road, there are unfortunately too many men in charge of trucks who trade upon the size and weight of their machines and drive accordingly.

They are careless as to what portion of the road they occupy and as to the speed at which they travel and their reckless disregard for the rights of others make them a menace to vehicular traffic in general.

Quebec's move to curb these highway bullies might be followed in other sections of the Dominion.

UNIFORM TRAFFIC LAWS.

The contention of J. P. Bickell, Ontario registrar of motor vehicles, that municipal traffic laws should conform with provincial regulations, and that there should be a standard method of law enforcement, making for safety and the prevention of accidents, will be generally approved.

In fact, the time seems ripe for a vigorous campaign for a uniform code of traffic laws throughout the whole Dominion, so that no matter what province in Canada a motorists might find himself he would be governed by the same regulations.

With the completion of the trans-Canada highway inter-provincial motor travel will become much more popular and general, and it would be of the greatest convenience to motorists to know that no matter where they go they would be operating under the same traffic laws.

As it is now with different speed limits and many other variations in the regulations, a driver visiting another province is at a loss to know in many cases just what is expected of him; he often breaks a law because it is different from the code in his own part of the country.

Uniform motor laws and a nation-wide system of signals and signs would be a tremendous improvement over present conditions, and should be earnestly sought by motor leagues and other organizations.

OPPOSES AN INVESTIGATION.

The Kingston Whig-Standard on Thursday came out with a lengthy and vigorous editorial protesting against what it calls "the continual attempts of the Toronto Globe to break down the confidence of the people of Ontario in the Federal Department of Justice and the authorities who govern our Dominion penitentiaries."

The Kingston paper declares that it is absolutely and definitely opposed to an investigation by a royal commission on the basis of Dr. Withrow's articles.

"Are we then to believe many of the Globe writer's other statements and upon his word condemn every one in the institution from the warden down to the junior guard?" asks the Whig-Standard, and adds: "The whole thing is ridiculous on the face of it, and if people would only stop to think they would quickly realise it."

However, even the Kingston paper believes that there is need of more frankness on the part of prison officials, and urges a comprehensive reply to the specific charges made in the Globe's editorial columns regarding certain "unhealthful and unsanitary practices."

"If syphilitic prisoners use the same cups and bathtubs as healthy prisoners it should be stopped at once, and the public assured that it has been stopped," says the article. "The public also should be assured regarding tubercular prisoners, and something should be said of the segregation and treatment of mental deficients who should not be in the institution at all."

In other words, the journalistic supporter of the present order of things is not itself satisfied that everything is as it should be in our penitentiaries.

Why not then a proper investigation and let the public get the real facts as to all angles of prison administration?

A BRITISHER'S NERVE.

Accompanying the late King Feisal on his recent visit to London was Sir Francis Humphrys, one of those members of the British diplomatic service who have a knack of doing the right thing at the right time anywhere, no matter how dangerous or peculiar the circumstances may be. Men like Sir Francis who serve the Empire in the most out of the way places, can "go native" when they have to, and in his case he did it once with effective results.

He was Minister in Afghanistan in the time of King Amanullah. A revolt arose and the king was driven out of Kabul by a particularly fierce and obnoxious species of outlaw. Sir Francis herded the small British population into the British legation. Shells fell in and around the compound, demolishing part of the walls, and the tribesmen mustered to break inside. The situation was critical for a number of British women and children.

The Britishers were unarmed. So Sir Francis took the line that he knew would make the greatest hit with the Afghans. Standing on the wall smoking a cigarette, he orated to them in their own language for ten minutes. Those who were looking on reported that the Afghans began to smile, then talk back to him, shake their firsts laughingly and melt away. The legation was saved.

What magic words did the ambassador use? He simply unleashed a torrent of vile and abusive language, calling them all the filthiest names in the Afghan tongue, and beating them at their favorite manner of addressing an enemy.

That was psychology.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

IT IS RATHER INDEFINITE.

Miss Agnes MacPhail spoke to a large audience in Stratford. She spoke to an attentive audience as well. It is not possible to claim that one who expounds the tenets of the C.C.F. is not greeted by those who want to hear what it is all about. There have been two major meetings here and each was attended by a large audience.

This paper does not desire to join with those who seek to name the C.C.F. as a new organization allied with Communism. The leaders of the movement themselves deny this and we see no good reason for not accepting their word. After listening to two exponents we are more inclined toward naming the C.C.F. as straight socialism. We are certain its leaders would admit such to be the case.

This paper admits there are certain ideas advanced which have not been clarified. In all the addresses to which we have listened, and in all the material we have read, there is always reference to the socialization of industry, but there has been nothing final to say what industries shall be socialized. True, there is always a general statement saying that those which are producing material which is a common necessity are to be included, but there cannot be socialism with some left in private hands and others taken by the state.

When we approach the question of laying hands on industries in this country, with the purpose of controlling them or taking over their properties, we enter a strange field, one about which it might be well to think seriously before we make definite plans. It is a fact that Canada, being a comparatively young country, has not within its own right the capital needed for extensive development. We have depended to a large extent on other people to put up the money. There are, we believe, at least 1,200 factories in various parts of Canada, most of them in Ontario, which are branches of United States parent concerns. It was also clearly established in the days of newspaper shortage during the war, that most of the development of pulp and paper was in the hands of people from United States. We never made any objection to these people coming in here to spend their money; we looked upon the effort as something which would create places of employment in Canada; we were quite content to allow others to enter our land and do something which we should have been doing ourselves if we could have secured the necessary money. These outside promoters paid their way, we have given them deeds to their properties here, we have accepted their money in taxation, and have given them every recognition.

Now, if the C.C.F. program is to be put into application, and we find it advisable to socialize some of these industries, just how is it going to be done? Can we go to the owners of any of these factories and inform them that we are going to take possession of their premises? If there were a willingness to consider that proposal, then surely we would have to pay for the property taken, as British custom does not permit or countenance the idea of seizing property without remuneration. If the owners did not desire to sell, what would we do about it? If we did secure the properties by paying for them, we would have to know definitely that the managers appointed by the government would be able to operate the places as well or better than those who had first brought them into existence.

This paper is not so adamant in its views, nor so certain that things as they exist are right that it would oppose making needed changes in our way of doing things, but it admits frankly that it cannot see daylight in the proposal for the socialization of industry as propounded by C.C.F. speakers. There is a vague generality about it which is not being made clear by those who seek to explain the new platform.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

This was not Sandy Somerville's year, but the Canadian has again demonstrated that he is in the first rank of amateur golfers.

Whatever the true facts in the Duranleau case may be, there does not seem to be anything serious enough in the affair to justify a demand for the resignation of Toronto's chief of police.

Hon. T. L. Kennedy's tribute to the assistance given by the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition to farmers must be gratifying to the directors. Praise from the Minister of Agriculture is praise indeed.

That fusilade of shots heard in many parts of the district yesterday was merely a demonstration of the fact that the duck-hunting season had arrived.

THE TUTTS — By Crawford Young

VACATION ESCAPADE

By ARTHUR SHUMWAY

CHAPTER 25.

Sally finally got up painfully and slipped off her nightgown. She stood in front of the mirror and looked at her body. It was lined from shoulders to toes with little scratches and here and there were really deep cuts covered with dried blood, and blue-black bruises. Her face was haggard and her yellow hair was matted and kinky. She smiled ruefully. "Queen of the May," she told herself.

She went into her little bathroom and took a shower, steaming hot at first. The water smarted in the cuts and scratches, then lulled her outraged nerves. She followed the delicious, warm, soapy bath with a quick cold shower and taking a bottle of alcohol went over her body, dabbing at the cuts with the fluid. Then she powdered herself all over with an enormous big fluffy bath puff that was as a caress after the alcohol. She combed and brushed the kinks out of her hair washed her teeth gratefully and dressed. She looked again at the mirror. "Well, alive, anyhow," she commented.

Before starting downstairs she took inventory. The night, horrible as it had been, had had one profitable effect; it had shown Ike Proctor as a king of rum runners. She could not understand how she had been so stupid as no to have guessed the fact before, both she and Ted—though perhaps Ted knew more than he had told her. And now Proctor wanted to "talk" to her.

The first person she saw was Jasper. "Mawnin', Miss Gwynne. Afternoon, ah mean," he added. "Hits most two o'clock."

"Not really?"

"Y'all been sleepin, ma'm. Hits good for you," Jasper said. "They tell me you had a mighty mean time of it last night."

She nodded. Jasper stood there regarding her with that broad, knowing smile. Jasper annoyed her, to tell the truth. And she had an idea that there was something behind that vacuous grinning brown face, something mysterious, even sinister, that would bear investigation.

Fred Proctor came in when she was finishing her combination of lunch and breakfast—coffee, some of Cleo's hot biscuits palmetto honey scrambled eggs, and orange juice, reddish and sweet.

"Well—I'm glad to see that you're looking somewhat better," Proctor said, drawing up a chair and sitting down facing her. "It isn't every girl who could have come through what you did as well as you have, Sally."

"I didn't do anything," Sally said. "I just acted on instinct and here I am, somewhat the worse for wear, but not dead yet by any means."

Proctor looked thoughtfully out the window at the white line of surf. Sally studied his dark, strong face, and wondered what he was going to say. She decided to try to lead the conversation.

"What's happened to my gallent friend, Mr. Vitelli?" she asked lightly.

Proctor scowled and answered without taking his eyes off the surf.

"Gus will never bother you again," he said. "He knows better." Proctor paused, then turned to face her. He smiled, strangely. "Gus," he said, "is a bit of a problem."

"I don't know what I'll do if I ever see that ugly face of his again," she said.

"I'm afraid you'll have to see it, Sally," Proctor replied. "But I doubt if he'll bother to speak to you again."

"I think I owe a lot of thanks to your chauffeur, Mr. Proctor."

"Yes," Proctor agreed, smiling. "He was right there when he was needed, wasn't he?" Sally was afraid there was a subtle meaning in those words.

"He wasn't hurt, was he?" Sally asked.

"Not especially," Proctor said.

"He was then?"

"His cheek was powder-burned a bit."

Slowly the significance of this statement penetrated Sally's tired mind.

"You mean he was shot at?" she demanded.

Proctor nodded. And he answered the question he saw in her eyes and told her how he had come upon Vitelli ready to send a stream of bullets into Ted's stomach.

"Oh, that old beast!" Sally exclaimed. "Why don't you have him thrown in jail?"

Proctor nodded. "Yes," he said, enigmatically, "why don't I? Because, as I said, he's a bit of a problem."

Sally was puzzled, but tried not to show it.

"You don't suppose he'll try to hurt Mr. Chandler again?" she asked.

"He may," Proctor agreed pleasantly, "but I doubt it. And it might interest you to know that Mr. Chandler is a very resourceful young man, very."

"Well, it was awfully brave of him to help me," Sally said quickly.

"Wasn't it?" Proctor said.

Sally looked at him quickly but saw only his suave smile, which told her nothing.

"Sally," Proctor said, "a great many things have happened here in my house lately. You're one of them. One of the few pleasant ones, may I add?"

Proctor turned and looked about the room to see if they were alone, then he continued:

"My uncle died. He shot himself." There was a painful pause after these words. "Since then some peculiar things have happened. I had a visitor one night. Do you recall? Mr. Mike Collins?"

Sally nodded.

"Charming chap. Charming. And that same night, if you remember, a gentleman entered your room. You seemed to have frightened him away, out the window perhaps."

Sally nodded.

"And the other evening—only last night, wasn't it?—some gentleman tried to shoot your gallant Mr. Chandler—in my car." He looked at her and smiled. "But Mr. Chandler managed to dodge them. Fortunately." He paused again. "A very resourceful young man, as I have said.

"And then last night we went for a little trip down the river and Mr. Vitelli, the urbane Mr. Gus Vitelli, became—amorous. And Mr. Chandler, the resourceful Mr. Chandler, took your part. Unfortunately, you were knocked overboard, but managed to swim to safety."

Sally wondered what was coming. The light tone of irony in the man's voice frightened her.

"You fell into the hands of some men—on a boat." He stopped to light a cigaret and blew the smoke toward the ceiling, carefully, in round blue rings. "My boat," he added and stopped.

He got up and walked to the window. "Because it so happens that the houseboat we went down the river on last night is not the only boat I own. By no means, Sally."

He turned toward her again. "And now to go back a bit," he said. "Your resourceful Mr. Chandler referred to you last night by your first name."

Sally's heart began to sink. "By my first name?" she said with forced gay puzzlement.

He nodded solemnly. "He said that when he heard you scream he was certain it was 'Sally's voice.' He seemed to know your voice rather well, Sally. And you, too."

Sally tried to laugh easily. "Why, of course. He always gets the car ready for me. And he often comes into the house looking for you."

"Often," Proctor agreed. "Well now. Let us go forward again. You fell into the hands of the men on my boat. They recognized you somehow and sent you here. And now you're quite safe from the clutches of Mr. Vitelli and—the river. But——" He drew again upon the cigaret, with exasperating, unnerving, deliberateness.

"Sally, I like you a lot, a lot more than you may suspect."

Her eyes fell and she felt her cheeks flush. Whatever was coming would be embarrassing.

"I take more interest in you than you may suspect," he went on, "and that is why I wanted to talk to you, Sally. How is your memory?"

"I—I don't exactly understand?"

"Can you forget that somebody told you that was my boat?"

"Why—yes, I suppose. Yes, of course, Mr. Proctor."

"Chandler doesn't know that it was my boat. I see no reason why he should know any more than he does at this stage. Do you, Sally?"

She tried to smile. "Why, no. No, I don't see why."

Proctor dabbed the end of his cigaret into Sally's saucer. He smiled and looked into her eyes. She tried to return his smile, but it was a great effort. Finally Proctor rose.

"Make yourself as easy as possible to-day," he said. "Take one of the cars out if you wish, but for a few days I'd stay close to the house. And if I went out out at night I wouldn't take one of my cars."

"Yes, Mr. Proctor. And thank you."

"Don't mention it. Well, I must go out and see if Chandler has come yet. I told him to get a good sleep this morning. Poor lad, he was all worn out looking for you last night and I imagine his face will be pretty sore today where that bullet scraped it. Sally, I have big plans for that young man, big plans. But he mustn't hear too much about me and my boats. Do you understand?"

"Yes, of course, Mr. Proctor," Sally said.

Proctor looked at her in a detached, studious way. "I hope so," he said, and sighed. He walked on out, leaving her perspiring and trembling.

NEWS OF OUR OWN VILLAGE

Rolly Denne's fall fair has been holding forth all week and what with trotting in the ring, a band from England, well to the east of us, and a midway and everything has been quite a show.

Live stock entries at the fall fair this week was good, except in the elephant and zebra classes, there being just 1 each of such on exhibit.

A mechanical man that answered questions was a feature at the fall fair this week, but unfortunately nobody thought to ask the gadget when the locks bridge is going to be built.

Dan Simons, this village's gift to stageland, done his stuff in front of the grandstand at the fair this week. Dan surely shaking a mean hoof for a bird of his years.

The rotunda of Graham's Hotel is all dolled up this week with a stuffed lunge caught by Shorty Gutterson and a big bunch of gladioluses from W. J. Kennedy's garden.

Judging by the no. of car raffle tickets that is being sold in these parts these days the horseless carriage industry must be picking up real lively.

Rupe Gliddon's band from Lindsay, west of us, was down to hear the Scots band play and Rupe got a big hand passing the grandstand in his regalia, many taking him for the Guards' bandmaster.

Ball teams from Kingston, to the east of us, and Toronto, west of us, played here Wed. p.m. and the Kingston lads win 7 to 3. Local folks was surprised to find themselves cheering for the same.

ALL OF US

By MARSHALL MARLIN

A SPRAY OF PINE.

I held in my hands a spray of pine, torn as I passed that way from a little living tree. And I marvel as I look at the beauty and complexity of this twig, these scores of needles, this soft yellow flower that is hidden at the center of the cluster. The twig is rough and sturdy, gray on one side, a soft pinkish brown on the other. The needles, no more than two inches long, are a bright and glistening green. I shake the spray of pine and a yellow cloud of pollen falls away and drifts through the air to the ground and is touched lightly by a puff of wind and flows vaguely away. In the spring, in the high mountains, that pollen falls into the running water and is carried down to all the little lakes and all the shores are yellow with the magic stuff.

But I look again at the needles of the pine and examine them closely. They are narrow and sharp, three-sided like a French bayonet and to my crude eye they seem smooth as marble. . . . But I have read that there are scores of tiny "breathing holes" in the needle of the pine and were I able to shrink myself so small that I could become but a fiftieth as tall as the thickness of this page, I might lower myself into one of those holes and be in the presence of many wonders. I would be in enormous spaces, groping through a dim green light. The floors would move and pulse beneath my feet, the walls of the great factory where the leaf is converting water and carbon dioxide into food for the tree—they too, would sway a nd move before my eyes. I should see wisps of gas moving regularly through the hallways, streams of protoplasm would move past me. I'd see machines making resin; sugar and starch and water and proteins would pass me by. And with a gas mask on my head I would drop into a tunnel where a river of sugar solution flows to the base of the twig. . . . Down, down I should go in the cool, sweet darkness of the tree, for days and days, across continents—remembering, always, my tiny size—and come at last to a place of rushing waters where the tremendous root system of the tree ravages the earth of moisture.

And when I rose again to the surface and climbed through a "breathing hole" and resumed my normal size again I would be filled with wonder and awe and such a deep respect for a living tree that I would not be able to put my emotions into words. . . . And if you asked me, "Does a tree live? Is there any mind at work in a pine needle? Is there a directing force behind all this incessant activity?" I would not be able to say "No, this is all chemistry, all mechanical."

* * *

I hold this green spray of mountain pine in my hand and I am humbled by the mystery and the strangeness that is in every little, living, unregarded thing.

A Thought

SHARING

The note of the day in all its higher and nobler trend of thought is to include, to share, to communicate. Emerson has remarked that "exclusiveness excludes itself." All that we keep no one we deprive ourself of out we go without. If we admit every one, and if we admit a few in order to lay to our souls the flattering unction of exclusiveness, we exclude the many. If you have greater knowledge, better manners, finer culture, do not exclude those who have less, but include and share, and find in it its divinest sweetness.—Lilian.

ON THIS DATE

A DAY IN CANADIAN HISTORY

By Fred Williams

THE STATUE OF THE SAGUENAY

On this date, in 1881, passengers up the Saguenay River saw the great statute of the Virgin which had been dedicated by a prelate of the church the day before. The story of that statue is so romantic as to be without a parallel. About 60 years ago there was a commercial traveller from Quebec City whose duties took him into the then quite primitive Chicoutimi country. One day in the fall he got caught in a storm and was returned to his home a very sick man, so sick indeed that, after months in bed, his doctors told him that he wasincurable and that he would not live to see another birthday.

But Charles Napoleon Robitaille—that was his name—made up his mind that he was not going to die. Like other people, in later years, he had children to look after, and he determined that, with God's aid, he would live until he saw them established. He prayed in the privacy of his room; he pleaded for recovery; he made a solemn vow that if he were allowed to live just 10 years more he would erect a statute of the Virgin on Cape Trinity. Almost at once he began to recover; within a month he was out of bed; in less than three months he was back on the road, calling on customers who welcomed him as if from the dead.

Ten years passed; Charles Napoleon still lived; two of the doctors who had pronounced his death sentence had themselves passed on; and the anniversary came for the fulfilment ofthe vow. There was in lower town Quebec, a skilled worker in wood, Louis Jobin, who had made many statues for Ste. Anne de Beaupre. To him Robitaille gave his commission for the carving of a statue of the Virgin 25 feet high, and in due time it was completed. It was then covered with lead and takendown to the Saguenay.

There on September 15, 1881—it was placed in position and blessed by Monsignor Racine, the first Bishop of Chicoutimi. And there it has remained ever since, in summer sun and mid-winter snows, swept by the mighty winds which torment the Saguenay—twice repaired, but, in effect, the same statue which paid the debt of Charle Napoleon Robitaille, who not only saw the statue erected but lived for eight years longer, only giving up his trips to the Saguenay when old age ended his travels.

Character From Handwriting

By BLANCHE A. DRAPER

A Feature Conducted by Peterborough's Leading Handwriting Analyst for the Readers of The Examiner.

Grace Stewart, Albert Street, Peterborough, Ontario: The handwriting as depicted on your sample for analysis indicates that you are steady and quite persevering. You are energetic and thoughtful, nervous under pressure but usually manage to conceal the fact. Your writing shows that you are not yet fully mature, so naturally the formations will change to a certain extent till you have reached the age where your life-work characteristics will predominate in the outlines of your writing. However, you have several really good qualifications at present. One in particular is exceptional will-power. This should enable you to make up your mind soon as to what you wish to do definitely. You are honest and fun-loving, generous when you have the wherewithal to permit you to be so. Clerking is all that suggests itself in the formations of your signature as yet. But you have plenty of time in which to make your mind up and I am sure that you will be successful.

Kay Barrie, Birdsalls, Ontario: The handwriting as delineated on your sample for analysis shows that you are excitable and overanxious to arrive at conclusions. This characteristic will pass as you become more mature in years, but at present if you wish to know what your life-work ought to be, I think that you will be pleased to know that you might work along a semi-scientific line. You are quite versatile and appear to be on the verge of deciding definitely as to a career. So you will no doubt benefit by the above suggestion. You are fond of sports, but get easily tired out physically, so it would be well for you to rest more often, and not tire your mental and physical energetic thought-waves as often as you do now. Your imagination is good but does not lead you to aspirations along a literary line. Sometimes you desire to work diligently and well, but at other times you appear to want to put all thoughts of work out of your mind. However, your general character is good, so you should have nothing about which to worry for one's character is more essential than riches.

Mary H. Graham, 330 Water St., Peterborough, Ontario: This handwriting as represented on sample for analysis describes you as neat, careful and thoughtful. You are well poised, gracious and kind. You are ever ready to lend a helping hand to those in need of assistance. You have the outlines depicted in your signature of either teacher or nurse. This, however, does not of necessity mean that you should undertake either of these lines unless you so desire. But, sympathy and understanding such as yours is of too great a value not to find a sphere in the universe somewhere. Your taste is discriminating and genteel. People would do well to listen to your good advice and not to question you. There is a characteristic noted in your signature which shows that sometimes you think perhaps a trifle too quickly, then you have to stop to reconsider before making definite plans.

Elsie Lain, Havelock, Ontario: The handwriting as indited on your sample for analysis reveals anxious determination and excellent will-power. By anxious, I mean that you strive to please at all times and give of your very best to your work. You are usually about the same as regards disposition, steady and reliable, energetic and you have keen perceptions and discernments. Yours is altogether a very credible character, and if you continue as you are doing now, I see no logical reason why you should not be most successful.

Bernice Coone, R. R. No. 1, Lakefield, Ontario: This handwriting as represented on sample for analysis shows clarity of opinion, sharpness and decidedness in issues pertaining to business, sometimes sarcasm and hasty decisions. You are temperamental and clever, artistic and ingenious. You like to manage things in your own way. You detest being hurried unless of your own free will. You are too generous sometimes and then when you should be generous you are not. It is a sort of complex which as a rule makes people spend too much when they know that they should not, then when spending would be perfectly all right, they will not allow themselves the pleasure. However, this is no detriment to your general character, which is very good.

The appointments were made last night at the closing sessions of the provincial synod of the ecclesiastical province of Rupert's Land.

Earlier in the day decision had been made to form a diocese of the Arctic by eliminating the diocese of Mackenzie river and making other diocesan boundary arrangements. The appointments were formally announced by Archbishop I. O. Stringer in bringing the Synod proceedings to a close late last night

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.— (C.P.)— Dollar a bushel wheat was almost a reality on the Board of Trade today May contracts sold up to 99⅝ cents a bushel at the close.

An advance of almost four cents a bushel came near the close when public buying became finally general and found little pressure from profit takers. The market was at the highest levels in a month or more with all deliveries of wheat selling above 90 cents.

The strength in wheat carried all other grains along to higher ground with closing prices generally at or near the day's peak. The May delivery of corn sold up to 62¼ cents. Some strength in corn was brought about by forecasts of frost to-night in portions of the Dakotas and Nebraska.

Inflation talk and another advance in the price of free gold were also factors in the rise of grain prices.

A Minstrel

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 16 —Truly, the spirit of the wandering troubadour yet lives. Ask Dink Williamson.

When Dink was mowing the lawn yesterday at a filling station a stranger appeared and offered to do the job for "15 cents—to get some breakfast." Dink agreed.

The stranger found a $10 bill on the lawn.

"Now" said Dink "you can get a real meal."

"No," said the stranger, a gleam in his eye, "I guess coffee and rolls will be enough for me. But I've got a saxophone in hock. There's where the ten bucks are going."

WALL STREET

Beck, who has caught 38 hawks in the last two weeks in traps set on top of poles, once guaranteed to catch 1,000 hawks and owls in the Searchmont area if the Board of Trade would give him 10 cents each.

SMART STYLE SHOW MUCH APPRECIATED

Miss Alice T. Williams Gives Style Show in Her Show Rooms.

An interesting display of the type of clothes worn by the smart feminine dresser of this season, and probably next season, also, was made on Thursday evening at Alice T. Williams' show rooms, where copies of Paris originals, from such great couturiers as Patou, Chanel Molyneux, Maggy Rouff and Schiaparelli, were interpreted in delightful fashions by the young ladies who modelled for the occasion: Miss Lenore Lyle, Miss Mary Menzies and Miss Anne Gallagher.

The shades included black, brown, green, blackberry and violet, with much higher necklines and shoulders in which the broad effect is still noticeable, but not over-emphasized.

Street clothes are slim and straight and evening modes display fulness below the knee with small trains in evidence on several of the models.

One very much admired "dressed up" type was in black velvet, with cleverly-arranged sleeves of sequins and brilliants. This was a Patou copy. An artistic evening gown which created much favorable comment was in eggshell corde'tts, with unusual square decolletage trimmed with Kolinsky squirrel fur.

There were dashing sports coats in tweed and luxuriously-trimmed dress coats furred with Kolinsky squirrel, Persian lamb, fox, wolf, racoon and caracul and developed with interesting high shoulders and novel sleeves.

A much-like Schiaparelli model was made of Gouyard tweed, in a three-piece suit in which a smart colored scarf harmonized with the material.

There were knitted things also, in new designs and color combinations.

Frequent comments of "How reasonable," were made with regard to the prices.

EXCHANGE PLOWS FOR SEPARATORS

Canadian Made Plows Exchanged for English Made Cream Separators.

Canadian-made plows are being exchanged for British cream separators under an agreement which has resulted from the Ottawa Conference, a cabled despatch to the Toronto Telegram recalls in a report that the first consignments have already been delivered, and Cockshutt Company are distributing cream separators throughout Canada, while Lister's are selling the Cockshutt tractor plows in the United Kingdom.

"As Canada wants our separators, and at the same time is anxious for us to sell her plows we have arranged a barter scheme," Percy Lister, managing director of the English company said to the Telegram's London representative.

This news item is of more than passing interest to Peterborough for the reason that De Laval made-in-Canada cream separators are manufactured here.

"That may be news to some of your readers, but it is not to us," W. R. Breyfogle, general manager of the De Laval Company, Limited remarked to The Examiner this morning in reference to this cabled despatch.

"The Cockshutt Company are distributors in Canada for the Lister Company of England, who handle Cockshutt products in Great Britain. What has happened is that by an agreement of the Ottawa Conference, Canada is admitting the Lister Company's cream separators free of duty. Any separators made in Britain may enter this country without duty charges. That is the fact, and I don't think there is any comment which I should make about it."

URGES ISSUING CURRENCY TO PAY FOR PUBLIC WORKS

BLUE RIDGE, Alta., Sept. 16. — (C.P.).—Issue of currency for the payment of public works to the extent of stimulating business in Canada is advocated by Hon. Chas. Stewart, M.P. for West Edmonton, and former Minister of the Interior, in order that "800,000 of our people on the bread line might find places in society."

Mr. Stewart made this suggestion in an address to a large meeting here last night. W. R. Howson, Alberta Liberal leader, also addressed the meeting.

The Liberal Party of Canada wants a national bank operated and controlled by an independent commission in the interests of the Canadian people, Mr. Stewart stated.

The Simons, one of a string of four barges, had loaded the carbide at Sault, Mich. and was down-bound. Rough weather caused the leak.

TINY STEAMER BLOWS BOILER

Craft Developing Leak is Taken in Tow Off Virginia Coast.

NO CASUALTIES.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16 (C.P.) — The Radio Marine Corporation today picked up a wireless message that the steamer Beckwith of Reedville, Va., blew out a boiler off fourteen foot land light and was leaking badly.

The message was sent by the steamer New Brunswick and said that a coast guard ship had the distressed vessel in tow. No casualties were reported.

First reports picked up by radio marine gave the name of the ship as the British steamer New Mexico, but later advices corrected the error.

Fourteen foot land light is at the entrance to Delaware Bay. The Beckwith was described as a small vessel.

A message picked up by Radio Corporation of America at 11 a.m. from the Coast Guard Cutter Galates said:

"S.S. Beckwith of Reedville, Va. blew out her boiler. Leaking badly. We have taken her in tow."

THEATRES

"CAPTURED"

There is an excellent cast in this feature. Leslie Howard, who is making such a name for himself and whose services are sought, so it is said, by all the large producers, Douglas Fairbanks, Junior, who has recently "gon British" with his father and Paul Lucas, make the trio of masculine actors, while Margaret Lindsay is the girl of the piece, in a part that requires two only very brief appearances. And yet she is the reason for the working out of the entire story, which contains a curious amount of treachery in its unfolding.

"Captured" is a war picture, showing a side of war seldom treated—a prison camp where officers alone were interned during war time.

Here, after several scenes showing extra brutal treatment of the prisoners, Leslie Howard, who is a young English officer, obtains better quarters for the prisoners. And then his old friend, Jack Digby, also a prisoner of war, appears on the scene and neglects to inform Howard (Frederick Allison) that he has been carrying on an intrigue with Allison's wife, left behind in England.

After a spectacular aeroplane getaway by Digby, circumstances point to him as the perpetrator of a ghastly murder, and his return is requested by the German commandant, according to a special war code. He comes back and is about to be shot at dawn when Allison arrives with a letter left by the real murderer, later a suicide. The denouement is satisfactory for the double-crossing Digby, but not so good for Allison, who remains as the martyr of the piece.

The comedy is an "Our Gang" affair, with all the clever small laddies as inmates of a baby farm.

Then there are Captain Henry's "Showboat Four," in a radio program brought to the screen.—Jeanette.

SPORT OF KINGS

By ART MURRAY

(Special to Examiner.)

WITH TODAYS racing at Thorncliffe over they put up the shutters at the Leaside course for another year and this just leaves us three more tracks to operate. Bill Weant put over his second winner in two days when he got Matadi down in front on Friday. Everybody connected with racing was stunned to hear that they have removed Bill Donoghue to a Guelph sanitarium apparently on his last legs. No later than last Wednesday he saddled Spey Crest for his winning effort, Although well past the seventy-year mark Bill was as spry as a two-year-old and always in the best of spirits. He was always known as a square shooter and everybody hopes for a speedy recovery for this grand ol' gentleman of the turf.

FRANK HIGGINS certainly has his horses in fine shape. Powder Monkey completed his fourth win of the week and it will pay you to string along with anything he saddles from now on. One thing about Frank is that any horse he stars in a race is always trying. Up to Friday night, Conny Smythe had not won a race at this meeting which is something new for this stable, and they will certainly make up for lost time in the near future.

IT SEEMS strange this year not to see Guy Bedwell among those present at Canadian tracks but he decided to pass up the fall meetings in favor of Fairmount Park, Ill. St. Christopher is in Toronto from Montreal and do not be surprised if he cops a heat or two before he leaves Canada. He is a former C. V. Whitney colorbearer, having bred by that famous establishment. They tell us that Myabeer is all primed up for a winning effort.

HAYFIRE AS predicted in this column won on Thursday and we look for him to come on and win a few in a row. Every fall he reaches the peak of his form and turns in his best efforts. Rock Crest is another we would like to hand on to you for your consideration. Watergap finished second to Powder Monkey on Friday and his very next start we look for him to come down in front. This one is about the most consistent plater in our midst.

BAILIFF OUT, FASCISTS IN FORMS IMPASSE MINUS DIN

Blackshirts Hold Barn But Offer no Violence to Police

ENTER BY RUSE

Sudbury.—Fascists have ousted a bailiff who for three months had been in possession of a barn for tithe default at Sudbury (Suffolk).

When tricked into leaving the barn, in which he had slept every night since May, the bailiff made himself a bed of straw within a few yards of the barn.

He has slept on this straw during the three nights since his "eviction."

"I am going to stick it out," he said.

"The Fascists have turned me out of the barn, but I am still in charge of the goods inside.

"When they put me out by a trick I stood by all night, and I am going to remain by this barn door until I am told to leave it. Thank goodness the nights are warm, otherwise I should have a very uncomfortable time of it."

The bottom half of the barn door was fastened with wire and would require considerable force to open it.

As a reporter started to climb over he was immediately challenged by the Fascists, and had to wait until the "officer" in charge gave him permission to enter the "fortress."

Ready For Siege

The Blackshirts were sitting smoking on camp beds in the barn surrounded by the impounded goods, a medley of farming implements. In the corner they had a store of drinking water and provisions; they were evidently prepared for a possible siege.

They pointed to the provisions, and said they could hold out for several days. Then the leader told his story.

"We knew," he said, "that tenders had again been invited for the seized goods. We are going to prevent their removal.

"We engaged the bailiff in conversation, and by a ruse one of our members slipped behind him, and before he could do anything we had banged the door and claimed possession.

"We admire his pluck, because although he was single-handed he stuck to his position outside all night.

"Next day he communicated with the Sudbury council officials, and they came over with the local police superintendent.

"At the barn door the superintendent said: 'We want to come in.'

"I replied, 'You can't because we are in possession. We have taken charge.'

"The clerk of the council then said, 'We want to come in and look at the goods with the head bailiff.' I answered, 'You won't come in, but you can see the goods over the top of the door.'

Will Avoid Violence

"After they had had a private consultation the clerk said, 'You know the legal position?' I replied, 'Yes.' He then said, 'Very well. We shall have to go to another quarter.'

"They left, but we are expecting them back at any time.

"We are out to help the farmers in the tithe war," added the Fascist leader, "and we are here to prevent any surprises.

"We have received instructions from headquarters to avoid physical violence, but we are to use every legitimate method of passive resistance. We shall resist any attempt to take these implements."

The owner of the farm, Mrs. Gardiner, said, "All I can say is that I have not given the Fascists permission to come here."

It is in connection with this barn that 36 farmers have been summoned for alleged unlawful assembly.

The cases have been adjourned until after the harvest.

MINUTES MEAN DAYS ON RANGOON MODEL

Year Goes in Fifteen Hours But Only in a London Basement

Tottenham.—One of the most wonderful working models ever built occupies 40 feet square in a basement of a house here. It represents the 800 square miles of Rangoon and the Rangoon river basin.

Millions of pounds might have to be spent by the Burmese government in solving the problem of the silt deposited by the river, but instead the port commissioners have had a model of the harbor built.

The model was built from a plan of the river as it was in 1875. Banks, bed, water, rainfall—everything is to scale. A machine works the tides.

Electric fans make the monsoons and pipes leading from tanks convey the right amount of silt and rain according to the season.

Each tide takes 76 seconds, which means that a day is about two and a half minutes.

A month will speed by while the model is being explained to a visitor. A year goes in 12 hours.

When the model has been working for 20 "years" it was stopped and the water drained off. To the intense joy and relief of the engineer when the model in 1895 was compared with a plan of the Rangoon river made in 1895 the changes since 1875 were the same in both.

TRAM TRAPS GIRL

Firemen Called Out to Effect Release

Pendleton. — Salford fire brigade was called out to release an 18-year-old girl caught under a tram in Cross Lane.

The girl, Josephine McCann, of Slater St., Pendleton, had a remarkable escape from serious injury.

When the tram stopped she was lying under the lifeguard but was suffering only from bruises and shock.

The fire brigade was called to lift the tram, but in the meantime two passers-by managed to drag the girl inch by inch from under the lifeguard, and on the arrival of the brigade she had been taken in the ambulance to Salford Royal hospital.

WAITER KEEPS COOL DISARMS INTRUDER

Gun in Hand, Man Invades Hotel Lounge

Manchester. — A powerfully-built man brandishing a large revolver and shouting threats was the central figure in an incident at the Seymour Hotel, Upper Chorlton-road. He entered the main lounge and attracted no attention until the head waiter, Alfred Brewin, turned from the bar to find the muzzle of the revolver, a large-calibre Service weapon, pointed at his forehead.

Customers were dumfounded and barmaids screamed as Mr. Brewin put down his tray and said: "What do you think you are playing at?"

The man mumbled something incoherently, and Mr. Brewin brushed him out of the way, taking advantage of the man's hesitancy to run upstairs for ex-Detective Inspector Edward Crowther, the licensee.

For a few moments customers and staff alike watched the man anxiously as he walked about the lounge, still holding the revolver and glaring at everyone fiercely.

Then Mr. Crowther crept down the stairs, and stealing up behind the man pinned his arms to his side before snatching the revolver from him.

IN HALLOWED CHAPEL LIES BODY OF CHILD

Draped With Flags of Two Nations, Coffin Placed at Winchester

Winchester. — Many visitors here lately have been surprised to see in the Chapel of the Guardian Angels at the east end of the cathedral a little coffin draped with the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes.

It is the coffin of Roderick McDonald Duthie, a nine-year-old boy, who was killed last May when a train from Waterloo to Alton was derailed at Wimbledon.

His parents, who are English, have lived in the United States for some years, but have been in England this summer on a business visit, and they wished to take their boy back to be buried at their home.

The difficulty was to find a resting place during the interval.

This was overcome when the Dean and Chapter of Winchester offered a place for the embalmed body in the little chapel beneath the figures of protecting angels carved in the vaulting.

The coffin has been kept decorated with flowers, some having been placed there unobtrusively by children.

ESCAPE CLIFF FALL

Newport.—About a dozen visitors sitting under the cliffs between Colwell Bay and Totland Bay, Isle of Wight, had a narrow escape from being overwhelmed in a cliff fall.

A few falling stones gave warning of a much larger fall, which followed immediately. A man shouted, "Look out!" and those on the beach ran for their lives, some having to go into the water to escape the sand and boulders.

PROMISES POSITIONS TAKES WIDOWS' GOODS

Driver Tells Women to Push Car—Drives Off With Luggage

Scarborough. — How two widows who set off with a prospective employer for Scarborough and saw him drive off with their luggage and jewellery, worth £200, was told by Mrs. Teresa M. Madden, of Portsdown-road, Maida Vale, London.

She and Mrs. E. Abrams, of Brompton-road, Carlisle, were promised positions as hostesses at a Scarborough hotel by a man who said he owned the hotel.

They were driving north from London on Wednesday when he tricked them, and drove off with nine suitcases containing evening dresses and furs, two hat boxes and handbags.

"I had a diamond ring, bracelets, and a gold watch in my luggage," said Mrs. Madden. "He told us to bring our best clothes and evening dresses so that we could be smart hostesses.

"When we left London he told us not to speak to him as he wanted to concentrate on driving. At Haddon in Huntingdonshire the car stopped. Mr. Smith jumped out, did something with the engine, and said it would start if we pushed.

"We both got out, leaving our handbags in the car, and were starting to push. He climbed into the driver's seat, started the car and drove off like the wind, leaving us bewildered in the middle of the road.

"It was miles from anywhere and we stopped a motor cyclist, who told the nearest police station of our plight."

MAY SALVAGE WRECK TO TEST APPARATUS

Not Anxious to Reach Lusitania's Treasure

Southampton.—Will the wreck of the Lusitania ever be explored?

In October 1931 Captain H. H. Railey, the salvage expert, announced plans to send divers down to the wreck of the Cunarder, which was sunk by a submarine off the Irish coast during the war.

When Captain Railey reached Southampton from New York recently he said:

"Certain parts of our apparatus are now ready, but if we go on with the scheme it will not be with the idea to salvage sunken treasure, for although it is popularly believed that the Lusitania had a large quantity of gold in her strongroom, that was not the case.

"The purpose of any attempts to reach the wreck we may make will be to prove the merits of a new type of salvage apparatus.

"If we succeed we shall probably try to reach the ship's strongroom, in which there are jewels and money deposits, one of which amounts to £10,000."

WEDDING GUESTS LEAVE IN PROTEST

Rector Chides Audience for Curiosity

Settle.—About forty people walked out in protest at Settle parish church during a wedding ceremony.

The church was nearly full when the vicar, Rev. T. P. B. Twemlow, paused in the ceremony and ordered a child in arms, which was murmuring, to be taken out. After a few seconds' delay the child was carried out and the vicar proceeded with the service.

Later, in an address to the newly married couple, he commented on babies being taken to church on such occasions.

He also spoke of people coming to wedding ceremonies, not for the religious side, but merely to stare at the bride and her attendants. They even sat in the ends of the pews near the aisle to have a better view, he said.

At this point a number of people, including some of the guests, walked out of the church.

At the close some of the guests interviewed Mr. Twemlow in the vestry.

76-CARAT DIAMOND PLACED ON MARKET

Famous Golconda Gem Was Property of Austrian Duke

London. — The famous Golconda diamond, an Indian stone which weighs 76 karats, is for sale.

It is a pure blue-white stone, and is unique among the gems of the world by reason of its great size and brilliance.

The Golconda was purchased from the Archduke Joseph of Austria a few months ago as a speculation by a syndicate of buyers. The Diamond Corporation is acting for this syndicate, and it is hoped that £60,000 will be paid for the famous stone.

Since it was purchased from the Archduke the diamond market has revived, so that a substantial profit is assured.

For some time it had been assumed that £50,000 would be the highest price for which it would be sold, but its increase in value has been a triumph for the speculators.

The Golconda has been in the possession of the house of Hapsburg ever since the Middle Ages and has long been the wonder of all beholders, having a singular clarity and beauty of color.

PENNILESS EX-COP PLAYS BARREL-ORGAN

Hopes to Raise Money, Go to Courts and Restore Good Name

Birkenhead.—Playing a barrel organ in Birkenhead is a Liverpool ex-policeman who for nine years controlled a private detective service for over £4,000 a year, was tried for his life on a murder charge which he alleges was a frame-up, was liberated from prison through official intervention, and was shadowed by armed persecutors. He is now penniless.

The man is Alexander Kirkwood, son of the famous old British and Olympic athlete. With a wife and six children to maintain he is making a fight to restore his honor and livelihood.

He hopes to raise the necessary funds by organ grinding and by appearing shortly on the music hall stage, and then he intends to reveal the story of his persecution to the privy council.

After resigning from the Liverpool "One night I was driving home private detective agency in Vancouver.

"I discovered corruption and dope peddling was rife," he said, "and when I was commissioned to investigate, the narcotic and booze rackets in Vancouver became frightened.

One night I was driving home Horace Havord, who had joined my staff from the London Metropolitan police, when, as I pulled up, a man approached, and, putting his hand to his hip pocket, commanded, 'Move, and I'll blow you to blazes.'

"As four men had been shot dead that week by hold-up men, I whipped out my gun and shouted, 'Put 'em up.' The man grabbed my gun and it went off, killing him. The man turned out to be a drunkard of low repute.

"Then came the frame-up. I was charged with murder, and while I was awaiting trial, Havord, the only witness of the shooting, was kidnapped.

"After perjured evidence, I was convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to four years' imprisonment. I served eight months and then my case was investigated. After another 16 months, the governor-general commanded my liberation.

"Even then, they did not leave me alone. I knew too much for them, so a couple of 'bulls' followed me everywhere with the threat of framing me again. In the end I was forced to board a steamer with my wife and children and return to England.

"To-day I am down and out, and my nerves are shattered," concluded Mr. Kirkwood, "but I will fight my way until my dying day."

BIG GRASS FIRE TAKES CROWD FROM ORATORS

Hyde Park Spielers Forgotten for Hotter Spectacle

Hyde Park.—Sunday crowds were treated to a series of spectacles when grass fires broke out owing to the extreme heat. There is nothing a London crowd likes better than a fire, if it is in the open and nobody is likely to suffer from it.

Intense excitement was caused by a grass fire in Hyde Park in the afternoon. The Marble Arch orators were deserted, and crowds tore over the grass to watch the blaze.

PICTURE OF DANCING GIRL BRINGS LETTER FROM DUKE

Nobleman Expresses Wish to Meet Beauty Who Won Thirteen Contests

ASKS FOR PHOTO

Brighton.—The romance of a duke, who has fallen in love with the newspaper photograph of a beautiful Brighton dancing girl, was revealed here recently.

A letter written to the girl by the nobleman bears his address and telephone number, and the envelope is sealed with wax and stamped with his coronet and initials.

The girl is Miss Esme Bankhead, of First Ave., Hove, who this year won her 13th local beauty contest.

Until a few days ago she was working as a mannequin, and posing for photographs for advertisements.

Lately she has been working as a dance partner at Bunny's, a club recently opened on the Brighton seafront.

Miss Bankhead, has a mass of platinum blonde hair, blue eyes, and a figure that has won the admiration of beauty contest judges in every competition she has entered.

In the letter, the duke asked for the young woman's photograph and expressed the hope that one day they should meet. "Perhaps I shall never hear from you at all," he wrote, "and that would be a tragedy."

Thought It Was A Hoax

In an interview, Miss Bankhead said that when she received the first letter she thought it was a hoax.

"I thought maybe someone had contrived to obtain some of his notepaper," she said. "So I wrote to the duke at his address and he replied saying that he had sent the original letter."

"I have not had time to go to see him yet," she continued. "I haven't even made up my mind that I shall do so. There has been so little time but I think I will go to see him. He has written a wonderful letter to me."

Miss Bankhead's mother was most distressed when she heard that the secret had leaked out. "The duke has written the most beautiful letter to my daughter. I think he has fallen in love with her photograph. It would be a terrible thing if his name appeared in print," she said.

HARD LOT FOR VICARS

Fosdyke. — The parish of Fosdyke is regarded with misgivings by many of the county clergy owing to the seeming inability of the villagers to agree with their vicars.

This may be taken as one reason why the living, even with its undoubted attraction of a salary of £350 a year and a vicarage, has been refused by three men to whom it has been offered since the death of Rev. H. de Lacey Singleton several months ago.

"I am afraid that Fosdyke has rather an unlucky reputation," a clergyman in a neighboring parish commented. "Its last three vicars were not happy. One of them left the vicarage one day and was never seen there again, and another died a very disappointed man after ministering there with but scant reward for 12 years."

One of the villagers said: "We want somebody who will let us use the schoolroom for whist drives and help us to organize a summer outing. We do not ask much beyond that."

'OVER THE TOP' HERO DIES WHILE BATHING

Kicking Football, Lieut.-Col. Clare Led Men Against Foe

Chertsey.—Lieut.-Col. O. C. Clare, D.S.O., who was one of the heroes of an unforgettable incident during the war, was drowned while bathing.

At the battle of Loos, in September, 1915, he was the captain in command of the men of the East Surreys who kicked a football "over the top" during an attack on the enemy trenches.

The ball was retrieved from "no man's land" and was one of Col. Clare's most valued mementoes of the war.

Col. Clare, who lived at Abbey Chase, was staying with his wife on holiday at Selsey and went into the sea for a swim. While in the water he became ill, and died shortly afterwards. He was 52.

In his younger days he was a keen hunting man, and he was one of the few men who had broken his neck in the hunting field and recovered.

He was widely known as a racehorse owner.

MYSTERY DEATHS AWAIT SOLUTION

Love Triangle Murders and Stabbing Alarm Whole Countryside

Fenland.—Two husbands and a wife were found dead in this district, under tragic circumstances.

A woman who had started divorce proceedings against her husband, was found stabbed to death on a path. Her husband was found hanged in a railway carriage nearby.

In the Black Country, a young husband died in his wife's arms after being stabbed in their home by an unknown intruder. They were inseparable companions.

They lived with their seven-months-old baby.

The dead man, Charles William Fox, was a metal strip worker by trade, but he had been unemployed. He recently obtained employment as a collector for a clothing firm.

Mrs. Fox heard a noise downstairs. "I woke my husband and we went down together with a candle," she told a reporter. "There was another crash and a rush of air blew out the candle.

"Then I heard a scuffle and rushed upstairs as fast as I could to get my baby, who was lying asleep in his cot by the side of our bed.

Dagger in Back

"A moment later my husband staggered up the stairs. As he came in the room he stumbled. He just managed to gasp out 'I have been stabbed,' and collapsed in my arms.

"A dagger was sticking in his back. He died a few moments later without speaking again."

The dagger which killed Fox was of a type familiar to Scouts and hikers. Its blade is about six and a half inches long.

The dead couple were Mrs. Doris Florence Reeve and Walter Reeve. They had lived apart for the last seven weeks, during which they had seen each other only occasionally, once when Mrs. Reeve had told her husband that she was instituting divorce proceedings.

A married woman—the third party in the triangle—is said to have been virtually a stranger to the neighborhood.

She met Reeve for the first time two years ago. He was then unmarried. Their friendship was renewed this year.

Mrs. Reeve visited a cinema. She met her husband on her way home and neither of them was seen alive again.

Her body, stabbed many times, was found by tramps yesterday morning on a pathway. Reeve's body was found, also with knife wounds, hanging in a railway carriage at a siding in the town.

TRAGEDY STALKS SEASIDE HOLIDAY

Man Killed, Two Hurt as Plane Crashes

Barmouth.—Thousands of holiday-makers witnessed an aeroplane crash in the Mawddach estuary which resulted in the death of a visitor, Wilfred Allport, son of a Birmingham ophthalmic surgeon, who was on the beach.

Prior to a regatta on the estuary, an aerobatic display was given by Miss Doreen Tyzack. The aeroplane had circled above the crowd on Barmouth beach several times and then flew toward Fairbourne, on the other side of the estuary.

Suddenly the 'plane crashed into the water.

Motor-boats raced to the scene and found Miss Tyzack struggling in the cockpit. She was brought ashore suffering from a head injury and severe shock.

During the rescue of Miss Tyzack it was discovered that two men were lying on the beach. Holiday-makers and boatmen dashed to the scene and found that the men were Wilfred Allport and his brother Clifford.

Dr. J. Pugh Jones, Barmouth, arrived in a boat and rendered first aid, but Wilfred Allport died from head injuries. His brother escaped with a fractured arm and shock.

The two men were struck by the right wing of the 'plane as it was turning before its plunge into the sea.

KIN HURT IN CRASH

Son Drives Motorcycle Into Father's Machine

Dorchester.—Rev. A. J. Courtney of West Parade, Lincoln, is in Dorset county hospital with serious head injuries, following a collision with his father, S. T. F. Courtney of Percy Rd., Yeovil, while both were motorcycling near Lulworth, Dorset.

The son apparently misunderstood as to render this future impossible. Every line I wrote was meant to help towards their fall, and I trust that this has indeed been the case."

INTERESTING ITEMS OF NEWS FROM FAR CORNERS OF THE WORLD

ESCAPE DEVIL'S ISLE FASTER THAN NEW CONVICTS ARRIVE

Convicts Get Away Almost Daily—Arranging Breaks Regular Business

ALARM NEIGHBORS

Paris. — Convicts are now escaping from the Devil's Island Penal Settlements faster than new ones are arriving, and if the present rate of escapes goes on there will soon be left only the officials and those prisoners who are too infirm to get away.

With the announcement this week that still another batch has got away, official anxiety is growing, and the ministry of justice and colonial office are acting together to find a solution of the problem.

Until recently escapes were very rare, but now they are occurring almost daily. The latest figure was 20 in one day.

The frequency with which the prisoners escape is involving France in difficulties with the authorities of British Guiana, Jamaica, Venezuela, Brazil and other adjacent territories for which the fugitives make.

The governments of these countries are alarmed at the continued menace of having to harbor some of the worst criminals in the world.

The authorities admit that the weekly rate of escapes is now at a higher figure than the number of deportations on the notorious convict ship La Martiniere, and that in another year there will be few prisoners on the islands save the infirm.

Aiding most to escape has become an important industry, according to returned wardens who have been asked for their views by the government commission.

They say that escaped prisoners located on British or Brazilian territory organize the escapes and that they are well paid for the work by the friends of the convicts or their associates in crime.

At one time prisoners dreaded being sent to the penal settlements, but now they deliberately ask for such sentences because it is easier to escape from the settlements than from a prison in France.

BUSMAN'S HOLIDAY

Muravia, Ia. — Somewhat like the lifeguard who enjoyed his vacation by going to the beach is Dr. Harold Black, Tulsa, Okla., surgeon. When he visited at the home of his parents here recently, the Black home was turned into a virtual hospital. Seven members of the Black family submitted to tonsil removals performed by their surgeon-relative.

WANT FILM TITLES IN CHINESE SCRIPT

Government Order Held in Abeyance at Present

Shanghai.—Additional expense to American motion picture exhibitors in China is threatened by the determination of the government to have Chinese titles superimposed on all foreign-made films, according to a report from Consul John J. Muccio at Shanghai.

Through the good offices of the American legation at Nanking, it is pointed out, the regulation ordering this procedure is to be held in abeyance for the time being.

However, Consul Muccio states that there is every reason to believe that it is only a matter of time before Chinese titles will have to be printed on foreign films shown in China. For the present the government has accepted the suggestion of distributors to prepare Chinese titles for display on the "slides" which commonly appear part from, but alongside the motion picture exhibits.

MONTMARTRE ARTIST SELLS PHOTO-STAMPS

Paris. — The "Free Commune" of Montmartre already has a mock mayor, corporation, and fire brigade, which its residents created for the sole purpose of adding to the gaiety of life. Now it has a stamp which may amuse philatelists, but which is not likely to be given a place in their collections.

Its inventor is a young woman living on "The Hill", who has learned the secrets of the photographer's art from her father. Struck by the stamps issued nowadays to raise funds for philanthropic objects or to advertise holiday resorts, she evolved the idea of a "personal propaganda" stamp bearing a photograph of the user.

She has designed a machine which reproduces miniature portraits on sheets of gummed and perforated paper in such a way that they resemble sheets of ordinary postoffice stamps. Residents in the Free Commune are proving excellent customers.

Many of them being cabaret dancers and actresses, they are discovering that it is very useful to be able to place a portrait-stamp on their visiting cards or on letters of application for engagements.

ITALY WOULD HARNESS VOLCANOES FOR POWER

Engineers Plan Electric Plant Run by Steam From Earth

Rome.—Although Italy, on account of the constantly advanced utilization of her "white coal", is gradually freeing herself from the bondage of the imported black article—her British coal bill in 1932 was only $1,200,000—she is not doing it fast enough to suit the head of the government.

Railway trains all over Italy will be run by volcanic power if a sensational project of Mussolini's engineers to harness the natural gases of volcanic origin proves feasible.

Of course there have been many theories advanced in recent years as to how the enormous wasted energy of volcanoes might be utilised—just as there were a century ago in regard to the wasted energy of waterfalls. The obstacle to utilising volcanic energy direct, or converting it into some other sort of energy—just as the energy of falling water has been converted into electricity—is its instability and inconstancy. But more or less constant, more or less enduring, is the flow of gases from volcanic combustion, so the engineers have concentrated their attention on that.

About six miles from Larderello and Terrazzano, where in 1931 and 1932 two powerful jets of steam gushed from the earth, a new and very powerful geyser began to erupt early in June. The engineers estimate that it has an almost constant power of 20,000 kilowatts and that the jets of steam emitted by the first two geysers have remained absolutely constant.

STYLES CHANGE LITTLE

Mantle 1,700 Years Old Like Modern Officer's Cloak

Berlin.—That fashions in men's mantles have changed little since the Dark Ages is shown by a mantle found by peat diggers in a bog near Roepeholt, Germany, on the Ems-Jade canal. Its age is estimated at about 1,700 years, but the form is not much different from that of an officer's mantle to-day. It is astonishingly well preserved, as are objects in general that have lain in peat for centuries.

SHOCK WAS TOO MUCH

Kovno, Lithuania.—Grasping a large bundle of bank-notes a woman who was dragged from a river here said that she had inherited wealth, and, as she was completely at a loss what to do with the money, she decided to commit suicide.

FIGHT FOR HUSBAND CARRIED TO VATICAN

Famous Canella-Bruneri Case Reopened After Italian Supreme Court Decision

Rome. — One of the most amazing cases in legal history is now to be reopened in a dramatic appeal to the Vatican. It concerns the claims of two women—one a wealthy society leader and the other a poor peasant—that a certain man is their husband. And it means that the man is either a professor of high standing who had been registered as killed in the war, or a printer and escaped convict.

The story begins in 1926, when a tramp was arrested for theft. The police could not find out anything about him, and doctors decided he was suffering from loss of memory. In order to clear up the matter the police published his portrait. It was then that the great drama started. Two women came forward and claimed the man as their husband.

One was Signora Giulia Canella, of Verona, whose husband, a famous professor of Roman law, had served during the war and been reported dead, ten years before. The other was the peasant from Bologna, who identified the man as her husband, Mario Bruneri, a printer.

The police declared that this woman's claim was correct, and that the man was Bruneri. Signora Canella engaged the finest lawyers and opened her huge banking account freely to "claim her man." The first victory went to her, and the man was released. Then came the bigger charge of deliberately impersonating the dead professor. He was convicted and sentenced. On an appeal to the higher courts the widow won the case, but the police took it to the appeal court at Turin. Eventually it was decided that the impersonation verdict and sentence must stand.

The first step now being taken by the society woman—an appeal to the Vatican authorities to have the marriage of one Bruneri and the peasant woman annulled, is fraught with great difficulties. If she is successful, the next step will be to have Mario Bruneri legally take the name of Giulia Canella, and the third will be for a marriage ceremony.

DIVORCE PLEA IN 13 WORDS

Cape Town.—A man walked into the municipal court here and asked the judge for an annulment of his marriage. When asked for the grounds, acting as his own attorney, he pleaded in 13 words: "The marriage only lasted six weeks. The happiness did not last six hours." The court granted him an annulment.

PARIS BUSES' SLOW SPEED RECALLS PRE-WAR TRAGEDY

Cross Bridges at Pace of Hearse Because One Went Through Railing

Paris.—Bus drivers, who have the reputation of defying Parisian speed and safety zone regulations, have always been observed to proceed with the utmost caution when they cross the bridges of the Seine. The explanation usually given is that the bridges might be injured, or possibly demolished, if the buses were driven across at the speed they observe elsewhere. Hence the drivers, it is said, for their own safety, if for nothing else, proceed more slowly so as to reduce the power of the vibrations radiated by their heavy vehicles.

Le Figaro has another explanation. A writer in that paper says that before the world war, not long after the introduction of the buses, a careless driver lost control in the middle of the Pont des Saint-Peres and, mounting the pavement, crashed through the parapet into the river with all his passengers. Then Louis Lepine, who was then prefect of police, decid l that motor buses should only be driven at the "pace of horse-drawn hearses" when crossing a Paris bridge.

M. Lepine's successor, Jean Chiappe, told the Figaro writer that this was correct and added that no vibrations of any account came from the buses, while it was different with marching men who were always ordered to break step on crossing a bridge.

NAZIS EXPEL "IRISH STEW"

Must Coin German Names for All Foods

Berlin. — Everything must be "All-German" in Nazi-land. Having exterminated the Jew, non-German literature, music and kindred arts, now the Hitlerites are tackling the menu. Foreign terms must be banished. Language specialists have been assigned to coin German words for Irish stew, ham and eggs, beefsteak and roast beef.

The German spelling of these foreign dishes will not go. Pure German terms must be coined.

FRUIT CROP BETTER

Malmo, Sweden.—The Swedish fruit crop this year will be better than the average. Only in 1930 and 1918, when the weather was also unusually warm, were the yields as abundant. As the country is a heavy importer of fruit, the new crop will effect the balance of trade. Apples, pears and plums and many kinds of berries are the principal varieties.

TOBACCO SMUGGLED ON BACKS OF DOGS

Contraband Crosses Franco-Belgian Border Constantly

Mons.—A great deal of smuggling is going on across the Franco-Belgian frontier, and the contraband, chiefly tobacco, is carried by dogs across the "danger zones".

A dog living in France is released some hours after his master has crossed the frontier. Naturally the animal follows his master's traces. In Belgium the dog is saddled with a load of contraband and held captive until some time after his master has recrossed into France. The dog is then released with his load and naturally again makes for home.

Traffic of this kind has grown to such great proportions that frontier guards have been shooting unknown dogs on sight. At Leers, on the frontier, so many dogs have been shot in this way that a special cemetery has been created for them.

BOASTS OF EFFORTS TO DEFEAT REPUBLIC

German Author Writes Book on National Upheaval—1918 Revolution Evil

Berlin. — An event of importance in the German literary world is the publication of Oscar Spengler's new work. The title is "Jahre der Entscheidung" ("Years of Decision"), and the first part, which has now appeared, treats of Germany and her development in regard to the history of the world.

He states in his preface: "Nobody has longed for the national upheaval of this year more than myself. I hated the evil revolution of 1918 from its inception as the treachery of the inferior part of our nation towards the strong and superior part which rose in 1914, because it desired a future. Everything I have since written on politics was directed against the powers that settled themselves by the aid of our enemies on the mountain of our misfortunes, so as to render this future impossible. Every line I wrote was meant to help towards their fall, and I trust that this has indeed been the case."

LIGHT CANOE CAPSIZES IN "HELL-DIVER" HUNT

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 16 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent). — "One good thing about mother—she never chews the rag," was the diplomatic comment of 12-year-old Gordon Smith when he arrived home yesterday evening, dripping wet. And the cause of the whole trouble was a loon, a bird very seldom seen on the canal water. Gordon, with his friend, "Pete" Elliott, aged 13, were paddling a canoe near the mill, when the boys spotted a "hell diver," and being struck with the unusual bird, drove their craft downstream toward it. The loon was not having any of it, however, and did his submarine act, but when he came to surface, the was about 50 yards upstream instead of down. Eager for the chase, the boys tried to turn their canoe, but failed to follow the sailor's maxim of pulling together, for each paddled in opposite directions, with the result that the canoe capsized, and the boys were thrown in the icy waters of the canal. Being good swimmers, however, they managed to save all their equipment, and towed the craft to shore, none the worse except for a drenching and an unusual experience.

horses, capturing two firsts, two seconds and a third. George Graham of Peterborough won two first ribbons and K Reid of Bobcaygeon cautured two seconds and two thirds in light horses classes.

Roselawn Farms

Entries from the Roselawn Farms of Richmond Hill took the first and second money in the heavy delivery class which was one of the features of the heavy horse judging. Stock's Bread Company, winners of the class frequently in years past, placed in third and fourth money. Aecording to regulations, the entries were paraded harnessed to their delivery wagons and driven by uniformed employees before the grand stand, providing a fine display.

Another feature of the heavy horse judging was the special class for the champion foal of the 1933 heavy horse class. Although a new class this year, eight exhibitors competed. The foals were shown on the line by boys 15 years and under, judging being based fifty percent on the handling of the foal and fifty percent on the foal itself. The entry of N. M. Brackenridge headed the class with Whittington and Son and Armstrong entries taking second and third money.

The heavy draft single competition drew the largest entry in the heavy horse field. Eleven high-grade animals were paraded for the honours. First, second and fifth ribbons were captured by Duff and Son and third and fourth by Gilbert Arnold of Grenville, Ontario.

Horses of George Graham which captured two firsts in saddle horse classes, were ably ridden by Dorothy Kelly of Peterborough. Winning two second ribbons in the same classes, two horses of Mr. Reid were ridden by Douglas Hall.

By a Ballot of Wheels the Motorists of agree with the rest of Canada in preferring

PETERBORO

GOODYEAR TIRES

More motorists in this district ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind. This was proved the other day by a "ballot of wheels"—an accurate tire-by-tire count on cars parked at our recent Fair. The figures are given below.

All over the country tire surveys offer convincing demonstrations of Canada's overwhelming preference for Goodyear Tires. The "ballot of wheels" at the Canadian National Exhibition showed that 40.56% were Goodyears. At twelve Canadian fall fairs an average of 40.84% were Goodyears. At seven leading Canadian race tracks an average of 40.87% were Goodyears. At the Canadian Open Golf Tournament 43.71% were Goodyears.

Wherever large numbers of cars of all makes are parked it can be proved that "more people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind." This is the strongest statement that can be made about Goodyear Tires, because the public speaks—not Goodyear.

RESULT OF SURVEY AT ANNUAL FAIR

1st Tire—GOODYEAR	41.55%	5th Tire	3.75%
2nd Tire	17.15%	6th Tire	3.5 %
3rd Tire	12.14%	All other makes	13.77%
4th Tire	8.14%	TOTAL	100.00%

Police Court

"Make it six months," pleaded Fred Hamilton, 179 Sherbrooke Street, in Police Court.

"You're too late. It is four months," replied His Worship, completing the entry to his books.

Hamilton was charged as a third offender under the L.C.A. He admitted being drunk in a public place last night, and that he had been similarly convicted twice previously within the past six months.

Chief Newhall told the court that Hamilton is a public nuisance, and explained that last night the man had threatened to burn out a local storekeeper unless he was given two dollars.

Judgment was reserved until Thursday in Norwood on the case of Russell Hill, Dummer Township, charged with possession of mash suitable for the manufacture of moonshine. May Hall, his wife, will be tried on a similar charge on Thursday.

DEATH.

ADAMS. — Died, in Omemee September 16, 1933, at the family residence, Robert John Adams, beloved husband of Ella M. Adams. Funeral on Monday at 2.30 to Emily Cemetery.

IN MEMORIAM.

WHITE—In loving memory of my dear husband, wiliam Henry White, who passed away one year ago, September 8, 1932.

Till memory fades and life departs.
He lives for ever in our hearts;
Time takes away the edge of grief,
But memory turns back every leaf.
Long nights, long days, he bore his pain,
To wait for cure, but all in vain,
Till God Himself knew what was best,
Came down from heaven and gave him rest.

—Fondly remembered by his Wife and Son Robert of Hamilton.

FIRE IS HALTED BY FAST WORK

Unemployed Men Rush to Blaze North of Haliburton Village.

BURNS SEVERAL ACRES.

LINDSAY, Sept. 16.—Fire which broke out early yesterday morning on the farm of Mr. Mark Sisson at West Guilford, seven miles northwest of the village of Haliburton, for a time threatened to sweep through and cause property damage, but fortunately a near-by creek provided ample water for the firefighters and the blaze was checked. The fire covered a little over two acres of ground. It was started by Mr. Sisson three days ago and was well under control until the wind changed. Provincial Constable Porter was summoned and took a gang of twenty-five unemployed men to the scene. A bucket brigade was formed on the burning brush. Had the fire broken into a near-by swamp, it is claimed, nothing could have saved the small hamlet of dwellings at the other side.

Weddings

PILLING—WALL.

The marriage was solemnized quietly to-day by the Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe, at the parsonage, 491 Water street, of the Murray Street Baptist Church, of Cressa B. Wall, of 290 Thomas street, and Arthur M. Pilling of 247 King George street.

STUART—NORTHEY.

The wedding took place quietly at half past one o'clock this afternoon, at the parsonage of George Street United Church, of Lauretta Marvel Northey, eldest daughter of Mrs. Samuel Adams of Syracuse, N.Y., and the late Mr. C. C. Northey of Lakefield, and Mr Jack Reginald Stuart, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Stuart, of Homewood avenue. The Rev. J. E. J. Milliyard performed the ceremony.

The bride wore a becoming gown of brown chiffon velvet with brown velvet turban and matching accessories. She carried a bouquet of Butterfly roses.

Her sister, Miss Gwyneth Northey, as bridesmaid, wore wine-colored velvet with matching turban and accessories and bouquet of Talisman roses.

Mr. Claire H. Stuart acted as best man for his brother.

After the ceremony, refreshments were served at Walkerfield House, where the table was arranged very attractively with flowers and the bride's cake.

Later, Mr. and Mrs. Stuart left by motor for a trip to Syracuse, the bride travelling in a swagger suit of grey tweed, with black velvet Fedora hat and black accessories.

On their return they will live at 308 Charlotte street.

WEDGEWOOD—SIMMONS

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at half past two o'clock this afternoon at All Saints Church, when Phyllis Mae, second youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Simmons of 533 Patterson street, became the bride of Mr. William S. Wedgewood of Toronto, only son of Mr. and Mrs. George Wedgewood of Toronto. The Rev. J. D. Paterson officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a lovely frock of brown transparent velvet, made on long princess lines, with a yoke of ecru lace and elbow-sleeved jacket trimmed with tiny buttons. Her hat was of brown velvet, she wore matching kid pumps, hose and gloves, and carried a bouquet of yellow Claude Fernet roses, with lily of the valley and gypsophila.

The bridesmaid, Miss Frances Simmons, sister of the bride, was in wine-colored velvet. The little neck ruff was faced with white satin and a white and wine-colored flower decorated the front of the bodice. A hat of wine-colored velvet, with white shoes and long white kid gloves, completed the costume, with a bouquet of shell-pink Butterfly roses.

Mr. Harrison McLaughlin of Sarnia acted as best man. Ushers were the bride's brother, Mr. Douglas Simmons, and her brother-in-law, Mr. William Heard.

The wedding music was played by Mrs. W. A. Logan. Decorations of the church were carried out with a profusion of gladioli and ferns in the chancel and on the altar steps.

After the ceremony, a buffet luncheon was served at the home of the bride's parents to about forty of the relatives and friends of the contracting parties. The rooms were arranged with white and pink bells and streamers, gladioli, asters and cosmos, and the bride's table was centered by the cake.

Later, Mr. Wedgewood and his bride left by motor for a honeymoon trip to Ottawa and points east, the latter travelling in a suit of black and white checked crepe, with black felt hat, black kid shoes and black accessories. On their return, they will live in Toronto

The gift of the bridegroom to the bridesmaid was a sterling silver bracelet and to the best man a leather belt with silver buckle. The young people received many handsome gifts from a wide circle of friends.

CAUGHT FINE MUSKIE

Mrs. Jessie Knapp of Portsmouth, Ohio, who has recently returned home after a vacation spent in this district, caught a fine musk'nonge while fishing in Pigeon Lake on Tuesday last. Mrs. Knapp, who was accompanied by a guide, landed the fish with rod and reel after playing it for thirty minutes. She is having the finny prize stuffed locally, to keep as a permanent memento of the occasion. Incidentally it is hoped that the mounted fish will serve to advertise this district to other Ohians.

BACKS OIL PROBE

VANCOUVER—"Certainly there should be an investigation," said Mayor L. D. Taylor of Vancouver today, commenting on declaration of Mayor David A. Croll of Windsor, Ont., that an application for a probe of the Canadian gasoline business is underway.

"There is plenty of evidence there must be a combine," said Mr. Taylor.

LAKEFIELD MAN WINS $5,000

J. Little is Announced as Winner in De La Salle Auxiliary Draw.

J. FOLEY GETS $5.00.

J. Little of Lakefield is the winner of a $5,000 lucky number prize in a draw held by the De La Salle Auxiliary Association in Toronto, according to a circular from the Association sent out to-day. Among twenty additional winners of $5.00 each on the draw, J. Foley, R.R. 2, Indian River, and Mrs. A. Dermot, Ball street, Cobourg, are two others in this region named in the circular.

Efforts made by The Examiner to locate Mr. Little were unavailing. Apparently the lucky ticket took the form of a "membership certificate," giving him membership in the De La Salle Auxiliary Association for a 25-cent "fee." His number was 72,996. According to the information printed on the tickets, the proceeds of the draw are to go to the "Christian Brothers' Novitiate." The circular announcing the prize-winners was signed by "Rev. Brother Arnold," 575 Jarvis street, Toronto.

Character From Handwriting

By BLANCHE A. DRAPER

A Feature Conducted by Peterborough's Leading Handwriting Analyst for the Readers of The Examiner.

Mabel Stark,
Indian River, Ont.

Your handwriting inspires an agreeable nature, but a slight propensity to desire your own way. You speak with clarity of opinion, leaving no doubt as to your meaning. You are upright and fearless and possess outstanding mental powers. Your courageous spirit is inspirational and you could impart knowledge to others, if you feel inclined in that direction, but above all you should endeavor to create an outlet for your ability, which is remarkable where good taste is essential. I might enumerate a few instances for your benefit: Designing hats, clothing, or arranging flowers, managing a tea or gift shop, window dressing or beauty culture. These represent the acme of good taste such as you possess. You have also the wise judgment to let well enough alone and do not interfere in other people's business. You are highly susceptible to real kindness and your heart expands and emotion overcomes you.

Judith Arden, City:

The handwriting as delineated on sample for analysis indicates that your disposition is changeable. Youthfulness seems to be your biggest drawback at present and a slight nervousness. Your 't' bar crossings show insufficient will-power and determination. These characteristics could be developed much more extensively if you care to make up your mind about it and your capital 'A' together with your capital 'B' show that you can if you will. You are kindhearted and lovable and should be able to make many worthwhile friends.

Norma Jackson,
Hastings, Ont.:

This handwriting as delineated on your sample for analysis shows a neatness of perception and a pleasant friendly disposition. You are sympathetic and thoroughly enjoy being in the company of a number of people. Although at the approach of 'particular' individuals, for whom you have a dislike, your muscles become 'taut.' You think clearly and do not 'dive' headlong into any enterprise without first 'sizing up' its feasibility. You are devout and sincere, of neat appearance and should be fond of music and dancing. You are good-natured but not too 'easy-going.' Your writing speaks of good sense, wise judgment and a well-balanced nature. You are, perhaps, a little negligent about your own recreation, and more hours in the fresh air and health-giving sunshine would be highly beneficial to your sweet, tolerant character. You are not lacking in talent or moral strength and should make an admirable partner, teacher or business executive

Marsitta Jory, Lakefield, Ont.:

The handwriting as delineated on your sample for analysis reveals many interesting characteristics. It reflects refinement and deportment. It tells of a pleasant nature and friendly disposition. It suggests intelligence and progressiveness. It depicts secretive ness as regards personal affairs, but good humor and adaptableness most of the time. Your large, well-expressed capital 'L' with its long loop above the line shows leadership and imagination. The 'J,' with its long lower loop, expresses interest in out-of-door sports. Your 't' bar crossings indicate a goodly share of will-power, but you are not the type of person to dominate any one. You are vivacious and love fun and frolic. You are fastidious as to personal clothing, and prefer quality to quantity at all times.

Rose J. Carney, City:

The handwriting as delineated on your sample for analysis represents you as a person with a keen, intelligent mind. You do not like your wishes to be crossed, and you see to it that the event does not materialize very often. You are perhaps prone to 'fly off the handle' once in a while, but soon recover your equilibrium. Your letters which are soft and light show that you are good natured. When you promise anyone anything, your word is your bond and you are most sincere. Yet you are sensitive and sometimes highly strung. You are sympathetic and understanding, and should make a true loyal friend to those whom Fortune has favored with your acquaintance. You have a great deal of poise and refinement and never step beyond the boundary line of convention.

Irene James, City:

The handwriting as delineated on your sample for analysis shows that you are not at all sure of yourself. You seem to want to do many things, but usually end up by not doing anything. It is a type of mental apathy through which you are passing, really on account of your health, which appears to be of an uncertain nature. There is no method to your undertakings. You simply do what happens to be the least line of resistance. You love just as deeply as you hate. It is typical of you not to have any half measures in an emotional sense. You see, you are either happy or sad, and these two traits predominate your whole being. You have a rather good imagination, but it does not get you anywhere. Could you not try to create a hobby which would interest you and bring out your better characteristics? I am afraid that very few people see you as you really are, because you hide your real self under a mask of gruffness. The real you is lovable. I feel sure that little children love you. You may not know this but next time you meet a child speak to it. Relax and you will be repaid by confidence and smiles or I miss my guess.

B. M. Dawson,
R. R. No. 11, Peterborough:

The handwriting as delineated on your sample for analysis indicates a keen, lovable personality. You are especially fond of well-appointed feminine requirements. It is part of your nature to desire these articles; therefore, you make every effort to attain them. Subtle perfume also intrigues you, and lends charm to your most versatile personality. You are quick and impulsive, eager to please, although strong willed enough not to let anyone domineer you. You have no objection to obeying orders, provided they are given in a friendly manner. But, should you be told 'you must' do something, you become taciturn and resolve not to do the required project. You are vivacious and charming when among friends who understand your nature, and you are quite determined to get the utmost out of each day of joy or pleasure. You have happy dancing feet, a sense of good humor and self-confidence.

M. Hetherington,
Millbrook, Ont.:

The handwriting as delineated on your sample for analysis represents you as a careful person. One who is thoughtful and decided. You are neat and precise, exacting as to detail and routine. Your will-power is well expressed in the crossing of your 't' bar. Your capital letters illustrate the ability to make up your mind and 'stick to it.' You are not very demonstrative in affections, but you are loyal and true to those whom Fortune has favored with your love. You are never 'gushing' or obstrusive. You conduct yourself with the utmost reticence and agreeable consideration. You are talented, corteous and refined. You utterly detest anything which borders upon vulgarity. You are diplomatic and yet quite convincing in your opinions. You do not arrive at conclusions without thinking the project over from every possible angle Your general character is altogether pleasing and conscientious.

Beulah Marguerite Russell,
R. R. 10, Peterborough:

The handwriting as delineated on your sample for analysis shows that you are inclined to be pessimistic if things do not 'go' as you had intended they should. You are changeable and restless. You want to undertake too many propositions at the same time. You 'crowd' your ideas and so do not derive the benefit from self-expression which is rightly your due. You are intelligent and energetic, but rather too sensitive for your own good. You appear to resent words which are not spoken with intention to harm. There is a predominating characteristic noted throughout your writing, which indicates that you are not quite satisfied with existing conditions, and that you would change them if you could, but usually you are mentally tired by the time you have reached a decision; therefore, do nothing but continue as before. The real you is artistic. Hairdressing might appeal to one of your type, or designing, but you must never allow yourself to be 'driven' along by some unsumpathetic person who has no interest in your welfare. Kindness and encouragement is what you require the most. Your general character is good. You are kind-hearted and persevering, loving to people who know the real you. You are reserved among a crowd of people, but always well mannered and refined.

Margaret Bernice Smith,
Millbrook, Ont.:

The handwriting as delineated on your sample for analysis describes you as energetic and artistic. You are rather versatile and subject to change your opinion in an instant without any apparent reason. You are fond of music and flowers. You like to tell other people what to do, but you do not appreciate being told by them what is best for you to do. You are possessor of a good imagination and sensible thoughts. Certain colors appeal to you and soothe your ruffled feelings when you let yourself get into an excitable mood. You do not enjoy being interrupted when occupied on a serious problem, but at other less important moments you welcome interruptions and heartily endorse change of any sort.

Jean Macdonald, City:

The handwriting as delineated on your sample for analysis is not a true portrayal of the manner in which you write at all times, is it? I think you have a more definite clear cut writing, when you use a different type of pen. However, there are many clever characteristics depicted in this signature, which represent intelligence and industry. I can see by this script that there are many, many times when you are too tired to work, yet you drive yourself till you become exhausted, yet do not accomplish much. Your capital letters show that you have a love for things which are artistic, but you cannot seem to spend much time in the making of objects of charm. Recreation out of doors should relieve that pent-up feeling which your writing expresses at the moment. No doubt you will say that you feel too tired to get out and walk, but I feel sure that the effort will more than repay you in health and strength. Youth seems to be your drawback just now.

TARZAN THE TERRIBLE - - - - - - - - By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Backward, until it could but claw the air helplessly, Tarzan forced the beast's body. Instantly the shaggy black rushed in with drawn knife which it buried in the hybrid's heart. For a few moments Tarzan retained his hold, but when the furry form relaxed, he pushed it from him....Across the limp figure of their common foe, the ape-man and the hairy pithecanthropus, who formerly had been locked in mortal combat, now stood facing each other.

Tarzan waited, ready either for peace or war. Presently two shaggy black hands were raised; the left hand was laid upon its own heart and the palm of its right hand touched Tarzan's breast. It was the same salutation that the man-thing had previously used to seal his alliance with Tarzan. Glad of every ally he could win in this strange and savage world, Tarzan of the Apes quickly accepted the proferred friendship by making the same set of gestures.

The brief ceremony ended, glancing toward the hairless pithecanthropus, Tarzan discovered that the latter had regained consciousness and was sitting erect, watching them intently. Now he arose and the shaggy black turned toward him, addressing him in what evidently was their common language. The hairless one replied and then the two approached each other slowly.

Tarzan watched interestedly the outcome of their meeting. They halted a few paces apart, spoke rapidly though without excitement, each occasionally glancing and nodding toward Tarzan. It was plain to the ape-man that he was the subject of their conversation. Wondering just how they intended to act toward him, Tarzan held himself alert, ready for instant action if the weird pair decided to attempt his death.

Presently the two tailed creatures advanced until they met, whereupon they repeated the brief ceremony that had previously marked the ending of hostilities between each of them and Tarzan. Then they approached the ape-man, addressing him earnestly as though trying to tell him something very important. But soon giving this method up as time wasted, they resorted to the sign language. Then did Tarzan understand that they were going away together and were urging him to go with them.

As the direction they indicated was a route which Tarzan had not previously traversed he was most willing to accompany them. He had determined to thoroughly explore this unknown land before giving up hope that somewhere in it still lived, though a captive, the woman he adored. Several days thereafter, their way led them through the foothills of the lofty mountains towering above them. Then they came to a large, natural cave in a low cliff, with a tumbling brook beneath it.

Here they took up their temporary abode. Meanwhile Tarzan's instruction in the language of his companions progressed rapidly. The cave was a sort of primitive hotel. Others who had stopped there had scratched hieroglyphics upon the sooty walls and ceiling. Some of these recent ones his companions read with interest, and commented upon. Then they, with their knife points, added to the age-old record of the blackened walls with its outline of birds, beasts and reptiles.

Tarzan's curiosity was aroused though he could make little out of the wall writings. But it showed him the development of these strange creatures with whom Fate had thrown him. Here were men with monkey-like tails, one man as hair covered as any fur-bearing animal of the lower orders. Yet the creatures had not only a spoken but a written language. Tarzan was keener than ever to learn the secret civilization of these curious man-things possessing so many attributes of beasts.

It was not long before Tarzan, to the delight of his two companions who had patiently taught him, was able to understand and speak their strange language. He found that the hairless, white-skinned pithecanthropus was named Ta-den. Om-at, the hairy black one, was called. Now Tarzan was able to explain to them the quest that led him thus far into their forbidding country. But neither one gave him any slight hope that his mission would succeed.

Never had there been in their country such a woman as Tarzan described. Never, indeed, had any tailless man before himself been seen by them. "From A-lur—my city," said Ta-den, "I have been gone while Bu, the moon, has eaten seven times. Many things may happen in twenty-eight days! But I doubt your woman could have lived to cross the terrible morass which even YOU were barely able to do in safety."

"Even IF she survived, she could NEVER overcome the perils that you have yet to discover. Our own shoes never venture into the savage lands beyond the cities." But Tarzan of the Apes had no intention of turning back. "A-lur!-Light City, City of Light," he mused, translating the name into its English meaning. "Is it YOUR city, Ta-den?—and Om-at's?" he questioned. "MINE it is, replied the hairless one,proudly, "but NOT Om-at's."

"Om-at's people," he continued, "have no cities. THEY live in forest trees and hill caves." "We Was-den are FREE," exclaimed Om-at, "only the foolish imprison themselves in cities!" "Where IS A-lun?" Tarzan asked again, "are you returning to it?" "Beyond the mountains," replied Ta-den. "I do not return to it yet. Not until Ko-tan is no more!" "Who or what is Ko-tan?" queried the ape-man. Then Ta-den told his story of love, exile and revenge.

"Ko-tan is king," explained Ta-den, the hairless pithecanthropus. "I was one of his warriors. I lived in his palace and there I met O-lo-a, his daughter. We loved 'Like-starlight, and I, but Ko-tan would have none of me. So he sent me off to the wars thinking I would be killed. On the contrary, I returned victorious, and then O-lo-a loved me more than before which displeased her father still further."

"Powerful is my father, Ja-don, the Lion man. Him the king hesitated to affront. So the king conceived a plan to honor my family yet withhold his daughter's hand but Bu-lot, whom he desired as his son-in-law. Greatly do my people honor our priests. Within the temple even the king, himself, bows down to them. So no greater favor could Ko-tan bestow upon a subject than to make him priest—IF the subject desired priesthood."

"But I did not so wish. For, know you, our priests must renounce the world, and may never marry. O-lo-a, herself, brought me word that her father had given his command. Already a messenger was searching for us. To refuse the priesthood, once it was offered me by my king, would be to insult the temple and the gods. That would mean death to me. But if I did not appear before the king, I would not have to refuse."

"O-lo-a and I decided I must not appear. Far better to fly with hope in my breast than to enter the priesthood and abandon hope forever. Beneath the tree shadows in the palace gardens, I pressed her to me for perhaps the last time. Then lest, by ill fate I meet the messenger, I scaled the great walls guarding the king's palace and stole through the darkened city. My name and rank carried me beyond the gates. Since then I have wandered far, but strong in my heart is the desire to return to my native city."

Sense and Nonsense

All the bad luck in the world to that racing man in Cleveland who is giving out interviews that he is an ex-husband of Marie Dressler's.

Marie Dressler

Nearly every star in the business has been victimized by such phonies but it's a shame to bother Marie, who needs every ounce of her strength to complete "The Late Christopher Bean."

How swell she was about it too!

A suspicious editor of a Cleveland newspaper telegraphed:

"Racing man here (giving name) says in interview that he was married to you at Weatherford, Texas, and divorced six years later"

With that forgiving nature and saving sense of humor of hers, Marie wired back:

"Statement untrue in every respect, but I am very tired and need a long rest, so if his horses are running well and he has two million dollars or so I might consider his proposition at this time"

You hear, and they swear it's true, that the surgeon who removed Claudette Colbert's appendix made a special incision to that no scar will show when she dons the scanty robes of Cleopatra in a forthcoming De Mille picture.

Claudette went home from the hospital yesterday after a record recovery and will sail for Honolulu tomorrow.

Fifi Dorsay is singing the blues. She's crazy about her role in Marion Davies' picture, but y'see she's also crazy about that young interne in a Chicago hospital. His name is Maurice Hill and he's a graduate of the University of Wisconsin.

"There are eight girls to every man in Hollywood!" exclaims Fifi. "I had to go to Chicago to find mine!"

The vivacious star says she wants to get married this time, but that wedding bells will have to wait until her young man completes his terms at the hospital—and that's 18 months.

Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors conducted by Anne Wilcox

The selection of wall paper best suited to the rooms of a dwelling is not a matter to be given slight consideration.

* * * * * *

The design is of major importance, no less than the color. The exposure of a room signifies its position in relation to the points of a compass. A room in the north part of a house is said to have a northern exposure.

* * * * * *

One in the south-west part of the house, that is one with windows on south and west so that light comes from both sides, is said to have a south-west exposure, etc.

* * * * * *

Because light from the north is cold, it should influence the selection of paper for a room with windows on the north side, which let in no sunlight, or practically none.

* * * * * *

According to the exposure of the room in connection with the amount of sunlight it gets, is it cold or warm in its natural lighting.

* * * * * *

It should have wall treatment to counterbalance either a lack of sunlight or a flood of it. There are reasons why a north, north-east or north-west room should have a warm paper, while a south, south-east or south-west room does not require it.

* * * * * *

The most pronounced warm colors are yellow suggesting sun and red suggesting fire. But since red is an inflaming and irritating color in poportion to its intensity it has to be handled with care when used for decorative purposes.

* * * * * *

Yellow, on the other hand, is stimulating rather than irritating and shades, tints and tones of it can be successfully employed on walls.

* * * * * *

It is not the exposure but the size and shape of a room which determine the style of design or pattern The reasons for this are geometric. They have to do with counter-balancing of high or low ceilings and the proportions of wall and floor space.

* * * * * *

A wall paper with stripes makes a ceiling seem to be higher because of the upright lines which tend to make the vision follow their perpendicular extension.

* * * * * *

A wall paper with a pattern which tends to make the eye follow lines across a wall, lowers the apparent height of a ceiling. This is not so boldly done as in the instance of striped paper, but there are many wall papers in which the repetition of the design is so cleverly planned that the eye follows it along horizontal lines.

* * * * * *

The two points considered today, color and design in their broad application, are of primary importance. They are of first consideration. How to apply these points when choosing paper for a specific room to be papered will be considered next week.

JUST AMONG US GIRLS

Left, black moire formal frock; third, gray broadcloth day time frock; second dark garnet wool suit with broadtail caracul; right, brown and blue tweed suit.

By LUCY CLAIRE

Fashion Writer for Central Press

The draped skirt has arrived, and fashion bends backward, even to the eighties, in borrowing ideas for the new silhouette. Paris is featuring a veritable cascade of back draperies, with the tube-like front for formal wear, and carrying out the mode to lesser degree in daytime models. Augustabernard, Carette, Lyolene and Dilkusha sponsor these back crepes. One thing in favor of this treatment is that is affords relief to the straight tube-like front featured this season.

The narrow pencil front of a model in black moire, left, by Dilkusha, is thus relieved with a generous cascade drapery at the back. The dress is untrimmed, depending on a large oval brooch of turquoise for ornament. A daytime frock, third, by the same designer, interprets the back fullness in a double tiered effect. This model is of gray broadcloth.

There is variety in the length of jackets this season. The fall suit may have a two-thirds or a three-quarter jacket, or it may be finger length or shorter. Lyolene sponsors both the finger length and the longer jacket. The finger length jacket suit, second, is of dark garnet woolen, and has an interesting scarf collar of grege broadtail caracul and matching belt.

The suit with the two-thirds jacket length, right is of a warm tweed in brown and blue, and is worn with a blouse of navy satiny twill such as is used for lining in men's coats. The jacket has a one-sided treatment, and employs stitchings and buttons of heavy flat box leather by way of trim. The belt is of leather matching the buttons.

HOW WILL YOU BID THEM?

Hand 1 is unfit for an opening bid of 3-Hearts. In the first place, there are strong chances that you will lose a trump trick. As stated yesterday, 6 trumps should be headed by A-K-Q-J, to avoid the loss of a trick, regardless of what you think or what some player may state. Suppose your partner does hold the Aces of both diamonds and spades, still a trick may be lost in spades and another trick in clubs. It will be impossible for you to bid even a small slam with safety. Bid 4-Hearts, if you like, to start, but do not try for a slam.

Hand 2 may be played for a small slam with as great safety as often will be found. Open with 3-Spades. If partner bids 4-Diamonds, bid 4-Spades. In case partner then bids 5-Hearts you will bid 6-Spades, but never try for a grand slam. In case partner's first response is 3-No Trumps, sign off by bidding 4-Spades. Partner must let you alone, as his hand cannot be risked at any make.

Hand 3 is a perfect 3-suiter, and each of its suits should be shown in turn, commencing with 2-Hearts. Keep bidding until you find what partner can stand best. The hand must not be opened with a 3-bid.

Hand 4 better start with an opening bid of 2. Neither major suit is long enough to stand a 3-bid with expectations of losing no trick in the suit. There should be game in the hand, but a safe small slam cannot be bid.

Hand 5 stands a better chance of winning 5-odd at clubs than it does of going game at spades. There is less chance of losing a second club trick than there is of losing a spade trick. If partner lacks the two missing Aces you will at once be ruffed in hearts. When you lead clubs you probably will again be ruffed in hearts. Five spades cannot stand two ruffs, unless things break better than you have any right to assume will be the case. Six clubs will stand two ruffs, and still possess the probability of winning 5-odd. Make an opening bid of 3-Clubs. Overcall any response of partner with spades. He will know that you have at least 6 clubs and 5 spades, as an opening bid of 3 or a shift can can never show only 5 trumps in a suit. Unless partner greatly prefers spades to clubs he will see that the hand should be played at the minor suit. In case partner shows the missing Ace of hearts, you may venture a bid of 5-Spades, with a smart partner, but bid 6-Clubs in case partner cannot be trusted to make that shift if he has no more than 3 spades.

Bid 3-Spades on Hand 6. There can be made 4-odd without help; 5-odd if partner has once Ace; 6-odd if he has 2 Aces; a grand slam in case he has 3 Aces.

The early autumn days are the loveliest as far as gorgeous fruits are concerned. Grapes, peaches, apples in many varieties, pears, and many other fruits make the markets colorful and look oh, so appetizing. Use them frequently in your menus as they are delicious and healthful. The apple sauce cake is made and served warm for lunch, and may be served cold for dinner, as it is best eaten while fresh.

Today's Recipes

Sour Milk Griddle Cakes.—Three cups flour, one teaspoon salt, one tablespoon sugar, two cups sour milk, one teaspoon soda, one egg, one tablespoon melted butter. Mix flour, salt and sugar. Add sour milk in which soda has been dissolved. Beat until smooth. Add egg, well beaten, and melted butter. Bake on a hot griddle.

Apple Sauce Cake.—One-half cup shortening, one cup sugar, one and three-fourths cups flour, one teaspoon baking powder, one teaspoon cinnamon, one teaspoon nutmeg, one teaspoon soda, one-half teaspoon orange extract, one cup raisins, one cup warm apple sauce. Cream shortening and sugar together, add flour mixed with spices and baking powder alternately with the apple sauce, in which the soda has been dissolved. Add flavoring and raisins, which have been dredged in flour. Bake in a loaf pan in a moderate oven, 350 degrees Fahrenheit, 45 minutes or bake in layer cake pans and put together with an orange frosting.

FACTS AND FANCIES

Ripe Pear Jam

Four cups (two pounds) prepared fruit, seven and one-half cups (three and one-fourth pounds) sugar, one bottle fruit pectin. To prepare fruit, peel, core and crush completely or grind about three pounds fully ripe pears. If desired, about three teaspoons spice may be added. Measure sugar and prepared fruit into large kettle, mix well, and bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard one minute. Remove from fire and stir in fruit pectin. Then stir and skim by turns for just five minutes, to cool slightly, to prevent floating fruit. Pour quickly. Paraffin hot jam at once. Makes about 11 glasses (six fluid ounces each).

And now there's a girdle to be worn under the lounging pajama—or you can use it instead under your riding breeches.

Black, White Again

By LIBERTE

No use to complain about the prevalence of black and white in autumn fashions. It's unbelievably smart and so women will certainly continue to wear it.

The black street dress is simple enough, but the white collar and cuffs, with their looped treatment, are distinctive.

A black velvet beret and black kid opera pumps with stitching in swirl design, are the appropriate accessories.

BE BEAUTIFUL

"Dear Miss Glad: You once printed a method of bleaching superfluous hair through the use of white henna. I've been having this work done in my local beauty shop right along, but am no longer financially able to continue the practice. Can you advise me as to how to use the white henna bleach at home?

"MURIEL."

Gladys Glad

The white henna one most frequently used in shops for bleaching superfluous hair. To prepare this bleach, mix enough chalk of magnesia with two teaspoons of peroxide and half a teaspoon of ordinary household ammonia to form a smooth, even paste. Spread this paste over the hairy areas, and permit it to dry. Then when it is thoroughly dry, remove it with tepid water and a soft cloth. It is really only the peroxide and ammonia that do the bleaching. The chalk of magnesia is used merely as a base to insure moisture for a longer period of time.

* *

"Dear Miss Glad: I want to thank you, first of all, for the help you've given me through your 'New Figure' booklet. After my baby son was born, you see, I was about 31 pounds overweight. But thanks to the excellent reducing advice in your booklet, I am now back in the youthfully-slender class. However, my doctor has ordered me to take mineral oil every day. Do you think that this will tend to increase my weight or fatten me?

FREIDA."

Mineral oil, to my knowledge, is not the least bit fattening. You needn't, therefore, fear to take this oil because you think that it might ruin the present slender lines of your figure. Mineral oil is used merely as a lubricant for the bowels, as it facilitates the passage of poisons and food wastes through the intestines. Mineral oil is not digested or absorbed in the body, and therefore its consumption should not result in any accumulation of fatty tissue. I think that you may take the mineral oil without any danger of its causing you to gain any excess and ungainly poundage.

* * *

"Dear Miss Glad: Although my scalp seems to be dry, my hair gets very oily only three days after shampooing. This condition is most annoying, and I'd like to know just what its cause is. I'd also be grateful if you'd suggest a remedy.

"BELLA."

The cause of the hair condition you describe may be internal. If you are in poor physical condition, the glands in the scalp may, as a result, work overtime. In this case you should first attempt to build up your physical condition. Again, your hair problem may be due to the shampoo you are using. If it contains too much alkali, and not enough oil, the pores may be opened to such an extent that the natural oil will leave the scalp and go into the hair. Superficial treatment is best in this case. Lemon rinses after castile soap shampooings will help to eliminate the excess oil. Also, a teaspoon of baking soda added to the last rinse water will help to remove the excess oil and make the hair soft and fluffy.

CHILDHOOD'S WARNINGS

Crossness and fretfulness, feverishness—mean trouble unless overcome by a gentle cleansing laxative. The wise mother knows that nothing equals Steedman's Powders—the famous English remedy made especially for growing children and infants, and used by mothers all over the world for more than 100 years. When your child shows signs of being cross and upset and when baby is teething give Steedman's.

SPYING on SPORTS

International — Canadian

"Gossip and Such"

JUST HOW baseball fans will take to the hockey playoff idea is being given the acid test by an important minor league—the International, as it settles the question of just which team is 1933 champion.

* * *

UNDER THE basis which has prevailed in the International since its inception, the usual method of awarding the title to the team with the highest winning percentage, Newark is the pennant winner.

* * *

HOWEVER, UNDER the hockey plan four clubs—Newark, N. J., Baltimore, Md., Rochester and Buffalo, N. Y., engage in a play-off, the winner to be considered the champion.

* * *

THIS MAY annoy Newark fans who have cheered their team to victories during a long season only to discover that Newark isn't champion yet and has but one chance in four to gain possession of the pennant.

* * *

HOWEVER, LEAGUE officials believe that the play-off idea will prove beneficial to club treasuries and that, it appears, is the main idea in this exceedingly lean baseball season.

* * *

THE INTERNATIONAL arrived at its play-off plan by studying the method used by the National Hockey league and then adopting that idea.

* * *

THE INTERNATIONAL league was divided into two sections—northern and southern. The first two teams of each section meet in a play-off and the second placers clash in a series. Winners then play.

* * *

NEWARK AND Baltimore were Nos. 1 and 2 in the southern half race and Rochester and Buffalo Nos. 1 and 1 in the northern half.

* * *

THE DIVISION champion series is best three out of five games. The league champion series is best four out of seven.

* * *

THE INTERNATIONAL league champion will meet the winner of the American association championship in a post-season group of games which have become generally known as the "junior world series."

* * *

IN DOING SO, the International pennant winners will meet a champion evolved by a method somewhat similar. The American association this season divided itself into a western and eastern affair.

* * *

COLUMBUS, O., won the eastern title and had the highest percentage of any team in the league. However, the 1933 arrangement called for a series of games with Minneapolis, western half winner.

* * *

CONSIDERABLE controversy may be expected if Newark and Columbus do not win their respective league titles which, in any other season they would have been clearly entitled to.

* * *

HOWEVER, BOTH league play-offs are interesting baseball innovations and its this department's guess that they will prove more popular than the old split-season idea which has prevailed in the Texas and smaller minor leagues for many seasons.

LEADERS PRACTICALLY CLINCH NATIONAL BALL LEAGUE PENNANT WITH TWIN TRIUMPH OVER CUBS

Hal Schumacher and Herman Bell Are Victorious Moundsmen in Friday's Battles.

BY 5-1 AND 4-0 SCORES.

Boston, Brooklyn and Philadelphia Are Other Winners in National.

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr., A.P. Sports Writer)

New York Giants, through one great day of pitching, have changed the final Western tour which aroused so many qualms in the minds of their faithful supporters into a triumphant march toward the National League pennant.

The Giants checked Chicago Cubs' aspirations with vengeance yesterday, winning both halves of a double-header, 5-1 and 4-0, and climbed back to the point where they were when they started West, 7½ games in front of the field. The standings show that there are four clubs which still might beat the Giants out, but the fans already have decided that the New York club is "in."

St. Louis Cardinals and Boston Braves, 10½ and 12 games behind, respectively, after the Cards took a 9-2 lacing from Brooklyn Dodgers and the Braves trimmed Pittsburg 10-1, are in the race mathematically speaking, but out of it so far as practical reckoning of chances is concerned.

Hal Schumacher and Herman Bell were the pitchers who put the damper on Chicago yesterday. Schumacher set down the Cubs with six hits in the first game, while the Giants batted out Bud Tinning early, nicked Pat Malone for another run to stay ahead and gained three "gift" runs in the ninth when Leroy Hermann's wildness and two errors combined to let them to their heaviest scoring of the day without getting a hit.

Bud Parmalee started the second game for the Giants, but he was too wild to last and Bell did most of the pitching. Between them they allowed only two hits and Bell retired 16 men in order after takin) the hill with two out and the bases full in the third. Mel Ott's homer in the fourth started the scoring.

Boston's batters handed Pittsburgh a neat shellacking, pounding Hal Smith to cover with five runs in the third and repeating the feat against Dudley in the fourth.

Down near the bottom of the standing, the Phillies and Cincinnati Reds came out with some pitching that the leaders might well envy as they split a double bill. Reg Grabowski, back with the Phils after some minor league seasoning, allowed the Reds only two singles as he won the opener 4-0. Allyn Stout came back with a five-hit flinging job and Sparky Adams and Jim Bottomley pounded out a 3-1 triumph for him.

Brooklyn took just one big inning to knock the Cardinals a bit further out of the pennant picture as Van Mungo hurled a six-hit game.

The entire American League program of four games in the East was obliterated by rain.

Selkirk-Florence Gain In Averages

Two Rochester batsmen, George Selkirk and "Hob" Florence were well up among the International League batting leaders to-day. As the playoff series advanced another notch with the Red Wings holding an advantage of one game. Selkirk boosted his average to .455 by getting three hits out of five trips to the plate, while Florence slapped out a single in his only official time up. Meanwhile Buffalo batsmen were idle. DUNLAP MEETS MARSTON TODAY IN GOLF FINAL Former Vanquishes Lawson Little, Somerville's Conqueror in Semi-finals.

MUNGER LOSES 6 AND 5.

(By James L Renick, Associated Press Sports Writer).

KENWOOD COUNTRY CLUB, Cincinnati, Sept. 16 (A.P.). — The 37th United States amateur golf championship to-day was a 36-hole duel between George T. Dunlap, jr., a 24-year-old golfer, and Max Marston, 41-year-old former titleholder from Philadelphia.

Kenwood's 6,780-yard course, second longest in amateur championship history, was still waterlogged and sloppy for the final round.

It was exactly 10 years ago this fall that Marston won the title in an extra hole contest with Jess Sweetser at Flossmoor in Chicago. Dunlap was then a lad of 14.

The final brings together two widely contrasting types of golfers. Each is a seasoned performer and well-known wherever big league golf is played, though it has been several years since either cut much figure in the national championship.

Not Qualified Since 1928.

The Philadelphia veteran has not even qualified for match play since 1928, although he has played a lot of good golf at times and has demonstrated this week that there still is something to be said for experience amidst the onrush of golfing youth.

Dunlap failed to qualify for the championship match play last year at Five Farms after being a sensation on the Walker Cup team. He has been playing excellent golf this year, reaching the semi-finals of the British amateur, after defeating C. R. (Sandy) Somerville, of London, Ont., U.S. amateur champion for 1932-33.

Yesterday neither was extended to the limit to win the semi-final contests. Marston defeated 18-year-old Jack Munger of Dallas, Tex. The final count was 6 and 5.

Dunlap almost as easily vanquished W. Lawson Little, Jr., 23, of San Francisco, who Thursday eliminated the defending champion, C. Ross Somerville, of London, Ont. Dunlap stopped Little, 4 and 3.

JIMMIE FOXX IS HITTER OF WEEK

Batting Averages of Several of Major Ball Favorites Take a Tumble.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16. (AP)—The continuation of Jimmie Foxx's home run hitting spree furnished about the only bright spot for major league batsmen during the past week as averages plunged downward on all sides.

Foxx made only four hits in the week which ended yesterday but three of them were homers, bringing his total up to 45. His average, still the best in the American League, dropped six points.

Chuck Klein, National League leader in slugging and batting both, gathered in seven hits but his percentage dropped five points. He failed likewise to add to his league lead in homers and doubles.

Neither leader was given much cause for worry, however, as nearly all the other "first ten" batters in both leagues lost ground.

Picton Entry Triumphs in 2:22 Class

MISS GRATTAN BARS IS VICTOR IN 3-YEAR PACE

McLachlan's Mare Comes Through in Last Two Heats to Win $250 Purse.

LEADS CLASSY FIELD.

Defeats Bedford Grattan, $3,000 C.N.E. Stake Race Winner by a Nose.

Miss Gratton Bars, Neil McLachlan's great little mare, upset the dopesters of the harness races at Exhibition Park yesterday afternoon when she came through a winner in the last two heats to win first place for the three-year-old pace and the $500 stake.

The McLachlan mare defeated one of the best fields of three-year-olds ever assembled on a Canadan track. In those last two heats, which had the horse fans hanging to the fence through sheer excitement as the horses speeded to the finish, Miss Grattan Bars romped home by a nose ahead of Bedford Grattan, which finished first in the $3,000 stake race at the Canadian National Exhibition, and also led Dominion Gratton, owned by W. Herberts, of Niagara Falls, which was second in the same feature pace at Toronto. The best Miss Gratton Bars did at the C.N.E. was fifth but she certainly came on fast yesterday to show her true form.

The racing done by the horses on yesterday's card was the best ever disclosed on the local track, experienced horsemen admitted. And the horsemen were there in legion numbers, because they were expecting great racing and got just that.

Trailing in the first heat until the last quarter, Gid Litt, driving Bedford Gratton, shook out his reins in the last quarter mile to sweep past the field, and then in a driving finish went under the wire, leader by a head over Dominion Gratton.

Some of the fans roasted Referee McCall when he let the horses get away in the second heat without Bedford Gratton on the rail. They did not see Litt give the ref. the nod. He was "sitting in the hole" behind Dominion Gratton, the position he favoured. Out in front Dominion Gratton stepped up the pace. The field closed in fast in the last quarter, clipping off the final half in 1.04, but Dominion Gratton effectually withstood their challenge. Miss Gratton Bars was in second place.

The third heat, which saw Miss Gratton Bars win, was the feature of the whole card. The little mare came up on the outside in the stretch with the rest of the field pounding after her and Dominion Gratton gamely trying to hold a narrow lead. But the mare nosed him out. A blanket could have been thrown over the field in that thrilling finish.

The threat heat winners were called out for the fourth heat. This time Miss Gratton Bars took the rail from the go off and retained it. The first half was slow, but going around the back stretch the others made their bid. Bedford Gratton might have caught the mare, but in going around Dominion Gratton the two sulkies came together, and the monetary accident, was just sufficient to spoil the effort. However, the two let out more speed and nearly caught the mare at the wire, being less than two yards back.

Cigarette, Dr. Herrington's horse, showed rare form to win first in the 2.22 Class. By winning all three heats, Cigarette left no doubt as to her superiority on her day's work, although previous to the start several others were favoured to win on past performances.

Despite the fact that Cigarette usually took the rail near the start the others were always right behind, and the speed in all the heats was exceptional. Billie Hugo seriously threatened to win the third heat, coming up from away back in the second half, but Cigarette unleashed sufficient speed in the stretch to hold off the challenge.

WINGS BEAT BEARS TO LEAD IN SERIES

Rally in 7th Innings Decides Issue—"Dutch" Henry is Star on Mound.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 16 (CP)—With Rochester holding a 2-to-1 advantage in the series scheduled to go to the victor of three games, the Red Wings and Newark Bears are scheduled for their fourth contest here to-day. A Rochester victory will close the play and pave the way for a Buffalo-Rochester four of seven series for the championship. If Newark wins, the series will be concluded Sunday afternoon with a fifth contest.

Dutch Henry, southpaw, relieved by Ira Smith in the ninth when he went wild, sent the Bears to defeat last night, 5 to 3, to give Rochester the "odd" game of the three played.

The Wings found Johnny Broaca for ten base hits. He was wilder than usual, walking five while fanning eight. He stranded 14 of the wings but was in trouble early so often that he weakened and four hits and a walk after two were out in the seven cost him three runs and the ball game. Henry drove in two of these tallies.

The fanning mill is one of the best friends the farmer has.

ENGINEERS WIN LEAGUE HONORS

Machine Shop Drubbed 19-4 in Final Game for C.G.E. Softball Championship.

HEAVY SLUGGING.

The race for the championship of the C.G.E. Inter-department Softball League was changed into a runaway last night at the King Edward Park when the Machinists who have been battling the Engineers with a steady style of play, folded up before the hitting of the latter team, who wallopped the offerings of Darling and Reynolds for seventeen mighty hits to win the game and the championship by the one-sided count of 19 to 4.

The barrage started in the third when Reynolds relieved Darling, port-sided Machine Shop hurler, who had allowed four runs. The Engineers who had nicked Darling for three hits and five walks, hammered out seven singles and a double for eight counters from Reynolds' offerings. They secured three more runs in the fourth, three in the sixth and one in the seventh. The Machinists on the other hand could not place their hits and in the first three innings went out in order. They pushed two tallies over in the fourth, on an error, a fly and three singles, but failed to reach first in the fifth. In the sixth, three singles, an eror and a force-out sent two more counters across. They were turned back three in a row in the last frame.

Bill Prest in centre for the winners was the fielding ace of the battle with five chances. Price in right and Tracy in left also turned in perfect fielding performances. Gore, Brown, Munro and Nobbs each hit three times for the Engineers, with Nobbs having the only home run of the game.

Les Calladine, Stan Clarke and Muir had several neat put-outs for the losers, while Reynolds and Clarke tied in the hitting with two singles apiece. Muir, Broadley and Ashmore secured the other hits.

The teams:

Engineers—Price, rf; Gore, c; Emery, 2b; Nobs, 2b; Brown, 3b; Munro, p; Jones, 1b; Lawrence, ss; Prest, cf; Tracy, lf; Smith, lf.

Mister Sporting Editor:

Well, Mac, the remainder of our hardball teams has dropped outa sight since my last billydoo, and the only outfit we got in the running is the Sugar Bowl mushballers, which put the Oshawa Tuxis away neatly.

Our juvenile entries which looked plenty good enough to take the Toronto kids and go into the finals, passed off the stage last Sat. at Bowmanville when they was nosed out in the 3rd game. Mister Ralph's kids should of grabbed the verdict if a sudden attack of sleeping sickness hadn't bust out, with the result a sure run that would of meant the ball game was lost. It is a bad place to snatch 40 winks on the bases, and it cost the Peterborough kids a chance to go into the last round.

Then Mon. the Cogs, our final hope, folded up completely, and the Picton gang which beat them at home on Sat. 3 to 2 win going away by 6 to 2. The E.P. winners kicked in with 8 errors, and as this little lefthander, Mister Phillips, of Picton, had plenty of smoke and stuff, holding the homesters easy after the 1st frame, the Cogs' boots was decidedly costly. The only bright spot for the local fans was Mister Jack Billingaley's truck motion which picked 4 or 5 visitors off the bases. Mister Billingaley's work was so smooth that the Pictonites finally decided he must be doing it with mirrors or something.

Wed. a new record was created here when hundred of Peterborough fans actually rooted for the Kingston Ponies, something you woulda said was impossible a few weeks ago. Joe Daley's gang tangled with New Toronto in the O.B.A.A. serious, and without calling at all on the mighty atom, Mister Yammy Jamieson, they made New Toronto like it to the tune of 7 to 3. Mister Lefty Fournier, who usually watches the final innings of the games he starts from the bench, went the whole route for the winners, and until he wobbled a bit in the ninth had the Toronto gang looking very bad. The losers pinned their faith on a port-sided thrower, too, but the Ponies climbed all over Mister Stafford for 6 runs in the 2nd game and the ball game was over right there. A Mister Herod, a burley individual, did a neat job of relief hurling, but he threw 7 frames in a lost cause, for his teammates couldn't bust through for runs. Mister Compeau contributed some de luxe shortstopping, and the reliable Mister McQuaide some hard hitting in the Kingston interest. If Mister McQuaide had of worn a Peterborough unie in the recent playoff serious Mister Lee's lads would of been in there yet. What they need he's got—namely, the ability to smite the old spheroid right on the piccolo in the pinches.

Well, Mac, I gotta get down and see the harness hosses go at Rolly Denne's fall fair, so let's call it a day.

Sportfully yours,

A. WISE CRACKER.

GOLF FACTS NOT THEORIES!

By ALEX. J. MORRISON

ALEX MORRISON says:

Most golfers who wear glasses regard them as a handicap to their game. They need not be.

The most important thing in the swing is to keep the head from turning away from the ball or changing its elevation by either raising or lowering.

This does not mean that the head must remain absolutely still during the swing.

Careful consideration of these requirements will show that the head can move a bit from side to side without failing to satisfy all of these conditions.

At any rate the proper head position would eliminate any chance of having to look over the rim of the glasses. With this in mind the glasses could be a help in maintaining the right head position.

Death Knell Sounding for Famous Bambino As Crown Prince Gehrig Groomed for Throne

Yankee Larruper Goes Through Paces in McGovern's Gym, Ruth's Old Stamping Grounds.

IN PERFECT CONDITION.

Skating, Golf, Hunting and Own Profession, Baseball Are Gehrig's Favorite Sports.

IS HOME LOVER.

(Edward J. Neil, A.P. Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Sept. 16 (C.P.) — They had started driving the spikes to-day in the baseball coffin of the great Babe Ruth. For what did they do but drag out the bashful Lou Gehrig, the Crown Prince of the home run kingdom, and start putting him through the paces that have been Ruth's, and Ruth's alone for the past so many years.

There was the background of Artie McGovern's gymnasium, where every winter, and at other odd moments when business was poor, the Bambino had bared his massive torso and gone through stunts calculated to reduce his waistline.

There on the walls are dozens of pictures of the Bam, with boxing gloves, trunks and sweatshirt on, all twisted up in offensive gestures toward the featherweight McGovern. He stretches on his back while McGovern menaces above him with a medicine ball he's about to plump into the Babe's stomach upholstery. If, during the taking of one of these last pictures, McGovern had ever let the ball go, he probably would not have been around yesterday to welcome the Prince now Babe is quitting forever. His measurements and all were set down for the first time beside those that have been issued reverently on behalf of the Babe each year to prove the king's fitness. Gehrig weighed 210 pounds, and there wasn't an extra ounce on him. He's 30 years old, and his chest measures 46 inches, his waist 32; roughly the opposite of Ruth's proportions.

"Why, he's the finest athlete in the world to-day. . . He never runs around. . . . He loves his mother. All he does is skate and golf and hunt and eat pickled eels. . . . He not only holds the consecutive game record but before he sto: s he'll play so many they'll put putting them down in the book. . . . He's the new Babe Ruth, see?"

Everyone saw but no one felt very good about it, not even Gehrig. He did as he was told, willingly, docilely, and then he went out, looking relieved. The Crown Prince was formally launched along one of the favorite paths of his great predecessor.

But from the walls, from the pictures staring down, there still seemed to echo faintly the raucous roar of the old master: "H'are ya, Kid?"

There was something a bit sad about it. In came Gehrig looking as if he preferred to be anywhere else but there, and with him, to make the situation even more obvious was the very manager who has directed Ruth's gestures, his barnstorming tours, even his contract arguments with the Yankees, for at least ten years.

"Look at those muscles—hey, get that camera over this way. . . Are you ready with those sound machines? Okay, Lou, say something for the boys . . ."

In Perfect Condition

There was no gainsaying Gehrig's physical qualifications for the home run throne it seems apparent

TRENTON PLAYS HERE ON MONDAY

Return Game With Sugar Bowl Will Start at 4.45 in James Stevenson Park.

Trenton and Sugar Bowl play here at 4.45 at Stevenson Park Monday evening, the second game of their third O.A.S.A. round playdowns. The Bowlmen took the first by a comfortable margin and feel they can eliminate the Trenton team in two straight games. However, Trenton after losing badly to Belleville in the previous playdown series came back strong to win out. They may do the same against this outfit.

Trenton has twice eliminated Sugar Bowl from the O.A.S.A. playdowns, two years ago and again four years ago. No local team has gone as far in the Ontario Softball eliminations as Sugar Bowl this year, and the Dormer crew is looking to take Trenton and then beat Kingston out in the next round. It is an ambitious program, but the Bowl is a classy outfit and might do it. Currie, Simmons and Sturgeon are all available for pitching duties here Monday, and the team is at full strength, as will the Trenton crew be.

SPORTS DAY BY DAY

Baseball—Softball—Lacrosse Soccer—Wrestling, and Others

(By C. J. P.)

Wont be long till we're squirming into the itchy red flannels, pulling a couple of sweaters over us and ambling in a hunched-up manner up and down the sidelines while the husky P.C.I. footballers tear into each other. The frost is on the punkin' now and the pigskin sport is coming into its own. We don't know yet just what kind of a first-string team the Collegians will trot out this Fall, nor even what sort of grouping they'll be in. But we know they always have a pretty fair squad and followers of football will see some good games here again.

• • • • • •

While some coaches around the country are predicting a freer use than ever of the forward pass, certain wise guys in this game are claiming that running plays will be stressed more than the flinging of forwards. Not that the latter play will be discarded—not at all. But forward passing can easily be overdone, and once a team gets pretty good at it, every other one begins building up a defence against that play. Forward passing should be shoved in at certain right moments, while the various trick runs carry the burden of the attack. The rugby season is really too short to find a squad perfect in every department, as they haven't time enough to practise all.

• • • • • •

No doubt, Coach Legon's P.C.I. gridders will go in for new and tricky formations, fake passing and other mystifying plays this year, favoring speedy, clever players rather than the slower and heavie fellows. The local Collegians always did field a fast, light team that went far on good coaching, and let the other halls of learning go for the bruising type of play. Manoeuvers that mass powers on an objective and ones that simply deceive the opposition—it keeps the other team guessing just what's coming next. The line should have an important role in rugby here this Fall, also.

• • • • • •

Any game that sees actual body contact a big part of the play is bound to find players getting hurt from time to time, some of them seriously. Fortunately, football as it is played by P.C.I. teams is not the smashing, rough brand of the game it is some places, particularly in the States. Nevertheless, many minor injuries are received in grouping around here, especially when a small school team is put in the same group as one that has many hundreds of boys to draw from. The senior grouping in which the Peterborough team was entered last year was certainly not ideal. Perhaps it will be better this season. Not only the followers of the team, but the team itself and the coat want strong opposition, regardless of the outcome.

• • • • • •

Of course, players of this strenuous game should know enough to train themselves into the pink of condition, to use a little discretion regarding meals, cigarettes and late hours while the schedule is on—and to wear good pads in the right places. There isn't nearly as much hard body bumping in a hockey game—though plenty—as in a football contest, yet the pucksters are well-padded from stem to stern, and of course in good condition. Football is a grand sport, popular with the fans, and it's up to the players to keep it that way. Rough playing and numerous injuries don't help any game, whether it be hockey rugby, lacrosse or what do you play, anyway?

• • • • • •

Yesterday's gallops at the Ex. by the harness horses were the best put on here in a long long time. The track was fast, the races keen and the winners were clocked down around 2.11 in three heats. Only four of the three-year-olds ran for the $500 stake, Miss Grattan Bars romping home ahead of Dominion Grattan, while Bedford Grattan and Dix Grattan—just who was Mr. Grattan, anyhow?—finished that order. In the 2.22 pace, also for five C's, Cigarette burned up the track to grab the important dough, Lolla, a Toronto bronc, placing and Billie Hugo getting show money.

Ken Sine comes to bat today with a lengthy reply to that letter on lacrosse from Cobourg a few days ago. And from reading both letters, we can't help but think that Cobourg hasn't a great deal to kick about. It seems to us that if a team of older, huskier and more experienced players like the classy Cobourg crew was this year couldn't beat a good junior squad, with one intermediate on it, they ought to take their licking gracefully and say no more. Why didn't Cobourg protest that first playoff game in Norwood immediately after it was over, instead of waiting till they had lost the series and then protesting both games? Mickey Magee, an intermediate, was not protested by any of the other teams in this loop, and the Inter-County League was not a junior one. Dinty's Inn just happened to be a junior team. The league, by the way, was an independent or outlaw loop.

• • • • • •

Now we may have got some of the dope wrong, but not likely as both the Cobourg letter and the one of Sine's dealt pretty clearly with each side of the case. And, as we said before, we don't think Cobourg should protest, and doubt if the league would listen to such a protest. True Cobourg stuck to its original players, and why not? They went through the whole season without a loss, didn't they? Dinty's Inn finally got all its players—all juniors, too, but one—out for the playoffs and copped 'em. So what? So Cobourg didn't like it and, it seems to us, raised a big fuss about nothing. If we're wrong, we're always open to correction.

JUNIOR LACROSSE MANAGER ANSWERS COBOURG'S SQUAWK

Lakeshore Aggregation Had Been Playing Mixed Teams All Through Season.

AN OPEN LETTER.

Sports Editor, Examiner.

Dear Sir:

We notice by Thursday night's paper you carry a letter from Cobourg full of moans, groans and alibis.

They begin by stating "the Inter-County Junior Lacrosse League." This word junior is entirely misleading to the sporting public as Cobourg, Port Hope, Millbrook, Norwood, Campbellford and Peterborough were communicated with in the spring with regard to a junior league and affiliate with the O. A. L. A.

It was found that Cobourg and Peterborough were the only two that could field full teams, so a meeting was called in Millbrook one night with representatives from Cobourg, Port Hope, Millbrook and Peterborough present and the present Inter-County Lacrosse league founded minus the word junior.

Now if Cobourg is so particular about playing select teams of juniors why did they ever play Port Hope with mostly all intermediates and Millbrook with all intermediates except one juvenile and why did they also play Peterborough all summer who had a team composed of juniors, juveniles and bantams. This was OK as long as they were winning but some of the Peterborough juniors got through ball and were released off night work and were able to field a full junior team—then the squawk. As regards to drawing players from Norwood, this league and the Peterborough team, it is absolutely untrue.

The following was Peterborough's line-up and their respective addresses, so the public may use their own judgment with regard to this objection:

Lefebre, 240 Rubidge street.
Sloan, 90 Lock street.
Gerow, 129 Rubidge street.
Cadd, 193 Dalhousie street.
Routley, 177 London street.
McGregor, 296 William street.
Gardner, 450-B Mark street.
Hatton, 163 Pinedale street.
Creighton, E., 582 Patterson street.
Todd, 199 Lake street.
Collins, 265 Romaine street.
Vitarelli, 541 Elm street.
Mick Magee of 327 Charlotte St. also played being the only one not eligible for junior and was carried off and on through the summer for the purpose of encouraging and helping the younger players. Some of the juvenile and bantam players who played through the summer and helped land the team in the playoffs and deserve mention were: G. Creighton, F. Hill, Milliken, N. Viterali, Todd, Cassie.

In conclusion the executive and management of Dinty's Inn would like Cobourg to answer three questions, viz:

(1) When they are so particular about where players come from, why did they play a boy from Rochester after May 1 when the resident rule says: "Anyone residing nearest your O.A.L.A. town on or before the first of May of the current year". This league being operated with O.A.L.A. rules governing?

(2) After the third period in Cobourg why did they refuse to accept the president's appointment of referees and insert a football player in to submit decisions and award them two illegal goals in the last quarter?

(3) Why was the fluid at the rink and as soon as the game was over a man was seen running out the door and down the street with same?

Wake up Cobourg spend twenty-five cents for a rule book and get in the game.

Yours sincerely,
K. M. SINE,
Manager Junior Lacrosse Club

"Phat" Wilson Not Through With Hockey

FORT WILLIAM, Sept. 16.—(C.P.)— Contradicting a story that he is through, given out last spring by his former team mate, Wilf L'Heureux, now of Belleville, Ont, "Phat" Wilson, the Lakehead's oldest amateur hockey player, member of Port Arthur's three-time Allan Cup winners, is planning a comeback this coming winter. He retired a year ago to assume the role of coach, but the "old love" has proven irresistible and whether he coaches this year or not, he has declared his intention of donning the blades in a player's role again.

Saskatoon Quakers Enter World Series

MONTREAL, Sept. 16. (CP) — Canadian hockey teams wishing to participate in the world amateur hockey tournament which will take place in Paris this winter must first obtain permission from the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, President Frank C. Greenleaf stated in an interview to-day.

To date this year, President Greenleaf said, the only clubs to which he would be prepared to grant permission to undertake the trip are the Saskatoon Quakers and the Moncton Hawks. These Clubs, Allen Cup finalists last spring, he considers worthy to represent Canada in a world series.

The Saskatoon sextette, President Greenleaf stated, have already secured permission to undertake the series and his information is that the Maritime team are considering the jaunt.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE WEEKLY COLUMN

A goodly thing it is to meet
In Friendship's circle bright,
Where nothing stains the pleasure sweet,
Or dims the radiant light.
No unkind word our lips shall pass,
No envy sour the mind;
But each shall seek the common weal—
The good of all mankind.

MILLBROOK.

"Good Tips" was the theme of study at an Institute gathering last Friday evening, the leader inviting all present to contribute to the discussion, the only stipulation being that there should be no 'guess work' in the information supplied, and if it had not been tried out in actual experience the one supplying the suggestion must say so.

A request for a good "tea punch" to serve at an afternoon bridge brought the reply: Take one quart of strong tea, one bottle of ginger ale, one-half dozen sliced lemons, juice of two oranges, a few cubes of pineapples, and sugar to taste, mix all well together, pour over cubes of ice if possible; if not, then chill well, and serve in glasses. Multiply the ingredients to make the supply needed.

A graduate nurse present, and of long years of experience volunteered a prescription declared to be the outcome of much study, and with which she had been successful in preventing sickness, the same calling for such simple ingredients as: Four level teaspoons Epsom salts; two level teaspoons baking soda, and one level teaspoon cream of tartar. Mix well and place in a sealed jar. The dose to prevent illness being: One-third teaspoon of the powder in a glass of cold water night and morning. In sickness a level teaspoon every four hours.

"I graduated over twenty years ago," the nurse said, "and have nursed all varieties of contagious diseases, including smallpox; and as I studied each case I was certain the foundation of one was the foundation of all. And what would prevent one disease would prevent all, including smallpox. However I have found people in my experience taking cream of tartar in too large doses, in many cases. I want to caution against this practice for in cases of high fever caused by blood poisoning and in contagious diseases, the dosage is never more than one small level teaspoonful to one pint of boiling water. A half glassful may be given every four hours."

When one member laughingly confessed that the cork in her glue bottle "had a habit of sticking making me lose my temper, often when it sticks fast just when I need the glue the most," she was advised to rub the cork with vaseline, and the difficulty would be banned forever. On the heels of this came another with the desire to "serve watermelon in some attractive and different way than just slicing it," and for her there was the advice to "use an ice-cream scoop, or a sharp-edged spoon, cutting the delicious red part into a cone shape, with just enough for one person in one cone."

Watermelon must have brought to mind muskmelon for the query on serving this met with the response that "it is lovely cut in small cubes and served for dessert with thin cream and sugar, and slices of plain sponge cake."

The president intervened here to propound the question, smiling all the while, "When is a vegetable not a vegetable?" answering her own riddle with the reply, "When it is a fruit," all this appropos of the fact that she was about to give the listeners a recipe for carrot marmalade that had proved popular and delicious in her household. "Indeed, it can hardly be told from orange marmalade, and is so much cheaper so is in keeping with these particular times."

Cook until tender eight large carrots; remove from fire and put through the food chopper; add the juice and grated rind of three lemons, and one orange, and two pounds of granulated sugar; cook for twenty minutes; fill jelly glasses and seal.

Among the many other good things given as "tips" was the suggestion when boiling corn, carrots, sweet potatoes, beets, turnips, cabbage, or other vegetables to try adding a teaspoon of sugar to the water and find the flavor greatly improved.

A child born on this day should be talented, efficient, ambitious and adventurous, with strong leanings to all that is high, noble and beautiful in life.

For Monday, September 18

MONDAY'S ASTROLOGICAL forecast is for a rather lively state of affairs but accompanied by delays, disappointments and disagreeable situations to confront and be disposed of. This may consist of dragging into the open a secret enmity or vicious condition of a sinister and subtle nature calling for drastic treatment. However, this may best be accompanied by refraining from bitter and undignified words.

Those whose birthday it is may have a lively and interesting year, but one of setback, delays and disappointments. A sinister and subtle state of affairs may call for drastic treatment, but wise actions and control of tongue and temper may bring about happer conditions and healthier adjustments.

A child born on this day may be active, energetic, constructive, although leaning to subtle, secret and peculiar methods. It may lean to the occult and studious.

WORLD HISTORY—1933-2033
The Shape of Things to Come.
By H. G. Wells, 1933.

In this new volume all Mr Wells' remarkable knowledge and laboriously-built social philosophy flowers into a pre-review of the century to come. Interpreting the past and present, Mr. Wells has attempted to devine the future. His book is devoid of any attempt at sensationalism and merits the serious consideration of intelligent readers.

Mr. Wells' philosophy is internationalistic, as the philosophy of Jesus, Paul, Mahomet, Adam Smith and Karl Marx are internationalistic, and as that of Moses and Hitler are anti-internationalistic. The Shape of Things to Come is one Dr. Raven's dream envisioning the ideal of a Modern World State constituting "one single human community organized for collective service to the common weal." This state will emerge from the second Conference of Baara of 1976, and will mark the end of the long Age of Frustration started by the last war, and now just getting into its stride. Progress stops in 1933, and the dark decades of the middle twentieth century begin.

Closed systems of economic nationalism will reduce the world's population by a fourth; bring down living standards to eighteenth century, or bare sustenance levels, and turn our great cities into abandoned ruins. The use of electricity will wane with the increasing difficulties of obtaining rubber and other essential materials, due to the suppression of foreign trade. Of course Mr. Wells' supposition of an extinct foreign trade under a series of economies is not altogether fair to the teachings of most systems of economic nationalism.

Mr. Wells' dream is thoroughly revolutionary and not one of a restored, recovered or improved social order. He challenges most of the basic concepts, values and institutions of the present order. And interestingly enough, although a harsh critic of Mussolini, Stalin and Hitler, this book travels in thought along the same paths as these great dictators towards authoritative absolutism, and away from freedom of individual thought and initiative.

The new order will not be established without bloodshed and violence, but it will be worth the price.

Education or intellect may be called the keystone of the new world state. Education will permit men everywhere to obtain the right answer to every important social question. The result will be a millenium in which the coercive functions of government will be reduced to an almost imperceptible minimum. Eventually coercion will only need to be applied to the few pathological cases which may crop out in spite of the best eugenic safeguards.

Technology in combination with an ever-enlarging range of available natural resources will surfeit men with ease and abundance, while an ever ascending intellectualism will lead men on and upward to higher cultural levels. Mr. Wells recognizes no doubt, that most people to-day are not conditioned to crave his Utopia, and that it must be part of the work of the revolutionary intellectual's work, not only to perpare and usher in this Utopia but also to make mankind like it.

The idea of universal brotherhood and fellowship on a basis of equality of race, if there be such a thing as race, and equality of group, is not only a tenable but a noble hypothesis. Likewise the notion that men may accept the full implications of this concept as a binding ethic, or religious ultimate, seems not unthinkable. At any rate, it can do no harm for Anglo-Saxon people to envision a Utopia which rejects the exclusiveness of race, religion, group and culture of Victorian Liberals or German supermen.

Such a Utopia is the dream of Mr. Wells for the closing decades of the 20th century.—L. D.

With the passing of Viscount Grey of Fallodon last week, England and the world loses an outstanding individual. Viscount Grey's famous Fallodon Papers and his recent autobiography stand on the favorite shelves of many readers.

An author may have remarkable technique, great cleverness and much originality, but fine and lasting literature only springs from a fine mind.

A new collection of Don Byrne's stories, entitled, Daughter of the Medici and Other Stories, will soon be ready....Beverly Nichol's has a new companion volume to Down the Garden Patch....A Thatched Roof, also illustrated by the unusual work of Rex Whistler....Eugene O'Neil has two new plays....Ah Wilderness, a folk play of the 90's, and Days Without End, a modern miracle play....A new selection of poems from one of the finest living poets, W. Fair Bags Of Ducks Got On Opening Day

Shotguns belched smoke and the first ducks of the season fell yesterday in many sections of Peterborough County as the annual season for duck hunting opened. Many parties from the city were reported in their favourite locations in the rice beds along the upper and lower Otonabee and Rice Lake at an early hour in the day.

Chris. Graham, secretary of the Peterborough Fish and Game Protective Association, states that the demand for the new gun licenses required of duck hunters is heavy. The Empress Hotel was sold out of licenses yesterday and it was necessary to secure a new lot this morning. He said that a number of hunters from Rice Lake reported fair bags for the first day.

The trout fishing season closed at dusk on Thursday evening.

QUARRY YIELDS FOSSIL FISH

rd is Made at McCoy Pit in Marmora Township 20 Feet Down

SHELLS IN ROCK.

MARMORA, Sept. 16 (Examiner Correspondence). — Though Marmora well merits its name through its superabundance of marble, limestone and other rocks it is not often that the discovery of fossils is reported. Making a casual visit to the limestone quarry west of Crow River, where William McCoy is getting out a heavy bulk of rock for resurfacing Marmora Township roads, The Examiner's representative was shown on Thursday what appears to be a decapitated petrified fish. It was discovered at a depth of 20 feet from the orginal surface and at a spot 65 feet in from the original face of the quarry. It is a little over a foot in length with 5 inches wide at one end and 3 inches wide at the other. It is about 1½ inches in thickness and has 32 lines across it, a quarter of an inch apart and the same imprint is seen on a piece of shell rock into which it was embedded.

A live, half-grown green frog was found in an adjacent crack in the rock.

Roseneath Society Will Prepare Bale

(Examiner Correspondence.)

ROSENEATH, September 16. — Mrs. Archie Mouncey opened her home to the ladies of the United church Missionary Society on Tuesday afternoon with the attendance of 28 members and several visitors.

Mrs. Beecher Hogg kindly offered to piece the Yama cloth into quilt blocks. A motion was made that a letter of thanks and appreciation be sent to the Ladies' Aid Society at Centenary for their donation of a quilt to be packed and sent in the bale.

Mrs. Turner and Mrs. Davey were appointed a committee to purchase a sweater and other things asked for to be sent in the bale. The president asked for clothing, or any articles that would be useful to be packed, and leave with Mrs. M. D. Brown.

Mrs. Andrew Brown, leader of the Mission Band, asked the members of the W. M. S. to help in their miscellaneous sale on Saturday, September 23rd. Home cooking, etc., will be acceptable. It was voted upon and carried that the Mission Band be given permission to sell tickets on their autograph quilt.

Miss Mary Paton invited the society to the parsonage for the October meeting, which will be on Oct. 17th. The Lunch Committee is Mrs. C. W. Varcoe, Mrs. B. Hogg, Mrs. A. Mouncey and Mrs. Albert Halstead.

The corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. D. Brown, read a most interesting letter from Dr. Smith of China, and a former young man of Cobourg, Ont.

Mrs. A. Halstead read the devotional leaflet on Priscilla and Aquilla. Miss Doris Mouncey favored the gathering with an instrumental selection on the piano. A reading, "No Seats in Heaven," by Mrs. A. J. Campbell, which concluded a very pleasing program, and closed by repeating the Mispah benediction in unison.

Refreshments were served, and a social time was spent among the members and their friends.

BANQUET PLANNED BY MARMORA W.I.

Members Hold Grandmothers' Night With Nine Present—Interesting Program.

MARMORA, Sept. 16 (Examiner Correspondence).—In choosing the occasion of their September meeting for Grandmother's Night, and the home of Mrs. U. Pinner for the place of meeting, Marmora Women's Institute ensured for its members one of the most enlivening programs of the season.

The president, Mrs. J. A. Rice, occupied the chair. The roll call, "A Story of Olden Times," was well responded to by the 27 members present. Under general business the secretary was instructed to send letters of sympathy to two members, Mrs. C. Nichol and Mrs. Alex Kennedy. Plans for the serving of the banquet on Oct. 5th on the occasion of the Teachers' Convention, were also discussed.

The program was then given, with Mrs. Louis Green announcing the numbers. An appropriate reading, "Old Fashioned Fair" was given by Mrs. W. Kerr, Junior, after which Mrs. W. A. Sanderson and Miss M. Brown very ably rendered, "When You and I Were Young, Maggie." A short game, "Pass the Ring," was then played; a duet, "Sleep Kentucky Babe," by Mrs. H. R. Hancks and Mrs. W. Kerr, Jr., was much appreciated. An excellent paper on "Health" was given by Mrs. Frank Sweet. Contributions of "Grandmothers' sayings" were then furnished on paper by the members, and read off by the secretary, Miss Florence Sopha.

A parade of the members in grandmothers' costumes provided a real diversion. Honors went to the hostess of the evening, who also received a gift for being the oldest grandmother present, as did Mrs. H. R. Hancks for being the youngest grandmother at the meeting. Nine grandmothers in all were present. Mrs. Pinner wore what is probably the oldest bonnet in the district. It originally belonged to the late Mrs. Ann Rayburn of Tweed and the present owner thinks it must be nearly a century old.

Warsaw Institute To Conduct Booth

(Examiner Correspondence.)

WARSAW, September 16. — A delightful Women's Institute meeting was held at Mr. and Mrs. David Miller's home on Thursday afternoon, with Mrs. Anderson, president, in the chair.

Mrs. Fred Crowe read a paper on some of the work an institute may do.

A vote of thanks was tendered to Mrs. Robert Moore for her care of the flowers in the cenotaph enclosure. She not only filled the baskets but saw that they were watered twice a day if necessary. It was decided to sell hot dogs at the school fair on Monday, September 25, also to sell griddle cakes which Mrs. John Payne kindly offered to make.

Mrs. R. W. Payne was to have given a talk on the care of canaries, but she was absent.

Mrs. Arthur Payne read notes on current events, some on educational matters, and some on economic conditions.

Some interesting favorite recipes were given in answer to the roll-call. Roll call for October will be potato and egg recipes. Mrs. Roland Payne presided at the piano.

A vote of thanks was given Mrs. Miller for lending her home.

After singing the National Anthem [illegible] were served and

GRAIN AND PRODUCE REVIEWS

CHICAGO GRAIN

Swinging nervously over a range of 2¾ cents yesterday, wheat rallied at the last and closed at quotations almost identical with 24 hours previously.

Encouragement for wheat buyers was found in the largest North American export business for some time, 2,500,000 bushels, and in evidence that 1,000,000 bushels of wheat would be moved soon from Chicago to Eastern lake cities. A disconcerting factor as to grains, however, was unsettlement of securities.

Wheat closed irregular, ⅛c off to ⅛c up, compared with Thursday's finish; corn ¼c to ½c advanced; oats at ¼c decline to ¼c gain, and provisions varying from 10 cents setback to a rise of 7 cents.

CHEESE BOARDS

LISTOWEL, Sept. 16—At yesterday's meeting of the Listowel Cheese Board 365 white and 375 colored cheese offered; highest bid on board, 9¾ cents; none sold. Buyers present: Muir, Gray, Biffin, Johnson, Boyd. Board adjourned for three weeks.

LANSDOWNE. — At yesterday's meeting of the Lansdowne Cheese Board 380 boxes of colored, but no white offered; 240 sold at 10¼c, balance held. Usual buyers present.

IROQUOIS. — At yesterday meeting of the Iroquois Cheese Board 491 boxes of colored were sold at 10⅝c. Buyers present: Johnston and Payne.

ONTARIO GRAIN

Approximate prices track shipping point—Wheat, 60c to 62c; oats, 30c to 31c; barley, 40c to 42c; buckwheat, 40c to 42c.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL.—A generaly steady tone prevailed on the Montreal Dairy and Produce Market during light trading yesterday. All prices holding unchanged, with the exception of eggs, which firmed fractionally. The butter market continued at 18½c to 18¾c a pound for No. 1 grade in carlots or less. Close watch was being kept on the British market and a rise in sterling imparted encouragement to the trade. Dealers are anxious to export as much butter as possible to England during the next few months in an attempt to get rid of the surplus of supplies in the Dominion. Receipts yesterday totalled 1,510 boxes.

Pending further country board over the week-end the cheese market held firm. Ontario cheese in carlots or less brought 10¾c to 11¼c a pound, with Quebec half a cent beneath this range. Arrivals were 3,123 boxes.

A fractional firmness was exhibited on the egg market. Graded shipments in carlots or less of Ontarios were generally quoted at 22½c to 23c a dozen for extras, 17½c to 18c for firsts and 14c for seconds, while Westerns held a range down to 21c for extras, 17c for firsts and 13½c for seconds. A total of 1,201 cases was offered for sale.

On the potato market new Quebecs in 80-pound bags remained at 75c to 80c.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, Sept. 16 (C.P.). — Higher prices on choice cattle, veal calves and hogs, with a good clean-up made at the close featured moderate trading on the Toronto livestock market during the week. Veal calves closed 75c per cwt. higher than last week's closing level, while hogs and choice cattle registered a gain of 10c and 25c per cwt. respectively. Prices on common to medium cattle, lambs and sheep remained unchanged.

Common to medium quality made the bulk of the cattle run and showed a slow movement. One small lot of prime steers made a top of $5.25. Most good weighty steers sold from $4 to $4.70, with medium quality heavies selling at $3.75 to $4.25. Three loads of good Western steers sold at $4.75 per cwt. Common and rough steers sold downward to $3.

Good quality light butcher cattle were scarce and sold from $4.40 to $4.75, with fair to medium butchers at $3.50 to $4.25. Cows were firm to a shade higher, especially on the better grades, which sold from $2.50 to $2.75. Canners were unchanged at $1. Bologna bulls brought $1.75 to $2, with a few export bulls up to $2.50. Fed calves were in demand and regained last week's loss, selling from $6 to $7 for good to choice, with plain downward to $5.

Stockers moved a little better, but prices were unchanged, selling from a low of $2 up to $3 with one lot of well-bred yearlings at $3.20.

Milker and springer trade was quiet, with prices ranging from $25 to $45 for tops.

Good veal calves sold strong, gaining 75c per cwt. during the week, closing at $6 to $7, with a few tops at $7.50. Medium vealers were unchanged at $3.50 to $5, while grassers were weaker at from $2 to $2.50 per cwt.

After a steady opening the hog market gained 10c per cwt. on Tuesday, and closed at the week's high of $4.50 f.o.b. for bacons, $4.85 off truck and at $4.10 off cars. Selects made the usual $1 per head premium.

The lamb market opened steady at $5.50 for good ewes and wethers and remained unchanged, despite salesmen's efforts to raise the market on Tuesday. Bucks sold from $4.50 to $5, with culls mostly at $4.50. Good sheep were firmer, selling from $3.50 to $3, with a few tops at $3.25. Culls sold mostly at $1 per cwt.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, September 16. — A last-minute renewal of purchasing boosted wheat futures fractionally on the Grain Exchange yesterday, after they had declined about a cent from the high points because of diminishing support and weakness at Chicago. Export sales of Canadian wheat amounting to between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 accounted for the early rise, and closing quotations were ¼ to ⅝ cent higher.

The one-cent advance in response to the heaviest export trade in a month was viewed as encouraging by market observers, in view of the heavy pressure of hedging sales against country deliveries. The close left October option at 67½c. December at 69¼c, and May at 74⅛c.

Western farmers, apparently disturbed by the fall in prices after withdrawal of minimum price regulations, threw large quantities of wheat into the market. Hedging pressure was the heaviest in a long time, but the market absorbed the weight, and not until the last hour when buying had subsided, did the prices show an easier tone.

Demand for top grades of cash grains was excellent, reflecting the good export business in Canadian wheat. No. 1 hard was quoted at 2⅛ cents over the nearby future. Trading in coarse grains was active during the early session, but as the morning advanced operations thinned considerably.

TWEED ANGLER CLAIMS HOLDS MARK FOR CATCH

TWEED, September 16. — The record for the biggest pickerel caught this year, claimed recently for George Esquire of Campbellford, who last Tuesday hooked one measuring 37 inches and weighing 5¾ pounds, finds a claimant in Harry A. Grier of Tweed. Last June in the Moira River he caught a beauty which weighed 7 pounds 14 ounces, and was 27½ inches long. This fact was published at the time and apparently the record for the year made by him still stands.

The iris family is divided into three principal groups—bearded irises, distinguished by a hairy appendage on those of the petals, known as the beard; beardless irises and fallows irises.

3-Power Disarmament Pact French Aim

Point to Actions By Nazi Germany To Justify Stand

Officials Hold Conference Will Early Arrive At Some Definite Results Or Be Lost In War Clouds—Crucial Period At Hand.

RECENT CHANGE IN BRITISH ATTITUDE AND U.S. LEAN TO CONTROL, HEARTEN FRANCE

By Melvin K. Whiteleather

PARIS, Sept. 18.—(CP)—A three-power front on disarmament was the hope of French leaders today as British and United States representatives joined them in conversations preliminary to the reopening of the arms conference in Geneva next Monday.

French newspaers and legislators have pointed to Nazi demonstrations at the border and what they call the possibility of the early completion of a German air fleet as making imperative a firm stand against any concessions for re-armament.

From the French point of view, the current talks will have three objects:

To compare notes on charges that Germany is re-arming, to discuss a course should Germany refuse to accept a control plan which French opinion considers prerequisite to the acceptanceof any disarmament treaty, and to get backing for a French proposal for international arms control before armaments are reduced.

Captain Anthony Eden, Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs represents Britain. Speaking for France are Premier Edouad Daladier and Foreign Minister Joseph Paul-Boncour. Norman H. Davis is the U. S. spokesman.

Encouragement

Reports that United States will support the control scheme and a change in the British attitude since a demand was made to stop a "propaganda bombardment of Austria" have heartened official France.

But the feeling is general in France that the disarmament conference will enter a crucial period this fall because of the fear of Nazi Germany.

The conference will early arrive at definite results or, informed quarters say, will be lost in war clouds.

5,000 VETERANS PROMISED JOBS

Immense Throng Gathers Before Detroit Legion Hall Waiting Selection.

WORK IN FORD PLANT.

DETROIT, Sept. 18 (CP)—Hundreds of unemployed war veterans gathered around the American Legion Memorial Hall in downtown Detroit to-day in answer to a promise of jobs with the Ford Motor Company.

The men, some 300 of whom had waited all night, filled the sidewalks on two sides of the building at Cass and Lafayette Avenues, overflowed into an adjoining parking lot and stood eight or more abreast for a block down Cass Avenue and on Fort street, which parallels Lafayette to the south.

At 8 a.m. police estimated there were 4,500 men in the crowd, and there remained two hours before the first would be interviewed. A large detail of patrolmen was on hand, and the crowd was quiet.

The men were attracted by an announcement that the Legion will select 5,000 men who will be given jobs at the Ford plants in the Detroit area. The announcement said 300 men will be selected daily until the quota is filled.

The Ford Company has not discussed the details of the plan or the reason for the unusual method of employment. Semi-official estimates of employment at the Ford plants recently gave the number now working as 45,000.

Platinum Blonde Actress Weds Year After Second Spouse Suicided.

CAMERAMAN IS CHOICE.

YUMA, Ariz., Sept. 18. —(AP)—Jean Harlow, blonde screen actress and widow of the late Paul Bern, was married at 4:30 a.m. here today to Harold Rosson, Hollywood cameraman.

They came here from Los Angeles by plane and obtained the license at 4 a.m.

The platinum blonde actress was widowed a little more than a year ago when Bern shot himself in the luxurious Hollywood home he had given to his bride of two months. The producer's body was found last September 5.

The reason for his act is still a mystery. Scarcely a week after Paul Bern's death, Dorothy Millette, women-of-the-past in his life, leaped from a San Francisco-Sacramento steamer and drowned.

Her Third Venture

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 18.—(AP)—The marriage of Jean Harlow, "platinum blonde" of the screen, and Harold Rosson, film cameraman, did not come as a complete surprise to their friends.

They frequently had been seen together at social functions.

The wedding was the third for Miss Harlow She was married first to Charles F. McGrew, third son of a prominent Chicago lawyer.

Her second husband was Paul Bern, film studio executive who ended his life about a year ago.

Miss Harlow was born in Kansas City. Her real name is Harlean Carpenter.

First Aid Was Given To 28 At Exhibition

Twenty-eight persons received first aid treatment at the ambulance tent voluntarily maintained at Peterborough Exhibition grounds by the local division of the St. John Ambulance Brigade, according to Divisional Superintendent L. Tomkins. Thirteen of the persons treated had minor injuries, while the other fifteen suffered from sickness.

Besides offering free first aid treatment, the members of the corps, who work in shifts each year at the Exhibition, this year cared for 17 lost children until they could be claimed by anxious parents. The activities were under the general supervision of the divisional superintendent. Miss I. Watkins, superintendent, had charge of the ladies' detachment. The Corps received 81 cents in subscriptions during the week.

GALE SWEEPS NOVA SCOTIAN COSTAL AREAS

Creates Consternation in Rich Apple Lands—90 p.c. Crop Unpicked.

N. CAROLINA STRICKEN.

Two Day Hurricane Leaves 14 Dead and $3,000,000 Damage.

HALIFAX, Sept. 18 (C.P.). The tail-end of a sweeping storm that made its way up the Atlantic seaboard to-day lashed the southeast coast of Nova Scotia and finally tapered into a thunderstorm over the central part of the province.

Howling winds and fast dropping barometers aroused consternation for the rich apple lands throughout the Annapolis Valley, where about 90 percent of the 2,500,000-barrel crop is still in the orchards, but aside from a heavy downpour of rain the entire area escaped unscathed.

14 Known Dead

NEW BERN, N.C., Sept. 18.. (AP) The casualty list from the tropical hurricane which swept the North Carolina coast Friday and Saturday went to 14 to-day as additional reports came in the damage was steadily mounting toward $3,000,000.

A terse message received by the coast guard cutter Pamlico here sent from a patrol boat at Morehead City said four members of one family were drowned when the schooner Dale of Sea Level was wrecked.

The message gave no details but said the dead were James Hamilton, owner of the vessel, and his three sons, Nelson, Charlie and Ralph.

Up until last night, 10 persons had been reported dead from the storm. Six persons were missing.

Sanitary conditions in portions of the stricken area were described as "dangerous" and relief agencies moved hurriedly to provide food and other necessities.

Pamlico, Cartaret and Tyrrell apparently were the hardest hit. Four persons were known to have died in Cartaret, four more in Tyrrell, and crops and livestock were almost completely swept away.

Scores of families were known to be destitute, and relief workers had hardly penetrated the area.

SOLDIERS SEEK STORM VICTIMS

Cities of San Luis, Potosi and Tampico Place Dead at 45.

150 HURT, 6,000 HOMELESS

MEXICO, D.F., September 18 (C.P.). — Soldiers searched to-day for additional victims of Friday's hurricane as the cities of San Luis Potosi and Tampico set the total dead at about 45 and injured at nearly 150.

Simultaneously local, State and Federal authorities made plans for reconstructing the dwellings of more than 6,000 homeless persons and rebuilding damaged sections of both cities.

No accurate figure was available but the damage was known to be at least several million dollars Many buildings in both places were wrecked and crops near Tampico suffered greatly.

The greatest loss of life was in San Luis Potosi, 175 miles west of Tampico, where the bodies of 14 women, 14 children, and nine men had been recovered. All drowned when the San Jose Dam broke under the pressure of the swollen Santiago River.

Four blocks of dwellings were wiped out. About 2,000 stone houses were partly destroyed, leaving at least 3,000 homeless.

Pitiful scenes were enacted as the wall of water swept into the city at 11 p.m. on Friday, when ceremonies were conducted to celebrate the 123rd anniversary of the 'Grito' or cry of Mexican independence.

Driver Fails to See Turn on Trenton-Wooler Highway, at Dead Horse Hill.

FOG OBSCURES VISION.

Passengers, All of Campbellford, Escape With Body Bruises and Shaking Up.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 18 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent). — Failing to see a turn in the Trenton-Wooler highway at the foot of Dead Horse Hill, which was obscured by dense fog and driving rain, a light sports roadster, owned and driven by Thomas Rowe of Campbellford, and in which Archie McKay and Clinton McComb of the same place were passengers, took the ditch and turned completely over, throwing McKay and McComb clear of the wreckage.

McComb, who was hurled over a fence into a field, a distance of fifteen feet, escaped with badly bruises and a severe shaking up. McKay sustained slight cuts on the face but was otherwise not seriously injured, while Rowe sustained minor cuts on the head and face and possible internal injury.

The accident happened about four o'clock Sunday morning. Dr. C. H. MacNeill of Campbellford immediately responding to a call, and rushed to the scene of the accident to attend the injured men, whom he had removed to their homes in Campbellford.

Neighboring farmers state that this is the fifth accident this season at this particular point. It is not only a bad turn and a sandy road, but is quite unprotected as sign or guard rail, and early yesterday morning a dense fog obscured all vision, added to which was a heavy and driving rain, making driving particularly unsafe.

Grandstand Attendance Shows Increase Over Previous Year.

SUCCESSFUL EXHIBITION.

The 1933 exhibition closed at midnight Saturday, and in the final analysis results were highly gratifying. Peterborough's debut as a class 'A' fair will long be remembered for many outstanding reasons. Chief among them are the large increase of livestock and other exhibits, and the enthusiastic appreciation of the general public as shown by the attendance figures for the week.

While the attendance in the aggregate showed a decrease of 3,372 over last year, it is considered satisfactory in view of the somewhat unfavorable weather conditions that were experienced throughout the whole period of the Fair.

On Monday and Tuesday paid admissions both at the gate and grandstand were at low level, the weather being decidedly cold. As compared with the corresponding period of the year previous the attendance in the aggregate for the first two nights of the fair was down 1,344.

On no occasion this year did the gate admissions exceed those of last year, but the reverse was the experience so far as the grandstand was concerned. On Wednesday, with a return of milder weather, the grandstand attendance began to increase for the rest of the week, with exception of Friday night, when they sank below those of the corresponding period of 1932.

Saturday's attedance was a surprise to the most optimistic directors of the Fair Board. Despite the

WORK FOR BLIND IS EXPLAINED BY H. C. TRENEER

Former Local Organist Tells Rotary Club of Activities of the Canadian National Institute.

A LOCAL COMMITTEE

Campaign to Organize Permanent Body Here to Co-operate With Institute Soon to be Held.

An eloquent plea for the organization of a permanent local committee to co-operate in the work of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind was voiced before the Peterborough Rotary Club at its luncheon at the Empress Hotel today by Herbert C. Treneer, formerly of Peterborough and for the past two years a member of the field force of the Institute. Mr. Treneer, who himself has been sightless all his life, gave a most interesting exposition of the activities of the Institute for the Blind.

The speaker who was introduced by Rotarian A. L. Killaly, explained that the Institute was a service organization that had sprung into being at the end of thea Great War largely because of the 76 Canadian soldiers who lost their sight during that conflict. It had two main objects—the amelioration of the condition of the blind in Canada and the prevention of blindness, and this second Mr. Treneer considered as the most important.

One of the first steps taken by the Institute was to register all the blind in Canada. So far, 6,500 blind Canadians had been registered, of which 23 were citizens of Peterborough. The work financed partly by Government assistance, partly by municipal grants and partly by voluntary subscriptions, had cost in the neighborhood of $360,000 in 1932, yet in that same year the blind workers, comprising about one-fifth of the total, had been enriched by some $300,000. The Institute had been successful in placing numbers of the blind in industries it operated on its own account, five broom and whisk factories, four basketry factories, and two whitewear factories in which employment for the blind was found, and its library of books for the blind consisted of 17,-000 volumes in Toronto and 2,000 in Winnipeg. Home classes for the blind formed another feature of the Institute's work.

The preventive side of the organization program was explained by Mr Treneer. As a result of its efforts 4 or 5 sight-saving classes had been organized in Toronto, where people of sub-normal vision were given special treatment. A survey of Toronto schools taken at the instigation of the Institute had disclosed 400 pupils with vision of less than 30 per cent., many much fewer than that. In addition to these classes thousands of pamphlets were sent out to schools, etc., urging action to prevent blindness.

"Of the 6,500 cases of blindness already registered in Canada," declared Mr. Treneer, "half need never have occurred."

In conclusion the speaker announced that a campaign would be held here shortly out of which it was hoped would emerge a permanent local committee. This Mr. Treneer submitted, while a separate entity, should be representative of other local service organizations including the I.O.D.E., whose generous support of the Institute he warmly acknowledged.

Rotarian A. L. Mowat expressed the appreciation of the club to the speaker.

In addition to contributing the address of the day, Mr. Treneer added to the enjoyment of the occasion by singing with much feeling the favorite, "Tommy Lad."

30 Extra Police Rushed to Camp For Emergency

General Ashton Warns 800 Relief Workers Holding Out For 35 Cents An Hour That Situation Cannot Be Permitted To Continue.

TORONTO POLICE RESERVES MUSTERED IN CASE STRIKERS DECIDE TO MARCH ON CITY.

LONG BRANCH, Ont., Sept. 18.—(CP)—Thirty Royal Canadian Mounted Police and Provincial Police officers arrived at the Long Branch federal relief camp today, while leaders of the 800 relief workers on strike of higher wages discussed the ultimatum handed out by General E. C. Ashton, commander of the military district.

The men were told that under the Ottawa regulations their demand for 35 cents an hour, for an eight hour day, cannot be met. The regular scale is 20 cents a day in the federal camps, with food and clothing and shelter. General Ashton warned that the situation could not be permitted to continue.

What little hostility was quickly suppressed by leaders of the men, but the police found the cook more stubborn. Saying that if "our men" were not to be allowed meals, neither would the police, the cook walked out of the dining hall to join the strikers.

Meanwhile, in view of the possibility the strikers might decide to march in a body on Toronto, the Toronto police reserves were mustered this afternoon, and held in readiness at headquarters for any emergency that might develop.

Sleeping Sickness Slackens In South

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 18 (C.P.).—The encephalitis epidemic continued to decline to-day with only three deaths and 13 new cases reported since yesterday morning.

The death total to-day was 153, and the total number of cases 669, indicating, a health official said, the malady is spreading much less rapidly than in August and earlier this month. Scientists who have struggled with animal experiments for weeks in an effort to solve the mystery finally have dedicated their own lives to the study.

The United States Public Health Service at Washington announced three unidentified scientists here had submitted to bites from mosquitos which previously had bitten sleeping sickness or encephalitis victims. Experts have given prominence to a theory that the disease is transmitted by insects.

NINE ARE FACING KIDNAP TRIALS

Racket Continues as Boxer's Manager is Ordered to Pay $10,000.

ORDERS LATER.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—(C.P.)—The six letter word with deadly import—"kidnap"— came back to the headlines to-day.

Bailey and Bates, modern revivalists of a desperadoism which once characteried the "wild west," went on trial at Oklahoma city for the $200,000 Urschel kidnapping. They were held before the opening of the trial in shackles, hand and foot, and they slept virtually under the muzzles of guardsmen's guns, so desperate does the law regard them.

At Edwardsville, Ill., the trial of five men and a woman for the kidnapping of the aged August Luer—who was released without the payment of ransom—continued.

Peoria, Ill. authorities held a man they believed to be Clyde Culbertson whom Denver police want in connection with a plot to kidnap a wealthy clubman.

A threat of kidnap, too, was heard at Norristown, Pa., where the manager of the boxer, Tommy Loughran, received a phone call demanding that he pay $10,000 according to instructions to be given later. If the money is not paid, the extortionist said, "it will be just too bad."

In Jackson, Miss., police held Clyde Crews, 18, on a charge of attempting to extort money under threats of kidnapping, and Brooklyn police held Mrs. Jean Costello and John Isola on charges of attempted abduction.

WESTERN CLOCK COMPANY BUSY WORKING SIX FULL DAYS WEEK

Carrying Few Less on Payroll Than During Peak Business Years.

FAVORABLE TARIFFS.

"We have been on a forty-hour week for the past two years," J. H. Vernor general manager, told The Examiner to-day when asked if the Western Clock Company would follow the lead of the Canadian General Electric Company in providing more employment in the city through a shortening of working hours.

"We adopted the shorter week in order to keep as many as possible of our employees working and we are still observing it although at present a rush of orders is forcing us to work our entire staff overtime" Mr. Vernor said. "We are swamped with orders. Both our domestic business and our export business are very good and our plant is working six full eight-hour days a week to keep up with orders."

The Western Clock Company is employing only a few men less than it did during its peak business before the depression, he stated. The payroll now includes 282 names.

"Whether it will continue or not we are not sure" he said. "A considerable portion of our present business may be speculative orders. The prices of raw materials are going up and it may be that much of the buying has been induced by

A Playful Pair

CHICAGO, Sept. 18 (A.P.).—Sally Rand, the fan dancer, walked into a police station today, displayed a bruise under her right eye, and demanded the arrest of Sam Balkin, 44, manager of the night club in which she has been appearing. She said he had "clouted" her in an argument over her salary.

Police accompanied her to the club, where they said Balkin readily admitted his part in a battle with her and showed teeth marks on his arm and said Sally put them there.

Both signed complaints charging the other with disorderly conduct, and each posted a $25 cash bond pending appearance in court later to-day.

14-Year-Old Boy Is Mauled By Dog

Harry Silvester, 14-year-old son of Provincial Constable D. Silvester, is still confined to his home following the serious mauling he received last week from a big police dog on Stewart Street. The boy was returning from school when the dog, which was chained in its owner's yard, broke its chain, ran out on the street and attacked him. Several stitches were required to close a wound in the boy's leg caused by the dog's teeth.

AGED CITIZEN PASSES AWAY IN 95TH YEAR

Mrs. Bridget Ayotte Dies at the Home of Her Son.

BORN IN DOURO IN 1839.

Parents Were Pioneers Who Came to District in 1825.

In the death of Mrs. Bridget Ayotte, which occurred on Sunday at the residence of her son, George Ayotte, 613 Union street, in her 95th year, the district suffers the loss of one of its oldest pioneer residents.

Born in the Township of Douro in June, 1839, Mrs. Ayotte was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Daniel O'Brien, pioneers who settled in the district in 1825.

In 1860 she was married to Joseph Ayotte and went to live on a farm two miles north of Young's Point, where she raised a family of eleven children—five sons and six daughters.

Knew Pioneer Life Well

Mrs. Ayotte knew by hard experience what pioneer life meant to a woman, as her new home was in a newly opened district with roads only of sorts; no conveniences as they are known to-day, but the pioneer spirit carried her through many trying times.

The forest which encroached almost to the door, held the menace of wild beasts and the trackless woods had its terrors for the mothers of young children, who could easily stray off and actually perish before aid could reach them. This intrepid pioneer woman spun the yarn from which she knit the stockings and mitts which protected her family from the vigors of the cold winters.

Cheerfully she worked with her husband till their family were grown up and married, and then they moved to Young's Point, where Mr. Ayotte passed away twenty-two years ago.

Had Splendid Memory

In the evening of her life, Mrs. Ayotte had received the kindly care and attention of her children. Almost to the last she had retained a splendid memory and enjoyed nothing more than recounting tales of the old days when oxen were used extensively and horses were rare and costly.

She is survived by nine children, five sons Joseph, William, George John and Peter and four daughters Mrs. Burke, Mrs. Kearns, Mrs. Gravelle, of Toronto, and Mrs. O'Rourke of Peterborough. The two deceased children were Mrs. McFadden and Mrs. Fitzgerald.

The funeral is to be held on Tuesday morning with Requiem Mass at St. Peter's Cathedral at 8.45 o'clock. Interment at Young's Point Cemetery.

PRIZE WINNING STOCK ARE SEEN IN BIG PARADE

Interprovincial Field of Horses and Cattle Seen in Parade.

JUNIOR FARMER GROUPS.

Crowded Grandstand Cheered Winners as They Passed.

In the parade of prize winning livestock of the cattle and horse classes Saturday afternoon, the essential background of the Exhibition was brought to the fore, an impressive reminder to the grandstand crowd of the high quality of stock that competed here last week.

Some of the banners of last year were missing; others were in their places. Peterborough sentiment and pride were gratified by the ribbons borne by local exhibitors, particularly the Seymour herd of Holsteins from Cavan township; the Gordon Mann Ayrshires from Smith; the Sam Staples Jerseys also from Cavan; the Birdsall Herefords from Asphodel township and the Moncrief horses from North Monaghan.

If Class A competition has reduced the number of immediately local entries, it has also accentuated their quality by their successes in what was virtually an interprovincial field this year.

The splendid parade included two groups that illustrate the Exhibition Board's desire to encourage junior farmers as breeders. These were the Peterborough county Shorthorn and Holstein clubs, the young cattle in each class being shown by the youths who own them. What may be expected of them in the future is probably indicated by the presence in the major cattle section of junior farmers of a few years ago who are still young but who are becoming veterans of the show ring, including Clarence Mann, Allan Linton of Hamilton township, Carman Seymour, Young Ormiston of Brooklin and Nelson of Campbellford.

Conspicuous in the horse parade was the six-horse team of Clydesdales from the farm of Robert Duff & Son of Myrtle Station, driven by Mark Duff.

Among the exhibitors in the parade, and quite a number of the entries did not leave the barns, were in the equine section, Allan B. Mann of Bridgenorth, Lloyd Kennedy of Bethany, Roselawn Farms, Stock's Bread, R. Duff & Sons, S. S Staples, Wm. Brackenridge of Millbrook, James Whittington and Son of South Monaghan, W. H. Armstrong of Millbrook, Vernon R. Hunter of Cavan, Walter Moncrief of Fraserville and Gilbert E. Arnold of Grenville, Que., with Percherons, Belgians and Clydes.

The Cattle Section

The exhibitors of cattle who strung out past the grandstand were as follows:

Shorthorns — W. E. Parker & Sons, Watford; Amos & Black, Moffat; Frank Scollard, Peterborough; Beatty Farms, Oshawa; Junior Shorthorn Club of Peterborough county.

Herefords—Senator M. J. O'Brien, Renfrew; R. E. Birdsall & Son of Birdsall; Lorne Bagshaw of Uxbridge; Allan Linton, Cobourg.

Aberdeen-Angus— Edwards Bros. of Watford and Bertram Blackburn of Uxbridge.

Holsteins—Fred Ormiston & Sons of Brooklin; J. C. Nelson of Campbellford; Mrs. A. B. Colville, St. Henri de Mascouche, Que.; Ross Calvert, Resboro; James Seymour & Sons of Ida; and the Peterborough Boys' Holstein Club.

Ayrshires—J. Gordon Mann & Son of Smith; Alex Hume & Son of Menie; H. C. Hamill & Son, Markham; Fred Rutherford, Bonarlaw.

Jerseys—W. S. Duffy, Newmarket; S. S. Stables, Cavan; Jarrell Bros.; Cannifton and F. O'Brien, Peterborough.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

Time to Protest

SEATTLE, Sept. 18. (CP)—The McCanns wish people would stop parking cars at a certain spot on Spring street. It's legal to do so, but as R. J. McCann told police: "It's on a hill, and five parked cars have slipped their brakes and come crashing downhill through the front window of the McCann Printing Company. That's too many. There ought to be a law."

BELGIANS BEAT BRITISH BOYS

Touring School Youths Forced to Return to Germany With Swastika Badges.

HAD THEM AS CURIOS.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Thirty-two British schoolboys, returning from a tour of Germany, were stopped yesterday and forced to dispose of Swastika emblems before they were allowed to cross the Belgian frontier. One of the party, T. Kitchen, charged that during the incident they were jailed for two hours, and two of the boys were kicked by men in uniform.

Kitchen said that when their train stopped at Herbesthal, Belgium, two men in uniform, believed to be passport officials, walked through the coaches and kicked the two boys, who were on the floor. Then, he added, they noticed four boys wearing small Swastika badges, bought in Germany as mementoes of the trip.

Forced To Return.

The entire party was ordered from the train, Kitchen declared, their passports taken up, and their baggage searched for Nazi material. Then all were jailed for two hours. At the end of that period they were informed they must return to Germany and dispose of the emblems.

When the group returned to Herbesthal for the second time they were allowed to cross the border.

Denial In Belgium.

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Sept. 18.—Belgian gendarmes at Herbesthal denied they had used hard methods in handling 32 British schoolboys wearing the Nazi emblem, who were forced to return to Aachen, Prussia.

They acted, the gendarmes said, under general instructions issued by the State police, not to admit aliens wearing the Nazi uniform or emblem.

U.S. FIRMS FEEL CUBAN BOYCOTT

American Women Rushed From Santiago as Reds Threaten to Seize Banks.

WELLES OPPOSED.

By Edmund A. Chester

HAVANA, Sept. 18.—(CP)—Increasing labor troubles challenge the strength of the week-old Cuban government today as powerful opposition groups completed a new plan designed to end political troubles.

Americans throughout the island were said to be "nervous" as 57 business groups threatened a 24-hour cessation of business tomorrow to protest against workers violence and as the number of strikes grew.

Boycotts against American firms were invoked at Manzanillo, where a general walkout was set for today. Communists in Santiago threatened to seize American mills and banks and all American women were taken for safety to Rente, across the bay from Santiago.

In Havana 3,000 Cubans paraded, shouting "down with Sumner Welles" American ambassador, and "down with American Imperialism." Unrest grew in a number of other places.

U S JOURNALISTS SEE CENSORSHIP IN NEAR FUTURE

President Roosevelt Has Power to Suppress Critical Papers is Report.

RADIO CONTROLLED.

Minnesota Senator Paints Administration Playing Absolute Dictator's Role.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—Senator Schall, Minnesota Republican, predicted in a formal statement yesterday that "after Jan. 1 we shall witness the destruction of all (United States) newspapers that attempt to criticize the gods controlling our national political administration."

Censorship power over all news and editorials, Schall said would repose with the National Recovery Administrator, Hugh S. Johnson.

May Withdraw Eagle

"Under the provisions of the NRA," Schall said, "the Administration may withdraw its Blue Eagle from any publication it desires, and as all advertisers have been forced to become members of this illegal Government racket, they will beforced to withdraw their advertising from the publication losing its 'Soviet Duck.'

"This makes the present Administration absolute dictators of all public expression," Schall continued.

Educationists Protests

NEW YORK, Sept. 18. — Dean Carl W. Ackerman of the Columbia School of Journalism said yesterday, in his annual report, it was indispensable to the public welfare that the news and editorial columns of the press be free to record and interpret or comment on facts, as well as to print what is inspired or requested by "earnest and devoted public officials."

"Only Possibility."

The report said:

"With the Roosevelt Administration in a position to control the radio, with an almost equal power over motion pictures, and with public emotion stimulated to such a tense state that public meetings must of necessity reflect the spirit as well as the letter of inspired Government propaganda, the only possibility of the United States escaping a dictatorship is inherent in the fight of the profession of journalism for public recognition of the freedom of the press."

LAMSON GUILTY JURY'S VERDICT

Defense Claims Prisoner Will Not Hang—Case Full of Errors.

LOVE TRIANGLE CHARGED.

SAN JOSE, Calif., September 18 (C.P.). — A fighting defence declaration that "David A. Lamson will not hang" was issued to-day as Lamson, convicted of wife murder and facing the death penalty, reiterated his innocence.

While plans went rapidly forward, both to sentence the 31-year-old executive of the Stanford University press and former Red Deer, Alta., resident, and appeal his conviction, E. M. Rea, chief of defence counsel, emphatically asserted his client would not be hanged.

"If he hangs, I hope I die before he does," the attorney said. "It would kill me anyway. But I reiterate, he will not hang. The record of this case is full of errors."

Lamson, convicted by a jury on Saturday night of bludgeoning to death his attractive wife, Allene Thorpe Lamson, issued a statement through his counsel in which he reiterated his innocence.

Late on Saturday night Lamson walked into the court room of Superior Judge Robert R. Syer, and heard a jury of seven men and five women decree him "guilty as charged" of beating his wife to death in the bathroom of their cottage on May 30. The State charged a love triangle was the motive.

Obituary

MRS. ABIGAIL ELLIOTT

Mrs. Abigail Elliott, lovingly known to so many as "Grandma Elliott" whose life for the past 50 years was so intimately connected with Dallas and vicinity, passed away at her home in Dallas, Oregon, recently at the age of 89 years. Mrs. Elliott whose maiden name was Abigail Mann, was one of seven children. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Mann of Smith Township. One brother, G. W. Mann and two sister, Mrs. Sarah Millburn and Mrs. Maggie Garbutt are still living.

Mrs. Elliott was born April 18, 1844. At the age of 19 she was married to James Elliott and for 20 years they resided on a farm near this city, where Mr. Elliott in addition to managing his farm was the pioneer cheese factory operator of the district and also maintained lumber interests. In 1883 they and their family went to Oregon, settling on a farm near Dallas. There with 10 children they made their home for years. Both Mr. and Mrs. Elliott were vitally interested in the activities of the community especially those of the church. Their home was often the scene of happy gatherings.

They celebrated their golden wedding anniversary October 7, 1913. Mr. Elliott passed away 12 years ago at the age of 83. Mrs. Elliott continued to live on her farm until four years ago, when she moved to Dallas that she might better enjoy the privileges of her church and friends. She was especially interested in the Women's Foreign Missionary Society and the Women's Bible Class.

Mrs. Elliott as a young woman had unusual advantage of refinement and gave freely of her time and talent to the community, especially along the line of music.

Ditched By Truck 2 Motorists Injured

HAWKESBURY, Ont., Sept. 18. (CP)—Pinned under the wreckage of their automobile which had turned over three times and caught fire, Harry Ganeski, and J. Miller, both of Montreal, narrowly escaped death this morning.

Crowded off the road while in the act of passing a truck, the accident occurred six miles east of Hawkesbury as the two men were journeying from Montreal to Ottawa. The car of the Montreal men, after turning over three times, landed in a ditch where it caught fire.

Both men were removed to the hospital where it was discovered that neither had suffered any broken bones. They were badly bruised and shaken up, however. Ganski is the more seriously injured and is staying at the hospita. Miller was allowed to go after medical treatment.

MARGARET DILLION IS CLASS OF THE FIELD IN 2.18 EVENT

Sarnia Entry is Never Fully Extended to Take First Place in Three Heats.

GRATTAN PATCH WINS 2.25.

Margaret Dillion, owned by Moore Brothers, of Sarnia, one of the greatest free-legged trotters in Canada to-day, was the big hit of Saturday's racing card at the Exhibition. The big mare was the class of the field in the 2.18 race and, although she did the mile in the second heat in 2.11, she was never fully extended. Her driver hung back in the first two heats until the back stretch in the second trip round, when he suddenly gave her the reins, wheeled out to pass horse after horse and went flying in the stretch.

In the final heat, Margaret Dillon opened up a big lead at the outset and at one time had a lead of 75 yards. The others never had a chance of overtaking her.

Joe Patch, owned by James Wellwood of Merlin, placed second in the first two heats, just slightly ahead of Sir Oliver Rose, A. Thompson's horse, of this city. But in the last heat the locally-owned horse came through in a driving finish to win second.

Close Finish in 2.25.

The really close finishes of the day were provided by Gratton Patch and Guy Pointer in the 2.25 Class. In the first heat, Merry Private, owned by E. Jones, this city, led fully way around and seemed in a fair way to maintain the advantage, but broke badly in the home stretch. Gratton Patch and Bucco Jr. streamed by on the outside, the former winning the heat by a nose.

Again in the second heat, Bucco Jr. gave Gratton Patch a great race, finishing a hang-up second.

All this time Guy Pointer had been holding back with the field and hesitating too long to make his bid to win. However, in the third heat, he went ahead fast from away back in the back stretch, and came down the stretch on the outside to nose out Gratton Patch in the last few yards.

This victory by Guy Pointer made a fourth heat necessary, and in that heat Wellwood's horse went to the front early and, despite the driving finish Gid Litt gave Gratton Patch, finished out in front.

With two heat victories apiece, Litt and Wellwood, got together and decided against running a fifth heat for first money, but divided first and second money.

The results:

Tiny Toque Tops Wide Sleeves

(By Lisbeth)

With shoulders what they are—so extremely broad and everything—and small hats the rage just now, heads are apt to appear inconspicuous.

At least they would be inconspicuous if it were not for the fact that they are so intriguing in themselves, faces are made up attractively, to say nothing of the hair arrangements which are simple—thank goodness—but most charming.

Peaks and dips, braidings and feathers, with pinched effects in the fabric of the favorite sports hat, are the most popular trimmings.

As usual, velvet is the favorite for formal fall hats, tiny toques, such as those pictured here, which lend themselves to coquettish angles, being much in evidence.

Softness is the keynote of the new chapeaux and they lend themselves particularly well to individual manipulation, so that the wearer can adjust her hat to suit her particular type. There really is no excuse for any woman to be seen in an unbecoming hat this season, as, if she happens to make a mistake and buy one that has unbecoming lines, she can adjust it to make it suit her face.

Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors conducted by Anne Wilcox

Recently I saw a quilt pattern of rare beauty—one that has all the charm of simplicity, plus the intriguing element found in old quilts in which repetition of one motif has marvellous diversity.

* * * * * * *

In this quilt called "Hearts United" one heart follows another in close unison. Nothing could be easier to construct than the hearts, nor simpler to put together.

* * * * * *

These are two appealing characteristics of any quilt pattern. With all these advantages, a remarkable variety is produced through the perfect rhythm characteristic of designs of excellence.

* * * * * * *

The name "Hearts United" is as delightful as it is correctly descriptive. The hearts are as united as those of true lovers. There is no divergence.

* * * * * * *

Nothing comes in between to interrupt the close union. Absolute harmoney is present—and yet there is the variety which makes a quilt pleasing, just as variety in life makes it enjoyable.

* * * * * * *

The name is typical of happiness.

* * * * * * *

The quilt can be developed in piece patchwork or in applique. Each heart is made from one piece for applique, the foundation background showing in a right angle inside the geometric outlines.

* * * * * * *

For piece patchwork, the kind chiefly used in old quilts, but four different shaped pieces are required and of these but eight portions are needed for a heart.

* * * * * * *

All edges are straight and even so that the seaming of portions together is of the simplest sort. One not familiar with quilt making will find no difficulty in making the hearts nor joining them together.

* * * * * * *

Each heart is united with those about it whether the quilt is made developed in piece patchwork or applique.

* * * * *

It depends upon the preference of workers which type of quilt is made.

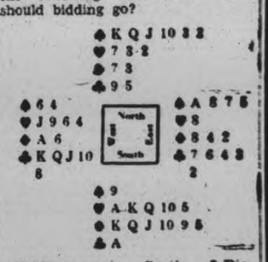
CONTRACT BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR CENTRAL PRESS

By E. V. SHEPARD

THE WRONG WAY

THERE IS a right way and a wrong way of bidding a hand, as the following deal showed. How should bidding go?



Bidding went: South, 3-Diamonds; West, 4-Clubs; North, 4-Spades; East, Pass; South, 3-Hearts; all passed.

The opening lead was the K of clubs. South won the trick. He took 3 rounds of hearts; then he led his K of diamonds. West won, and led a club that the declarer trumped, but the next lead of diamonds removed West's last trump. The declarer ruffed the next lead of clubs, then he ran off his established diamonds, giving opponents a spade trick at the conclusion of the play. This put the contract down one trick. If South had played the hand at diamonds he would have lost the same tricks (one spade, one heart and one diamond). South could make either 4 diamonds or 4 hearts, but no more.

In the first place South's hand did not justify an opening bid of 3. His hand contained 3 possible losing tricks, which meant game only at hearts, not at diamonds.

Only East and West were vulnerable. West had no expectation of playing the hand. He stuck in a shrewd 4-Club bid, just to give North and South the chance to make a mistake, and they made it. If West had played the hand at clubs he would have lost only one spade, one heart, one diamond and one club trick, going down only a single trick.

North could make 4-odd at spades. South could make 4-odd at hearts, and he could have done so except for the troublesome club bid.

It frequently happens that one error causes a second one, just as happened in this case. If North believed that his partner held a sure game why did he not let South handle the situation, which he would have done by bidding 4-Hearts? The interjected spade bid made South think that North had a spade suit that included the Ace. If North wanted to bid spades he could have done so later and he would not have deceived his partner. It was a comedy of errors.

Correct bidding would have been: South, 2-Diamonds; West, 3-Clubs; North, 3-Spades; South, 4-Hearts. If West went 5-Clubs, North should have passed.

The export trade in plums from Canada, whatever it may be in the future, is not important at the present time.

Vacationing

CHICAGO, Sept. 18, (CP)—A black spider monkey, with a gray sailor beard, played hookey from the monkey school at a Century of Progress. He escaped, mounted the tower of the sky ride to a dizzy height and defied all rescue attempts.

Bananas were offered. The monkey came down, snatched the fruit, mounted the tower and tossed the skins at his besiegers. Hundreds of spectators watched.

The monkey was still on the tower to-day.

BE BEAUTIFUL

By GLADYS GLAD

As I told you yesterday, if you wish to look cool and crisply fresh during the warm autumn days, the first thing you must do is to try to make yourself feel as cool as possible. But that's not all. For there are a good many other things a femme can do in order to make herself appear fresh and dainty. They are just simple little beauty tricks—but they're well worth knowing. For it pays to look cool and fresh in any weather. Girls who look damp and wilted only make their associates seem to feel the heat more than ever. While girls who look crisp and dainty have a positively refreshing effect on the people with whom they come into contact.

Gladys Glad

If you follow the bathing procedure that I outlined yesterday, you will experience a most satisfying degree of actual physical comfort and freshness. But don't stop there. In the first place, learn to dress yourself cleverly. Colors, styles and fabrics all count in this. Dark, drab hues are heavy and hot looking, and should not be worn. White, pastel shades, dainty pinks, cool greens and blues with lingerie touches all look dainty and cool. Light, flowered materials also give an air of chic freshness.

In styles, tight, high-necked, long-sleeved frocks should be avoided. They look far too hot for early fall wear.

In addition to bathing properly and dressing cleverly, a girl can increase her appearance of crisp freshness a good deal by the manner in which she keeps her hair. Let your hair be soft and fluffy at all times. Hair that hangs in dank, limp strands is anything but pretty and fresh looking. Frequent shampooing must be resorted to, in order to remove the dirt, oil and perspiration that tends to dim the soft, gleaming beauty of the hair. The hair style is also important. Frizzy, untidy coiffures look hot and unkempt. The hair should be arranged neatly and shouldn't be allowed to fall heavily around the neck and face. In fact, the best type of coiffure is the one in which the hair is brushed back off the face and softly molded close to the head.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Reducing

Rena: The reducing course in my booklet on "The New Figure" has indeed been proven a safe and healthful one. It is guaranteed to take off eight to ten pounds in two weeks.

Orange Juice

Helen: The orange juice should indeed benefit you. It's true that it is distinctly acid in taste, but it has an ultimate alkaline reaction in the body.

Tonic

Helen S.: The sulphur and molasses tonic should be taken in tablespoon doses three times a day. If you eat properly, however, you should have no need of any such tonic.

Bluing

Puzzled: The hair bluing used in the bluing rinse may be procured in any good beauty shop or drug store. It may be used on either black or gray hair.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 18, 1933

THIS IS CLEAR ENOUGH.

The announcement has been made officially from Ottawa that Thanksgiving Day will be observed in this country on Monday, October 9, and Remembrance Day on Saturday, November 11, and that both these days will be national holidays.

It is to be hoped that this early notice will prevent the confusion and difference of opinion that last year marred the observance of Remembrance Day, and that the anniversary of the end of the war will be celebrated throughout Canada in the manner counted on by the Parliament of the country when it set apart November 11 as a solemn day of remembrance.

The refusal of some communities—Toronto being the most conspicuous offender—to obey the wishes of Parliament last year created a most disagreeable impression, particularly as Thanksgiving Day, the date of which was set by order-in-Council was observed without hesitation, while Remembrance Day, named by an act of Parliament, was disregarded.

Peterborough's celebration of Remembrance Day has been impressive, dignified and whole-hearted, and The Examiner sincerely hopes that when November 11 arrives this year, no matter what other centres may do, this city will continue to show a proper regard for the memory of her sons who poured out their life blood for the Empire in the Great War.

THE NEW ISSUE—A CROWNING BLUNDER.

There is every indication that Premier George S. Henry is about to yield to the persuasions of those who argue that it would be sound political strategy to loosen up the liquor laws and make that question an issue in the provincial election.

Mr. Henry has been guilty of a number of mistakes in judgment since he succeeded Hon. G. H. Ferguson in the leadership of the Conservative party in Ontario, but if he allows himself into being stampeded into a more wide-open sale of liquor this crowning blunder will cause all his previous errors to appear insignificant.

The idea is, of course, that by interjecting the liquor question into the campaign the electors' attention will be concentrated upon that issue and the record of the Government, the Hydro charges and other points upon which the Henry administration has been attacked will be forgotten.

The fallacy of that theory scarcely needs pointing out.

Outside of a few centres, there is no demand from the people for a change in the liquor laws; public opinion in the main supports the Liquor Control Act as the most satisfactory method of dealing with a serious problem and is opposed to any suggestion of beer-by-the-glass.

It is nonsense, therefore to suppose that by making an election issue of this question the Henry Government, its errors and omissions forgotten, will be able to ride back into power on a tidal wave of wet votes.

The adoption of such a policy would on the contrary alienate from the Premier the support of those who have hitherto given Mr. Henry credit for his refusal to tamper with the liquor laws.

THE EXHIBITION OVER.

The success of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition in the face of generally unsatisfactory weather conditions throughout the week should be a matter of general satisfaction.

Particularly gratifying was the attendance on Saturday when thousands from all over the district chose to disregard the strong probability of heavy rain and thronged the Exhibition Grounds.

This splendid patronage on a most disagreeable day carried its own evidence of the fact that the Peterborough Exhibition through the quality of its exhibits and the excellence of its entertainment features has firmly established its reputation in this section of Ontario, and that it can continue to expect support so long as there is no recession from the high standard set in recent years.

The parade of livestock before the grandstand on Saturday afternoon gave the huge crowd a chance to realize what Hon. Thomas L. Kennedy, Ontario's Minister of Agriculture, meant the other day when he said that he knew of no fair that was doing more for the farmer than the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition.

Certainly that long cavalcade of superb horses and cattle was a revelation of the progress that is being made in the development of high-class stock in Ontario, and of the part that the local Exhibition is playing in that development.

It is most satisfactory to be able to report that the week passed without a serious accident, and with absolutely no disturbance or unpleasantness, with the police having no occasion to make an arrest for any cause during the whole course of the fair.

A REGRETTABLE DEVELOPMENT.

The opening of the football season has arrived, and for those who appreciate the traditions of Canadian rugby and remember some of the stirring contests of the past, the launching of a new campaign would be a most welcome event were it not for the fears they entertain that the game is in danger of being spoiled, not so much by the adoption of part of the American code as by the idea that it has become necessary to import American stars to play the revised Canadian football.

We have nothing against the stalwart sons of Uncle Sam who have suddenly been hit by the notion that they would like to become residents of Canadian cities; they are doubtless excellent fellows, fine players, and will be a source of strength to the new teams.

But somehow we cannot get enthusiastic over this new development; we believe that there are scores of husky young Canadian footballers who can readily adapt themselves to the Americanized Canadian rules and who should be given a chance to do so, and ignoring altogether the suspicion that the amateur standing of some of these imports would not endure a very close examination, we hate to see stars from the United States tossing forward passes on Canadian football fields while our own young men are forced to sit on the sidelines.

In the Ottawa Journal we noticed the following appeal the other day: "On Saturday, therefore, let's go out to Lansdowne Park, give a real hearty hand to the old Rough Riders."

It is to be imagined that any one who followed that advice and tried to locate the "old Rough Riders" had an impossible task.

The "old" Rough Riders did their own playing and their own fighting; in their halcyon days they would have scorned the idea that they needed the help of American college players in their clashes against Montreal or the Argonauts or the Tigers.

Unfortunately, however, this seems to be another day.

WHAT OF THE RAINY DAY?

The Postmaster General, speaking to his constituents at St. Hermas, Quebec, wanted to know what had become of the profits, the high wages and salaries, paid to Canadians in the years before the depression. What about the ten-dollars-a-day wages? The profits of hay at $30 a ton and potatoes at $4 a bag?

According to Mr. Sauve, billions of dollars were distributed "from war contracts or the sale of products at unlimited prices and from salaries raised to the extreme." Where has the money gone? Why is it, in view of this generous and general distribution, that to-day it is necessary to spend millions every month for public relief?

It would not be fair to assume that the family receiving relief to-day is in that unfortunate position because it was extravagant in the days of prosperity, spending a large income riotously on caviar and champagne and silk shirts. Many, of course, were improvident, took no thought of the future, but many others were careful and cautious, in the light of those days, and reached eventual impoverishment through no fault of their own.

Not all the money lost in the stock markets was lost to gamblers and speculators. There were many investors who bought shrewdly, as they thought, for their old age—only to see their savings and their income melt away. Others bought real estate, sometimes found themselves loaded with "frozen" assets with the taxes a problem. Furthermore the cost of living in pre-depression days marched in tune with income. No doubt it is true that the margin between income and out-go quite commonly went into the insane business of "keeping up with the Joneses," but that is a fault of which not even governments were free in those spacious days.

Governments, in fact, in the period when revenues were enormous and taxation little of a burden on anybody, had not much more concern for the morrow than individuals. They shared in the general thought that a new era had arrived in which revenues constantly would grow to meet expenditures constantly rising. Seemingly it never occurred of them that reserves might be established against a day when money could not be picked off the bushes.

Governments and individuals are in pretty much the same boat. When they have it they spend it, which is a human trait but, as Mr. Sauve points out, that doesn't make any provision for the inevitable rainy day.—Ottawa Journal.

PAY TAXES BY THE MONTH.

Thomas Bradshaw, financier of Toronto, gave the Ontario Municipal Association some valuable hints on sound municipal financing the other day. Here are a few that are outstanding:

Halt municipal debt increases.

Sound, 100 per cent. revenue producing assessments.

Budget ready by January 31.

Keep expenditures within cash receipts.

Never fund current deficits.

The first instalment of taxes should be payable as early in the year as possible, about May 1.

The aim should be to collect taxes in the year in which they fall due.

Bank borrowings and bank interest should be kept down to a minimum.

Relief debentures, if justified, should not be for more than five years and for only 25 to 50 per cent. of the net cost of the year's relief.

Educational costs must be reduced — "and they can be."

Local improvement debt should be incurred only when absolutely essential and well within the benefitted ratepayers' ability to pay.

Public utilities operations should yield a profit after all operating charges, depreciation, interest and principal.

Guarantee of bonds should not be countenanced. Subsidized bonds are not a sound method of financing.

Mr. Bradshaw's points regarding the early collection of taxes are particularly pertinent. Many municipalities make little or no attempt to collect taxes until the year is well-advanced, borrowing money from the banks in the meantime. In St. Thomas we are working pretty close to the schedule suggested by Mr. Bradshaw. We may not have our budget completed by January 31 of each year, but our first of three instalments of taxes is due on April 15. It may be our aim to collect taxes in the year in which they fall due, but in these days of decreased or vanished incomes that objective is not attainable here, or anywhere else for that matter.

The fact that certain municipalities have found it wise to give ratepayers an opportunity to pay their taxes in either two or three instalments and have also arranged with taxpayers in arrears to pay so much per month has raised the question whether taxes could or should be paid on the same basis as rent, by the month. Supporting the consideration of such a plan, the Beacon-Herald of Stratford, where taxes are collected in two instalments—July and November—finds that "the average citizen has an uncomfortable session twice a year in trying to gather together his tax money; the person paying rent by the month gets into the habit of doing it that way and does not have a yearly or half yearly accumulation of indebtedness to face at any one time."

The plan would entail more clerical labor, but we believe if it was carried out to any great extent it would enable the city to decrease its borrowings at the bank in the early part of the year and at the same time keep many a ratepayer from defaulting. —St. Thomas Times-Journal.

VACATION ESCAPADE

By ARTHUR SHUMWAY

CHAPTER 26.

Ted rose, slowly, dully, with one thought in his mind. Sally was dead; he was sure of it: and it was his fault. He dressed without knowing in what and started down the hall. Halfway to the stairs he remembered something. He went back, reached into the top drawer of his dresser and took out a short-barreled .38 caliber revolver. He only half knew why he was taking it: he intended to find Gus Vitelli, to push the gun under his nose, wrap his finger around the rat's windpipe and force from him a confession of John Kemble Proctor's murder. Then he would call the police and wash his hands of Proctor, the newspaper, Florida, the whole business. And if Vitelli tried to fight, to run, so much the better, he thought as he felt the deadly weight of the stubby gun slip into his pocket.

The street was bright with sun and the clock in the hotel lobby said two o'clock. It couldn't be. Ted blinked and looked around. But it was; he had been worn out; had slept from ten until two. He did not even remember going to bed now. All he knew was that they had abandoned the search after nine o'clock that morning.

Ted rode over to the peninsula on the bus and walked the rest of the way to Proctor's villa. As he walked up the drive he hoped he would see Vitelli at once—and at the same time hoped that he wouldn't, for he never was so near murder in his life. The first man he saw, though, was Fred Proctor, walking up from the garage. Proctor hailed him.

"Oh, good morning, Chandler."

The man's cheerfulness infuriated Ted. He merely snarled with the corner of his mouth to acknowledge the greeting.

Proctor came forward, smiling. "You'll be very glad to learn, Chandler—I'm sure—that Miss Gwynne is safe and back in the house."

Ted blinked. "What?"

"That's right," Proctor said, nodding. "She swam ashore and managed to get to the peninsula and get picked up by a car that took her to town. She's pretty well done in, of course, but she's just had a bite of breakfast and there seems to be no lasting serious results."

"Thank God," Ted murmured.

"I thought you'd be glad to know," Proctor said, pointedly. Ted looked quickly at the man, but Proctor's smile was bland. "She wanted to thank you for your part in last night's affair," he continued. "She seems to think a lot of you, Chandler."

Ted had no reply, except to mumble: "She's a very nice girl, sir."

"Chandler," Proctor said, coming closer and speaking more cautiously, "I take a very great interest in Miss Gwynne—and in you, my boy." With that, he smiled again and walked off toward the house. "You'd better take that roadster to the garage and see what can be done to fill up those bullet holes," he said.

Ted went on to the garage, got the bullet-riddled roadster and drove it over to the garage Proctor patronized. He smiled to himself as he thought what Tracy Youngblood, the proprietor, would say when he examined the back of the car and saw those holes. Ted drove in and called Tracy over. The fat, cheerful, Florida "cracker" waddled up, smiling. "I got somethin' to show you, Ted," he said.

"Yeah. Well, I've got something to show you, Tracy."

Ted got out and pointed to the back of the car. He smiled broadly as Tracy bent over and looked at the holes, putting his finger into one, then looking up inquisitively.

"Why, what in th'——"

"What does it look like to you, Tracy?"

"Why, man, those look like bullet holes!"

"Right."

Tracy's mouth dropped open in innocent astonishment.

"You know Proctor pretty well, don't you, Tracy?"

"Of course. Been comin' here with his cars for years. Old man used to bring his here, too."

"Then you know how he is—pretty close-mouthed."

"He shorely is. Man, I know that."

"Well then, I wouldn't spread around about these holes in this car. Do you understand? It's a matter for the police and it isn't quite ready yet. Not a word to anybody," he warned.

Tracy nodded solemnly. "Yes, suh! Anybody that knows Tracy Youngblood in this man's town will tell you he can keep a secret."

"All right, then, Tracy. I know it, too. I just thought I'd tell you. And when the story is ready to come out you'll be the first man to know."

"That's all right. That's all right, Ted. I can keep my mouth shut. I don't want to know nothin' that ain't my business."

"See what you can do to the car then. Now, you said you had something to show me?"

Tracy lowered his voice. "Boy howdy!" he said. "What I mean I got somethin' to show you. But, of course, it's kind of a secret yet, too."

"Okay with me, Tracy."

"Sure. Come here, then, Ted. Say—what hit you?" He stared at the tape and gauze on Ted's cheek.

"Oh, that? Just burned myself a little. Nothing to write home about." But he could see that Tracy wasn't satisfied.

The fat garage man waddled back to the rear of the garage and led Ted through a newly built enclosure of pine boards. "Look at that, man," he said.

Ted saw a long, low, torpedo-like object, an exaggerated racing car, enameled a flaming red.

Tracy Youngblood chuckled. "Ain't that hot?"

"You bet. Whose is it? For the races?"

Tracy nodded. "Supposed to do 275 miles an hour. Man, that's travelin'. That's shorely movin' along. Three motors, three special, 12-cylinder motors. Two in the front, one in the back."

"Whose car is it?" Ted asked.

"Nothin's s'posed to be known about it yet, but it belongs to Winslow Foster."

"The oil man—from Pennsylvania? A friend of mine used to be his secretary."

Youngblood nodded. "He sent it down for me to take care of till he gets here. The races are goin' to be in a few weeks now. Well, don't say nothin', will you, Ted, and you can rest easy I won't mention about Proctor's car."

"You bet," Ted said, taking a last admiring look at the race car. "Two hundred and seventy-five miles an hour! Whew!"

Tracy sent a boy back to Proctor's with Ted and when the young newspaperman alighted in the drive he saw Sally sitting in a striped deck chair at the rear of the house, resting in the sun and looking out over the ocean. Glancing into the garage, Ted saw that Proctor's other car was gone. He approached Sally.

"Gee, it's good to see you again, baby," he said.

"Ted! Look at your face."

"Oh, that's all right. Just a powder burn. Seen your boy-friend, Vitelli, today?"

"No. He's lying low, I guess."

"Well, gee—tell me about it. How did you get back? Proctor said you got ashore and got picked up."

Sally's face darkened. She looked soberly about and motioning Ted closer told him in whispers the entire story including Proctor's warning not to tell him.

Ted looked soberly down at the sand.

"Well," he said. "It's about over. We can't hang on much longer, baby. That bird knows too much."

"I feel as if I were a fly in the shadow of his sweater," she whispered, "just waiting for him to come down with a swoop, and him standing there smiling and dropping bits of sugar on me."

"That's about it, I'm afraid. Listen, Sally. We'd better not even talk at all on the premises. Let's try to meet every night we can, say at the north end of the ocean promenade, down on the beach where it's dark. If we can get a car we can drive out west of town in the woods. I don't think this beach is any safe place for us in more ways than one."

"Ted, can't you turn Vitelli over to the police?"

Ted shook his head. "Not yet, I'm afraid. I could jug him for his little act on the boat, but all the witness we'd have would be Proctor—and I wouldn't care for that. You know yourself that Proctor told you something scurvy about Vitelli being a "gentleman" to him. No, I don't think that would work. He could get sprung and fly town, or he might make it nasty for us."

"But we have to do something and right away."

"True enough. And we're going to."

"What's that, Ted?"

"I've been turning a plan over in my mind, only so many things have come up these last few days that I swear I think I'm going blotto. If Proctor and his rum runners," Ted chuckled, "that discovery solves the mystery of your elusive ledger, Sally, the one you saw him hide on you—well, if they, and the gents in the car on the beach, Collins, I suppose, and the rest of these hyenas only give me a day or two of peace, we'll shoot our bolt."

"I don't want you getting yourself into any more danger, Ted," Sally warned him.

He reached into his pocket and lifting the revolver partly out, showed her the butt of it, black and sinister.

"I don't propose to get into much more danger," he said. "The danger is going to be for your friend, Vitelli, if you ask me."

"What are you going to try to do?"

"Kidnap him and make him wish he never was born," Ted said grimly. "He'll talk. You wait. He'll be glad to talk."

THE LOCK'S BRIDGE

To The Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—If Mayor Denne is correctly reported, he said the new high-level bridge the engineers designed to complete the Peterborough link of the finest highway in Canada, would cost $300,000, and on that account he proposes to buy a discarded bridge from the Welland Canal, which may be 4 or 5 feet wider than the old dilapidated, condemned, dangerous thing that spans the Otonabee River, connecting Lansdowne street with Downer's Corners.

The Mayor is also credited with saying that this makeshift thing will not cost the city much over $20,000. Both assertions are in line with the popular politicians of the day and seem like exaggerations, if not fallacies, intended to impress the electorate with the purpose to "cut to the bone" all drafts upon our dwindling tax pot and our ability to keep it up.

As a matter of fact the fine artistic bridge intended for the highway may not much exceed one-third the sum named by the Mayor. The makeshift bridge, which is to be on a level with the present rotten structure will surely be short-lived and require outlay for patching and safety. Few years will pass until such a bridge as the city, county and highway traffic demand will become urgently necessary. Even now, a low-level bridge, with its spectacular draw-bridge fixture, should be seen as a structural parody. It will impede traffic to let this or that tourist yacht get through. The business sense and public spirit of Peterborough is at stake. If comparisons are odious, let's mention one that isn't.

From the massive up-hill-and-down-grade bridge over the Otonabee at Hunter street, which cost the taxpayers $600,000 and heavy interest, we look down on a glorified transformation, the main cost of which is dumped into this year. A grand stairway is just now being built from the Big Bridge to the grand stand in Riverside Park. All the steps toward what yet may become one of the most beautiful central parks of Canada are to be applauded; but the luxury of it now, when taxation is as high as property salability, when the drain upon our tax pot, for the relief of distraught families is edging toward $200,000 this year, is a luxury that contrasts sharply with the proposal to buy a second-hand bridge.

The bridge designed by the Highway Department should be built right away, because for one big reason; most of the money would go for employment, to families suffering, and will continue to suffer, for the want of it.

Our tax pot is apparently the only available resort. Can the drain upon that tax pot be long continued? Can it be lessened? It must be stopped ultimately, sooner if possible or the town will be in a hole. Every avenue of expenditure should be safeguarded, as in a sacred trust. That's the job of our Mayor and City Council, of the Board of Education and of the Utilities Commission. How competently and faithfully are they managing our tax pot?

Yours respectfully,
William S. Johnson.

ON THIS DATE

A DAY IN CANADIAN HISTORY

By Fred Williams

CANADA'S FIRST TELEPHONE CONTRACT.

On this date in 1877, the first contract for the use of a telephone in Canada was signed at Hamilton. It was between "Alexander Melville Bell, of the city of Brantford, Ontario (thus proving conclusively that Brantford's claim to be the Telephone City is beyond dispute) and Charles D. Cory and Hugh C. Baker, of the City of Hamilton" and leased four box telephones 350, 362, 363 and 659, according to the specifications and embodying the inventions described in Letters Patent of the Dominion of Canada, No. 7789, granted to Alexander Graham Bell, on the twenty-fourth day of August, 1877, said patent having been assigned by said Bell to said lessor." (Melville Bell was the inventor's father.) The license granted "the lessees and persons in their employment to use said telephone for communications between their houses and the houses of their friends in the City of Hamilton in the County of Wentworth, Province of Ontario." The lessees agreed that they would pay the lessor forty-five dollars per annum, payable in advance on the first day of October in each year.

Previous to this, and about a month after the first successful test of the telephone at Brantford, an interesting experiment was carried out at Hamilton. A telegraph wire was placed between Hugh C. Baker's residence, Burlington Terrace, T. C. Mewburn's on Main Street and C. D. Cory's, also on Main Street. At each of the houses there was a telephone and the test was a perfect success. The distance of the circuit was three miles and conversation was carried on between three points with ease. Professor Graham Bell, his father and uncle, went to Hamilton for the event, as it was the first on which three telephones had been used on one wire.

The first telephone company was organized at Hamilton by H. C. Baker in September, 1878, and two years later he was granted a charter by the Dominion Parliament. The Bell Telephone Company was not incorporated until April 29, 1880, but since then has made the telephone so much a necessity of life that in many families the last thing to be dispensed with when hard times comes is the 'phone, than which no other invention perfected in Canada has so revolutionized the life of the world.

Character From Handwriting

By BLANCHE A. DRAPER

A Feature Conducted by Peterborough's Leading Handwriting Analyst for the Readers of The Examiner.

H. Beulah Huffman, 192 Park Hill Road, Peterborough, Ontario: Keenness of perception and intelligent care and thought are described in this handwriting on sample for analysis. It shows poise and discrimination and genuine talent in special lines. You should be able to associate yourself with an executive position in an office, where your word would be accepted as law. Detail and routine as discerned by you should almost be second nature. You are most secretive and quite conservative as regards personal affairs. Your general character is excellent.

M. E. Baumer, 567 George Street, Peterborough, Ontario: The handwriting as shown on your sample for analysis is expressive of one who desires to act on your own initiative. You are gifted with a keen imagination, and a fine sense of humor. You are fond of flowers and seem to be able to make anything grow which you stick into the ground. Your disposition is changeable according to how you feel. If you are rushed you become impatient. If others do not hurry when you want them to you are soon temperamental. However, these traits belong to us, so keep on being just you, and I am sure your friends will appreciate you. Back of all you do, you have a heart of gold.

Vera E. Gordenier, Marmora, Ont.: The handwriting on your sample for analysis indicates a very changeable disposition and illustrates that you are a person of moods. Sometimes you appear energetic and forceful, then you change and become tired and do not seem to want to even raise your hand to exert yourself. The manner in which you sent the two samples for me to analyse does not distinguish which is for your mother or which is yours, so I am presuming that Vera E. Gordenier is yours as the daughter and the one which will appear under Mrs. Jas. Gordenier should be for your mother. If I am wrong, please accept my apologies and take which suits you the best as meant for you. The one I am delineating now was at the top of your letter. It shows nervousness, stubborn qualities and lack of concentration or will-power. If you are young, you may overcome these tendencies by creating an objective for yourself upon which to expend your mental and physical energy. The writing is at all angles and several shapes and sizes. This fact in itself seems to sum up your disposition as versatile.

Mr. Robert McGray, Frankford, Ont.: This handwriting indicates a nervous constitution. You seem to be alert and perhaps too energetic, but your strength is not on par with your mental and physical exertion. You seem to be kind and gentle, sympathetic and genuine, but sensitive and easily overcome with shyness. If you have an ambition, you may write me about it and I shall be delighted to help you. You may add your date, month and year of birth and I will consult your horoscope and numerological forecast in order to assist you further.

Miss Grace Orr, R. R. No. 2, Hastings, Ontario: The handwriting which you have submitted on your sample for analysis shows that you are interesting and thoughtful. There is, however, a very nervous tendency noted in the fine delicate outlines. There is excellent imagination reflected in the tall upper loops of your capital letters, and an artistic ability noted in the manner in which you form the rounded part of your letter 'G.' Your general character is good, but you are not getting as much out of life at present as you would like.

Miss Bernice Spencly, Burleigh Falls, Ontario: The handwriting as delineated on your sample for analysis shows that you are a person with a very changeable disposition. You do not seem to be able to concentrate or set your mind upon any one particular thing for long at a time. There is a tendency to start work and then not finish it. It would pay you to try to develop your will-power. Tell yourself that you can do things and that you are quite capable of doing anything you want to, provided, of course, that you 'really want to.' You are easily dissatisfied and restless, desiring change of friends and scenery and even of clothing. There are many times when you let your rather vivid imagination run away with you, then you feel and act morose and stubborn, blaming the fault of your displeasure on somebody else, usually the first and nearest person at hand at the moment. There is so much good in you that it would be a pity to let it remain dormant, so dress to suit your good taste, look on the bright side of life and happiness will ensue.

Market Closing On All Exchanges

MONTREAL EXCHANGE.

MONTREAL, Sept. 18 (C.P.). — Prices on the Montreal Stock Exchange turned lower in the late trading to-day and at the close the majority of leaders were on the downside.

Hollinger, the feature of the day, gained 25 cents at $10.75, while Consolidated Smelters rose 1½ points at 137. International Nickel weakened and finished the day with a five-cent loss at $22.05.

Brazilian Traction declined ⅛ at 14, while Canadian Pacific Railway, Montreal Power, Canadian Industrial Alcohol "A" and Alcohol "B" were all off ½.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, Sept. 18 (CP)—Further inflationary talk, a sharp advance in sterling, and a good export business over the week-end, sent wheat prices substantially higher in the early trading on the Grain Exchange to-day. A full advance of nearly two cents was not maintained, but at mid-session prices were easily holding at levels 1 to 1⅛ cents above the previous finish.

Most of the support was credited to southern and eastern interests on the strength of the strong showing of sterling on currency exchanges and further rumors of inflation in United States.

Offerings came in the nature of hedging pressure supplemented by some profit-taking. Export sales of Canadian wheat since the close of the market Saturday were estimated at close to 1,000,000 bushels, but this was not fully reflected in the pit. Liverpool opened higher, but slipped off a little due to pressure of cheap Russian and Argentine offerings to stand lower near the close.

Buenos Aires market was strong.

WALL STREET.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (A.P.). — Stocks swayed uncertainly to-day. After opening firmly, the list eased off under nervous liquidation in utilities and rails. Various industrials also turned reactionary. On the other hand, rallying tendencies persisted in metals and oils.

Homestake soared 14 points, while McIntyre gained more than 4. Other shares up 1 to more than 2 included Allied Chemical, American Can, Standard Oil of California, Seaboard Oil, Dome, U.S. Smelting, Goodyear and American Smelting. U.S. Steel Preferred dropped 4½, while the Common lost 2 points. Other declines of a point or more included American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Western Union and Public Service of New Jersey. Alcohols were narrowly irregular.

Transfers approximated 2,600,000 shares.

STANDARD EXCHANGE.

TORONTO, Sept. 18.—(C.P.)—The standard mining market broke out to-day with bullish demonstration that brought-old time animation to the brokerage board rooms. Volume was not quite up to the level of the peaks of the July and February movements, due to comparative quietness in the penny shares.

Most of the business centred in the high-priced issues and some of them jumped as much as $4, spotting the hour dwith record high prices, especially in the gold group. Silver and base metal shares moved up strongly also.

TORONTO EXCHANGE

TORONTO, Sept. 18 (CP)—Compared with New York's early strong advance, the Toronto Stock Exchange put on a rather draggy performance to-day but it held better in the last hour when the big board weakened quite sharply. Volume was less than normal, and the closing price level was down a little from that of Saturday.

C.P.R. at 16 was down ¼, Nickel at $22, off 20 cents; Ford "A" at 14½, down ½, and Brazilian at 13⅝ off ⅛.

Kidnapped

LINDSAY, Ont., Sept. 18. — (C.P.)—It may be a joke but the police are investigating the following note, written on ruled paper and found in the post office here to-day:

"I am being kidnapped. Please notify police. My name is Betty Garland. I am from Toronto. The car is a closed sedan. I don't know the license. Please do not think this is a joke I am desperate."

A check-up in Toronto showed only one girl of that name resident in the city, and she was safe at home. She declared she knew nothing of the matter.

Mayor Sturm Presents World Flyer With Gold Medal at Reception.

GUEST AT BANQUET.

KITCHENER, Ont., Sept. 18 (CP) Wiley Post, intrepid around-the-world flier who has twice circled the globe, dropped out of a cloud-smothered sky to-day at Kitchener Waterloo airport, 55 minutes after he left Windsor on a jaunt into Western Ontario. Two planes from the K-2 Flying Club escorted him the last five miles of the distance.

Post was greeted by city and flying club officials and accepted an honorary membership in the Flying Club. He was made honorary vice-president.

Following a reception the Kitchener band led a parade to the City Hall where Mayor Sturm presented the famous flier with a gold medal bearing praiseworthy inscription of his flying records. Later Post was the guest at a joint luncheon of city service clubs and Flying Club members presided over by Hon. W. D. Euler.

Later this afternoon Post returns to Windsor and Detroit via London.

Favorable Tariffs

Stores of families were known The increased activity of the plant is a direct result of more favorable tariff arrangements in Canada and the British Empire, Mr. Verner continued. The domestic business in Canada has shown an outstanding improvement as the result of elimination of German competition. Tariffs favorable to Canadian-made watches and clocks in other countries of the British Empire have resulted also in increased business, he said. The local plant is now shipping to Australia, New Zealand, the British West Indies, Ceylon, the Straits Settlements, England, Ireland and the Irish Free State.

The tariff changes which are now benefiting the Western Clock Company were mostly made before the Empire Economic Conference, Mr. Verner said.

Combine Is Charged Among Gas Firms

WINDSOR, Ont., Sept. 18 (C.P.).—A formal petition to the registrar under the Combines Investigation Act to conduct an enquiry in an alleged gasoline combine was signed to-day by Mayor David Croll and six other members of the Windsor City Council. It charges eight gasoline companies are apparently operating together to fix a common price for gasoline.

On September 8, the petition declares, these eight companies raised their wholesale price in Windsor to service stations and garages, for third-grade gasoline, from 15½ to 16½ cents. On September 13 they either withdrew third-grade from sale or raised its price to equality with standard gasoline, making a uniform retail price of 17½ cents for either third-grade or standard, including Provincial tax of six cents.

Police Dog Mauls Small Pomeranian

Excitement was intense at the corner of Harvey and London streets yesterday when a big police dog attacked a Pomeranian dog. After severely mauling the small dog, the police dog dragged it more than a block along the road. Constable Jack Thompson and Dr. Johnston, of the Humane Society, were called to the scene. They ordered the police dog destroyed or sent out of the city. The small dog, owned by Bert Croft, Harvey street, was first thought to have been killed, but it is now thought that it will recover.

A big police dog raided the chicken pen of an Edinburgh street resident early Sunday morning, and having killed a five-pound prize Buff Orpington, carried it away.

MOLLISON PLANE ARRIVES

TORONTO—"Seafarer 2nd", the new plane with which Captain James Mollison and his wife Amy will attempt a record long-distance non-stop record starting off from Wasaga Beach north of here, arrived in Toronto this afternoon. With 15 men working day and night shifts on assembly of the machine it will probably be ready to take the air by Thursday.

The flying couple are still resting in Muskoka, but are expected back in Toronto to look the machine over before it is completely assembled.

RELIGION OUT OF FASHION, GLAD OF IT SAYS RECTOR

WINDSOR, Ont., Sept. 18.— (C.P.)— "Religion is out of fashion and I am glad of it. It is a good thing for the church that this is so," said Rt. Rev. R. F. Reinson, Rector of St. Paul's, Toronto, and former Bishop of Athabasca, here Sunday night. He was addressing over 2,000 Anglicans at their annual "service of witness," held in a theatre.

"Conventional religion," he stated, "is dead as Methuselah. The days when fathers in frock coats and silk hats led mothers and children down the aisle of the church on Sunday morning is no more. In many of the cities of Canada the person who regularly attends church is looked upon as somewhat peculiar.

"In my opinion, this is one of the most hopeful signs for the future of the church. We no longer go to church simply because it is the thing to do. Religion is out of fashion and I am glad of it."

Fire Threatens Village Of Dutton

DUTTON, Ont., Sept 18—(C.P.)—The business section of this village was threatened by fire for a time early to-day when fire broke out in the large garage of J. D. Black on Main street. The blaze was fanned by a stiff wind and the contents of nearby buildings were hurriedly removed. The entire population turned out to aid the fire department and succeeded in keeping the flames to the garage.

The garage, two motor cars and other contents were totally destroyed with a loss of between $7,000 and $8,000.

HARNESS TROPICAL SEAS TO PRODUCE CHEAP ICE

PARIS, Sept. 18.—(C.P.)—A project to make tropical seas produce cheap ice is under study by the French Academy of Sciences. Its author is Georges Claude, engineer noted for his attempts to utilize differences in water temperatures between the ocean's surface and depths to produce electrical energy for industrial purposes.

By means of an immense pipe sunk into the Caribbean sea off Cuba he sought several years ago to harness the force caused by the contact of warm and cold currents on the theory that it could be transmitted to a stove factory for distribution. The pipe buckled under pressure and further experiments were halted by the economic crisis.

M. Claude now proposes to fit up a 10,000 ton ship, the Tunisie, as a sea-going ice plant, utilizing the same principles. The ship, which is at Dunkerque, will be ready to begin experiments within 10 months.

COAL COMBINE JURY.

QUEBEC.—A jury will probably be chosen to-day to hear trial of 11 coal companies charged with forming a combine to maintain coal prices.

The presiding judge Mr. Justice Wilfrid Lalberte, has under consideration requests of two of the companies for separate trials. Other companies have filed requests for particulars of the times and places of the alleged offenses.

SPORT OF KINSG

By ART MURRAY
(Special to Examiner.)

THORNCLIFFE WOUND up its fall meeting on Saturday in a blaze of glory. There was a nice crowd, fine weather and plenty of spirited racing over a drying out track. Spey Crest won the feature event from a classy field and the consistent Golden Spur accounted for the secondery feature. Hidden Lore was the long shot special for day, paying over forty dollars for the usual deuce.

• • •

THIS IS an off week in Canadian racing circles with Woodbine opening on Saturday. The layoff will give horsemen a chance to rest up their charges and players a chance to gather together another bankroll as the form players took it on the chin for plenty during the running at the Thorncliffe plant. We notice that during the whole seven days at the Leaside course Conny Smythe did not win a single purse, which is something out of the ordinary. And it may pay players to string along with his outfit at Woodbine and Long Branch. Here are a few of them which you can paste in your hat: Ladder, White Thorn, Caryldon, Divert, Exhibition, Canny Age and Court Butterfly.

• • •

WHITEY ABEL has one called Just Fun that is all set and will likely win at the first asking. Devout is another that we think will cop a heat before the Canadian season is over. The smart clockers tell us that Mama's Choice is burning up the track each morning and will win sure at Woodbine. His stablemate Shady Well is about due for a winning effort also. Wrackell is now eating his oats in J. E. Smallman's barn and is being prepared by that clever conditioner, George Alexandra.

GOLF NOTES

Ronald Akers won the championship in the Caddie Tournament at the Peterborough Golf and Country Club Saturday. Lowest net score was made by K. O'Donoghue, with Oscar Anderson getting second. T. O'Heron won the special driving. Art Lefevre the longest drive, and Dan Loescher the approach and putting. At the conclusion of the matches, the annual dinner was held, the boys being guests of the president of the club, and the Match and Handicap Committee, when the presentation of prizes took place. Ronald Akers had the lowest gross to win the championship.

A two-ball mixed foursome was played on the course, the three low net scores being won by Miss Lenore Lyle and Terry Hall, with a gross of 87 and a net of 66; Mrs. G. Howson and Claude Elliott, gross 107 and net 77; and Miss Jane Macdonald and Lawrence Killaly, gross 96 and net 77. Mrs. G. Richardson and J. Harkness took the consolation draw.

Cricket Results

LONDON, Sept. 18 (C.P. Cable).—The Rest of England proved much too strong for Yorkshire, English County cricket champions, winning the closing first-class match of the season by an innings and 23 runs.

The Rest carried their score to-day to 465 for six wickets before declaring, and Yorkshire, who had compiled 302 in their first innings, were dismissed in the second visit to the wickets for 240 runs.

Wyatt had scored 136 not out when the Rest's innings was declared, while Leyland made 67 for the county champions.

CONANT-McLELLAND WIN OSHAWA DINGHY HONORS

OSHAWA, Sept. 18.—Scoring a total of 104 points, Doug. Conant and Jim McLellan, who sail dinghy No. 6, finally won the D. G. Conant Cup for Oshawa Saturday in the club dinghy races. Starting early this Summer a series of races has been held each week, and Sunday three races were held to wind up the series. With 100 points to their credit McLellan and Conant had nothing to fear in the final race as Hart Bros., who have been trailing them closely all season, were six points behind and could not possibly make up the difference even though, as it turned out, they won the final race.

Plans Are Discussed W.C.T.U. Convention

The executive members of the local W.C.T.U. held a very important and interesting meeting on Friday evening at the home of the president, Mrs. J. H. Rowe, Bethune street.

The business was largely in connection with plans for the Provincial W.C.T.U. convention to be held in the city during the week October 3-6 and promises a program of widely varied interests. The convention sessions open on Tuesday at 1.30 p.m. when delegates will be welcomed by members of the local Union and registration and billeting will take place.

Murray Street Baptist Church has been chosen as the convention centre, and the church officials and pastor are invited in promoting the success of this effort.

On Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock a mass meeting, conducted by members of the Oxford Group team of Toronto, will be held in George street United Church at which every one will be welcome.

Sessions will continue on Wednesday morning, afternoon and evening in the convention church, the evening program being in charge of the Y.W.C.T.U and L.T.L., who will stage a temperance pageant.

The Thursday meetings will be given over to business of the organization and in the evening a special program will be given when Rev. John Coburn will be the guest speaker and special music, including bell-ringing has been arranged.

The convention will close on Friday forenoon and a splendid success is expected throughout.

Ladies connected with all city churches are hospitably opening their homes for the entertainment of delegates and visitors which insures them a hearty welcome from the first to last hour of this convention when over two hundred women of the Province will gather in the interests of temperance.

Dollfuss Involved In Three-Sided Fight

VIENNA, Sept. 18. (AP)—Chancellor Englebert Dollfuss had a notice from his vice chancellor, Franz Winkler, to-day to "make up our mind" in the Australian political situation because "nothing is worse than uncertainty and dissension."

The uncertainty arose from a three-sided controversy involving Dollfuss battles against Hitlerism and Marxism, Winkler's opposition to the Heimwehr (home guard), Socialists, and the outlawed Nazis, and the Heimehr's fight with Winkler, Socialists, and Nazis.

Some of the dissension comes from the Nazis, who turned a Winkler mass meeting in Graz into disorder by throwing smoke bombs and singing the German national anthem. Echoes were heard throughout the country.

Winds of hurricane force and heavy rains struck Shanghai, causing the Whangpoo River to overflow and flood the downtown district and the low-lying native quarter.

PATENTED IDEA.

John Moss Was Former Employe of Canadian General Electric.

A bright business idea conceived by a former Peterborough boy was the tomato cocktail booth in the concession row at the Exhibition.

It was invented by John Moss of Cooksville, a former resident of Aylmer Street south, and for some years an employee of the Canadian General Electric Company. Those who visited the "Ex" remember the booth built in the rotund form of a big tomato, painted red on the outside, spotless white within, and surmounted by a green stem. During the two weeks of the Toronto Exhibition this concesson averaged $215 a day, and Mr. Moss has recently sold the right to use his idea in the State of Florida.

Mr. Moss owns an automobile agency in Cooksville with show rooms and garage.

"I bought a tomato cocktail in Hamilton" he told The Examiner, recalling the origin of his enterprise, 'and it seemed very refreshing and appetizing. I thought of the fact that doctors were recommending tomato juice to many patients: it was used in the hospitals, and was becoming a popular drink or food at the lunch counters, backed by the advertising of the producers. The more I turned the general idea over in my mind, the more I became convinced that there was an opportunity connected with it if I could work out the details. I happened to think of the tomato shaped booth and imagined a series of them located along the main highways, providing a standard line of tomato refreshments with coffee and sandwiches. From that stage I patented the idea and copyrighted it in Canada and the United States. If my plans go through, and I think they will, I expect to have a string of these booths along the highways next year over which I will retain control so as to make sure that the standard of quality and service is uniform. During the winter I expect to place a number of them in the big office buildings in Toronto. The idea was patented only this year, and is still in the first stage."

Mr. Moss said that he was constructing tomato booths" in his shop at Cooksville, and has visions of extending his operations on a fairly large scale next year.

DOZEN STAMPEDE INTO SEA TRYING TO SAVE CHILDREN

Three Lives Lost — Huge Waves Smash Women's "Human Chain"

RESCUERS RESCUED

Blackpool.—Three lives were lost in a stampede by a crowd of holiday-makers to rescue two children in peril in a heavy sea at South Shore.

In the frenzied excitement which followed the children's screams for help more than a dozen people dashed into the sea to their aid, and, in the words of an eye-witness, "it was almost impossible to tell who was in need of help and who could manage to get out without aid."

The three victims were: Joan Wilding, aged 13, of Barrowford, near Nelson, who was one of the swimmers; Stanley Thompson, aged 22, of Kendal; and Miss Mary Ashton, aged 35, of South Shore.

Two children, Joan Healey, aged 12, and Robert Healey, aged 14, of Blackpool, are in hospital in a serious condition. Miss Ashton was their aunt.

Joan Wilding and six other girls ranging in age from seven to twelve had been playing and swimming in the big waves when two of them got into difficulties.

The other children raised the alarm and called a number of men, including ice cream vendors and donkey men, who rushed into the sea.

Miss Mary Ashton, on hearing the cries for help, also dashed into the surf despite efforts to restrain her. She was carried off her feet by a huge wave and was brought out unconscious among a number of others who also went in to the rescue. Miss Ashton died shortly after admission to hospital.

Would-be Rescuer Rescued

Mrs. A. Tyrer, mother of four of the girls, all of whom were rescued, also plunged into the waves and was herself rescued by Arthur Hindle of Blackpool. Mr. Hindle also brought out a boy who had gone to the rescue of te children.

Stanley Thompson was on holiday with his fiancee, Miss Mary Elvey of Kenal, and was about to leave the beach to go for tea at his uncle's house in South Shore when he was attracted by the commotion and dashed into the water.

He was followed by his cousin, Miss Dorothy Ian, who went into the water with a lifebelt, but found it impossible to make any headway against the waves.

Thompson, an athletic young man and a powerful swimmer, swam about for a considerable time and then suddenly disappeared beneath the waves.

Four police officers who arrived almost immediately joined three other men in vain attempts to locate and rescue Thompson and the missing girl, Joan Wilding.

It was some time before the bodies were recovered. A life-saving motor launch which joined the search was nearly swamped by the big waves several times before it gave up the hunt as futile.

Drawn Along By Current

Ines Tyrer, one of the girls who got into difficulty, said that suddenly they had felt themselves being drawn along by a strong current.

"I swam about," said the girl, "until I found I could swim no longer and I shouted for my oldest sister, Kitty. At the same time Joan shouted for help. I got on Kitty's back and she carried me out. When we got out I shouted to a man that Joan was drowning."

Another eye-witness said panic prevailed when Mrs. Tyrer suddenly disappeared. In the water at the time were several men and children and a number of women who had attempted to form a "human chain" but this was broken by a heavy wave.

A pathetic figure in the excitement was Miss Elvey, Thompson's fiancee, who was prostrated by grief when te motor boat returned after its unsuccessful search for the bodies.

WHISKEY NOW USED TO LURE WARY FISH

Codling Tries a Nip With His Lunch, Angler Reports

Whitby.—Anglers here have found a new way of tempting their fishy prey.

They have discovered that whiskey does the trick when ordinary bait fails.

It happened this way.

Two local anglers set off for a day's fishing at sea off Whitby. But although they cast their lines for hours they did not have a single bite.

Finally, fed up, they decided to have a bite themselves, and were enjoying their lunch when one of them had an idea.

He poured some whiskey over a mussel, and attaching it to his hook, lowered it into the water.

Almost immediately he felt a terrific pull at his line, and landed a fine codling weighing between six and seven pounds. Their luck continued as long as they used the doctored bait.

BLAZING MAN SETS GRASS UPON FIRE

Contacts 66,000 Volts and Falls 50 Feet

Sheffield.—Frank Lacey, a young electrician from Kilkenny, sustained injuries at Shiregreen when he came into contact with a 66,000-volt electric cable and fell "a mass of flames" from the top of a 50-foot pylon.

He was burned from head to foot, and was so enveloped in flames that the grass on which he lay helpless after his fall caught fire.

In addition to the burns he had a leg fractured and suffered other injuries.

On arrival at the infirmary he displayed wonderful courage, told officials his name, and expressed a desire to sit up.

SUN RAYS LIGHT FIRE TO UNIVERSITY HALL

Roof Collapses During Blaze —Firemen Leave Church to Fight Flames

London—Sun rays shining through the windows set fire to University College hall at Aberystwyth. The building, all of wood, was erected about ten years ago at a cost of £10,000. It had seating accommodation for 5,000 people. The roof fell in.

Other freak fires throughout Britain on the same day included:

Huntingdon fire brigade, attending a service in Ramsey (Hunts). Parish church in connection with the hospital Sunday parade, received a call to a burning hayrick near the railway line at Huntingdon.

Unemployed allotment - holders were helped by holiday makers to save their allotments when an extensive grass fire broke out at Folkestone. The fire blazed for several hours.

Campers, hikers and villagers helped firemen to put out an extensive grass fire at Havering Park estate, an Essex beauty spot.

Earlier in the day Romford firemen were called to deal with a grass fire on a piece of ground near St. John's church, Mawneys, but the church service went on as the firemen fought the flames.

Hayes Common caught fire. Two fire brigades and holiday makers fought the blaze, which destroyed two acres of heath.

SOLD BULLETS IN ERROR

Lads Thought They Were Getting Blank Cartridges

Hastings. — Three boys, all aged about eleven, were walking about the other night with nine rounds of ball revolver ammunition, sold to them in error for blanks.

They went into a Hastings sports shop and said they wanted blanks for a toy pistol. After they had been served and had left the shop it was discovered that a mistake had been made and that they had received "ball" cartridges of .22 calibre.

The police were told immediately, and as soon as possible the B.B.C. broadcast an appeal to the boys to return the cartridges to the shop.

MADE SIBERIAN TRIP SEEKING CZAR'S GEMS

Had Agreement With Soviet —House Believed Harboring $10,000,000 Gone

London.—Details of an English expedition to Russia to recover jewelry worth £2,000,000, said to be buried under a house at Ekaterinberg—the town where the czar was assassinated—and the failure of the expedition because on reaching there it was found that workmen's dwellings had replaced the house, were related in a partly-heard case here.

Maurice Harry Fredjohn, a middle-aged man, of Dulwich, was charged under the bankruptcy act with obtaining credit to the amount of £150 from a firm of London auctioneers without disclosing that he was an undischarged bankrupt. The defence was that full disclosure of Fredohn's bankruptcy was made before credit was given.

The prosecutor said the expedition, which set out last April, might sound an extraordinary enterprise, but apparently it had the sanction of the Soviet government, and, by an agreement entered into, the jewelry recovered was to be shared with the Soviet government.

Walter Storr Allon, secretary to the auctioneers' firm, gave evidence that Fredjohn called upon him with two other men regarding treasure buried in Russia, and wanted him to value the treasure when found.

It was arranged that witness should accompany the expedition to Russia, being paid £250 before going and his first-class expenses. This arrangement was cancelled and witness was given an agreement to pay him £150 in 60 days for his services.

On reaching the site in Russia the jewels were inaccessible, the original house having been replaced by workmen's dwellings.

In cross-examination Mr. Allon denied that the expedition was a gamble and that he was a co-adventurer.

Mr. Fawkes for Fredjohn, said jewels were buried not only at Ekaterinberg, but at two other places as well.

The hearing was adjourned.

LATCH 3 FEET UP BUT CAT OPENS IT

Takes Leap and Presses Sneck With Forepaw

Aberdeen.—"Misty" looks like an ordinary tabby cat but she has taught herself a unique trick—she can open a door whose latch is three feet from the ground.

"Misty" belongs to Miss Wilson, Westwood, Haslewood.

The door which the cat opens is at the back of the house, and fitted with one of those old-fashioned latches or "snecks" which one presses down with the thumb. When a reporter called, "Misty" was put outside, and it was quite obvious she wanted in again. For a time she stood and looked up at the lock, a good three feet above her. Then she crouched, and suddenly leaped. Gripping the handle of the door with one fore paw, she neatly and quickly pulled down the "sneck" with the other. Presto! The door was open, and "Misty" walked inside.

"Misty" is also an expert huntress. Mice, rats and weasels all come the same to her. They are there to be hunted, so hunted they are. So far, even in the case of the weasels, "Misty" has come off best.

CALLS IN BATTLESHIP TO RESCUE BOY SCOUT

Holidaymaker Flashes SOS to H.M.S. Rodney With Pocket Flashlight

Plymouth. — A holiday-maker who flashed a Morse code message with a pocket lamp induced the great battleship Rodney to send a launch to the rescue of an injured boy scout on the rocky coast near here.

Arthur Hill of Birmingham slipped over the clifftop at Bovisand after nightfall and dropped to the rocks a hundred feet below.

Two other youths climbed down the cliff and swam to the rocks, finding Hill badly injured. Plymouth ambulance men were lowered by ropes, and rendered first aid, but the boy was burt too much to be moved.

A. G. Atkins, a Plymouth holiday-maker, and former army signaller, reached the spot and noticed the Rodney half a mile out, her rigging hung with colored lights for Navy Week.

Mr. Atkins, whipping out a flash lamp, signalled an S O S to the battleship, and described by dots and dashes, the boy's plight.

At once the ship moved in. Her colored lights were extinguished, her searchlights were focussed on the rocks, and one of her launches sped to the rescue.

Soon after, Hill was safely in hospital.

Bristol.—Sir John Ambrose Fleming, scientist, and Miss Olive Franks, Bristol singer, were married secretly in Lond the other day, it has just been learned. Sir John is 83 years of age, his bride 34.

Miss Franks went to Sidmouth two years ago for a festival, and after hearing her sing, Sir Ambrose Fleming was introduced to her, but it was not until later that another meeting was arranged.

Sir Ambrose often came to Bristol to lecture at the university on theological subjects about which he is an authority. He is better known for his research work in wireless. He invented his thermionic valve in 1904. It revolutionized wireless telegraphy and made the wireless telephone possible.

Miss Franks has frequently sung on B.B.C. radio programs.

BOY DECLINES OFFER OF $2,500 FOR GUN

Thirteen-Year-Old Is Inventor But Listed as "Mentally Deficient"

Croydon—For a gun invented by a 13-year-old boy here, a German firm has offered £500 (about $2,500). The boy, according to a medical report, is mentally deficient within the meaning of the education act, but not under the mental deficiency act.

Both these disclosures were made in children's court, when the boy again appeared on a charge of breaking into premises.

The boy's father said that, since the last hearing, a German firm offered £500 for the gun. His solicitor had refused it because the firm wanted possession of the gun before parting with any money.

He added that he was now perfecting the provisional patent on behalf of his boy.

"In that case you could invest the money for his future benefit," said the chairman and the father agreed.

The occupants of the motor car escaped serious injury.

MURDER OF WIFE-KIDNAPPER REVEALED AFTER 2,400 YEARS

Iron Age Marauder Was Climbing Camp Rampart When Smitten

FIND LUCK SKELETON

Letchworth.—A murder of 2,400 years ago has just been reconstructed here.

The victim appears to have met his death by a violent blow over the heart. The skeleton, which has just been discovered during archaeological digging, shows that the man was suddenly struck down and left to die. Later, earth was scraped over the body.

For 24 centuries the chalk and earth of Wilbury Hill have held the grim secret of this crime, committed off the old Icknield Way, a roadway that ran from Norfolk to Wiltshire.

The murdered man belonged to one of the tribes of the Iron Age, who roamed the country, living mainly on pig meat and wearing woollen cloaks.

Excavators had just found the ramparts of an Iron Age camp when they stumbled across the relics of the crime.

The skeleton, that of a full-grown man, was in perfect condition. The man had fallen on his face. Both legs were drawn up as though he had writhed in agony.

The experts who reconstructed the crime believe that the man had crept to the ramparts of the little mud hut camp to steal either a wife or cattle when he was discovered and struck down.

The custom of choosing a wife from outside one's own clan was practiced by the people of the Iron Age, so that the wife-stealing theory has some basis.

The find is considered of such importance that an expert of the British Museum is directing further investigations.

Another skeleton has been found, the remains of a victim of human sacrifice.

The victim had been killed, dismembered, and then buried beneath the south gate of the camp to bring luck to the tribe.

WEDDING POSTPONED WOMAN ENDS LIFE

Feared People Would Laugh at Her

Preston.—The death of a Preston woman on what should have been her wedding day resulted in a verdict of "Suicide whilst of unsound mind" on Ethelrgever Topping, aged 30, who was found asphyxiated in the house where she lived alone.

She had been engaged for two years. The wedding was first arranged for about a year ago, and next for Easter, but postponed each time as her fiance was out of work.

The wedding was again arranged, but on its eve Miss Topping went to her fiance's house to see him. He was upstairs, ill.

His mother cancelled the wedding, but the young man said, "No, we'll go through with it."

Subsequently the girl told her mother that she would go in the morning to stay with a married sister so that people would not laugh at her.

TWO QUICKLY NABBED WITH $10,000 GEMS

Sawed Hole in Organ in Hunt for Loot

Salford.—Within a few hours of a £2,000 jewel robbery, two men were under arrest and the loot had all been recovered.

A mysterious feature of the raid was the cutting of a panel from a valuable oak organ in the upper part of the premises. It is presumed that this was done in the belief jewelry might be hidden behind it.

In the drop from the roof to the top floor the raiders had to make a fall to the landing, an error in which might have sent them to death down the staircase well.

FINDS GOLD NUGGETS IN SCOTTISH STREAM

Carveth Wells Makes Good Haul With Sixpenny Frying-Pan

Liverpool.—A 22-year-old Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society is in Liverpool looking for a partner to take to Scotland in search of gold. He is John Carveth Wells, the son of the American travel lecturer.

Mr. Wells and his wife, still have returned from a holiday in the Scottish moorland between Leadhills and Wanlockhead, and amongst the scanty camping equipment on their two cycles there is a tube containing a dozen tiny nuggets of gold.

"In a few days of haphazard prospecting in the streams on the Marquis of Linlithgow's estate," he said, "I got these nuggets by panning in the soil with the sixpenny frying pan which Jill uses to cook our meals when we are in camp. I took my specimens to an assayer in Glasgow and he states that they are 90 per cent. gold."

Many unemployed men pan there for gold, which they sell to tourists for far more than its real value, he said. The deposits are in narrow strips of grazing land alongside the streams, and this land is so valuable to the sheep farmers that they will allow nobody to disturb it.

Two schoolmasters go there every year for a month during their vacation, and claim to make as much in that time as their salaries amount to for the rest of the year.

GAMES ON SUNDAY UPHELD BY VICAR

Claims "Puritanism Trying to Kill Merrie England"

Newport.—"Puritanism has allied itself to money-grabbing. It has tried to kill Merrie England."

Rev. T. A. Davies, vicar of Lanishen, near Chepstow, made that declaration in an address supporting Sunday games.

The only proviso the vicar makes is that the games shall not be played in church hours.

"We shall be a happier, healthier, and saner nation," he said, "when everyone enjoys taking an active part in games—even on Sunday.

"What a change it would make if the 50,000 persons who saw the Petersen-Doyle fight did a little boxing themselves.

"It is a better and easier way than monkish asceticism to me.

"If we all learned to play throughout our lives, even on Sunday, we should need fewer doctors and lawyers.

"Kingsley and Keble encouraged Sunday afternoon games."

TAKES LADY 14 HOURS TO LAND 564-POUNDER

Faints After Struggle But Brings Home Tunny

Scarborough.—Lady Broughton, the woman explorer and big game angler, arrived at Scarborough in Lord Moyne's yacht with the 564-pound tunny which she had captured.

In addition to holding the world's record for women tunny anglers, she can boast of having had the longest battle with big game fish ever experienced—at any rate in British waters.

She hooked her fish, she said, on the Dogger Bank, and played it for 14 hours. In her tiny rowing boat she hung on desperately, the harness—in the special socket of which her rod rested—biting into her back and shoulders.

After she had killed her catch, and got back to the yacht, she fainted and was put to bed.

"My body is bruised all over," she said.

YORK MINSTER FIRE WAS 130 FEET UP

Timber Scaffolding Increased Danger to Edifice

York. — Excitement was caused here when large clouds of smoke were seen rising from the roof of the choir of York Minster, about 130 feet above the ground.

York fire brigade turned out, but fortunately it was found possible to beat the fire out before much harm was done.

Had the flames gained a hold it is possible that much damage would have been done to the priceless stained-glass of the cathedral from the heat and from falling molten lead, for the central tower, which is 213 feet high and against which the fire broke out, is encased in many tons of timber scaffolding.

A suggestion as to the cause of the fire is that a visitor must have tossed a lighted cigarette end over the parapet and that it fell on a canvas cover resting on ropes, matting, and other workmen's tackle on a wooden bridge over the roof of the choir.

FRANCE TREASURES FAKE SAYS THIEF OF MONA LISA

Copy Returned to Louvre, Original Sold to Collector as Copy

DESCRIBES PLOT

Paris.—Were the art authorities of France fooled when they accepted as genuine the picture returned in 1913 as the famous Mona Lisa, stolen in 1911? Jack Dean, Englishman, unfavorably known to the police of many lands, says they were. He claims to have been one of the thieves of the picture and declares that the painting returned is one of a number of excellent copies, the rest of which were sold to unscrupulous American collectors at high prices, each supposing he got the original picture. The original, he says, was sold through a dealer to a wealthy French collector as a copy and is still in his collection.

"I was one of the three men who stole the Mona Lisa. I was with a gang in Paris which specialised in selling fake works of art," says Dean.

"We were asked by an American millionaire if we could get him the Mona Lisa. The 'boss' of the gang said he would try, intending to do the usual trick of selling the American a copy of the picture, with the faked proofs that it was the original. To do this it was necessary that the picture should appear to be stolen from the Louvre.

Robbery Was Simple

"The robbery was simple. Three of us hid in the easel room on a Sunday night. The Louvre is closed to the public on Mondays. Early on Monday morning, wearing the white blouses worn by the workmen, we took the picture down. Nobody questioned us. It is an ordinary occurrence for pictures to be removed from the walls and taken to the photographers' room. On the stairs we removed the frame. I hid the picture under my blouse and we simply walked out with it to our flat.

"The theft was not discovered till Tuesday and by that time the 'boss' had left for America. Five copies of the Mona Lisa had been sent there previously to wait for him and these he sold secretly to five rich men.

"Each buyer was told that it was the genuine stolen picture, and paid accordingly.

"Meanwhile in Paris another of the gang and I decided to do a bit of double-crossing. We had got the real Mona Lisa—why bother returning it?

Sold Original as Copy

"I made inquiries and arranged things with a dealer. We were to take him the original and he, believing it was a copy, was to pay 2,000 francs (less than £100).

"But unknown to us, one of the other men decided to do a bit of double-crossing on his own. He knew nothing about our wonderful fake picture. While we were taking the genuine Mona Lisa to the dealer he ran off with the fake—believing it to be genuine.

"Two years later he was caught when he tried to sell it in Florence. He was sent to prison and has since died.

"The picture—the fake—which was in his possession was restored to the Louvre and France was happy again.

"And here's a curious thing I've noticed that I know other people have noticed too.

"In the old days there were always great crowds around the Mona Lisa. The picture seemed to have a magnetic power. People went hysterical in front of it; hundreds wrote letters to the picture. Three people committed suicide; one man shot himself in front of the picture.

"Now there are no crowds, no excitement.

"It's queer."

GROWS 'PERSIAN' LAMB IN SOUTHWEST AFRICA

Region Found at Last Where Fur Will Curl as in Bokhara

Windhoeck, Southwest Africa.—Curls have set up a new and thriving industry in Southwest Africa. They are bringing a fortune to the man who discovered where a Persian lamb could be induced to curl its hair.

For 30 years the Bokhara lamb had everything its own way. Women the world over insisted upon having silky black crinkles for her winter coat, and only the seven-day-old Bokhara lambskin could do it.

The whole secret lay in certain salts contained in the waters and grasses of the Bokhara breeding district. The demand for curly Persian lamb skin grew rapidly and could not be met. Harassed fur farmers in the United States and China, on the continent and in Russia did everything in their power to persuade young lambs to curl. They even spread salts on the grass and in the water, but with no success.

Then an enterprising German firm tried to breed the Bokhara lamb in Southwest Africa. Here at last they found just those conditions necessary to produce orbakly black lambs. Now in Windhoek and Outjo breeders are producing 130,000 skins a year. The industry is developing rapidly, and they are still unable to meet the demand.

SWISS RESENT RAID OF NAZI TROOPERS

Search House Across Border From Germany

Geneva. — Great indignation has been aroused in Switzerland by the intrusion of Nazi storm troopers near Basle.

The uniformed Hitlerites searched the house of a watchman at the August-Wyhlen electrical works, which is situated partly in Baden and partly in Switzerland.

Two watches are kept by Swiss employees of the firm and one by German employees, and the watchman whose house was searched is a German, suspected by the Nazis of Communist sympathies.

The object of the raid was to search for printed matter forbidden in Germany, but German police agents, it is stated, had drawn the attention of the storm troopers to the fact that the watchman's house was on Swiss territory and had refused to take part.

COUNTRY IN TERROR WHEN LEPERS ESCAPE

Houses Sealed Over Wide Area—Men Recaptured When Drunk

Vienna.—For miles around Braila, in Roumania, in spite of the great heat, people hurriedly sealed doors and windows of their houses on hearing that lepers from a nearby colony at Tikilesti had rebelled and were raiding the countryside.

The lepers overpowered their superintendent and then dragged him with them wherever they went.

After obtaining wine from several scared innkeepers, they proceeded to the police station to complain against the food contractors to the colony, who, they alleged, was exploiting them.

It was not until the lepers had visited another inn and become thoroughly drunk that the authorities were able to persuade them to release their superintendent and return to the colony.

Pints of disinfectant were then doled out to all comers.

Little Yegoroff, an eleven-year-old boy, had five women arrested for cutting wheat from a field with pairs of scissors.

Jidda, Arabia.—From the desert kingdom of Saudieh-Arabia, over which rules that massive Puritan king, Ibn Saud, comes a new idea for worried "budget balancers."

They are trying to raise money in Arabia for "constructive state enterprises."

Every Arab has been asked to contribute an equivalent to 5c, but in order to encourage rather more substantial returns, the semi-official journal Sawt Al-Hedjas suggests that titles should be conferred for large individual collections.

Thus any Arab who collects $5 should be given the title of "Patriot," $7.50 would earn him the title of "Active Patriot", $10 "Great Patriot," and $20 "Super-Patriot."

Bombay.—The name of a new station on a branch railroad in South India will be Adikalapuramcum-Veerapandiyanpetnam if the suggestion of the authorities concerned is adopted.

Two villages, Adikalapuram and Veerapandiyanpatnam, are equi-distant from this station, so each claimed that its name should be used. One was taken and the station has been rigorously boycotted by the disappointed villagers ever since.

As a compromise a suggestion has been made that the names of both villages be given to the station.

LIGHTNING STRIKES 150 BOYS AT CAMP

Seventeen Unconscious—Two Are Fatally Burned

Cherbourg. — Lightning struck a party of 150 schoolboys on the beach at Gueoville-sur-Mer, knocking them all off their feet and fatally burning one boy and a 19-year-old assistant schoolmaster.

The boys had been engaged in gymnastics on the sands, when a sudden storm broke.

Orders were given by the senior master to form a column and march back to the bungalows. As the boys were obeying the order the lightning struck.

It was some minutes before any of the boys or their masters had recovered from the shock. Seventeen boys were unconscious for several hours, being taken to hospital.

SEAWAY PLANS TO BE RATIFIED

Roosevelt Anxious for Start on Project War Secretary Announces.

FAVORS PRESENT TREATY.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18. — (C. P.)—Ratification of the St. Lawrence waterways treaty with Canada at the next session of the United States' Senate is the aim of President Roosevelt who, it is learned, plans including the gigantic project in the federal works program this week.

Roosevelt is also anxious to complete as soon as possible New York State's power project on the St. Lawrence. It is estimated the State's share of the water power under the treaty will generate 1,100,000 horse power, iwth a larger yield of "firm power," that is, power available at all times, than Muscle Shoals or Boulder Dam.

The first hint that the administration plans to press for ratification came in an address by Secretary of War Dern delivered yesterday at Superior, Wis., in which he said:

"I hope the treaty will be ratified without delay, as the construction of the St. Lawrence waterway is an important part of the President's recovery program.

"The President favors ratification of the treaty in its existing form. He has authoried me to repeat to you to-day that he hopes the treaty will be ratified and that the project will be constructed."

ALL OF US

By MARSHALL MARLIN

MY FRIEND'S GRIEF.

My friend, there was nothing I could do.

You were grieving, your heart was wounded, and none of my poor, stumbling words could help you at all.

One you loved had gone and you were lonelier than you ever had been in all your life.

And so, when I met you on the street and shook your hand, there was nothing for me to say. We gripped hands and I said I was "sorry," and you knew what I wanted to say and did not say, and then we talked of passing, trivial things. I did not need to use words. With a look I said:

"This comes to all of us in time. We lose our treasure. Our dear ones go from us. We grieve because they are gone, and we pity ourselves in our loneliness. Their suffering is behind them now. All that is past. They have gone out of this life, and, perhaps, at the end, they were glad to go, leaving us sorrowful, wishing we had been different toward them, wishing we were wiser, wishing that more often we had said the things that were in our hearts. . . . There's no regret more bitter than this. . . . But we must remember that we were forgiven over and over and that there was only kindness for us at the end. We must go forward now alone. But we have memories still, and these cannot be taken from us. We remember closeness, we remember happy moments when friendship and love held us near to one another. We are not impoverished, really, by this death. We are rich, and we must be brave."

We don't say these things at such moments. We can't. Our tongues, poor, faltering creatures, will not utter them. But our hearts speak freely, unabashed, and a deeper message passes from me to you and you to me, as our hands touch and grip in comfort and consolation.

You understood. I knew you did. And that was all that need to be between your heart and mine. . . . And I know you understand that Death does not really take the living from us. They stay with us, unchanging, and help us on our way.

Weddings

HORTON—GRAHAM.

A very quiet wedding was solemnized on Saturday morning in Trinity United Church, when Mary Pearl, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Graham of the Port Hope Highway, was united in marriage to Mr. Ernest Irving Horton, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Horton, Port Hope Highway. The Rev. P. M. Wooten officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a lovely gown of white appliqued net with mohair hat, white shoes and gloves, and bouquet of Butterfly roses.

Mr. Howard Horton acted as best man for his brother.

After the ceremony, a dainty wedding repast was served at the home of the bridegroom's parents. Later, Mr. Horton and his bride left on a motor trip. On their return, they will reside at 502 Romaine Street.

The gift of the bridegroom to the bride was a white gold wrist watch, to the bridesmaid a cameo necklace, and to the groomsmen a pearl tie pin.

CASTLE EXPRESSES HIS APPRECIATION

In an interview with The Examiner, Everett Castle expressed himself as greatly pleased with the hospitality of Peterborough citizens. The Lambert-Castle Motor Head is the invention of this Peterborough boy, and while no definite arrangements have been made, it is reasonable to expect that this city will have one of the plant units of the Lambert-Castle Motor Head Co. Ltd.

The first factory will be in Windsor and since most of the work will be farmed out to foundries and machine shops, Peterborough shops equipped to do metal work will be given an opportunity. The Peterborough Machine and Lubricator Company can most certainly expect my patronage, Mr. Castle stated, because they have a splendidly-equipped shop and I have already found them splendid people to deal with; as a matter of fact I am indebted to them for the loan of pulleys and equipment that I required at the Exhibition.

The Abbott Electric Repair also co-operated by loaning an electric motor. The Exhibition Board donated the very valuable space in the Main Building, and the Peterborough Utilities Corporation the light and power.

The reception of my associates, Mr. Lambert and Mr. Arnold has been very gratifying to me, and I would appreciate it if through your valuable paper you will extend to all Peterborough my sincere appreciation.

And say—by the way—will you please let the people know that we are indebted to that splendid editor of yours, for the invitation to exhibit at Peterborough, and most of all for spending his own time and money to make it possible.

FIVE POOR BOXES STOLEN FROM THE CATHEDRAL

Five poor boxes were stolen from St. Peter's Cathedral here last week, police admitted yesterday. It is estimated that the thieves obtained less than five dollars for their pains since the boxes were emptied only a few days before the theft. The small boxes made of steel were just inside the entrance to the cathedral and were secured by light chains. The thieves broke the chains and carried them away, apparently while a service was in progress. It is not the first time that similar thefts have been reported here.

Swindler's Panic Costs Him $5,000

VANCOUVER, Sept. 18.—(C. P)—A would-be swindler's groundless panic just him $5,000 according to a police report today.

The man, whose name is not given, opened an account in a local bank Friday by depositing a certified cheque for $10,000 drawn on a Calgary bank.

Saturday he deposited a cheque for $412 drawn on a New Westminster bank, but came back about noon to withdraw $5,000.

His cheque was initialed, but when the teller started to pay in small bills, he asked for larger ones. The teller went to the safe and at moment the bank doors were closed for the day.

The man, apparently thinking he was about to be detained, rushed for an exit and tugged so violently that a bolt was forced. He fled down Hastings street and is still being sought.

A check revealed the New Westminster cheque was counterfeit and police at Calgary have been asked to investigate the other.

KITCHEN STOVE CAUSE OF FIRE

OUTBUILDINGS SAVED

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, Sept. 18.—The home of William Wright, half a mile east of here, was destroyed this morning by fire which is believed to have started from the kitchen stove about 6.30 o'clock, while the members of the family were busy milking.

When the blaze was noticed it had already made considerable headway in the house, and efforts to check the flames were futile. A few pieces of furniture were saved, but most of the contents were lost in the fire. Mr. Wright's financial loss is partly covered by insurance, but the intrinsic and sentimental value of old family heirlooms could not be repaired by any monetary recovery.

The original log house, the ancient home of the pioneer Wrights, one of the oldest families in this district, escaped the flames. Used for machine storage, it and another separate building were saved.

The brigade made a response to the alarm and succeeded in confining the outbreak to the shed. Little damage was caused.

This morning slight damage was caused by a minor outbreak of fire in some rubbish at the rear of Riley and Hickey Men's Store on George Street. The fire was extinguished with a pail of water. Services of the brigade were not required.

"Gossip and Such"

THE ONE INDIVIDUAL who who should draw most attention when he appears for duty in the world series provided the two current major league leaders win their pennants—will be Carl Hubbell.

* * *

* * *

THIS YEAR we'll have no Jimmy Foxx, Lefty Grove, Babe Ruth, Dizzy Dean, Rogers Hornsby, Lou Gehrig, Burleigh Grimes or Al Simmons operating in the autumnal games.

* * *

THE GAMES that Hubbell pitches will be the ones to watch, for in them the best pitcher in the National League and the best defensive player of the year clashes with a very potent attack.

* * *

AT THIS WRITING the Washington Senators, potential world series foes of the Giants, have no less than nine men batting in the .300's, or extremely close to that mark.

* * *

IT WOULD BE too much to expect Hubbell to blank the team that now leads all major league clubs in batting, has registered 50 more hits than any other team and is some .027 points better per man than the Giants, themselves, when it comes to stick work.

* * *

HOWEVER, THE SENATORS have this season not run up against any such air-tight hurling as Hubbell has produced on many occasions. For the first time in their careers the Washingtons will face that famous screwball and nine innings is a very short time in which to solve such a baffling delivery.

* * *

THE GIANT SOUTHPAW most likely will astonish world series fans with his coolness under fire. This is his first test in the big games but he has demonstrated a perfect control of his emotions as well as his pitching delivery in plenty of tight spots this year.

* * *

IF HUBBELL were less phlegmatic he might be placed under a strain by the knowledge that he is the first National League hurler to enter a fall classic the favorite of the fans in many years.

* * *

HOWEVER, Carl can take it. If he blows up under fire of even such formidable opposition as those Washington bats it will be the sensation of the series. Those Washington boys are good batters, no question, but the day they face Carl they'll need to be great.

GOLF FACTS NOT THEORIES

by ALEX. J. MORRISON

Number 99

ALEX MORRISON says:

Watching a good player make a successful shot gives one the impression that the swing is mainly a matter of moving the arms and hands back and forth. And this impression holds with the average player when he goes to make his own swing.

The part played by the feet, legs and hips in enabling the arms and hands to move as they do is completely overlooked.

By failing to perform the necessary body movements the player's swing is without power or accuracy.

Lack of the proper hip action is the reason for poor distance and direction with the long shots.

That extra distance you want can't be had without the proper body action.

McMASTER IS BIG MARKSMAN IN C. G. E. WIN

As Canadian General Defeats Lindsay 9-2 for League Championship.

EARLE-HOTSTON SCORE.

The Canadian General climaxed the soccer season with a splendid win over the Lindsay aggregation, on Saturday afternoon, in Lindsay, in the postponed league engagement when they registered nine goals to the Scugog team's two. McMaster, the Peterborough scoring ace, got six more goals to add to his average for the season. This win gives the winners the league championship. There is only two more games to be played in the league schedule.

After the game, Lindsay boys gave three cheers to the champions and wished them every success in the remaining cup ties.

An Even First Half

There was no benefit derived from the choice of goals. Play run from end to end with the forwards endeavoring to break through the defense but they tackled fearlessly to hold them outside the shooting. After twenty minutes play, McMaster accepted a nice opening made by Burgess, on C.G.E. left, to beat Melrose all the way. Lindsay retaliated with greater vigour than ever until a break away by Earle baffled them when he scored number two. George Munt reduced the lead, a little later, when he scored the best goal of the game. McMaster took that one back again with an oblique shot. Just before the interval, G. Dobbie made the count, Canadian General 3, Lindsay 2.

Lindsay Swamped

On resuming, the visitors dominated the tactics in every department to overshadow the Lindsay eleven. McMaster added five more goals to his average, while Harry Hotston registered the other tally to make the score against Melrose very large. In this half, Alex Burgess had to retire with an injured eye and Hotston took his place. Canadian General 9, Lindsay 2.

Goal scorers—McMaster 7, Hotston and Earle for C.G.E.; G. Munt and G. Dobie for Lindsay.

Canadian General—J. Bolton, goal; J. Mitchell and G. Blowers, full backs; S. Clark, E. Jones and W. Bolam, halves; J. Quinn, L. Earle, B. McMaster, H. Hotston and A. Burgess forwards. Subs, Clyde.

Lindsay—J. Melrose goal; J. Springhall and J. Corrie, full backs; A. Munt, G. Munt and H. Latham, halves; A. Moir, J. Reid, G. Dobie, A. Dobie and James Springhall, forwards; subs., W. Grant and D. Wilson.

Bowling Notes

AT DELORO.

MARMORA, Sept. 18.—(Examiner Correspondence.—Friday evening's program on the Deloro bowling greens proved to be very interesting. In the remaining game of the schedule T. W. Rhind defeated H. W. Sabine.

	Won.	Lost.
I. Hemphill	9	5

H. W. Sabine	8	6

R. A. Elliott	7	7
T. W. Rhind	6	9

The frist two team and the third and fourth teams engage each other on Monday in the semi-finals.

A bowling jitney was also staged. Results: 1, Dr. L. L. Curtis; 2 W. J. Corrigan; 3. G. Brooks; 4 R. A. Elliott.

AT HASTINGS

HASTINGS, Sept. 16. (Examiner Correspondence). — Playing their last out of town games of the season in the Trent Valley Bowling League, Hastings won three out of four from Norwood on Friday night on the latter's greens. A big seven in the seventh end was too much for Lynch to overcome against Carlton, losing out by 17 to 9. In the other game Huyke got a six end on Cutcliffe for a 16 to 11 win.

GEORGE DUNLAP IS 6-5 WINNER IN U. S. AMATEUR

24-year-old New Yorker Defeats Max Marston of Philadelphia in Final Round.

WANTS BRITISH AMATEUR

CINCINNATI, Sept. 18 (C.P.). — George T. Dunlap, Jr., the new York boy who concentrated on developing his golf game because it was good for his health to be outdoors, has now achieved the third and the greatest of his three goals in becoming the new amateur champion of the United States.

For two years and for old Princeton, too, Dunlap won the highest intercollegiate golfing honors of this country. Last year he was selected for the American Walker Cup team and responded by playing some of the most spectacular golf of the international series with England at Brookline.

Saturday, as the climax to a triumphal march through the field at match play, the 24-year-old New Yorker defeated Max Marston, of Philadelphia, 6 and 5, in the final round of the national amateur tournament.

Wants British Amateur.

If he has any other special objective in mind, it is to carry off the British amateur golf title, too. He came close to achieving the double victory this year, for he reached the semi-finals of the British championship at Hoylake after a victory over the Canadian ace, C. Ross Somerville. It was Somerville who turned over possession of the American title trophy Saturday to Dunlap.

MEL OTT'S 22ND CIRCUIT BLOW AND LUQUE'S HURLING COMBINE TO DEFEAT ST. LOUIS CARDS 4-3

A New York Victory To-day and an Even Split in Pittsburg Double-header Would Clinch National League Flag for Giants.

SENATORS NEED THREE WINS FOR PENNANT; TAKE 4-3 COUNT FROM TIGERS ON SUNDAY

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr. A.P. Sports Writer)

New York Giants and Washington Senators stood at the threshold of baseball's throne room to-day, ready to step over at a moment's notice and accept the crowns as 1933 champions of the two major leagues.

Each had disposed of all but one rival in the struggle for the pennants and the schedule to-day made it possible, with just the right combination of victories for themselves and defeats for their opponents, for both of them to clinch the flags.

Combine for 4-3 Win

Of the two, the Giants were a trifle closer to a certainty. By defeating St. Louis Cardinals 4-3 yesterday on a combination of Mel Ott's 22nd home run of the season and Adolfo Luque's fine relief pitching, they eliminated Chicago Cubs, recently considered as their most dangerous rivals. Two more decisions were needed to drop Pittsburgh Pirates out of the race and the Bucaneers were scheduled for a double-header against the Phillies to-day, while the Giants played their second game at St. Louis.

Assuming a Giant victory to-day and an even break for the Pirates, Pittsburgh could go ahead and win all the nine games it would have left, and the Giants could drop their last ten and still the clubs would finish with this standing:

	Won.	Lost.	%
New York	89	69	.586
Pittsburgh	90	64	.584

The Senators, 9½ games ahead of New York Yankees and with 10 games to go against 13 for their rivals, needed three decisions to clinch the American League pennant. And all three were on the program to-day, with Washington playing against St. Louis Browns and the Yanks entertaining Chicago White Sox in a double-header.

The Senators helped their cause along yesterday by coming from behind in the ninth inning to score two runs on Buddy Myer's single with the bases full and two out and defeat Detroit 4-3. The Yankees cut the Washington margin a trifle without doing any serious damage to the Senators' pennant prospects as they took two games from Cleveland Indians 3-2 and 6-1.

Masterpiece for Gomez

Russ Van Atta and Lefty Gomez pitched fine ball for the Yanks, the latter turning in a three-hit, 13-strikeout masterpiece in the second game, and Babe Ruth whacked a homer in each contest to bring his season's title to 30.

Chicago's Cubs also won a double-header, beating Brooklyn by a 6-5 count in each contest, but the one Giant victory left them too far behind in the pennant race to catch up in the seven games they have left.

Cincinnati Reds threatened to climb out of the National League cellar as they took two games from the Baston Braves, 5-2 and 6-0 to finish only a point behind the idle Phillies.

The new standard-bearer is the youngest amateur king since Bob Jones scored his first victory in 1924 at the age of 22. He shot a heart-breaking 68 at Marston in the morning round Saturday and put the game on ice.

ERRORS COSTLY AS TORONTO RIVERDALES LOSE TO PONIES

McQuaid and Joyce Are the Big Guns in Kingston Attack on Grads.

Jamieson Stars on Mound.

Another obstacle overcome, St. Thomas Tom Cats to-day were a step nearer the realization of an ambition which has up until this time never before been achieved by ball teams from the railroad town.

The intercounty champions Saturday eliminated Hamilton Moodie Tigers, chalking up their second straight triumph in the semi-final round by an 8-6 count and advancing in the finals of the Ontario playdowns where never before has a St. Thomas team trod.

In the other semi-final bracket Kingston Ponies scored a 6-2 victory over Riverdale Grads, lone Toronto survivor, on the latter's home diamond Saturday. A victory in the return game will place the Eastern Ontario champions in the title round.

Plays Leading Part.

Once again Ray Vaughan, Tom Cats' right-hand pitching ace and clouter extraordinary, played a leading part in subduing the Tigers. Vaughan relieved Lefty Weeks on the mound in the third and pitched consistent ball for the remainder of the game, inserting a timely pair of doubles to assist in the attack.

Hamilton outhit their rivals, 11-10, but miscues committed at inopportune times spelt disaster. In the first inning St. Thomas registered a trio of runs on two hits and two errors, and after relinquishing the lead in the first part of the seventh they came back with another three runs which decided the game.

Jamieson Holds Good.

Errors also meant the downfall of Grads in their tilt with Kingston. Of the six mistakes chalked up against the Toronto nine, three came in the fourth when the Ponies rushed four runs across the plate for their winning margin.

Jamieson, whose playing has featured the easterners' work in the playdowns, pitched a sterling brand of ball and was invincible in the pinches. McQuaid and Joyce were the big guns in the winners' attack, hammering out a trio of safeties each, to account for six of their team's seven hits.

Darbyshire, youthful third baseman of the losers, poked out three hits to lead his team-mates in their seven-hit assault on the Kingston hurler.

Writer's Life

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (C.P.)—There's a worn look on the face of Louis G. Florey, secretary to Sinclair Lewis. He and the novelist are back from South Pomfret, Vt. They spent three months there but it was no vacation.

"The boss wrote at top speed, morning, noon and night," said Florey. "He did a year's work in about three months. He would go to sleep for 15 minutes, wake up and think he had slept for hours. He'd wake me up and say 'I got an idea for the next chapter. Let's go.'"

YESTERDAY'S STARS

(By The Associated Press)

Babe Herman, Cubs—Rapped Brooklyn pitching for five hits.

Buddy Myer, Senators—Batted in winning runs against Tigers with ninth inning single.

Adolfo Luque, Giants.—Limited Cardinals to three hits in 4 2-3 innings of relief pitching.

Babe Ruth, Yankees—Allowed 29th and 30th home runs and single against Indians.

REDMEN BLANK BUFFALO HERD IN FIRST GAME

Kaufmann, Rochester Right-hander, Yields Four Hits Against Gallivan's Six.

FINAL COUNT 1-0.

ROCHESTER N. Y., Sept. 18.—(C.P.)—Ray Schalk is wondering what jinx the Red Wings have at Red Wing stadium on his Buffalo Bisons. The wings won 11 of 12 in the regular season on their home lot and continued to win by beating the herd yesterday 1-0 in a well played contest, first of the final play-offs for the championship of the International League.

Just 10 days ago at Buffalo the Bisons won three of four from the Red Wings to get in this play-off and the visitors figured they could knock off the conquerors of Newark as they did Baltimore.

The Bisons took three straight from Baltimore and the Wings took three straight from Newark after losing the first. Thus Rochester ran 1st streak to four straight while halting the spurt of the herd.

Outharls Gallivan.

Kauffmann outpitched Gallivan in the matter of hits, while Gallivan had the best of it on control. But Gallivan also had an error behind him, followed by a ringing two base hit off the bat of Ray Pepper, the former Alabama football fullback getting three safe drives in the combat to make up for lack of hitting against Newark.

The teams will play to-night with pitching selections very uncertain. The third game will be played Tuesday afternoon and the four-of-seven completed at Buffalo in night games after three have been played here.

PACKERS BEAT CALEDONIANS LEAGUE GAME

Ross, C. P. Centre Forward, Performs the Hat Trick in Brilliant Play.

PACKERS 3, SCOTS 0.

The Canada Packers defeated the Caledonians in a league game on Saturday afternoon by the score of three to none, in a match that lacked interest because their was nothing at stake, although it fulfilled the schedule as arranged. Ross, C.P. getting three goals during the play, to increase his goal average.

Custodian Kept Busy

Right from the kick-off, the Packers concentrated in swinging the ball from wing to wing to split the solid defence of the Scotsmen thereby permitting the centre-forward to rattle direct drives at Ward's charge, but the custodian gave a clever display in goal by frustrating their attempt to score. Time and again, the losers' forwards would break through the Packers' full backs but their shooting was far short of the mark. After twenty minutes' play, Calbran broke away on the right to land the ball across to Ross, who connected with a lightning drive that bulged the rigging in below the crossbar. The Scots replied with many dangerous attacks through the efforts of McCracken, McPhate and Rankin, as they dribbled their way through into goal, but they found Green unbeatable. Just before the interval, McCracken evaded the opposition cleverly to rap a lightning drive for the corner of the upright. The Packers' goalie threw himself up in the air to have the shot. Canada Packers 1, Caledonians 0.

C.P. Adds to Score

On resuming, both teams were cautious in their movements in midfield. Eventually the halves made the play interesting by sending the ball right up the centre where the pivot men endeavored to get the break. Ross, C.P. centre man, being the most successful with his smart manipulation of the ball whenever in front of goal and it was from a pass up the centre that he added his second counter. While Leggat, Scots centre man, tried hard to get a goal, but the Packers' full back checked hard. With ten minutes to go, Ross again found the net with a low grounder. The remainder of the encounter found the Scots trying to prevent the white-washing to find themselves with the count standing: Canada Packers 3, Caledonians 0.

Goal scorer—Ross 3.

Caledonians—J. Ward, goal; E. Denesen and E. Adkinson, full backs; A. Downer, W. Rankin and T. McPhate, halves; W. McCracken, S. Leggat and F. Dyer, forwards.

Referee—A. Frick.

Scored 29 Points Out of Possible 30 in Diving Contest.

HELD AT EXHIBITION.

Hazel Bradley, 299 Sherbrooke Street, was declared champion lady diver of the city at the conclusion of the diving contest before the grandstand at the Exhibition Saturday night. She scored 29 points out of a possible 30 on three dives and won the handsome wrist watch offered as first prize.

Second honors were won by Elda Bradley, sister of the champion, and Mary Kingsbury, 177 Murray Street, placed third. Elda Bradley was awarded a silver cup and Miss Kingsbury a valuable jewel set. Both the second and third contestants made perfect scores on the last of their three dives. All five competing in the final contest were presented with passes to the midway by "Paddy" Conklin of the Conklin All-Canadian Shows.

They were Clinton Magee, Carlos Routley, Nels Stanger, Vern Janeway, Jack Gardiner and Bill Legros and won hearty applause from the audience.

UNITED STATES' ATHLETES SET CANUCK MARKS IN TWO EVENTS

Owens Establishes Record of 24 Feet, 7 3-4 Inches in Running Broad Jump.

PEARSON UP WELL.

HAMILTON, Sept. 18.—(C.P.)—The Canadian mark of 9.6 seconds for the 100 yard dash remained intact to-day despite a determined attack on it by two of the continent's premier school boy sprinters.

At the eighth annual track and field meet of the Hamilton Olyympic Club Saturday, Jesse Owens, colored speedster from Cleveland, and 19 year old Bert Pearson of Hamilton, staged an interesting duel in the final of this event. Owens breasting the tape first with a driving finish. His time of 9.9 was well behind the record, however.

Pearson regained some of his prestige by finishing two yards in front of the colored speedster in the 220 yard event.

Shortly after this, Owens, to show his versatility, established a new Canadian mark of 24 feet, 7¾ inches in the running broad jump.

Another Canadian standard was toppled in running high jump, Gordon Young, Detroit high school student, sailing over the bar at six feet, 4½ inches.

Bob Mitchell, promising young Toronto runner, defeated Eddie King, former Canadian champion, in the mile run, and Phil Edwards, lanky British Guinian, coasted home in the 880.

Toronto Achilles Club four won the sprint relay from Hamilton O. C., and the latter went on to capture the one-mile relay open.

BOWLING NOTES

(By Herb Martin)

I have been absent from the green most of the week and am somewhat behind with my "homework," but I will just dot down a few of the main events of the past few days, that I picked up one way and another. You know I was selling tickets on the car—but we will talk about that later.

• • •

I understand that Fitzpatrick, Chester and Freeman all cashed in on the Friday night prizes. Can you imagine that? I call that great team-work. The committee is certainly hitting their stride now, even if it is a little late in the season. It's OK with me just as long as "Bob" gives me a credit mark, and as there has been no protests handed in as yet I guess everybody must be satisfied—Oh, yeah!

• • •

And then, Mrs. Deyman got herself into the professional class by slipping a nice eight-end over on Mrs. G. Coleman; I nearly forgot that one; but the game that just about takes the cake is the one I missed out on.

It seems that one of the ladies had a birthday—and some ladies still love them—and a little celebration was in order; but before the party took place it appears that the ladies challenged the three men to a game of "Irish Trebles," and according to reports, the weaker sex put it all over the "three wise men from the east," and to make matters worse it was before a large gallery. It was awfully sorry that I could not attend the social end of it afterwards, as I certainly would have enjoyed the hospitality of "Bill, Norm and Bill."

• • •

Now getting back to the car business. There is only one more week left in which you will have to purchase tickets on this new six-cylinder 1933 Plymouth. Somebody is going to get a $1,000 car for 12½ cents. A week from Wednesday evening and it will be all over.

DeGruchy Series Opens On Saturday

TORONTO, Sept. 18 (C.P.).—Toronto's four senior football teams start their annual series for the Reg. DeGruchy memorial trophy, emblem of the city championship, here next Saturday, it was announced to-day. In the first double-header, St. Michael's College face Argonauts, defending champions, and University of Toronto plays Balmy Beach.

The next Saturday the two losing teams play and the winners meet for the championship. Argos defeated Beaches and Varsity to capture the series a year ago.

HAMILTON TAKES O.A.L.A. HONORS

Mount Dennis Beaten in Second Senior Game By 11 to 5 Count.

MEET QUEBEC WINNERS.

TORONTO, Sept. 18—Hamilton Tigers spent Saturday night completing a well-started job, and with their 11 to 5 victory over Mount Dennis at Ravina Rink the Mountain men took the O.A.L.A. senior championship round in two straight games. They had won the opener at home, 13 to 5.

Hamilton's victory gave them the right to play the Quebec champions, the series likely starting next week. With St. Anthony's due to play Verdun for the eastern laurels, chances favor the Saints, for to date they have shown considerable edge over Verdun.

TORONTO PLAYER WINS OPEN TITLE

Ada Mackenzie Defeats Margery Kirkham 8 and 6 in Canadian Final.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 18 (CP)—Winner of the Canadian women's open golf championship by her defeat of the defender, Margery Kirkham, of Montreal, 8 and 6, Ada Mackenzie, Toronto, to-day began defence of her Canadian close title in the qualifying round over this par-76 course.

To the qualifying medal in the open that she won last Monday at Pine Ridge here, Miss Mackenzie will to-day attempt to add the Ella Murray Trophy for the best gross medal score in the close tournament. She drove off with Mrs. R. K. Bearisto, Manitoba champion, in the first pair on the draw.

Five minutes behind the champions went Miss Kirkham with Mrs. Gordon Konantz, runner-up in this year's Manitoba tourney. Mrs. Konantz heads the list of 16 new contestants added to the 40 who started medal play at Pine Ridge last week.

Prominent among the dozen or so visiting golfers who remained in Winnipeg for the second tournament was Isobel Pepall, Ontario junior champion, who bowed to Miss Kirkham in the semi-final of the open meet. Maryon Murphy, attractive Royal Ottawa Golf Club member who reached the quarter finals last week, and her clubmate, Lorna Blackburn, also drove off today.

Others from Ontario are Helena Spears, Hamilton; Mrs. Archie Hunt, London; Mrs. H. F. Patterson, Mrs. Edwin Crockett, Mrs. George T. Pepall and Mrs. J. W. Sinnser, Toronto; and Mrs. Harold Hamilton, Hamilton.

First Loss Of Year For Great Equipoise

NEW YORK, Sept. 18 (A.P.).—The great Equipoise yesterday had bowed his head in defeat for the first time this year and another thoroughbred, Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Singing Wood, had arisen to claim two-year-old honors.

On the turf's richest program, at Belmont Park Saturday, Equipoise, winner of seven straight races, trailed two others home in the $5,000 Jockey Club Gold Cup, while Singing Wood whipped fifteen high-class juveniles in the forty-fourth running of the Futurity to earn a purse of $81,700.

NEWCASTLE DEFEATED 3-2.

LONDON, Sept. 18 (C.P. Cable).—Blackburn Rovers defeated Newcastle United 3-2 in a First Division English League soccer match played at Blackburn to-day.

Baseball—Softball—Lacrosse
Soccer—Wrestling, and Others

(By G. J. F.)

At a quarter to five this evening, weather permitting, in Stevenson Park, Sugar Bowl and Trenton clash in the second game of their O.A.S.A. playdown series. The Bowlmen jogged through to a neat win down the line in the first tilt last Thursday and hope to make it two straight to-night. However, softball—like its older brother-sport, baseball—is a most peculiar game and as full of ups and downs as the stock market. Trenton came back strongly in their Belleville series to win out and might do the same here. Winner will meet Kingston.

There was no lacrosse game at the Bowl rink Saturday, the Orde's and Selkirks' teams deciding to hold the final game of the City League play-offs over till next Saturday. Some of the players were working, and then they also expected there would be that men's softball play-off on that day—there would have been, too, but for a screwy postponement on the part of Trenton, abetted by Rowden of Oshawa, the convenor. Selkirks won the first game, 9-0, but lost the next one 6-5, and are still favored to win, though we wouldn't bet any real dough on it.

Jack Dane, who trained in Keene a couple of years ago and got his pro boxing start in Peterborough, tackles a tough hombre in Phil Lightheart, of Hamilton, in Montreal tomorrow night. It's a mighty smart card they've got lined up featuring Foreman and Bland. And, by the way, what's going to be doing around this district in the amateur mitt-slinging game this winter? Wonder if Lakefield, Hastings and the local Alpha Club are figuring on running any shows. Lindsay will likely be back strong, and we understand quite a gang of mittsers are planning on taking up regular training at Louis Yeates' stable shortly. We hope a number of good bouts are staged here coming on winter.

The two harness horse races at the Ex. Saturday were just fair. Margaret Dillon, a Sarnia entry with a beautiful free pace that fairly ate up the track, simply ran away from the others to take all three heats in the 2.18 class. The last heat wasn't a race at all, it was a runaway. Joe Patch was second, from Merlin; and A. Thompson's local hoss, Sir Oliver Rose, took third money. Grattan Patch, of Goderich, tired in the 2.25 after winning two heats, and Guy Pointer, Merlin, won the next two. The drivers agreed to split first and second money. Bucco Junior, R. Walsh's' Hastings' horse, was third.

A dispatch from Chicago states that the day when running horses will race for $500 is not far off, according to Harry Morrissey, a veteran Lincoln Fields" starter. He says racing associations can't afford to offer boom-time purses nowadays and unless horsemen agree to take smaller purses, many will fold up. That's rather interesting to followers of the harness horse races here when it is recalled that the local Exhibition Board put up no less than $2,100 for the three days of racing last week.

Creighton, Collins, Todd, Vitarelli Stanger, and McGregor. Each player must bring his birth certificate at this time.

First game of the senior O.B.A.A. semi-finals saw Kingston Ponies take Riverdale Grads for a 6-3 ride in Toronto on Saturday, the Ponies playing good ball back of Jamieson's steady twirling, and the Grads booting the ball around for some costly errors that gave the Limestone lads four unearned runs. The winner of this series enters the Ontario finals against St. Thomas. If Grads win the second game over Kingston there is a possibility of the deciding one being played here next Saturday.

Quite a crowd in the Ex. grand stand on Saturday eve watched five girls, who learned their stuff at the Y.W.C.A., compete in the city diving finals. It was worth seeing, though a couple of them came too close to the edge of the small tank for comfort. Hazel Bradley won first prize, Elda Bradley took second, and Mary Kingsbury was third. Then, a number of the Y.M.C.A. boys put on a short exhibition that went over big also. We have a bunch of smart aquatic performers in this town, and some of them should compete in indoor swim meets with Toronto stars this winter just to see how they'd make out. The experience would be invaluable.

REG. DIXON WINS OYSTER BAY RACE

Canadian Dinghy Sailors Second to Englishmen in Series for International Championship.

OYSTER BAY, L.I., Sept. 18.—Dinghy sailormen from the Royal Canadian Yacht Club swept into a contending position in the international race series against boats of England and the United States by all but sweeping their test yesterday with the Long Island crew.

Reg. Dixon, who sailed for Canada at the last Olympiad, led the Toronto sailors in their conquest of the islanders, sailing his craft around the seven-mile course in 4.49.41. Eight seconds in his wake came another Royal Canadian, with Atwell Fleming at the tiller. Charles Bourke landed the third Dominion boat in fourth place.

By taking first, second and fourth the Canadians lifted their point total to 22¼ points, where they are within 6¼ points of the leading English boats. The Rochester, N.Y., and Long Island boats follow in that order.

The English sailors swept their race yesterday against Rochester, taking the first three places. The winner of this test, A. R. Colman, sent his dinghy over the seven-mile course under a wind that at times came close to becalming the racers, in 4.50.12.

LEADS AGAIN TO-DAY.

OYSTER BAY, L.I., Sept. 18.—(C.P.)—Yachtsmen of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club of Toronto skippered their dinghies into the first three places in the Canadian-Rochester six mile race here to-day.

Reg. Dixon of Peterborough, sailed his boat home first and was followed by A. Fleming and C. Bourke, with the three Rochester vessels following closely in the rear.

Dixon's time of one hour and 25 minutes was slightly more than three minutes faster than Fleming's, who beat Bourke by almost the same length. The first Rochester dinghy was one minute and 15 seconds behind the third Torontonian.

British dinghy experts defeated Long Island in the first race of the day's International series. It also was a six mile affair First honors went to Mrs. E. Richardson, who finished in one hour and 28 minutes and was followed by D. Beale, of England in 1:25:28. The first Long Islander was Porter Buck, who was third in 1:25:32. R. R. Coleman of England, took fourth place with two Long Island dinghies bringing up the rear.

Local Cricket Club Trounced By Oshawa

Peterborough C. C. was soundly trounced by Oshawa at the Oval on Saturday. Batting first, Oshawa compiled 62, due to a fine innings by G. Mann.

The Peterborough bowling was up to the usual high standard, but the fielding was ghastly, Langhorne at point being the one bright spot in the terrible display. Going into bat the locals soon came to grief and were at the mercy of Mann and Eccles. It was the open season, no less than six "ducks" falling to the Oshawa attack. Peterborough were all for a paltry 22.

The final game of the season will be played Saturday against the combined Woollens.

OTTAWA RESENTS CROCKER CHARGES

"Totally Unfair" is Comments of Capital City Branch Officials.

OTTAWA, Sept. 18 (CP)—Sharp denials with a sting of resentment was the answer last night of Ottawa and district branch officials of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada to Saturday's charges of J. Howard Crocker, London, alleging laxity and incompetence of local branch officials.

"Totally unfair" and "extremely disagreeable surprise" were some of the terms applied to President Crocker's statements by H. Gordon Young, Ottawa branch secretary. Backing up the Ottawa secretary to the hilt, R. George Pushman, city council member and local branch president, told Ottawa sports writers over the long distance telephone: "I cannot understand how published reports of Mr. Crocker's remarks can be a clear account of what he really said, because I cannot understand the president of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada publicly censuring the secretary of a branch without first securing all facts connected with the case."

In a letter addressed to Mr. Crocker, local secretary Young took occasion to set out pointedly the work he was doing for amateurism.

WEINER ROAST.

HAVELOCK, Sept. 18 (Examiner Correspondence).—Mr. James Hooper, eldest son of Mr. Frank Hooper, one of Havelock's leading athletes, met with an unfortunate accident on Saturday morning when he slipped on the top step of the flight leading into the cellar of his home here, falling heavily to the cement floor and fracturing his hip joint. This is a very serious and painful injury, and may result in permanent disability. At any rate Jimmie will be definitely out of all sports for some time, and will be greatly missed by his team mates. Jimmie played centre field on the ball team this season and was one of the star players. He could always be counted on to come to the rescue when the bases were full and he was at the bat.

A jolly social evening and weiner roast was held on Friday evening, Sept. 15th, when about fifty young people, members of the Agricultural Society and Junior Institute, gathered at the shore of Round Lake at Vermilyeas Landing to honor Mr. and Mrs. Donald Buchanan, whose marriage took place at Marmora recently.

The first part of the evening was spent around a large bonfire, when weiners and buns, heated over a smaller fire, were partaken of and much enjoyed.

Afterwards the young people repaired to the Orange Hall where dancing was enjoyed, and a presentation of a handsome silk counterpane was made. Mr. T. Anderson read an address of congratulations and good wishes, and the president, Mr. H. Anderson, made the presentation.

Mr. Buchanan, who is a much esteemed member of the society, thanked his friends on behalf of Mrs. Buchanan and himself, after which dancing was resumed.

A Lesson

NEW YORK, Sept. 16 (CP)—Next time Joseph Strecansky will keep his hands in his pockets—and he won't be so polite.

Joseph, 13 years old and always willing to do a favor, was standing on a street corner when a woman walked up.

"Please hold my baby a minute, will you?" she asked.

"Yes, ma'm," said Joseph with a bow. "I'll be glad to."

Joseph held the baby until the shades of night were falling and then appealed to a policeman. The child was taken to a foundling hospital.

VICTOR CALLAGHAN WINS CIRCUS PONY

Pony Was Given Away By Paddy Conklin, President of Midway.

Victor Callaghan of 211 Hunter street is the proud owner of a real live circus pony. He was the lucky boy who held the stub corresponding to ticket number nine, when the draw was made at the Fair Grounds on Saturday afternoon.

The pony was given away by J. W. "Paddy" Conklin, president of Conklin's All-Canadian Shows in conjunction with the directors of Peterborough Industrial Exhibition Board. Mr. Conklin had announced another children's day on Saturday and to each child paying admission to the grounds he gave a special numbered ticket for a chance on the pony.

It was an eager and excited crowd of children that gathered around the Circus Side-Show on the Midway at the time announced for the drawing. The pony was there with "Ernie and Len" the double-bodied baby perched on its back. Mr. Conklin was accompanied on the platform by Vivian Milburn, general manager of the Exhibition Board and by John Gillespie, and a representative of the Peterborough Examiner.

Little June Patterson of 504 Bolivar street was selected from the eager crowd of children to make the draw, and as she dipped her hand into the big barrel to draw forth the winning ticket excitement reached its highest pitch.

"I got it," young Callaghan shouted after hearing number nine announced as the winner, as he elbowed his way to the front of the tightly-packed mass of youngsters. Then from his elevated position on the platform almost too elated for words, he announced, "I am very glad I won it." He told The Examiner that he intended to keep the pony.

Lakefield Resident Celebrates Birthday

(Examiner Correspondence)

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 18.—On Saturday, September 16, Abel Hendren, Lakefield's veteran contractor, celebrated his eighty-second birthday and is still going strong. Mr. Hendren was born in Warsaw, but the most of his life has been spent in the village of Lakefield. As a young man he learned the carpenter's trade and has worked at it ever since, training many of the younger men in his day. He built a great many of the homes and business places in the village and also the United Church. In 1908 he built a four roomed addition to the east of the Public School. Among the buildings for which Mr. Hendren was the contractor were the Graham store on Queen street, "Harborne" (the Tate home on Queen street), "Viamede" summer hotel and dozens of other places.

Mr. Hendren married while a very young man, Frances Coates, who was a teacher in the public school and the late Miss Myrtle Hendren who was a noted mezzo soprano soloist was his elder daughter. She was for some years soloist in the Charlotte street Methodist church in Peterborough, in fact until her failing health compelled her to give up. Of his first family of eight children three survive, Gordon and Roy of Toronto and Howard of Stoney Lake. Mr. Hendren's present wife was Delia R. Haight of Cobotonk and of this marriage were born three daughters, Elva of Toronto, Thelma and Vivian at home.

Mr. Hendren is of a cheery temperament and has a great many friends who join in offering heartiest good wishes on his birthday. Aside from a slight deafness he does not show the advancing years as his light step and erect carriage belie the advancing years. Mr. Hendren has been a life long member of the Methodist church, joining the Union with the Lakefield congregation.

THE STARS SAY . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, September 19

THE ASTRAL influences intervening on the affairs of this day are conspicuous for the splendid openings and opportunities of an unexpected nature fostered by their rule. There may be a sudden and radical change in the affairs, contacts and environments, making way for great increase and development of all the affairs, with preferment and assistance from those in places of power and prestige. It is a time to seek promotion and solid assistance from these, after surmounting certain tenacious obstacles.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of enlarged prospects, splendid new developments of the affairs, increase of possessions and growth in prestige with high favors from those in power and position. It is a time for pushing for fruition of cherished aims, after adjusting tenacious obstructions.

A child born on this day should be ambitious, adventurous, efficient, popular and should attain position and prestige by its versatility.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE REVIEWS

ONTARIO GRAIN

Approximate prices track shipping point—Wheat, 62c to 63c; oats, 30c to 31c; barley, 40c to 42c; buckwheat, 40c to 42c.

CHICAGO GRAIN

A big buying movement in every kind of grain suddenly developed late Saturday, and wheat jumped almost 4 cents, reaching virtually $1 a bushel.

Buoyancy followed advances in securities as well as in free gold, silver futures and sterling exchange. A further notable stimulus came from authoritative reports that the United States, instead of possessing a huge export surplus of 161,000,000 bushels of wheat, has only enough wheat in fact for national food safety needs until the end of the present crop season next June.

Closes at Peak

Wheat closed strong at the day's peak prices, the highest figures in about a month, 3½c-3¾c above Friday's finish, corn 2⅝c-3c up, oats ¾c-1⅞c advanced, and provisions showing a rise of 7c to 20c.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL — Export shipments from Montreal to the United Kingdom assumed fairly large proportions during last week. Butter exports totalled 11,515 boxes, compared with 2,710 boxes the previous week. There were no shipments in the corresponding week of last year. Shipments of cheese amounted to 41,110 boxes. This compares with the previous week's shipments of 27,000 boxes and those of the corresponding period of last year of 34,530 boxes. Last week 2,038 cases of eggs were exported as against 538 cases a week ago and none a year ago.

Price changes on the Montreal dairy and produce market last week were only fractional. Butter eased slightly, eggs firmed fractionally, and other lines held unchanged. The wholesale butter market ended the week at 18½c to 18¾c a pound. Arrivals totalled 24,167 boxes.

Cheese Prices Steady

The cheese market closed the week at 10⅞ to 11¼c a pound for Ontario colored, 10¾c for Ontario white, 10½c to 10⅝c for Quebec colored, and 10¼c to 10⅜c for Quebec white. A total of 32,401 boxes was offered for sale during the week.

Graded shipments in cariots or less of eggs closed the week at 22½c to 23c a dozen for extras, 17½c to 18c for firsts and 14c for seconds for Ontarios, while graded Westerns ranged down to 21c for extras 17c for firsts, and 13½c for seconds. Arrivals were 7,283 cases.

New Quebec potatoes failed to record any change, ending the week at 75c to 80c per 80-pound bag.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, September 18.—With hedging pressure light and a bullish weather map in evidence, prices pushed their way to higher ground on the Grain Exchange on Saturday, as strong purchasing power from various sources entered the market near the close. Final prices were 1⅝c to 1¾c higher than Friday's close.

October delivery finished at 68½c, December at 70⅝c, and May at 76c. Values held near previous closing levels until the last hour, when the buyers, taking cognizance of rain in Western Canada, with threatened lowering of wheat grades, bought extensively.

Eastern Interests Buyers.

Further purchases were made by Eastern interests, presumably on the strength of further rumors of inflation. Export business, estimated at less than 750,000 bushels, served to hold the market steady in the early trade.

Liverpool advices pointed to the fact that wheat arrivals in the United Kingdom had been quite heavy, and some liquidation occurred in the English market, and as a result prices declined ¾d to 1d.

Session Active.

The session as a whole was active, and at the full advance showed gains of about 2½c in the May future, which led the way all morning.

Aside from a little cash grains trading in the early session, business in this department was restricted. Coarse grains were all firm. Traditional leader in price fluctuations in this section of the market, flax, hoisted by a speculative flurry, ran upward for a gain of 9 cents.

SCOTT'S SCRAPBOOK - - By R. J. Scott

GRAB BAG

At what season of the year are maple trees tapped?

What is "amour propre"?

What famous novel is a travesty on chivalry?

Correctly Speaking—

"Say" should not be used to mean "give orders", with an infinitive as object. Say, "The guard ordered us to go back", not "The guard said to go back".

Words of Wisdom

What is deservedly suffered must be borne with calmness, but when the pain is unmerited, the grief is resistless.—Ovid.

To-day's Horoscope

Persons born on this day are truthful, conscientious, pure in nature, and somewhat prudish.

Answers to Foregoing Questions

1. In early spring when the sap is starting to run.

MURDER TRIAL OPENS TUESDAY

Retrial of Edward Jackson Will Be Heard by Mr. Justice Armour.

SEVEN CIVIL CASES.

Re-trial of Edward Franklin Jackson, 42, Milwaukee negro, for the murder of his colored companion, 61-year-old Eugene Lee, in Dummer Township last October, is the only case that will be presented on the criminal docket, at the Sessions of Supreme Court which opens at the Court House here on Tuesday, at two o'clock before Mr. Justice Armour.

Jackson was convicted on the capital charge before Mr. Justice Sedgwick at the Assizes here in February of this year. He was sentenced to death on the gallows, but his counsel, the Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., appealed the sentence and secured a re-trial for the condemned man on technical grounds.

Thomas F. Battle, K.C., assisted by County Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., will again conduct the prosecution for the Crown.

On the civil list, three jury and non-jury cases are listed for trial as follows:

Jury

Thecla O'Neil vs. J. Raymond Paquette, claims $5,000 damages for breach of promise to marry. Peck, Kerr and McElderry for plaintiff; Gordon and Elliott for defendant.

Roy F. McLean vs. Globe Printing Company, Toronto, claim for $25,000 damages and costs, and counter claim by defendant corporation for $1,000 damages and costs. Gordon and Elliott for plaintiff; George E. Edmonds, for defendant corporation.

Henry Willis, administrator of the estate of the late John Clark Willis vs. Globe Printing Company and Roy F. McLean, claim for $10,000 damages and costs. Parish and Fitzpatrick for plaintiff; George E. Edmonds for Globe Printing Company, and Gordon and Elliott for defendant McLean.

Non-Jury

Charles D. Collins, Alexander J. Collins, and Joshua Durham Collins trustees vs. D. B. Hall and E. H. D. Hall. Peck, Kerr and McElderry for plaintiffs; R. R. Hall, K.C., for defendant B. D. Hall; J. W. Stevenson for defendant E. H. D. Hall.

Ross Lobb on behalf of himself and all other creditors of the defendants Jessie Lancaster and Harold Lancaster vs Jessie Lancaster, Harold Lancaster and John Faux. J. A. O'Brien for plaintiffs; W. F. Hucke for defendant J. Lancaster; E. F. Sheehy for defendant H. Lancaster; and Gordon and Elliott for defendant John Faux.

Wallace Dewart, Charlotte Dewart and Lavinia Payne, all of Dummer Township vs. Addie Evelyn Payne, both personally and as administratrix of the estate of the late William K. Payne of Peterborough; Gordon and Elliott for plaintiffs; Hall, Hall and Stevenson for defendant.

Victor Stephen Rutherford, instrument engineer C.G.E. vs. George Hill, plastering contractor of Peterborough. E. F. Sheehy for plaintiff; J. A. O'Brien for defendant.

LABOR FIGHTS FOR JOBLESS

Congress Urges Abolition or Drastic Changes in Unemployed Road Camps,

6-HOUR DAY, 5-DAY WEEK.

Jack Hambleton, C. P. Staff Writer)

WINDSOR, Ont., Sept. 18.—(CP)—The voice of organized labor in Canada was raised today on behalf of the jobless, with more than 250 delegates representing every section of the Dominion in attendance. The Trades and Labor Congress of Canada opened its sessions here.

Shortly after President Tom Moore of Ottawa had welcomed the delegates, more than 100 resolutions, dealing with every phase of Labor's "fight" against unemployment were laid upon the table. With them were the reports of the executive and legislative committees, and reports too of the fraternal delegates to the American Federation of Labor and British Trades Union Congress.

The resolutions were the highlights, however. All day yesterday the executive committee sat behind closed doors and discussed the agenda, while the resolutions committee considered the various measures.

Summed up, Labor's fight this year will be along the following lines:

Abolition or drastic change in the unemployed road camps.

Introduction of the six-hour day and five-day week in Canadian industry.

Reduction of machinery in factories and in the agriculture industry.

Further protection for the working man in health matters— with state medicine.

Reduction in age requirements for old age pensions.

One of the most interesting resolutions from a political point of view, asks the congress to endorse the program and policies of the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation. It is regarded as unlikely, however, the organization will adopt the measure, since officials have repeatedly declared the congress cannot definitely affiliate itself with any political body.

TRUCK CRASHED INTO MOTOR CAR

Port Hope Driver Will Face Charge of Reckless Driving.

ONE MAN INJURED.

George Ovens, of Newtonville, is suffering from severe scalp lacerations and Fred Kirkpatrick, of Port Hope, will face a charge of reckless driving as results of an accident at 10.15 last night at Bailieboro on Highway 28 in which a truck crashed into a motor car.

Murray McCullough, of Cobourg, was backing out of a driveway at Bailieboro onto the highway when a truck, driven by Kirkpatrick, crashed into him. After the collision the truck turned over and skidded 53 feet on its side, according to Highway Patrol Officer A. E. Hornick, who investigated.

Ovens, a passenger in the truck, was the only one injured. The truck was badly damaged, but the motor car was not much damaged.

CLERKS TAKE SECOND GAME

Walk Away From Petherick's With 24-2 Count in Glover Cup Series Tussle.

MAKE SEVEN HOMERS.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 18 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent).—A walk-away for the Clerks, with a 24-2 count over Pethericks, featured the second of the play-off games for the Glover Cup staged on the High School grounds on Saturday evening. The game was entirely one-sided, featuring as it did six blank innings for Petherick's, who failed to get going and whose pitcher, G. Kerr, was unable to handle the ball owing to rain falling, making the diamond greasy and the ball heavy.

The Clerks had a bright evening of it and seemed to be able to do no wrong In all, they registered seven homers, Reynolds and Campney each having doubles; Bush, Holmes and Hendy making each a single. Holmes pitched a steady game for them, and played up to first base well, although Kerr on the mound for Petherick's, registered the majority of strike-outs, netting in all five; Holmes only counted one.

The next of these games will be staged on Tuesday evening at 5.15, and if the Clerks take this event, the cup will remain in Campbellford. If the evening is at all favorable, however, Petherick's will be able to give the homesters a run, and if they win the game, will prolong the series another two games. The teams:

Petherick's—G. Petherick, 2b; Watson, ss; Anderson, 3b; G. Kerr, p; A. Petherick, c; R. Fry, cf; D. Kerr, lf; Barnum, 1b; F. Fry, rf.

Umpires — Plate, Vince Farrell; bases, J. Scanlan, Geo. Donald.

Score by innings:

SOVIET WHEAT DUMPING FEARED

Nations See Failure to Get Russia in Line, Endangering World Past.

COMPROMISE LIKELY.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—The threat of renewed Soviet dumping cast gloom last night over delegates here for the first meeting of the newly-organized International Wheat Advisory Commission today.

Fourteen countries are represented on the commission, set up at the recent London Wheat Conference to see that the world wheat agreement is carried out faithfully and promptly. The agreement called for price rises and a reduction in wheat acrages for the next two years.

Delegates pointed out that failure now to get the Soviet Government to accept a compromise on their annual export quota, or at least a guarantee not to dump grain abroad, would endanger the entire world agreement.

Soviet Russia signed the agreement, but so far has refused to accept the 44,000,000 bushels set for her as her export quota by the Big Four—the United States, Canada, Argentina and Australia. The Soviet representative, Abraham Gourevitch, is demanding 75,000,000 bushels as the annual quota, having scaled his demands down from the original 900,000,000 bushels Moscow asked.

Now Moscow is said to be ready for a big export season, with a surplus available of nearly 100,000,000 bushels of wheat.

A compromise with Moscow at the forthcoming commission sessions was expected, but the delegates admitted they were doubtless in for a hard fight. Information obtained by the United Press indicated that the final compromise figure will probably be around 65,000,000 bushels this year, with a sliding scale adding as much as 10,000,000 more if circumstances warrant. Furthermore, a considerably larger quota next year may be suggested, left open to subsequent negotiations.

HAIG—BRECKENRIDGE

HAVELOCK, September 18 (Examiner Correspondence).—A lovely early autumn wedding took place on Saturday, September 16th, at 1.30 p.m., at the spacious farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Breckenridge, when their eldest daughter, Mabel Evelyn, became the bride of Mr. Blake Vandell Haig, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Haig of Havelock. Rev. Laughlin Beaton of Knox Presbyterian Church officiating.

The wedding took place under an arch of evergreens on the spacious enclosed verandah. She was attended by her sister, Miss Luella Breckenridge as bridesmaid, attired in shell pink satin, with picture hat and carrying a shower bouquet of pink roses with fern. Miss Edna Haig, sister of the groom, played his wedding march, and Mr. Breckenridge gave the bride away. Mr. Harry Anderson supported the groom.

Immediately after the ceremony a reception was held by the bride's mother assisted by the mother of the groom. Mrs. Breckenridge was attired in a black triple sheer gown with corsage of red roses, and black hat. Mrs. Haig wore a gown of blue triple sheer with grey accessories, and a corsage of pink roses. About sixty guests were present and partook of a bountiful wedding repast, served in the large dining room which was beautifully decorated with evergreens and autumn flowers.

Later in the day the happy young couple left for a motor trip to Kirkland Lake and other northern points, the bride travelling in a green swagger suit with grey felt hat and matching accessories. The groom's gift to the attendants were: to the bridesmaid and organist, topaz pendants, and to the best man a monogramed silver cigarette holder and lighter. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Haig will take up residence in Toronto.

A native of Smith Township the deceased was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Ball. He had lived in the district all his life and was held in wide respect and esteem.

Besides his wife he leaves one son, James Lyman Ball of Winnipeg. A daughter predeceased him.

The funeral is to be held on Tuesday from the family residence at Bridgenorth at 3.30 p.m. with the Rev. Mr. Miller of Bridgenorth United Church officiating. Interment at Little Lake Cemetery.

MRS. HARRY AUSTIN

TWEED, Sept. 18 (Examiner Correspondence).—The funeral of the late Mrs. Harry Austin took place from her late residence North Victoria street, Tweed, Friday afternoon at 2.30 p.m. to the United Church, where the service was taken by her pastor, Rev. L. Nicholson.

Deceased was born at Madoc 31 years ago, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roushoris. Twelve years ago deceased married Mr. Harry Austin and lived in Tweed until her death. Of this marriage there were nine children; eight, with her husband, surviving. Her eldest son predeceased her several years ago.

ROBERT MITCHELL.

HAVELOCK, Sept. 18 (Examiner Correspondence). — The death occurred early Saturday morning at St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough, of Robert (Bob) Mitchell, an inmate of the House of Refuge at Lakefield, as the result of a head injury sustained in a fall at the institution one week previously. Mr. Mitchell, who was in his seventy-ninth year, was for many years a familiar figure on the streets of Havelock, having been night man at the Armstrong House for the past thirty years, until about two years ago.

He was admitted to the institution less than a month ago, and only two weeks ago was in the village, having returned for some clothes he had left in his room.

His only known relative is a brother, Dr. Ed. Mitchell of New Orleans, whose exact address is unknown. Reeve Leeson of Havelock, who was advised of Mr. Mitchell's death, was unable to say what arrangements had been made for the funeral.

misty drizzle of rain that fell almost throughout the day, and the threat of a real storm, the grandstand was packed both afternoon and night.

The grandstand total for the week was 12,971 as compared with 11,494 in 1932, an increase of 1,477; while the gate totals for the six days were 25,906 as compared with 30,755, a dcrease over last year of 4,849. In the aggregate the decrease was 3,372 —a decrease that will probably be taken care of in the increased prices of admission that went into effect this year.

Dairy Notes

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 18 (By Examiner Staff Correspondent).—Cheese graded at the local centre on Friday last were registered at the various factories as follows: Brae 27, Burnley 42, Spring Valley 21, Menie 51, Seymour West 20, I.X.L. 23, Woodlands 31, Trent Valley 49, Trent Bridge 67, Prince of Wales 41, New Model 25, Stanwood 38, Empire 58, Kimberley 48, Crow Bay 33, Norham 72, Warkworth 47, Morganston 45—in all a total of 735 boxes of cheese graded, as compared with the corresponding week last year which registered 814 boxes.

In all, a total of 73,450 pounds of cheese was graded on Friday last.

The first lot of cheese to secure a score of 95 points came in this week from Menie factory, at which point F. M. Little is the maker.

The initiative of some people to forge ahead and create a job for themselves is seen in the instance of an O.A.C. graduate, who, unable to get work, fitted his car with a testing outfit, and travelled through Eastern Ontario testing herds. His knowledge of feeds and feeding made him a welcome visitor at all the farm homes, and his business increased to such an extent that in August he tested over 1,000 cows. The government allows seven cents for each test, the tester to supply his own outfit and material.

Shorthorn Club Results At Exhibition

The Boys' Shorthorn Calf Club is another of the minor developments of the Exhibition designed to stimulate the interest of junior farmers in this class of cattle, and also to extend their knowledge through judging, care and showmanship.

A special tent was provided for their exhibits, which have been supervised by A. D. Runions, local representative of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. The results of their year's work and the showing of their stock are set out in the following announcement by Mr. Runions:
